Montana Methodist.

Vol. 1 HELENA, MONTANA, JULY 25, 1888. No. 1

Salutatory.

To all who may read this modest sheet, which bears the name of THE MONTANA METHODIST, greeting:

In making our debut we have some trepedation and yet an humble confidence. Our trepedation arises from the known fact that most every new enterprise has its doubters, who require that it pass successfully the period of probation and prove itself worthy public confidence before receiving public patronage. Our confidence is strengthened when we consider the intelligence of our population and the love the people have for the true in the pulpit, in the press, as well as in the private life of the individual.

To the secular press of Montana we extend greeting. In whatever you have done, are doing and propose doing in the future for the material prosperity; in the development of our unsurpassed resources; in the line of social purity; in all that advances our much beloved mountain country; in condemning the wrong and upholding the right, we bid you God-speed.

To the religious press of our sister churches, whose function is to cultivate and foster moral purity and scriptural holiness, we tender greeting in the name of our common brotherhood and for the sake of our common cause.

It is needless to say that we join with you in every laudable effort that should characterize christian endeavor. The purposes of Methodism are too well known by all the people of this broad land for us even to adopt a motto on the title page of this unpretending agent. "Scriptural Holiness" has too long been her watchword among the people for them yet to be in ignorance of her mission. She has helped, and that very largely, to make this country worthy the name it bears abroad. "By their fruits shall ye know them." But as we do not limit our circulation to the territory of Montana, we say to all, wherever the paper goes, "Is thine heart right, as my heart is with thine heart? If it be, give me thine hand.

Send your name and subscription money to THE MONTANA METHODIST, Helena, Mont.

Reminiscence of the Early Occupancy of Montana by the Whites, and its Occupancy by the Church.

In the spring of 1864, I, with my family, in company with others, left Denver, Colorado, for what is now the Territory of Montana.

Traveling northward, we arrived at the Red Buttes on Platte River; there we organized a large emmigrant party under the leadership of Major Bridger, an old mountaineer.

Leaving all roads, we started in a northwesterly direction, traveling between Wind River and the Big Horn Mountains, until we reached Wind River, the principal fork of the Big Horn. Thence north till we reached Clark's Fork of the Yellow Stone River, thence across the mountain range to the Yellow Stone, and up that river to where now stands the city of Livingston. Thence through the pass to where Bozeman is located, arriving in the Gallatin Valley about the 10th of July, and stopped at a little mining camp called Norwegian, in what is now Madison County.

There were in our party about two hundred and eighty men, women and children. The journey was long and tedious, requiring nearly three months to make it. We marched in regular military order on account of the hostile Sioux. We made but one march a day, halting at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, forming a corral with the wagons; into this the stock was driven at night. Guards were stationed all around the camp, remaining on duty the entire night. In the morning the stock was sent out to graze till 8 o'clock, when we resumed our march. With this precaution, we escape any conflict with the Indians.

On each Sunday during the long march, we rested and kept the day sacred, not neglecting to preach. There was not a serious accident, nor a single death in the company during the entire trip. The emmigrants were nearly all western people, mainly from Iowa and Missouri.

On the first Sunday after our arrival, we gathered the miners together and had preaching.

The emmigrants centered at Virginia City on Alder Gulch, the most extensive mining camp ever discovered in Montana, being about twelve or fifteen miles in length. There were taken from that gulch, first and last several millions of dollars in gold dust. Besides Virgina City, there were but two or three little mining camps in Montana at this time. The only post office in the territory was at Virginia City. Our supplies had to come up the Missouri River to Ft. Benton, or over land from Utah.

When I arrived I did not find any preachers except a Baptist minister named Torbit, who preached occasionally at Virginia City. The citizens hired timbers cut and hauled and built a log church that fall. During the winter the Baptist preacher and myself preached in that church, alternating every two weeks. I lived on the Jefferson River, fifty miles distant; thus my labors in Virginia City required me to ride two hundred miles each month. In September or October a Rev. Hough arrived in Virginia City, being sent as a missionary by the M. E. Church. He built a small house and began preaching, organizing the first church, I think, in the place. I also organized a church on Willow Creek in Gallatin County, in the beginning of 1865.

Bro. Hough and myself, sent out by our respective churches, were the first ministers sent to Montana, to the best of my knowledge, I arriving in July of 1864, and he the succeeding fall. In the spring Bro. Hough left Virginia City and went to "Last Chance" mining camp, now Helena.

There was during the year of 1865, a preacher sent here by the name of McLoughlan of the M. E. Church; also a Rev. Mr. Prichett of the M. E. Church South. Both came to Helena, and preached duriug the winter and spring, and I think both left the same year. During 1866, a Rev. Mr. Baxter of the M. E. Church South, came to Helena, preached, organized a Sunday School and church, remained till next year, and left for Oregon. I continued my labors as the settlements extended. In the fall of 1870, three preachers were sent from the Missouri Conference to re-inforce me, viz.: W. L. Blackwell, C. W. Sanford and Bro. Hilton. During that winter we had some glorious revivals, and many were added to the church. In the spring of 1871, we commenced to build a church in Helena, which was completed in 1872. In the fall of 1871, I attended the session of the Western Conference at Council Grove, Kan. Colorado and Montana were both included in the Western Conference. The distance to the seat of conference was 1,600 miles. This year eleven additional preachers were sent to Montana, making in all fourteen ministers. The preachers were stationed at different points, from Bozeman to the Bitter Root Valley. The brother, Rev. J. H. Hilton, who was sent to the Bitter Root Valley, was killed that winter, by the falling of a tree, which he chopped down; his dust rests in peace near the town of Corvalis.

The preachers labored for two years with varied success. Several became discouraged and returned to the States. My judgment is that we should have been organized into a conference earlier, then we could have kept the work supplied, and I am sure Southern Methodism would have been a strong church in Montana. The M. E. Church sent out many preachers who also labored with varied success. Some became discouraged and left the field, while others remained.

Several preachers of both Methodist Churches have died in the field since we occupied Montana. In addition to Bro. Hilton, we lost a young preacher, Bro. Maxfield, who died at Butte City soon after his arrival. His death was very sad indeed, caused by the mistake of a brother preacher, who gave carbolic acid, supposing it to be the medicine left by his doctor. Bro. Maxfield lived only fifteen minutes after taking the acid, dying in the arms of the preacher.

We have seen many persons converted to God during our labors in the west. Many of them have been called to the home above, departing in holy triumph, and we feel that the labors of the brethren in this field have not been in vain.

We have a large number of churches erected in differant parts of the Territory, and a number of parsonages, and the working force is increasing. We have gathered into the church several hundred members, and the howling wilderness has become a settled country. Now, instead of requiring three months to reach Montana from the States, we can come in three days. In my judgment, the Methodist Church has a bright future before it, and its prospects for a grand work here, are very good.

The population has increased since I came to Montana, from about 10,000 to 150,000. The country is improving in its agricultural and stock raising facilities, and the more the mines are developed, the more extensive they appear to be. We regard the climate, taken the year round, as one of the best, and for the larger part of the year, an exceedingly pleasant one in which to live. For fifty-seven years I have been in the itinerant ministry, and twenty-four years of that time I have spent in Montana. One year ago I was stricken down with paralysis, caused no doubt by overwork. I thank God I am spared to still lift up my voice in behalf of perishing souls! I am still in the work, hoping to be spared to finish the work and the ministry committed to me, before I am called hence to join the gathering hosts above.

We breathe to God a prayer for tbe prosperity of our beloved Methodism, that it may still be a power in the land disseminating Gospel truth, and in leading many precious souls to Christ, and that our "Montana Methodist" may be the means of doing much good, and encourage Zion's hosts.

Your brother in love and labor,

L. B. STATELER.

Willow Creek, Mont.

FOR the sake of history, we make the following quotations from the minutes of the M. E. Church Conference, held in Bozeman, July 8, 12, 1886. In "A Sketch of early Methodism in Montana," written by the Rev. Hugh Duncan, we find "A brother by the name of Craig was the first preacher of ours in this Territory. I am assured his first sermon was preached in Bannack, January 10, 1864. What relation Brother Craig held in our church I am unable to say, but I find that in addition to preaching the word, he also preformed marriage ceremonies. My informants are Brother Wm. L. McIntosh and wife now living at Red Rock, Beaverhead County. To Bannack therefore belongs the honor of having had the first gospel sermon preached in the Territory and that by a Methodist.

Says the Rev. Hugh Duncan in another part of the sketch: "As it may be interesting to the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Montana, in years to come to notice the progress of Methodism in the Territory, we write a few lines as a heading to these records. In the winter of 1863–4, a few members of the M. E. Church in Virginia City, organized themselves into a class under the leadership of Brother Wm. Florkey, for the purpose of holding prayer and class-meeting. This organization was kept up until the fall of 1864, when Brothers Hough and McLaughlin arrived, having been sent out by the Missionary Board to take charge of the work.

In the summer of 1864, the first permanent M. E. Church of Montana, was erected at a cost of about $1,500 in gold. The same was dedicated on the 6th day of November, 1864. There were present, A. M. Hough, pastor, and McLaughlin, assistant; local preachers, Florkey, Penherty, and Lenny; laymen, Brothers Ritchie, McCullock, Knott, Wyland, Fellows, Wisnall, Phillips, Millard and Forbes."—Ed.

Our Montana Preachers.

Rev. L. B. Stateler: Bro. Stateler is now about seventy-five years of age, of medium height, large frame, venerable face, a voice peculiarly musical. He has been a strong gospel preacher—a great organizer. Though now afflicted, and possibly may never preach regularly again, he is still a wise counsellor, one to whom we all yet look as the Nestor of the Conference. He has been a pioneer preacher for fifty years, having been on frontier work from the Indian Territory to the British line. He is a man of God, and greatly honored by his younger brethren in the ministry.

Rev. E. J. Stanley: For seventeen years this man of robust frame, gentle spirit and indomitable will, has been riding circuits, building churches and parsonages and planting gospel seed in the mountains and valleys of Montana. Although laboring under discouragements he has never lost confidence in the success of our cause here. Amid all these arduous labors he has made time for writing and has gained the well merited reputation of being "our writer," of the Conference. Scarcely two years since Bro. Stanley found a preacher's prize, "the gift of the Lord," a good wife, daughter of one of our heroic laymen. Little Rachel is now the flower of the Stanley family.

Rev. R. F. Beasley: Bro. Beasley was transferred from the Texas Conference in March, 1886, and stationed in Helena where he did fine work for eighteen months. He is about 38 years old, has a wife and one child, a little boy about six. Bro. Beasley is an industrious, aggressive and efficient man. He has done a splendid work this year on the Boulder and Elkhorn circuits, and will doubtless come to the Conference with a good record and full report.

Rev. A. C. Couey: In the order of time Bro. Couey is the fourth among the itinerants in the Conference. He is a few days over 32. Has a wife and two children. He was transferred from the Louisiana Conference in 1886, and stationed in Butte. This has been his only charge in the territory. His labors have been greatly blessed here.

Rev. W. M. Britt: Bro. Britt was transferred from the Denver Conference last year, by Bishop E. R. Hendrix, and stationed in Helena. He is a small man, frank face, pleasant manner, about 31 years old. He brought his bride with him from Denver. Bro. Britt is a man of but little noise. The church in the Capital City has gradually grown under his ministry during the past year, and he will come to the Conference knowing that he has made "full proof of his ministry" during his stay among the Montana brethren.

Rev. B. E. H. Warren: A large, mountaineer, whole soul, full-of-faith, gospel preacher. Bro. Warren is about fourty years old, has a boyish face. He has a wife and three children. He was transferred from the St. Louis Conference and put in the charge of the Willow Creek and Bozeman circuit. He has operated in a large portion of the Bozeman district, as the field was not supplied till he by assiduous efforts succeeded in getting recruits from the states. Bro. Warren is a fine organizer and a good revivalist. His labors in Montana have been graciously blessed. He is certainly the kind of a man we want in this western work. We shall be glad to shake your hand, brother, at the coming Conference.

Rev. H. C. Fleenor: Bro. Fleenor is about twenty-three years old; tall, spare, pleasant face, keen blue eyes, of classical mien. He is full of ambition to make a workman of the Lord. The work in Bozeman station has flourished under his master hand. One of our mountain girls near Bozeman has submitted to the itinerant yoke, and now with a housekeeper Bro. Fleener is willing to return another year to accupy the new parsonage that is to go up in the Valley City this fall.

Rev. C. E. Finley: Our bachelor preacher. Short, stout, benevolent face, deep base voice; humble, consecrated and faithful to duty. Bro. Finley came to us this Spring and has fed luxuriously upon the tall grass of the great Bitter Root valley with Bro. Stanley. He seems delighted with Montana, has his heart greatly in the work of soulsaving. We shall not forget climbing Mt. Helena with Bro. Finley during the District Conference session in the Metropolis, last April.

Rev. S. W. Barbee: Our supply in the smelter city, Anaconda. Bro. Barbee is a man of medium size, very pleasant manner, about forty to forty-five years old. He has a family of wife and four children. He is the brother of Dr. J. D. Barbee, our agent at the Nashville Publishing House. His work at Anaconda is moving along very nicely from all accounts. A man of so cheerful spirit will make friends anywhere and Bro. Barbee will no doubt do our cause good service. He will be on hand (promptly) July 25th, 9 a. m. We take this to be the man.

Rev. Jno. M. Moore: Bro. Moore is small in body, blue eyes. dark hair, fair skin, about 35 to 38. He is a smooth speaker, ornate in the pulpit. He has fire enough in his soul to make people listen when he talks. He has a wife and one child. He is placed in Deer Lodge. Preaches also at Stuart. He starts in his new work with great earnestness. We expect to have good reports from Bro. Moore in the future. All he needs is a chance.

Rev. Aaron Kelley: Our boy preacher from Georgia this Spring. He is junior preacher with Bro. Warren. We shall be glad to see you Bro. Kelley. We shall have a pleasant time talking over matters concerning the Red Hills of Cedertown and Cave Springs, where we spent our boyhood days.

We have the following local brethren: Rev. R. S. Clark, whose chief work has been at Alhambra Springs during the past year. Rev. H. W. Currin, who resides at Boulder, known among our brethren as our Sunday school man. He has our warmest sympathy in the loss of his beloved wife some months past. Rev. — Hortenberry, who lives near Stevensville, and preaches some in the Bitter Root valley.

Rev. T. W. Flowers: Is on the supernumerary list as a member of our Conference. While this relation declares him ineffective, he is by no means idle. He preaches twice a month, and sometimes every Sabbath in the month. Bro. Flowers has a very comfortable home in Stevensville, with a small farm near by. He is a mechanic. By the labor of his own hands he makes a living. Bro. Flowers is a good preacher and we would be glad for him to risk his health, and give the church the benefit of his riper years. He feels unwilling to assume full work from a slight heart trouble. We hope to see him at the Annual Conference.

Important Notice.

To the Chairman of the Joint Boards of Finance in the several Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

1. The General Conference held in Richmond, Va., May, 1886, directed the Joint Board of Finance of the several Annual Conferences to estimate, in the year 1887, the traveling expenses of the delegates of their respective Conferences to the General Conference to be held in May, 1890, and to add thirty dollars per delegates for entertainment at the General Conference. The amount so estimated is to be furnished to the Book Agent of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, whose duty it shall be to "aggregate the said several assessments, and furnish the said Board of Finance with an estimate of the proportional to be raised by each Annual Conference, at its session in the year 1888, and every fourth year thereafter, shall estimate and distribute the sum to be raised to the several presiding elders' districts: and when the money is collected, during the year 1889, and every fourth year thereafter, it shall be transmitted by the treasurer of the Board of Finance in each Conference, with proper statements, to the Book Agent."

It remains true that in this country the men nominated and elected to public office represent fairly the moral character of their constituents. When a bad man is put into office it means that the electors are either as bad as he is, or that they are too lazy or cowardly to assert themselves. Laziness and cowardice are not small crimes when they imperil the freedom and happiness of a nation.—Nash. Ad.

The increase in the membership of our church during the past year has been 41,078. The total membership now is 1,107,459.

Willow Creek and Bozeman Circuit.

MR. EDITOR:—My first year's work on this circuit is drawing to a close, and I am pleased to report success. Up to date I have traveled near 5,000 miles, preached nearly 200 sermons and received seventy-six members into the church. One local preacher was received from another church. I have organized three new societies and four new Sunday schools where we had none I have a subscription for a new church with nearly enough to build it. The Willow Creek and Bozeman circuit is too large to be traveled by one man and ought to be divided next year. Our prospects in the field are very flattering. We have a strong hold on the people and many of them ask for the gospel at our hands. Two active good men in one year could build up two self-supporting works here easily. There are several promising points in the bounds of the circuit asking for preaching from us. If the work is divided these can be reached. I have found the people here not prejudice against the M. E. Church South, but against certain preachers who have acted imprudently. East of us there is a vast territory unoccupied by our church. At several points in this field we have members, several of whom have written me, asking that a preacher be sent there. An active man could organize a good sized district east of the Bozeman district in one year. Wherever our church has been properly represented we have moved forward grandly. With our increasing appropriations and the additional workmen sent us we will soon be the leading church in this section. Our members in this part of the field are true and hopeful and they are going to sustain our cause here nobly in the future. The efforts of some to uproot us in this field have only served to make our people more self-sacrifising. We will begin next year's work with greater faith in the success and permanency of our beloved church. Success to the MONTANA METHODIST.

Let us now have the conference school. A friend in my work offers $3,000 worth of good property if he names the location for it.

Yours truly,
B. E. H. WARREN.

Boulder and Elkhorn.

The Boulder and Elkhorn charge during the present conference year, has been moving along, we think, with some degree of success. There have been thirteen accessions, ninety dollars raised and paid on an old standing church debt, a parsonage built, and movements are being made toward building a church. A Ladies' Aid Society has been organized in the interest of the church, and will doubtless prove most valuable. Boulder is quite a growing town, through which pass two railroads, and with activity and perseverence on the part of her membership, Southern Methodism in its aggressive movements, may accomplish much in these parts.

R. F. BEASLEY.
Boulder, Mont., June 23, 1888.

Our Mission in Montana.

The propriety of our presence as a religious body in Montana has been regarded, by some, as questionable. Even our honored mother seems to have feared that her enterprising child had ventured beyond its limits and thus involved its success, if not its existence, in much doubt. This is not a matter of surprise when we consider that she, from politico-religious pressure of a sectional character, was forced in 1844 to employ her forces within sectional lines. Not, however, that she was politicalized or sectionalized, but because that she absolutely refused to admit the one into her policy, the other became a necessity, and thus accepting this inevitable, it is but natural that she should have feared that beyond this limit and within that where her opposition arose and alas! still continues with but little, if any abatement, that her mission would not be recognized hence her ecclesiastical existence and her work of soul-saving would have to struggle with serious, if not with insurmountable difficulties. But despite all this, the time, in God's providence, has come, when sectional lines shall no longer put boundaries to her Catholic spirit, nor limit her consecrated activities in soul-saving. And what our cautious mother has been want to regard as recklessness in her pioneer children who have dared to claim for her a footing in the west is but providence inviting her beyond sectional seclusion to spread scriptural holiness where sin has blighted and is still blighting human hopes and corrupting human lives. Our mission, therefore, in Montana is not that of hunting up Southern Methodists and organizing them into politico-religious societies because they are Southerners, as some in the face of history seem to think, and even charge, but because of a providential advance to enlarge our field of usefulness in saving souls. And while we are true to this spirit and work of our honored mother we have a mission here as legitimate as we have anywhere upon this sin-cursed earth. And although the prejudices of some may not allow them to award to us such a place as a "constructive force" in the moral and religious life of Montana, yet the fact that such a place exists is obvious to all who rise above sectional prejudice into the broader spirit of religious toleration. Our mission here is, and has been, to save souls, not to strengthen or to pander to any political element that may exist here or elsewhere, as our history fully vindicates. Our pulpits have known only Chrirt and Him crucified. And we are glad to know that the people of Montana are beginning to admit that, upon this line of religious aggression we have a place and work as a religious body in Montana. And we hope that our beloved Zion will prove true to this her divine mission until earth's "waste places shall blossom as the rose," under the fruitifying influence of God's grace.

R. S. CLARK.
Helena, M. T.

As we go to press the preachers are coming in from their fields of labor, heading for Butte City where the Montana Conference convenes on the 25th inst. Encouraging reports come up from almost every quarter of the success that has attended their labors. The struggle with some of them has been long and severe, but victory is at last perching upon our standard. It has been demonstrated beyond a doubt that we have a mission in Montana. More than one hundred souls have been gathered in during the past year. The Macedonian cry is heard from various fields where we have never gone for lack of men and means, "come over and help us."

The approaching session of Conference bids fair to be one of the most interesting that we have ever held. It will be the first time that a number of our preachers have ever met together. Let us be careful to maintain a spirit of brotherly love and unity. It was not until the disciples were all of one accord and one mind that they were endued with power from on high, and a pentecost was realized in the church on earth. Here is found the great condition of success. Without this baptism of fire, all our efforts are vain, and we can therefore afford to sacrifice personal preference and opinions and everything that is of a selfish nature to secure it. God grant that we may witness such a baptism of the Holy Spirit at Butte as shall extend its influence to every valley and hamlet in Montana during the coming Conference year.

THE MONTANA METHODIST, HELENA, MONT.

We earnestly request that all our preachers and members commence at once and carry forward an active canvass for the MONTANA METHODIST.

A thrill of joy went through many hearts as Bishop Galloway, in his little talk at the close of the sermon in Helena last Sunday night, remarked with emphasis: "We are here to stay."

Bishop Galloway is highly pleased with our mountain land. He is fascinated with the appearance of the great Gallatin valley, and says that his trip to the Yellowstone National Park is the grandest trip he ever made. He regards the park as the wonderland of the universe.

Centenary M. E. Church, South, at Bozeman, was dedicated by Bishop Chas. Galloway, on the 15th inst. The attendance was large, at night many were turned away, not being able to find room. The Bishop preached with Herculean power, and made impressions for good that will be felt when he has long since departed.

Our friends may make due allowance for any imperfections that may appear in the general make-up of this issue of the paper. We hope to improve with each number and shall endeavor to furnish one of the best papers of the kind published in the West. Our publishers propose to give us first-class work, and we are determined that every thing else shall correspond.

Helena charge will make an encouraging report at conference. Twenty-three names have been added to the class book. Twelve of these are of the class formed by Bro. Clark, at Alhambra. The Sunday School in Helena has now eighty-seven scholars enrolled. A new school has lately been organized in the valley, which promises well. The assessments have all been raised with an excess in every item. About $1,500 have been raised for all purposes.

Bishop Galloway spent last Sunday in Helena. His sermons at the Grand street church were full of gospel truth, and eloquently delivered. The large audiences were delighted and the bishop can feel assured of a wide hearing whenever he comes again. The important question is, will they heed the message which they heard with such pleasure, or shall it pass from their minds as if it were merely an entertaining song?

At the close of the evening services the bishop made some remarks relating to the work of our church in the West. He assured us of the sympathy and interest which the church east feels concerning our work out here, and emphatically declared that we were here to stay. The success God has given us is the proof that we have a mission here. The phenomenal growth of the church in the last few years shows greater percentage of increase in the West than in the South.

Four New Churches to Dedicate.

There will be four churches to dedicate during the stay of Bishop Galloway in Montana. They are respectively at Bozeman, Butte, Anaconda and Victor. We believe every one of these churches is free of debt, so that our Bishop will have no extra load to pull. These churches are all models of neatness, and very comfortable houses of worship. The pastors at these places look forward to the day of dedication with pleasant anticipations. They will no doubt be joyful occasions for all who may have the privilege to attend.

Annual Conference Collection.

The preachers should by no means fail to use all dilligence to bring up their collections in full, for missions, bishops and church extension. The resident members of the church at the seat of conference, with the preachers and lay delegates in attendance, often have heavy burdens to bear because of neglect in these matters on the various charges during the year. Brethren give every one of your members a chance on these important matters if it is the last Sabbath you preach to them. Our liberal people of Montana will not let you go to conference empty if you present the cause properly.

Butte Station.

The Butte Station during the two conference years closing, has raised for all purposes about $2,500.00. Three-fifths of this amount has been paid the past twelve months. The cozy little temple is a model of neatness and admirably suited to the needs of the congregation that worship in it. It is veneered brick 45 x 28 One auditorium is almost faultless in taste and comfort. It is now free of debt and ready for dedication at the ensuing annual conference. The membership has increased about seventy-five per cent. since September, 1886. A fair Sunday School has been running all the while with an average attendance from twenty-five to forty.

Our Work in the West.

The Methodist Episcopal Church South, is spending more money to aid the western conferences this year than ever before. This declares more light on our needs in the west. These are the days of golden opportunities, and we are truly glad to see the church making the advanced movement toward the setting sun. The west is that part of our great country in which will be wrought out one of the most important questions that has come before the church for many days past. May God have to do with every dollar and every man employed in evangelizing the great, great west. Methodism must do her part.

Annual Conference.

The Annual Conference to convene in Butte, Wednesday, July 25, promises to be a very interesting occasion for all the members of this branch of the Methodist family in our Territory.

It is only once a year that any of us get the services of our chief pastors, and we naturally look forward to their visits with great pleasure. But few of the people in Montana have seen Bishop Galloway, who is to preside over our Conference this year. He is said to be the youngest Methodist Bishop on record, having been elected Bishop when a little over thirty-six years old. He has fine executive ability, winning the hearts of the preachers wherever he goes. His pulpit qualifications doubtless made him Bishop.

The preachers all seem in fine spirits, and will come to Conference with glad hearts after a year of toil. For our number, our success has been marked during the past year. Our laymen too, whom we expect at the session, are men of God, and take no less interest than their pastors in the onward march of Zion's hosts. We fully expect to greet every delegate July 25th. The good women too, from various parts of the field will be just as welcome as if they could vote, if not more so. Come along sisters, our pastor, his members and friends of the church will do their very best to see that every one shall have a choice home during the stay in the "Silver City."

Bozeman Station.

H. CLAY FLEENOR.

I arrived at this place the 1st of March. Everything, both material and spiritual, was in a most dilapitated condition. To begin work in Bozeman under the auspices of the Southern Methodist Church was a thing laughable and ridiculous to most people in the city. Work, however, was begun with a view to accomplish something if possible. The few faithful members soon rallied to our assistance and improvements are being made which astonish many critical eyes. We have done about $40 worth of work on the auditorium. This makes the interior very pleasant and comfortable. A new bell weighing nearly 300 pounds has been placed in the tower at a cost of $77.80. We have had 13 accessions to the church. Our Sunday School is certainly a marvel in its material and financial development. We have quite an efficient corps of teachers and officers, so that one to see the administration of our school going on would think that we were an eastern school transferred to this place. People are beginning to realize that we represent a vital part of Methodism, and that we are a people free from political affiliations and outside issues of the world. One noble young lady who quit dancing and joined the church said, "I love the Southern Methodist Church because I believe there is more pure religion in it than in any other church." There are a class of people in the west who say they want to restore "primitive Christianity," or the religion of the apostles, pure and unsullied. But I see some of those who move in the front ranks and blow the biggest horn of the sect going round getting up a "dance." The "apostolic religion!" Imagine Paul going down to Athens, to Ephesus, to Corinth, or to Rome to get up a "dance." Imagine him taking part in the Olympic games of Greece or occupying a front seat in a Roman theatre. Then, again, imagine Christ when He met the woman at the well in Samaria starting off with her into the city of Nablous to spend the night in a species of revelry and mirth which would correspond with the modern dance or theatre. But we see no such conduct in Christ or the apostles. The whole of their lives was a grand exhibition of inward and outward holiness. The very fact that we as Southern Methodist preachers and people are living and preaching the religion of Christ, which means abstinence from the world's frolics, foolishness and vanity has given us prominence and must result in a signal victory for our cause in this and other western mission fields.

Notes from the Helena District.

BY THE P. E.

EDITOR METHODIST:—I am so glad that at last we have a medium through which we can communicate with and hope to reach the great mass of our people scattered throughout these Rocky Mountains. I send you a few notes to show the progress that has been made in the Helena District since the last Conference.

And first, our ministerial force has about doubled. Last fall we had but four regular pastors, including the P. E., who had charge of a circuit. Now we have eight, including Brother Lee, who has recently been appointed P. C. in Flathead Valley.

At Helena, Rev. W. M. Britt has been quite zealous, and has had a number of accessions to the church. Brother Hunter is succeeding well with the Sunday School, while Rev. R. S. Clarke, a local preacher, has gathered quite a number of members at Alhambra, established several new appointments, and mapped out a new circuit.

At Boulder, Brother Beasley has added a new parsonage to the list of preachers' homes, and has recovered a dozen or more members. The Sunday School under the superintendence of Brother Currin, has done a good work, while the people have almost freed the church from debt, and payed for the parsonage, and the preacher's salary almost in full.

Rev. A. C. Couey has been abundant in labors at Butte, paying off the church debt which has been a great burden to the little church there, adding a number of new members and greatly increasing the congregation.

Rev. S. W. Barbee arrived at Anaconda the last of May; found the work disorganized; gathered the people in, organized a Sunday School, and is meeting with good success, judging from the manner in which the citizens of that enterprising town have rallied to his support.

Rev. Jno. Moore was transferred from Jacksonport, Arkansas, and placed in charge of our church at Deer Lodge in May. The prospect was not very inviting. But Brother Moore went to work with a will, has gathered in a number of members, has an appointment at Stuart in Deer Dodge Valley, has impressed the people very favorably and is doing a good work.

Rev. E. C. Finley was transferred from Missouri, and has been working as junior preacher with the writer for nearly six months on Stevensville circuit. In fact, he has done most of the preaching, as I have been absent on the district a good share of the time. Brother Finley has made many friends. During the year a beautiful and commodious house of worship has been built at Victor, a railroad town, and furnished with a splendid bell. The house is an ornament to the town, and will be dedicated by Bishop Galloway the first Sunday in August. The church at Stevensville has been painted outside and handsomely papered and refitted inside, while the parsonage has been fenced, the yard sown in grass, and set with shade trees. A number of persons have been added to the church.

Altogether the outlook is more favorable than it has ever been before. There has been a decided improvement in the support of the preachers. Let us thank God and take courage. Let us determine to know nothing but Christ and Him crucified, be of one accord and one mind, have Christ formed within us the hope of glory and we shall go forth conquering and to conquer. We shall see the "Mountain of the Lord's house established in the tops of the mountains, and exalted above the hills and the rations flowing unto it."

Wealth vs. Grace.

The boast of Montana's wealth is on everybody's lips. We have more wealth per capita than any other Territory or State in the union. Our rich pastures covered with herds of stock, our fertile valleys and luxuriant crops, our mountains full of silver and gold, are heralded by the papers, expatiated upon in public speeches, and talked of in private. And since "money answereth all things," we enjoy all the advantages of material prosperity. We have finer houses than any other people, and they are supplied with more sumptuous furniture. We eat more delicate food, and wear better clothes on an average than any other people in the world. And that we are the envy of the world is shown by the strong current of immigration that is flowing into our Territory.

But seen as God sees us have we so much cause for self-gratulation? "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Our unusual wealth has begotten an unusual thirst for wealth. "The abundance of the rich will not suffer them to rest," and the envy of the poor render them equally restless. It is readily seen that such a climate is unfriendly to the work of religion and the growth of grace. The best matured Christian feels the baleful influence of such an atmosphere, and the young Christian not thoroughly rooted in habits and principles is in great danger of blight.

Our eastern friends sometimes wonder that the churches here at the fountain of wealth should need any help from the mission-boards. But the reason is that so little of this wealth is consecrated to God that not one of the denominations occupying this field could be sustained without help from abroad.

We doubt not a better time is coming. This world belongs to God, and He will claim His own. His hand is upon all its resources. "The wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just." And if not willingly offered, when the fullness of time has come, the Lord will require His own with usury. B.

A Trip to Flathead Lake.

BY E. J. STANLEY.

EDITOR METHODIST:—Perhaps your readers would be interested in the account of a recent visit to what is commonly known as the Flathead Lake country.

On the 11th of June I left the parsonage at Stevensville, boarded the train at Tyler's station at 2:50 p. m., and after a ride of thirty miles down the Bitter Root Valley, our train stopped to get fifteen or sixteen car loads of lumber at the various saw mills at the wayside. We arrived at Missoula, a flourishing town of one thousand or more inhabitants, located at the mouth of the famed Hell Gate Canyon, on the north bank of the Missoula or Hell Gate river. It is the county seat of Missoula county, is the commercial center of a vast area of rich country, and is one of the prettiest and most substantial towns in Montana.

Stopping over night with Mrs. Horde, where the weary itinerant finds a hearty welcome, I gained much valuable information about the country I was to visit from Miss Hattie Horde, the accomplished and popular superintendent of public instruction in our county.

Next morning a run of thirty-five miles on the Northern Pacific west bound train, the route leading down the lovely valley below Missoula for twelve miles, thence northward through the famous Corican Defile, where a band of Blackfeet Indians once surprised and slaughtered an entire party of their enemies, passing over the wonderful Marents trestle, the highest on the road, over a divide, and down through the Jocko valley, brought us to Ravalli, a station on the bank of the Jocko river, a dashing mountain stream. The scenery along the route is quite picturesque, and the road passes near some old Indian battle grounds of historic interest, where the heaps of rocks and even the scars upon the trees remain to this day to mark the fierceness of the struggle between opposing tribes of savages in days of yore. Ravalli is the shipping point for all the country north. It is on the Flathead reservation, hence there is no prospect for but few buildings, a blacksmith shop, a hotel and a store, which are nearly a quarter of a mile from the depot. The two latter are owned by Mr. Duncan McDonald, a clever half-breed, the son of an old Hudson Bay trader, a Scotchman, who is still living upon the reservation, and has acquired much property in the shape of cattle and horses, which roam at large over the rolling grass-covered, well-watered prairies, with no expense—not even taxes—save that of rounding up and branding them. Young McDonald has a fair education and acquired considerable literary fame by writing up the Nez Perce war—giving the Indians' side of the story, which was published in the New Northwest about ten years ago, and was read with interest by many people. He has a monopoly of the business here at present, is proprietor of the stage line and bids fair to succeed in business. The absence of a saloon is conspicuous. The station is named for Father Ravalli, a Catholic priest who came to Bitter Root Valley in 1844 and spent his life as a missionary among the Flathead Indians. He was a noble spirited Christian man, meek and simple hearted as a child, and his name is a household word among the old settlers of this country, both Protestant and Catholic. He died only a few years ago at Stevensville, where a beautiful marble monument, purchased largely with Protestant funds, marks his resting place.

A new and fine hotel is being built at this place. The walls are of hewed logs, and the largest ones that I ever saw worked into a building of this kind. We measured one that is about forty inches in diameter. It reminded me of the old block houses that I read about in the accounts of the early settlement of Kentucky and Tennessee.

The agency of the reservation is located about twelve miles up the river from Ravalli, and is in charge of Major Ronan, who is the most successful and popular Indian agent that I have ever known. He has perfect control of the Indians and I have never heard a word against his character. The writer cherishes pleasing memories of a visit with his interesting family in their hospitable home many years before the era of railroads in Montana. Just above the agency in the mountains is a beautiful cataract where the water leaps hundreds of feet down a craggy precipice, and also a chain of small lakes hid away in the pines, that furnish a delightful retreat for the tourist and the hero of the hook and line.

There is a stage line which carries passengers three times a week from here to the foot of the lake, about thirty-five miles distant. We would not leave until next morning, and, of course, had to entertain ourselves the best we could. I first engaged an old prospector, and listened for an hour or more to accounts of his adventures on the Pacific coast for twenty years and upwards. I tried talking to the Indians, but made a failure of that. Went fishing and landed a few small fry which the Chinese cook, a jolly fellow, kindly prepared for my supper. I came up with a man sitting on the railroad track, who seemed to be almost as lonesome as myself. Found him intelligent, kindly disposed—the road-master for that division, and had been raised a Methodist, but had not been to church for five years. He promised to attend. We both felt better for the plain, earnest talk that we had in that lone, wild retreat. I ventured to ask and obtained permission to hold service in the dining room of the hotel; notified the railroad men, a number of whom were camped near by, that there would be preaching at eight o'clock. The arrival of some packers and the excitement of swimming the poor animals across the swollen river delayed the exercises a short time. But a goodly company gathered in, to whom I delivered my message. They showed their appreciation of it by the most respectful attention, and afterwards a collection, which was all of their own prompting, and which I applied to the church extension fund. I trust that the seed sown will bring forth fruit in days to come. After a good night's rest and an excellent breakfast, we were ready to start on our journey at half past six o'clock A. M. A seat on the outside with the driver gave me a splendid opportunity to enjoy the ride to the fullest extent. A thunder storm had purified the atmosphere which was fresh and crisp, and was fairly freighted with the odors of wild roses and other lovely flowers that lined the roadside. As we reach the summit after leaving the Jocko valley, the beautiful valley of Mission Creek, dotted with small Indian farms, flecked with grazing herds, with a rugged range bristling with cragy and snow-clad peaks rising up in the back ground bursts upon our vision. A few miles to the right of our road is St. Ignatius' Mission where the Catholics have a large church and school for girls and boys. Nature has done much for this spot of ground. The picture lingers in the mind long after we are gone from the place. The ride through the reservation was so exhilarating, the landscape views so inspiring. There is such a heavy growth of grass, such a variety of beautiful flowers, and the rugged mountain range to the right coursed by frequent cataracts where the water leaps for hundreds of feet over precipitous cliffs into seething pits, presents a wonderful contrast. Nature appears in all her primitive beauty and loveliness, and the presence of her children seems to be in harmony with the scene. Here and there we noticed a good sized dwelling and extensive enclosures. We crossed a number of beautiful mountain streams. This is a rich and lovely region. But my space is occupied. In my next I will tell you of a delightful voyage over the lake and up the river, and of my travels in the beautiful valley beyond the lake.

If you want a historical sketch of the M. E. Church, South, in Montana from 1864 to 1884, together with an account of the M. E. Church, including a treatise upon the general topography and resources of Montana Territory, send twenty-five cents to Rev. E. J. Stanley, Stevensville, Montana.

We hope that our local preachers will furnish us with accounts of their labors. They have been potent factors in the progress of Methodism from the days of Embury and Strawbridge down to the present time. They laid the foundations along the Atlantic coast, and we recognize the value of their services in building up the structure "on the tops of the mountains."

Bishop C. B. Galloway.

The Pulpit Treasury of November, 1886, says: Bishop Charles Betts Galloway, D. D., was born in Kosciusko, Miss., September 1st, 1849. He was graduated at the university of Mississippi, in 1868, and for a time was a professor in the Madison Male College. But finding his duties in the college interferred with his ministerial work he resigned and gave himself wholly to the work of the church. He became a very popular preacher, filled some of the most responsible positions in the Conference, and many of the most important pastorates. He is bold and fearless in the discharge of duty as was manifested when he pioneered the cause of prohibition in Mississippi and popularized the temperance movement. His "Hand-Book of Prohibition" is a campaign document bristling with facts and thrilling with appeals. His "Life of Linus Parker, D. D.," is a captivating portraiture, and he edited the New Orleans Christian Advocate for four years before his election to the Episcopate. Bishop Galloway's pulpit style is ornate, his manner earnest, and his appeals very effective. His Alma Mater conferred the degree of D. D. in 1882.

Our communication from the Flathead country in next issue will be of more than ordinary interest.

Let all our friends begin an active canvass and try who can send in the largest number of subscribers for THE METHODIST.

Rev. E. L. Lee, a local preacher of good report, who lives near Ashley, has been appointed to supply the work in Flathead Valley until such time as a regular itinerant can be sent who will be able to give his whole time to the work. We shall expect a good report from Brother Lee in his frontier field. Let prayers be offered for his success.

Dr. J. D. Barbee, our book agent and missionary treasury-elect, has fully intended a western tour among the Conferences, but possibly will not be able from recent indisposition. We should have been the gladest had he came to Montana. Dr. W. G. E. Cunningham is to take his place. We shall be pleased to have the senior editor of our Sunday School department, for Sunday School are highly valued in our church work.

The brethren in Colorado have undertaken to write up the history of Southern Methodism in the west which will be published in the column of THE COLORADO METHODIST, and afterwards re-revised and published in book form. Rev. E. J. Stanley of this Conference has been requested to furnish that part of the history relating to our work in Montana Territory. Those who can furnish any data that will be helpful in this work, will confer a favor by sending it to Brother Stanley at Stevensville. We shall claim this part of the history for the columns of THE MONTANA METHODIST.

Success.

Emerson says: Self-trust is the first secret of success—the belief that if you are here, the authority of the universe put you here and for cause, or with some task strictly appointed to you in your constitution, and so long as you work at that, you are well and successful. It by no means consists of rushing prematurely to a showy feat that shall catch the eye and satisfy spectators. It is enough if you work in the right direction. So far from the performance being the real success, it is clear that the success was much earlier than that, namely, when all the feats that make our civility with the thoughts of good heads. The fame of each discovery rightly attaches to the mind that made the formula which contains all the details, and not to the manufacturers who now make their gain by it, although the mob uniformly cheers the publisher and not the inventor. It is the dullness of the multitude, that they can not see the house in the ground plan, the working in the mold of the projector. While it is thought, though it was a new fuel, or a new food, or the creation of agriculture, it is cried down. It is a chimera; but there is a fact, and comes in the shape of 8 per cent., or 10 per cent., and 100 per cent., they cry, "It is the voice of God." Horatio Greenough, the sculptor, said to me of Robert Fulton's visit to Paris: "Fulton knocked at the door of Napoleon with steam, and was rejected, and Napoleon lived long enough to know that he had excluded a power greater than his own." Is there no loving of knowledge and of art and of our design for itself alone? Can we not please ourselves with performing our work, or gaining truth or power, without being praised for it? I gain my points, I gain all points, if I can reach my companion with my statement which teaches him his own worth. The sum of wisdom is that the time is never lost that is devoted to work. The good workman never says, "There, that will do;" but, "There, that is it; try it and come again, it will last always." If the artist, in whatever art, is well at work on his design, it signifies little that he does not find orders or customers. I pronounce that young man happy who is content with having acquired the skill which he aimed at, waits willingly when the occasion of making it appreciated shall arrive, knowing well that it will not loiter. The time your rival spends in dressing up his work for effect hastily and for the market, you spend in study and experiments toward real knowledge and efficiency. He has thereby sold his picture or machine, or won the prize, or got the appointment; but you have raised yourself into a higher school of art, and a few years will show the advantage of the real master over the short popularity of the showman. I know it is a nice point to discriminate this self-trust, which is the pledge of all mental vigor and performance from the disease to which it is allied—the exaggeration of the part we can play; yet they are two things. — Golden Censer.

Death of Mrs. Currin.

The community at large and our church in particular, at Boulder, has met with an irreparable loss in the recent death of Sister Bertha Currin, wife of Rev. H. W. Currin. Sister Currin's youthful days were spent largely in Helena. She was received into the church by Bishop Marvin during his first visit here in 1872, and remained a consistent christian to the day of her death. She was an active worker in the Sunday school in Grand street church many years ago, and when she was taken sick she had a class of a dozen or more girls at Boulder, whom she was fast moulding into the habits of a christian life. She loved the Lord and she loved His church. She was one of the purest spirits that I ever knew. She leaves two little children who more than any one else will mourn her loss. But she leaves a glorious legacy—an untarnished name—which is worth more than great riches. We mourn our loss, but know that it is her eternal gain. Another star has been added to our Saviour's crown of rejoicing. Brother Currin and family have our deepest sympathy.

Write for the METHODIST. Send short, crisp articles — brief accounts of the progress you are making in Christian work.

A number of excellent communications will have to lie over because too long for publication in this issue. Patience, brethren.

Rev. J. E. Stanley recently visited the Flathead Valley, which lies north of Flathead Lake and extends to within about thirty or forty miles of the British possessions. He reports an extensive valley rich in resources which is rapidly filling up with enterprising people among them a number of Methodists and members of our own church. An earnest desire was expressed for a Methodist preacher to be sent them, and Brother Stanley regards it a good field for an earnest and active man.

Any man not a Mormon who will study the question until he understands what the obligations of Mormons are to their creeds, how it involves their politics as much as their religion, and that its purpose is infinitely more political than religious, and then want to extend the same political privileges to Mormons that are given to Americans, ought to apply at once for admission into the Mormon fold, for he is not fit to walk this earth a free American citizen.

GOLD vs. STEEL.

What are the advantages of Gold Pens over those made of Steel?

This question is so frequently asked us that we give a few facts in reply.

In the hand of one who writes eight hours a day, the average life of a Steel Pen is one day. The average life of a "MABIE, TODD & Co." Gold Pen is five years, many have been used 20 and 30 years, and we know of some that have been used 40 years.

At the end of say five years the cost of the Gold Pen has been $2.75, and it still has some value for the gold in it. The cost of the Steel Pens during same time, at the rate of 75 cents per gross, would be $15.00.

Any writing of record cannot be relied upon if done with a Steel Pen; the continual corrosion of the Steel as it is dipped into the ink, forms Oxide of Iron, and this in time will burn the paper, until the document resembles a stencil only, and cannot be deciphered. Any writing to be kept as record ought to be either written with a Quill or a Gold Pen.

Steel Pens are not tried before being sold, each one of the MABIE, TODD & BARD'S Gold Pens is tried with ink before it leaves the factory. The rough points of a Steel Pen will catch in the paper and spatter the ink; also, it will pick up thread-like parts of the paper and requires cleaning repeatedly. Our smoothly polished iridum point Gold Pen avoids both these annoyances.

Our Gold Pens are pre-eminent for smoothness, flexibility and temper; they are manufactured by a new process, employed solely by MABIE, TODD & BARD, which has been perfected by over forty years' personal experience, and they are tempered as was never possible before.

The following has lately appeared in a popular magazine. "The calculation is, that to write thirty words, the Pen must be drawn through a space of sixteen feet and a half. A rapid writer can write thirty words in a minte; his pen, therefore, travels a mile in rather over five hours' writing."

Now, Mr. Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote to MABIE, TODD & BARD, saying: "You may like to know that I have used one of your Gold Pens constantly for more than twenty years, without repair, and always with perfect satisfaction; I have written with it half a dozen or more volumes, a large number of essays, etc., and thousands of letters."

If the match had been against a relay of Steel Pens, no less number than 11,500 would have been required which, calculated at the cost of 75 cents per gross, would be nearly $60, whilst the cost of a duplicate of the pen used by Dr. Holmes would be $2.75.

The advantages of Gold Pen over Steel Pens, can be summed up in the following—economy, uniformity, ease of writing, freedom of all danger of pen paralysis.

To those who earn their living by the pen, these facts are significant.

We make pens suitable for all grades of writing. Ask to see and try those made by MABIE, TODD & BARD.

Conference Notes.

There are many items of interest concerning the late annual conference which we would like to mention in this issue, but can not spare the space. They will be given a place in the near future.

The Mountain View congregation of the M. E. church, Butte City, dismissed both services on Sabbath of the annual conference session of the M. E. Church South, and heard our eloquent Bishop.

There was a ripple of smiles passed over the conference room when one of the Committee on Public Worship announced, "Rev. Dr. Haynes will preach in this church this evening at 8 o'clock and Bishop Galloway will exhort."

Bishop Galloway knows just how to "take a collection" and is an admirable success at the business. Such was the great liberality of the people in their responses to the various calls that the Bishop remarked, "This is the biggest little conference I ever saw."

The annual conference in Butte left behind it the sweet fragrance of a revival spirit. The pastor begins his year's work under very favorable auspices. Two members joined the church by profession on Monday evening. Others will join in the near future. The services on the first Sabbath in August were delightful.

There was raised for all purposes during the annual conference session about $2,200. The giving was of that high order, too, that did the soul good. In other words, it was an act of worship. If the brethren would permit, the little flock at Butte would open wide its doors to receive and entertain the conference next year. Let the good people of Stevensville speak.

Statistics of the Montana conference: Local preachers, 8; members, 409; adults baptized, 48; Sunday school scholars, about 500; infants baptized, 33; number of church edifices, 11; value of church edifices, $31,950; number of parsonages, 5; value of parsonages, $5,200; money expended, $2,867.33; contributed for missions, something over $300; church extension, $75, money raised for all purposes during the year, about $5,000.

The sixth annual report of the Board of Church Extension of the M. E. Church South, for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1888, exhibit the fact that the eleven loan funds carry a cash capital of $42,290.99. From April 1, 1887, to March 31, 1788, there were 318 churches and parsonages helped by loans and donations. Let the whole church not forget that the little Montana conference inaugurated this grand movement and has done her part in carrying forward the work.

One of the most affecting scenes to this writer during the session of the conference was the tears of a lay brother who had come up to the session hoping to get a preacher to go to his section another year, but was disappointed. Will our metropolitan city churches of one thousand to twelve hundred members allow such to continue? We hope better things of you. Come to the rescue and see that these places are supplied with pastors. The people are anxious to hear the gospel at our hands. Let us not "be at ease in Zion."

BY E. J. STANLEY.

There are many large herds of cattle and horses on the Flathead reservation which are owned chiefly by enterprising half-breeds and a few white men. A goodly number are owned by the Catholic mission. The religious interests of these Indians have long been in the hands of the Jesuits. They are all baptized into the Catholic church and are very zealous in the observance of the Christmas and Easter festivities.

Just about 12 o'clock we ascended a high divide, and a scene of rarest beauty and full of inspiration burst upon our vision. The emerald tinted waters of the Flathead lake came suddenly into view. The surface was as placid as a sea of glass and reflected in its crystal depths the blue sky with an occasional fleecy cloud that floated in mid heaven.

The lake is about fifteen miles wide and thirty or thirty-five miles long. You can see but a small portion from this point, the main body of water being hid by a chain of islands that projects far into it from the west side, commencing about seven miles up. The lofty and rugged range on our right is mostly covered with dense timber, and extends northward far beyond the lake. The driver showed me a snow capped mountain far to the north which he asserted is in Her Majesty's dominions. Presently he asked: "Do you see that white speck just between those two islands? That is one of the boats coming." It looked like a swan upon the sea, it was so small.

In a few moments we were at the lake shore, where we had a splendid meal, the bill of fare including fresh trout, which was eaten with a relish. The charges all along the route are reasonable, being only 50 cents for a meal and the same for a bed. The houses are made of logs and are rather primitive in their style. The sharp, shrill whistle announced the arrival of our steamer, which in a short time was followed by another. There are two of these small boats that ply between the foot of the lake and the head of navigation on the Flathead river. The competition is quite sharp between them. The fare on the stage from Ravalli to the lake is $2.50, and the fare on the boat is $2.50 to any point where you wish to go. Most of our party shipped on the "U. S. Grant," commanded by Captain Kerr, which looked to me just like a good sized skiff with a boiler in the center and a wheel at the stern. I took passage on the "Dora," which is larger than the other boat, being about fifty feet in length by eleven in width. She carries a much larger load, has some better accommodations, and claims to make better time. There is a ferry boat at the lower end of the lake, which is rowed by hand. The sum of $1.50 is charged for crossing a wagon and team. The water flowing out of the lake makes a stream more than one hundred yards in width, and just a short distance down are a series of rapids which are very rough.

The voyage over the lake was one of the most pleasing incidents of all my travels in the mountains. With all the various methods of locomotion, I had never before ridden on a steamboat in Montana. The water is pure and as clear as crystal, and almost as cold as ice. It is something like the Yellowstone lake. The mountains on the east side are very rugged and present a pleasing contrast. The islands are interspersed with pines and present bold cliffs, together with lovely glades and beautiful camping places. The shores of the lake are studded with bold promontories and indented with miniature bays into which the small boats can retreat when a storm sweeps down suddenly as it does often from the adjacent mountains. I thought what a delightful place for a party of pleasure seekers to come and camp and fish and spend a month or so during the summer and autumn. I wonder if the scenery here is anything like the Sea of Galilee. On the west side of the river the Catholics are building a large mission house for the benefit of several hundred of the Kootenai Indians which belong to the Flathead tribe, or are associated with it on the reservation. Our little boat hurried along at the rate of ten miles an hour, and we were soon across the lake and entering the river, whose banks are lined with tall cottonwood, fir and tamarack trees, with a dense undergrowth. We were now out of the reservation, the north line crossing the lake about two-thirds of the way up, and soon we began to see cabins and fences aud other signs of civilization. There are frequent landings where the boats stop for the accommodation of the settlers on either side of the river. We noticed two nests of young eaglets perched high on some dead and broken pines. The birds were almost large enough to take their flight. On our return trip we had the excitement of chasing a deer that was trying to swim the river. We made him go back, but had no rifle with which to try our marksmanship. The game law was in force, however, and it was just as well. A short distance out from the river on either side the prairie sets in and extensive settlements are being formed. The Flathead river is from one hundred to two hundred yards wide, not very swift, and in some places forty feet deep. The distance from the head of the lake to Demersville, the head of navigation, is by land twelve or fifteen miles, while by river it is thirty. We stopped at one landing to wood, and at Selish we stopped for supper. The small boat overtook us at this point, and notwithstanding the claims of our boatmen for superior speed, we were left behind at least a half hour in getting to our destination at night.

The Flathead valley is about thirty miles long and from ten to fifteen in width. Much of it consists of rolling prairies which reminded me of the undulating prairies of Eastern Kansas. The subsoil is mostly clay. It holds moisture well, and as there is an abundance of rain, irrigation, as a rule, is not necessary, though a few of the farmers have ditches. There is abundance of timber, extensive forests on the mountains and foothills and along the river bottoms.

There are three objections urged against the Flathead valley: first, its isolation; second, the mosquitoes; third, its liability to frost. The first will ere long be removed by the advent of a railroad, and the other two are no worse than exist in other localities. A rich deposit of coal has been discovered at the head of the valley, which with the immense lumbering facilities will soon draw a railroad that way. The valley is rapidly settling up by an enterprising class of people.

At the young town of Demersville there is a store which for the extent and variety of stock would do credit to many of our larger cities. It was established by Mr. T. J. Demers, of Frenchtown. There is also a first-class hotel, under the same management. Mr. Clifford, the manager, was very obliging, extending to me the hospitality of his house. He at once encouraged the building of a church, placed a horse and saddle at my command, and opened the grand store building for divine service. There is another store here kept by Mr. Adams. This will likely be the principal town of the valley until the railroad shall come. About two and a half miles from here is Ashley, where there is a postoffice and two small stores and a school house where about forty children attend school. I was greatly gratified to meet with Brother Tyson Duncan, who is a brother of Rev. Prior Duncan, who was once my pastor in Kansas. He and his excellent wife are members of our church, are of good report in the community and extended a cordial welcome to me. Brother D. and I were both at the session of the St. Louis conference at Kansas City in 1867. I was glad to find him so comfortably located in his mountain home. I was greatly rejoiced also to meet with my old friend and colaborer, Rev. E. L. Lee, a local preacher, late a member of the Montana conference. He has taken a ranch two and a half miles east from Demersville. Like Paul, he labors with his own hands, though living for awhile in a tent instead of making tents, while he constructs a cozy little house of logs for his future home and superintends a Sunday school and preaches at the school house near Selish on Sunday. It was a real pleasure to meet with Brother and Sister Lee in their own new home in this new valley. I trust that it is the providence of God that brought them out into this field which is white unto the harvest. There always was something about frontier life most charming to me. The happiest moments of my life have been spent in mingling and worshiping with, or preaching to frontier settlers in tents or cabins away out in the wilderness.

Brother Duncan went with me visiting the people for two days. I met with several old acquaintances. On Sunday Brother Lee and myself held meeting near Selish at 11 o'clock, where the Lord was present, and at 3 o'clock p. m. we were greeted with a large congregation at Ashley. Monday and Tuesday were spent visiting on the east side of the valley, where there is an extensive settlement and many people who expressed a desire to have a Methodist minister sent to them. I longed to stay with them over another Sabbath, but my time was limited, and I could only promise to try and send them a preacher. I returned to Demersville, crossing on the ferry, and preached to a goodly company who were gathered in the store. I never enjoyed preaching more than while standing by the counter reasoning and pleading with the people to flee the wrath to come and be saved from their sins.

I appointed Brother Lee in charge of the work here until a regular pastor could be sent, and authorized and urged him to do what he could in organizing and supplying the people with the words of life.

I heard of Brother Fisher, a Presbyterian minister, who has been preaching in portions of the valley, but he was absent while I was there.

From Tennessee to Montana.

BY REV. S. W. BARBEE.

How slow we are to learn some of the best lessons of life—and preachers are no exception to the general rule. Some men, in every age, have the ken of prophecy; their number, however, is few. These are the pioneers of material progress and prosperity. To the suggestions of this class we would do well to take heed. Prominent among the number of American prophets stands Horace Greeley, whose "Go West, young man," uttered some fifty years ago, has been the talisman of our national development and greatness west of the Rocky Mountains. I never comprehended the sagacious foresight of this wonderful man, until with my own eyes, a few weeks ago, I looked upon the "far West." For a long time before I came I felt strangely drawn thither, I trust by the same impulse that made the apostle wish to obey the Macedonian call, or that made him say: "I am ready; as much as in me is to preach the gospel to them that are at Rome also."

Heeding the divine summons, I left Nashville, Tenn., May 4, 1888, and turned my face toward the setting sun with full purpose of heart to bear the cross at the Master's command while preaching the gospel to the inhabitants of picturesque Montana. As we were rushing along the Utah and Northern railroad, our polite brakeman pointed out to us the "divide," at which point the waters separate, one part going toward the Atlantic and the other toward the Pacific. A thought passed through my mind and I thus moralized: "Every boy at a certain period of life reaches the 'divide' in his history, where the slightest deviation in his moral conduct changes and fixes his destiny forever." May every youth who reads these lines turn his face heavenward when he reaches the "divide" of life.

A stop-over of three days in St. Louis afforded me a splendid opportunity to look upon "the future great city of the world." St. Louis is certainly a great metropolis of varied industries, but the greatest industry (?) is the ceaseless work of the 1,700 saloons (Sam Small says there are 1,700) which stand with open doors day and night to lure the unwary youth from virtue's path to the broad and downward road to destruction. Think of it! One saloon to every 250 inhabitants—men, women and children. Sam Jones and Sam Small were here and everybody knows that their presence means aggressive warfare on rum. Two speeches each, inspired largely by several thousand people drawn hither not only to hear these distinguished gentlemen, but likewise to bear testimony against the curse of home and youth, were an embargo on the nefarious traffic which received no doubtful confirmation by the almost unanimous uprising of the peopte in response to the request of Mr. Jones for all those who were in favor of wiping the curse from the land forever to stand up.

Everywhere along the line of our travel after we left St. Louis were unmistakable evidences of enterprise and prosperity. Embryonic cities were on our right hand and on our left, and fertile fields and grazing herds spoke more eloquently than tongue or pen of the push and thrift of the people who now occupy this inviting field. From the churches and schoolhouses in every town and city passed through, one would reasonably infer that education and religion are keeping pace with the march of material progress and improvement. Some things, however, occasion misgiving, and lead one who looks beneath the surface to entertain grave apprehensions that the startlingly prophetic utterances years ago of one of America's ablest seers may yet find a fulfillment in the country which freedom boasts its own: "If in our haste to be rich and mighty we outrun our literary and religious institutions they will never overtake us, or only come up after the battle of liberty is fought and lost, as spoils to grace the victory." For the averting of so sad a calamity may every patriotic son on Columbia's soil become saturated with the spirit of the prayer of him who in contemplation of the direful event, prayed out of a full and yearning heart; "O God, hide me from the day when the dying agonies of my country shall begin."

Omaha, Neb., in the occupation of a beautiful eminence overlooking the Missouri river on the west, with Council Bluffs, in Iowa, on the east, is a voiceful reminder that savage life, including all of its concomitants of idleness and thriftlessness, has long since yielded to the inevitable and is now paying tribute to genius, industry and intelligence. Cable cars are substituted as a means of locomotion for the slow pedestrian gait of the aborigines; electric lights flash their luminous scintillations where once the camp fires of the wigwam lighted up but dimly the surrounding hills; and the shrill awakening whistle of the iron horse makes a strangely prophetic comparison with the war whoop of the red man who, a few years ago, stood on the same spot as a menace to liberty and a bulwark of opposition to commercial prosperity, as well as to the educational and religious light that promises emancipation to the world of mankind.

But we are now in Montana, whose wealth of silver, and gold, and copper, and iron, and coal, and translucent streams, and fertile valleys, and grazing herds of finest horses, sheep and cows, and omni-shaped mountains, and beautiful women and manly men, et id omne genus, amazes one so lately come from "the States." How much I feel like exclaiming with Sheba's queen, "The half had not been told." But the preacher holds the fort at Anaconda, in Montana, and here is just as good a place as any to say it, Mr. Editor, that no little Southern Methodist preacher ever had a better home than this large-hearted people have given him. They have actually, in less than two months after my arrival, supplied our parsonage with brand-new furniture from kitchen to parlor, and carpeed the floor besides. In addition, they filled the larder with sugar, coffee, tea, evaporated fruits, canned goods, oat meal, flour, lard, coal oil, soap, breakfast bacon and ham (they knew I was from Tennessee), etc., etc.

We have here a splendid brick church and a neat parsonage, unencumbered, the work of that dear, good man, Rev. E. J. Stanley, whose name long years after he has gone to his reward in heaven will be fondly cherished by this people, and likewise the people of Montana and all the West. Bro. Stanley is certainly an ecclesiastical prophet, and had the "home church" endorsed his wisdom and practical efforts in the location and building of churches and parsonages in Montana by as wise and earnest effort in supplying preachers to stock them, and money for their support—and both could have been easily furnished—there would today be in the Montana conference ten times as many communicants as there are. As a proof, take Anaconda. Our church was the first built in this place. When we got the church and the parsonage our funds were exhausted, and we could not supply a preacher. The sympathies and sentiment of the people were all with us. We could have moulded society and drawn all classes into our communion. The people looked to us for doctrine and church leadership. Our "master builder" was removed to another field to build other churches and parsonages and we had not money to employ another to take his place. What followed? We let our church to the Presbyterians and Episcopalians, and they have reaped the harvest that was ours and that we should have gathered, and now we again enter the field which four years ago was wholly ours, with four organized rivals—one having a church building, but no pastor at present; one a parsonage, but neither pastor nor church; one a pastor, but no church; and the fourth a pastor, their church building projected—while we, having church, parsonage and pastor, have no organized society and have, besides, to carry the weight of alienated sympathy and contend against all the opposition of the organized forces named.

But we have hopes, and large hopes, and with a liberal donation from our Mission Board, and a preacher who relies mainly on Caughey's "knee work," we will soon come forth a bannered army of the Lord of hosts.

Anaconda, M. T.

The Wants of This Age and Country.

BY W. J. HUNTER.

When I consider what mankind thus far has gained; the material commodities, whether furnished by nature or secured by labor; the discoveries of science and the application of them to useful arts; the relations that commerce has established amongst men, and the forms and methods of society which they have produced; the achievements of intellect; the culture of thought and character; the creations of art; the demonstrations of pure science; when I consider all these things and then look over the state of the world, and especially Montana, and see the sins that prevail everywhere, and of the woes which they create, the question comes up before me: Is there no effective remedy? No gospel which will not only declare the promise but insure fulfillment, which will add to the sweetness of its own word that power over the soul which shall be felt as a life and a fulness of peace?

Yes, there is such a remedy and such a gospel, and in order that we may appreciate and enjoy them we want, first of all, a hearty belief in the Divine presence. No voice at evening or morning may come to us, as once among the trees of Eden; no audible converse; no angelic shapes, such as the old Patriarchs met at even tide and communed with. The age in which we live has become imbued with erroneous ideas of God's presence among his people. Take the panthistic idea; they verily believe that God is everywhere, because everything is a part of God; they repudiate the idea of a personal God; thus, "beast, bird, fish, insect, animal and vegetable life" are elements of Deity. "He warms in the sun, refreshes himself in the shower." But bear in mind this: these are his works, the evidences of his power, but they are not himself; the orthodox world cannot afford to cater to these erroneous ideas. But let us take the Bible as our standard, and therein we shall learn that God's presence is everywhere manifested.

A second want of the age and country is a hearty faith in the presence and work of the Holy Spirit in the church throughout this Territory, and in the souls of her members. Amidst the loves and the hates, the beliefs and the distrusts, the good works and the evil, the light and the darkness now mingling and surging among men, the Spirit is present; unheeded it may be, yet here alike in the peace and the commotions of mankind to inspire whatever there is of good, and when the gloom and storm are about us to go over the highest wave, to smooth the swollen seas, to scatter the clouds and bring back the sun. Let this fact be recognized in all its fullness throughout this Territory, and what a shaking will take place in the valley of dry bones! The Holy Spirit enlightens, convinces, regenerates, sanctifies and conducts the redeemed soul safely through its multiplied perils, over tne sea of adversity and opposition, and into the land of joy and rest. As preachers we need to feel his enlivening influences, and as members of these mission churches we need to feel his power. Let us all resolve to pray for the Spirit. Let us pray him down upon ministers, upon their sermons and congregations; let us pray him down upon our families, upon our neighborhoods, upon the churches and the world, and when he comes in all his fullness what a changed world we shall have!

We need also in this age and among this people a devotion full of cheer. The monastic piety was full of awe, and much of the piety of this age is full of melancholy. Those old Hebrew psalms! those prophetic strains of Isaiah! how they put to shame the dirge-like tunes and the metaphysical disquisitions of modern choirs and modern pulpits. The pantheist may give praise to nature, for that is his God, but the Christian, whose God is the author of nature, may give it only to him. We are not insensible to the glories of nature. We confess that its cloud-capped mountains, lovely vales, grassy mounds, meandering rills, ocean waters, flowery carpet, variegated verdure, and its thousand other beauties, fill us with adoring praise. But our hearts swell as we rise on the pinions of faith, and looking into the opened heaven cry out in the language of David, "Praise ye the Lord!" And when I see him invoking all instruments, all nature and life, the whole universe to join the great hymn, I can but wonder how it is that we, living in the light of this nineteenth century, should become so joyless and dark in our religion. Let miuisters and people sound the organ, strike the cymbal, and strike the harp strings, and let all the sons and daughters of God sing for joy and be glad! This is another great want in our country and among our people. In a word, the world wants a living deed and not empty speech, a faith which shall rise from opinion into trust and hope and love, which shall transfigure doctrine into truth, and shall make that truth alive and full of power to overcome evil, to enthrone right, and to establish righteousness on the earth, for "the kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." What a blessed change will then take place. Our towns and cities, our land and the seas, are now full of their selfish industries; head, heart and hand are toiling night and day for ambition, for avarice, for appetite, for pride. How seldom we see souls of the mould we praise so much in ancient history. We hear much of the saints and heroes of old; we read with admiration of the heroic Spartans at the gap of Thermopylæ, of Horatius holding the bridge against the swarming enemy. Every country has her heroes whose brows are wreathed with a people's grateful love. We have an admiratian also for the saintly heroes of to-day, the life silently surrendering everything to the spirit of truth: rejecting the gain which comes at the cost of conscience, crucifying every lust of evil, and even turning from friendship and dearest society when they seduce the soul from its integrity.

When once man comes to live such a life as this the heavens are open, his ear hears the voice of the Spirit, his heart is full of love and his hand of kindly deeds. Either in silent waiting he standeth to be sent on holy errands, or in vigorous work he has gone out as a minister of the love in which he lives.

The Montana Annual Conference.

The Montana annual conference M. E. Church convened in Butte, Wednesday, July 25th, 11 a. m., Bishop Chas. B. Galloway in the chair.

After religious services conducted by the bishop the roll was called, which showed the presence of every itinerant preacher in the field, several local preachers and a goodly number of the lay delegates. Rev. E. J. Stanley was elected secretary. There was never a more harmonious conference session, perhaps, than this. We believe there is too much of the "preferring one another" spirit among the brethren here for discord to have a place in our ranks.

The religious services of the conference were given a very prominent place, and this was just as it should be. The preaching was of the finest and most soul stirring character. Rev. R. F. Beasley gave us an excelent,chaste, edifying sermon Wednesday evening on Acts iv: 13, "The Gospel Incarnate." Thursday evening Bishop Galloway, in the presence of a well filled house, took for his text Zec. ii: 8, "For he that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of his eye." This proved a solace to the mountain itinerant and made us feel that God's tender, watchful care would be with us on the hardest work, and would not let aught harm us. The Rev. Dr. B. F. Haynes, of McKendre church, in the grand old Jerusalem conference, was with us a day or so, and Friday evening demonstrated in a perfectly satisfactory way that "man shall not live by bread alone." The pleasures of this life never looked so small to us before. If Bro. Haynes gives the people of Nashville such sermons as this they will stand before the judgment bar without excuse, so far as having had good gospel has to do with it. Saturday at 11 a. m. we held the church extension anniversary. The address was made by Bishop Galloway. The subject received justice. The assessment for church extension had been paid in full, therefore no collection was taken. Saturday evening the missionary anniversary was held. The bishop piloted the old ship. The collection followed, which being added to the amount raised by the preachers on their charge, sustained the reputation that the Montana conference has had in the past—the assessment paid in full and this time running over.

The love feast Sabbath morning at 10 o'clock was well attended and a glorious occasion. Oh, how sweet the communion of saints! The time was too short. It should have been from 9 o'clock to 11.

At 11 o'clock Sabbath morning the church was being rapidly filled, and a few moments past all the available space was taken, embracing chairs in the aisle and about the altar. The ladies of the church had decorated the little temple with Montana flowers, till it looked as refreshing as a conservatory.

The bishop's sermon on "Our Attachment to the House of God" held the people in perfect silence for about one hour. The sermon was an unanswerable argument for the church's existence in our land, as a material producer.

Of the sermon, our conference reporter, to the Butte Daily Miner, says:

"The bishop assumed that there was no more potent factor in the political interests of the nation than the church. Indeed, the country's life hinges upon the preservation and perpetuity of the church in our midst. Said the bishop: "Tear down our church houses, burn our Bibles, unpack our preachers, and Ichabod would have to be written over the gateway to our national independence and greatness. Where impious France declared there was no God, and wrote above the coffin lid of her dead that there was no resurrection, her streets ran in the warm red blood of her sons. The ministry, too, of the church, is a potential agency of civilization, besides doing the special work of preaching a pure gospel. Therefore, the preachers of the gospel are not a dependent class, a set of paupers, knocking at the door of charity for a naked living. "We are," said the bishop, "no poor white folks," etc.

After the sermon, and just before the dedication of the church, which stood free of debt, the bishop took a collection for a parsonage for the Butte charge, which resulted in a subscription of $600. The house was formally presented by four trustees and was dedicated to the worship of Almighty God in the beautiful language of our dedicatory service.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the children of the Sabbath school, with many members and visitors of the conference, assembled, and spent a very pleasant and profitable hour. The children were addressed by Rev. S. W. Barbee, our pastor at Anaconda. Bro. Boshee loves children and knows how to talk to them. The bishop gave us a genuine old Methodist sermon Sabbath evening on "Experimental Religion." It was a feast of good things.

Monday morning at 9 o'clock tne conference convened to close up the work and receive the appointments.

During the session the business multiplied. There was instituted a "Superannuated Preachers' Fund." The sum of $1,367.50 was subscribed. This is to be paid in during the year and placed on deposit. The interest on said amount will go toward the cause designated in the title. The books stand open and a large stock will doubtless be invested in the near future. The report of the committee on books and periodicals received its final consideration during the morning session, one item of which was the indorsement of THE MONTANA METHODIST as our conference organ. The conference by vote provided for a board of managers, consisting of five, who should have charge of the business management of the paper, and requested that the Bishop appoint an editor.

A church high school was discussed and provision made for the inauguration of such. The Rev. R. S. Clark was appointed agent.

The conference adjourned at 12 m. to meet at 2 p. m. Monday. Promptly at 2 the bishop called the conference to order. After religious services, conducted by Rev. T. W. Flowers, but little business remained over. This was speedily dispatched and the interesting time had come. As a fitting religious service the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by the bishop and some of the senior brethren, to members of the annual conference, a goodly number of conference visitors and resident church members and friends. Exactly at 3 the bishop began his remarks as a preface to reading the appointments, which were as follows:

Notes and Personals.

The Broadway M. E. Church of Helena has been removed preparatory to building a larger and better structure on the same ground. The plan of the new church shows that these brethren have devised liberal things.

Last fall a number of the preachers of our conference covenanted to pray for each other every Sunday morning. May we not find in God's answer to these prayers the cause, largely, of our success last year, and of the harmony that prevailed at the session of our conference? Brethren, let us renew the covenant.

It is expected in the future that THE MONTANA METHODIST will be issued on the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month. Communications for publication should be in at least by the Saturday preceding the day of issue.

Bro. B. F. Haynes, of Nashville, Tenn., spent the Sunday embraced by the Conference session, in Helena. He had promised to preach in our church, and a good congregation assembled at 11 o'clock to hear him, but were disappointed. The cause of Bro. Haynes' absence is still a mystery.

We were very sorry that Rev. B. F. Haynes and his daughter, Miss Maud, could not remain with us to see more of the annual conference in Butte. We hope they may come out next year and visit Stevensville, the place for holding the next conference, where they can see the great Bitter Root Valley.

The Montana Christian Advocate of August 1, says: "We are informed that Bishop Galloway opened the conference of the M. E. Church South at Butte, by reading a hymn, announcing its metre, and then lining it as the people sang." "The Old Paths," dear brother—

> "We are trav'ling home to God,
> In the way our fathers trod."

An agreement has been signed by most of the merchants and shop-keepers of Helena to close up their business on Sundays. We are proud to send the news of this fact abroad, and at the same time a little ashamed to let it be known that such an agreement was necessary. Col. Hawkins deserves great credit for his zeal in promoting this good work.

The congregation of the Baptist Church of Butte have extended a "call" to Rev. J. D. Andrews, of Monroe, Missouri, to become their permanent pastor. A recent letter from him states that he will be here to take charge by August 12th. Mr. Andrews, during his recent visit to Butte, made many friends who will be glad to welcome him here as a permanent citizen.—Miner.

The beautiful dedicatory anthems sung by the Idaho Street Methodist church choir on Sabbath, July 29, at the dedication of the church in Butte, were highly enjoyed by all who truly appreciate good sacred music. The choir is composed of Mrs. John T. Baldwin, soprano; Mrs. T. J. Jeffries, alto; Mr. May, tenor; Mr. Martin, base, and Miss Julia Darrow, organist.

You could but enjoy a trip through the valleys of Montana at this season. It affords opportunity to see ton after ton of new mown hay, the golden tinted grain most ready for the sickle of the harvester, the grazing herds of fat horses and cows, the roaming flocks of fleecy sheep, and here and there a cozy farm house. Montana, to this writer at least, is a most desirable country.

Bro. Finley reports a warm reception at Boulder, his new field of labor, and a promising start for the new year. Bro. F. was the only preacher of the Conference who had the pleasure of moving this year, excepting Bro. Beasley, who was transferred to the Pacific Conference. We are sorry to lose Bro. Beasley, and he may be assured the best wishes of his brethren follow him. We hope to hear from him in the MONTANA METHODIST.

We offered our valuable paper as an exchange to a certain journal in the East. Instead of accepting with pleasure and profit to themselves, if not to us, the publishers sent us a ready prepared editorial notice which they desired us to insert. The space necessary would be worth five or six dollars. In compensation for which they proposed to send us their journal weekly till Jan. 1st, 1889. We give them to understand we do not blow other people's horns so cheaply.

Bishop Galloway left Butte the day after conference adjourned in company with Rev. E. J. Stanley and wife and Rev. T.W. Flowers for Stevensville circuit. He preached at Victor on Wednesday night. A rain storm kept many of the people away. He was greeted by a large audience at Stevensville on Thursday night. It is needless to say that the people were delighted. A good lady of another church remarked that she felt sorry for everyone who did not hear the text and every word of the sermon.

The hypocrite is one who plays a part to deceive, but he more often deceives himself than any one else. The Southwestern Methodist says: "There are no hypocrites comparable to the sinners who make no effort to serve God, and tell us that if the church were better they would join it." The West abounds in such hypocrites. They deceive themselves and are to be pitied as well as blamed. They take inward pleasure in noting the faults of church members, which they regard as a license for their own short-comings.

Church Dedication at Victor.

Mr. Editor: We were greatly disappointed in not having Bishop Galloway to preach at Victor and dedicate our handsome new church there on the 5th of August. Finding that my plans had failed in this direction, the next best thing was to have the Bishop preach on Wednesday night beforehand, and our venerable Bro. Stateler, who has ao many friends in Bitter Root Valley, and who promised to come if health permitted, to be with us on Sunday, and announcements were made accordingly. But Bro. Stateler was so exhausted at the close of our conference session that he could not come, and a rainstorm on Wednesday night caused the Bishop to have a very small audience.

What was to be done? A debt of $365 to provide for, and no Bishop, not even a visiting brother to help us. We were perplexed but not in despair. The case was stated to the people. We had done all we could to get assistance, and now if they would come out and help those of us who had by our own hard licks and hard-earned means, with the assistance of our friends who had built the house, we would pay off the debt and dedicate it to the Lord ourselves. Accordingly Sunday morning, the 5th of August, found the church comfortably filled with people from all parts of the valley. The prayer of Solomon at the dedication of the Temple was read, followed by a talk on the influence of chuaches as illustrated by the temple at Jerusalem and by the building of the wall around Jerusalem by Nehemiah. The collection—the most important item—was taken by Rev. T. W. Flowers. He felt somewhat embarrassed at the outset as it was his first effort in this line, and he had such a task before him. But he proved equal to the occasion. In a comparatively short time the entire amount was subscribed, with a few dollars over, after which the house was presented by the trustees and solemnly dedicated to the worship of God, Rev. T. W. Flowers and this writer officiating.

Considering the obstacles that had been thrown in our way and the persistent efforts made to prevent the building, and the disappointments above mentioned, we feel that the completion of this edifice is a most signal success. It falls hard on some of our people, but they may congratulate themselves on having one of the best and handsomest little churches in all the country. It is 26x44 feet, 14 feet walls, arch ceiling 19 feet high in the center. It has three coats of paint, outside and in. The windows are of beautiful stained glass. The roof is quite steep, almost gothic, surmounted by a tasteful cupola and spire, in which hangs a fine copper and tin bell, which rings out in clear and melodious tones for miles around over hill and dale calliug the people to the service and worship of the God who made them. The church is a credit to the town of Victor, a credit to the cause it represents, and will contribute no little to the strength and permanence of Southern Methodism in this beautiful valley. Great credit is due to the Board of Church Extension, without whose liberal aid the house could not have been built, and to our members and friends in this community for their liberality and fidelity in this good work.

A large number of the people stayed and partook of refreshments on the groand. Bro. Flowers gave us an earnest and practical sermon on "Prepare to Meet Thy God," after which the people dispersed with grateful hearts, feeling that their labor had not been in vain.

The Christian in Politics.

The Christian must have to do with politics just as do other citizens. The scruples of some brethren who refuse to vote, or to have any thing whatever to do with political matters, are entitled to respect. They are honest, and honesty is always to be respected. They are disgusted and repelled by the ethics of practical politicians and the infamies of practical politics, so called. And so they keep out of political affairs altogether, leaving the political affairs of the country to be managed by fellow-Christians less squeamish, and by the place-hunters and their followers and dupes. It is clear to us that this is a wrong view of the subject. The argument that would debar a Christian from taking a practical interest in the affairs of his country would shut him out from secular affairs generally, and deprive society of his influence in a sphere where it is so much needed. But we will not here take more space to refute an error which, though held by a few good men here and there, will affect but very few of our readers. We may safely assume that those for whom we write will think, talk and vote on the political issues of the day. Our object, therefore, is rather to offer a few suggestions as to the motive and temper which should characterize Christian citizens in the discharge of their duties in this connection.

1. As an American citizen and as a citizen of the kingdom of Christ, you are doubly a freeman. Under no sort or degree of compulsion can you be required to go against your conscience with regard to men or measures. You are your own man. Your conscience and your vote are your own, and you are responsible only to God for your action in this matter.

2. A political canvass does not suspend the binding force of any command in the Decalogue, nor furnish any indulgence for the exhibition of any tempers forbidden by the precepts of the New Testament. The thirteenth chapter of the First Epistle to the Corinthians is as binding with regard to parties and partisans, as to churches and fellow-Christians. The ethics of the one sphere may not be sunk lower than those of the other. The candidate whose name is on a church register, and who prays in the social meetings of the church, must not be "smutty" or profane on the hustings. The Christian voter who scorns dishonesty in trade or unfairness in professional competition must not stoop to the sharp practice so common in party contests. The Christian candidate must be as clean-lipped and clean-handed in the discharge of political duties as in any other service to God and humanity.

3. Give no place to the spirit of intolerance. It is a devil that comes disguised as an angel of light. Free thought and free speech are the birthright of every American citizen. Claiming them for yourself, concede them to your neighbor. You may think he is blind, ignorant, foolish, in his party ideas and affiliations. He may think the same of you. But blindness, ignorance and foolishness are not crimes to be punished with ostracism. but weaknesses to be pitied, borne with, and, if possible, corrected. Denunciation hardens, but does not remove error. Proscription is no remedy for wrong thinking. The surest way to give a dying folly a longer lease of life is to persecute it. Freely accord to your neighbor all that you claim for yourself in freedom of speech and untrammeled action in all political matters.

4. Not only avoid furnishing any cause of bringing reproach upon Christianity during the political campaign, but cherish a still higher aim: make it the occasion for the exhibition of the positive Christian virtues that will attest the sincerity of your faith, and the power of the Christianity you profess. In the excitement of a stirring political conflict the positive Christian virtues should be conspicuous in the behavior of every Christian man. The temptations of the time may be turned into opportunities for the exhibition of the hidden power of a religion that overcomes evil with good, and furnishes a demonstration, whenever and wherever it is fairly tested, of the truth of the saying of Jesus to his disciples: "Ye are the salt of the earth."

5. Ministers of the gospel have need to be specially watchful and prayerful during an exciting political campaign. Those who read this paper scarcely need a homily from us with regard to this matter. They will not forget that they are first of all, and most of all, preachers of the gospel of Christ, that their message and mission is to men of all parties; that if bitterness, violence and intolerance are forbidden to laymen, they are, if possible, still more reprehensible in the ministers of Christ, who are in a special sense teachers and exemplars of the gospel of peace; that it is an easy thing to go too far, and sink the preacher in the partisan; and that it would be a shame and a calamity, should that body of men, who should be above all others the conservators of peace and charity among men, be found among those who inflame their passions and aggravate their prejudices. His own conscience and common sense will dictate his course with regard to political matters, but he will not forget that the less he is a partisan the more acceptable and efficient he will be as a minister of the gospel of Jesus Christ.—Nashville Advocate.

That was a pat word said the other day at the Worcester Congregational Club. The speaker thought that while so much is heard about ministers that "draw," it was time to hear something about churches that "draw." Sure enough. Churches can do as much to make full congregations as ministers. They can do it in a dozen ways, and nothing is more unreasonable than to leave all the "drawing" to the men who stand in the pulpit. The "how do you do," the "glad to see you," the "come again," and the "always welcome" turn of mind on the part of the people who sit in the pews, has magical power in filling up a congregation. Just try it.—Examiner and Chronicle.

The Drunkard's Wife's Secret.

"I'll tell you a secret," said a broken-hearted wife;
"It's the shame of my children, the load of my life;
My husband, so kind, so gentle and good,
Takes more of strong drink, than a prudent man should.

"He's as hard-working man as any you find,
And when he doesn't drink he's patient and kind;
He gives me his wages and stays home to rest,
And makes us contented, and happy, and blest.

"But husband will drink, I am sorry to say,
And then from his home he wanders away,
Comes in late at night when the family's abed,
And fills the whole house with terror and dread.

"I never before of my sorrow have spoken,
And would not speak now, but my heart is most broken;
I've come to my pastor, but not to complain,
But only some counsel and comfort to gain."

Poor woman! her secret is sadly well known;
Alas! on the street it is publicly shown;
As plainly 'tis seen in the wife's pallid face
As in the debauch and drunkard's disgrace.

'Tis the old story told, forever retold,
As vividly new as terribly old,
How the devil of drink when he enters the home,
Puts out its candle and shrouds all in gloom.

O, mothers and sisters, and sweethearts arise!
Take in the drink curse with your pitying eyes;
By the might of your love, your tears and your faith,
Oh! save your dear homes from the blight of this death.

—National Advocate.

"Let Your Light So Shine."

During a voyage to India, I sat one dark evening in my cabin, feeling thoroughly unwell, as the sea was rising fast and I was a poor sailor. Suddenly the cry of "man overboard!" made me spring to my feet.

I heard a tramping overhead, but resolved not to go on deck lest I should interfere with the crew in their efforts to save the poor man.

"What can I do?" I asked myself, and instantly unhooked my lamp. I held it near the top of my cabin, and close to my bull's eye window, that its light might shine on the sea and as near the ship as possible. In half a minute's time I heard the joyful cry, "It's all right; he's safe," upon which I put my lamp in its place.

The next day, however, I was told that my little lamp was the sole means of saving the man's life; it was only by the timely light which shone upon him, that the knotted rope could be thrown so as to reach him.

Christian workers, never despond or think there is nothing for you to do, even on dark and weary days.

"Looking unto Jesus," lift up your light; let it "so shine" "that men may see," and in the bright resurrection morning what joy to hear the "Well done!" and to know that you have, unawares, "saved some soul from death."—Baptist Journal.

Outdone by a Boy.

A lad in Boston, rather small for his years, works as an errand boy for four gentlemen who do business there. One day the gentlemen were chafing him a little about being so small, and said to him:

"You never will amount to much; you never can do much business; you are too small."

The little fellow looked at them.

"Well," said he, "as small as I am, I can do something which none of you four men can do."

"Ah, what is that?" said they.

"I don't know as I ought to tell you," he replied.

But they were anxious to know and urged him to tell what he could do that none of them were able to do.

"I can keep from swearing!" said the little fellow.

There were some blushes on four manly faces, and there seemed to be very little anxiety for further information on the point.

It has been said, whether by poetry or science it matters not, that there is a certain point in the upper air in which all discordant sounds of the earth, the rattle of wheels, the chime of bells, the roll of the drum, the laugh of the child, the moan of the beggar, meet and blend in perfect harmony. So in their highest experience Christians become one, all sects are united.---Christian Intelligence.

A tree will not only lie as it falls, but it will fall as it leans. And the great question everyone should bring home to himself is this: "What is the inclination of my soul? Does it, with all its affections, lean toward God or away from him?"---J. J. Gurney.

A German friend who heard Bishop Galloway's sermon at Anaconda on the evening of the dedication of our new church in that city, said, "He takes my breath away." An unstudied compliment to the Bishop, this.

Obituary.

Died, at his residence on Willow Creek, Montana, August 4, 1888, Mr. Z. M. Allen, familiarly known as "Father" Allen. Mr. Allen died at the ripe age of sixty-six years and six months. His native state was Kentucky, Cass county. When a young man, as a pioneer, he migrated to Iowa, where he lived many years. Later he lived in Kansas and Colorado. He came to Montana in 1864, and for many years was a prospector and a miner. "Father" Allen was a most congenial soul, full of wit and good humor. He was a most charitable man, even to his own hurt. He would deny himself to accommodate others. All over Montana he had a host of warm friends who will ever remember the sunshine of his presence. For many years Bro. Allen has lived on his farm, a quiet, sequestered spot among the mountains, where he was stricken down with paralysis; then kindred diseases preyed upon him, causing him great suffering and confining him to his room and bed most of the time. In early life, Bro. Allen was a member of the Methodist church, but when he came West he lost his identity with the church and did not renew it till a few months before his death. Last April, during a protracted meeting held in this settlement, I visited him and talked to him about his future welfare. He seemed greatly interested and assured me that he had prayed much of late and felt that he had peace from God through our Lord Jesus Christ. He being unable to attend public services, gave me his name for membership in the M. E. Church South, and requested to be baptized. Bro. Allen was a Free Mason and an Odd Fellow. He leaves a wife and nine children who, with their many friends, mourn the absence of a true husband, a kind and indulgent father and a true friend. "Father" Allen loved his family and more than once expressed to this writer that his greatest desire was to see his children live religious and meet him in heaven. May they all so live that at last heaven will be their home.

On Saturday, August 4, at 1 o'clock p. m., surrounded by his family and many friends, "Father" Allen breathed his last and "fell asleep." His end was peaceful, indeed. As he reposed in death his features were natural and he seemed as one asleep rather than dead. He was buried from his residence August 6. Rev. L. B. Stateler and this writer preached his funeral from II Samuel, xiv, 14. A large concourse of people from Willow Creek, Pony, Boulder, Three Forks, Gallatin, Norwegian and Harrison followed his remains to the cemetery, where he was laid to rest in the beautiful cemetery on the hill above his residence. Peace to his ashes.

"Thus star by star declines,
Till all are passed away,
As morning high and higher shines
To pure and perfect day;
Nor sink those stars in empty night,
But hide themselves in heavens own light:"

To stand "all the day idle" is to spend one's time in meeting the demands of self, in living to and for one's self, and for the present life exclusively. An activity which has not the love of Christ for its motive, and the fulfillment of one's obligations to God and man for its aim or end, is spiritual idleness. Hence Christ is ever saying, even to busy men who exclude him from their activities, "Why stand ye here all the day idle?"---Zion's Herald.

Notes.

Many friends far and near will enjoy the letter from Dr. David Morton on page 2 of this issue.

Bro. Stanley is visiting the Western and Missouri conferences. His business is—well, anyone might know it was in the interest of the Montana conference.

Bro. Warren, of Willow Creek circuit, made us a visit last week and gave us a good talk at prayer meeting on Wednesday evening. He reports good progress in his charge. The parsonage at Willow Creek is to have valuable improvements made to it soon.

The final settlement in Butte of the famous Smokehouse case, which rendered precarious the title of so much of the real estate in that city, is doubtless a cause of great rejoicing to its inhabitants. It is thought this will lead to an immense building boom there in the near future.

Bro. H. C. Fleenor, who had charge of our church at Bozeman, left his work last week and returned to Missouri. He had been at Bozeman about seven months and had built up a good Sunday school and organized a church of about fifteen members. Bro. Fleenor had no reason, in our judgment, to become discouraged, as our prospects at Bozeman are flattering. We fear he disliked the hard work connected with this border conference and seeks a "soft place" to labor, where there is but little opposition. Rev. R. F. Jarvis, of Tennessee, arrived last week and will succeed Bro. Fleeeor at Bozeman. Our charfie there, we predict, will prosper in the hands of Bro. Jarvis.

We had written a short notice of the wonderful meteor seen and heard on the afternoon or evening of Sunday, Aug. 19. We stated what we supposed were facts, but since so many conflicting stories have been told about it, we will give the report of an eye-witness. Bro. B. E. H. Warren says, as he was going from an appointment that evening in Madison county, and near sundown, there was a terrific explosion nearly directly overhead, which shook the earth like an earthquake. He immediately dismounted from his horse, and looking up, saw a line of blue smoke like that left by a fast running locomotive. The course of the meteor was nearly due west. There was a series of explosions at intervals of from three to five seconds, ending with a very loud explosion. It appeared to fall near Butte.

Excitement.

Excitement calls the mind to uncommon activity and gives it new views of things. It magnifies their importance, and may be so increased that for the time they become in thought matters all important. The mind craves excitement. It will have it. If it has nothing of real importance to become excited over, the most trivial matters will serve the purpose. A game, a horse race, an election, or a small business transaction will often arouse the minds of some to a high pitch of excitement. At such times they see things in a false light. In calmer moments they come to more correct views. A man will sometimes take the life of his fellow over an angry word or some other trifle, which he afterward sees to be a trifle and is ashamed of himself for noticing.

So we see excitement sometimes perverts the judgment and throws a false color on the world and everything around.

On the other hand excitement sometimes discloses truths that otherwise never would be discovered. The discoveries of science, the demonstrations of logic, and the creations of poetic genius have usually been brought out under mental excitement such as does not ordinarily prevail.

But above this there is the excitement of the divine spirit which reveals spiritual things and without which excitement could never be seen. This excitement of the spirit comes into the mind in its ordinary state like a wave of pure clear air, driving away the smoke and mists and clouds and reveals the things of God. It is then that we get the clearest views of God and of ourselves and of the relations that subsist between us. It is an elevation of mind that instead of distorting and coloring our vision, makes it true and clear. No Christian can doubt that in his seasons joy and delight in God's love he has more correct views of the nature and character of God than he ordinarily has. Nor can he doubt in such seasons when he sees his own littleness, and nothingness, and unworthiness, that he has more correct views of himself than he usually has.

In these seasons, then, of spiritual exaltation it is expedient to take our bearings; to form and mature the judgments which are to guide us in the ordinary experiences of of life and in the hours when the clouds gather. These are the times to become rooted and grounded in the faith. These are the times when we catch sight of God and heaven so that we are enabled at other times to walk by faith when we can not see the way clear. It was not expedient for the disciples to remain always on the mount of transfiguration, but the vision of that occasion gave assurance to Peter in after years that he had not followed cunningly devised fables. These are the times we can most clearly discern our duty. Hence they are the times for making our vows to God and binding ourselves in consecration upon his altar.

It is not wise to leave these things to the times of coldness and dullness, but while the clear light of heaven has, for the time being, beaten back the shadow of temporal things, then mark well the path of life and duty that leads to God.

BY SIM.

The new pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Anaconda has met with a generous reception at the hands of the people he serves. Several hundred dollars have already been secured for his support. One man in moderate circumstances and not a member of the church, has become responsible for $60.

Our congregations are increasing and increased interest is also manifested in the preached word. Holy Ghost preparations for the pulpit and Holy Ghost deliverances from the pulpit is the constant prayer of the preacher. "Tarry ye in the City of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high," should be the only watchword of the ministry and church in these days of materialism and loose notions of conviction for sin and repentance of it. O, for an overwhelming baptism of the power of the Holy Ghost on all the pulpits and congregations of the Montana conference.

Our people have recently raised $125 for the purpose of purchasing a church organ, and the organ is daily expected from Chicago. We are looking to the organization of a choir which, in conjunction with the organ, shall lead the singing of the congregation, but not monopolize it. "Let all the people of the congregation sing, not one in ten only."

Our Sunday school is less than three months old, yet our register has reached the welcome and almost unlooked-for number of seventy-four, and new members are added almost every week. The contributions by the school keep a full supply of our own literature and money in the treasury.

The ladies of the congregation effected the organization of an aid society on Friday, Aug. 24. Monthly contributions will be made by the members, and other wise methods will be adopted for raising funds for the contingent expenses of the church. Determined and liberal women compose the society, and we shall be satisfied with their work.

A hopeful sign is the constant increase in the number attending the weekly prayer meeting. The singing, too, is spirited and spiritual.

Our presiding elder, Rev. E. J. Stanley, spent several days with us the past month and held our first quarterly meeting.

The pastor of our church at this place has been dividing his time between Anaconda and Butte for two or three weeks as an accommodation to Rev. A. C. Carney, who was compelled to take vacation from his pulpit labors for needed rest and recuperation.

At Anaconda the people wish a collection twice on the Sabbath. The evening collection is usually more than double that of the morning—sometimes amounting to several dollars. How different this from the usage of "the East."

"Montana Methodist, No. 2," is before me, and read—advertisements and all. Editor Couey and Associate Britt are giving the Methodists and the reading public a good paper. Their efforts to furnish a religious journal of high grade should be seconded by a hearty and liberal public patronage. We invite a critical inspection of the columns of the METHODIST, and a comparison with any religious paper published in the Territory, feeling that a popular verdict would justify our own opinion of the infant enterprise—that it is older than its age. Messrs. Couey & Britt are on the tripod for the first time, but their efforts inspire an endorsement of the judgment of Bishop Galloway, who placed them in charge."

A young man, not a member of the church, but a member of our Sunday school at this place, suggests the raising of a fund to purchase a circulating library of the best books on various subjects, which shall be adapted to youth, and not unsuited to age." Good. All in favor of the motion say "aye," by putting a dollar or five dollars into the hand of the treasurer. The library will be kept in our church, and all members of the Sunday school will have free use of it.

Letter from Dr. Norton.

MR. EDITOR:

Some one has sent me a copy of your paper, the first number, of date July 28, 1888.

I have read every word of it, including advertisements, and have been interested in all.

The "Salutatory" has the genuine ring, the reminiscences of the veteran Stateler are thrilling, the account of your work encouraging, the sketches of your men timely, your paragraphs newsy, your selections judicious and your advertisements entertaining in that they recall familiar names of dear friends and suggest that they are yet busy and prosperous.

That trip of Stanley's over into the Jocko country was just like him. I wonder if he is not akin to the great African traveler and would not have out-traveled him if he had half a chance. If his love for the majesty of the mountains and the music of the wind and streams were not counterbalanced by a genuine zeal for God and a generous love for souls I would expect him to wander away from the haunts of men and from the peak of some exceeding high mountain soar to his eternal home. His trips, however, are not wholly sentimental, but have the quality of pioneering paths both practical and pious.

Just twelve years ago this very day I left my home and family at Russellville, Ky., and started for your Territory and conference, expecting them to be my future home. Parting with Bishop Marvin at Colorado Springs, the seat of the Denver conference, I made my way by rail to Franklin, Idaho, and thence by stage to Helena, a distance of 420 miles, requiring four days and three nights of continuous travel.

Holding the appointment of presiding elder I was accorded a cordial welcome by Stateler, Sanford, Stanley, Spencer, Flowers and R. S. Clark, the entire ministerial force of our church then in the Territory. How we prayed and planned by night and toiled and traveled by day to rally our forces and hold the ground is known only to the God whom we loved and were trying to serve.

My first round carried me to Waterloo, Silver Star, White Hall, Helena, Fairview, Radensburg, Willow Creek, Deer Lodge, Missoula, Stevensville, Corvallis and divers night and side appointments to explore the country and extend my acquaintance.

I shall not soon forget the four months of mid-winter work in Helena nor the revival in the upper room of a dilapidated schoolhouse in Boulder when the weather was so cold that the mercury froze and the furious winds threatened to cut us down and the drifting snows to bury us out of sight.

Nor will I cease to remember the surging storm through which we went to Deep Creek meeting and the gorge of ice in the Missouri river, over which we left it, nor the days and nights of trying toil in Prickly Pear Valley. But God's blessings were upon us and we were never happier in our religious experience. Souls were born to Him and our labor was not in vain in the Lord.

That was a notable district conference held in the unfinished church at Willow Creek. The presiding elder sat upon an empty glass box and was addressed as "Mr. Chairman." Stanley, the secretary, used an upturned nail keg, Stateler had a stool, Sanford stood at the stove and Spencer swung round the circle of the room. But we surveyed the field and studied the signs and set the springs that moved the general conference, two years later, to erect Montana into a separate conference and thus saved our cause in those mountains.

How we love to recall the names of the laymen and the women who ministered to us and were so kind. May my right hand forget her cunning if I ever cease to be grateful to the Brookes and Dukes and Hails and Bantas and Githens and Weavers and Kempers and Collets and Taylors and Grays and Clarks and Ashbys and Brysons and Boyces and Kelleys and Blackburns and Bicketts and Priests and Leepers and Bookers and Kemps and Childs and Robinsons and Chaffins of our own church and a host outside.

The friendships then formed have experienced no abatement in all these years and will, I trust, be renewed on the other shore.

Called back to this State after less than a year's stay in Montana by a sense of duty whose dictates were so clear that I could not disobey, I have never been conscious of any diminution of interest in the success of our work in your conference.

The same providence that brought me away has, strangely enough, made it possible for me to do for you here what I could not have done there, and I heartily believe that both the going and the coming were ordered of Him.

Pardon this production, too prolix and personal, which has been put upon paper as passing thoughts of precious times and people have pressed upon me on this anniversary night.

DAVID MORTON.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 17.

Christ's life is not meritorious because of its example, but it is exemplary because it is meritorious. The saving merit inheres not in doing, for the sake of doing, but consists in its spirit of holiness, whereby the Son of Mary or man is declared to be the Son of God also, with power to do all things necessary to be done, in order to meet and secure the conditions of human salvation. Especially is this noticeable because it is preeminently so in His persistent and triumphant resistence of Satan's approach to the soul through the flesh. Hence his instruction to men: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." Thus, not only is He an example in the practical conditions of life, but by virtue of the "law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus," as a paternal endowment as God's Son man is enabled to deny himself—social self or "the flesh" in which Paul says, "there dwelleth no good thing"—that he may follow in the footprints of his divine deliverer. Man in the scheme of redemption is helped to do, as well as shown by example how to do and what to do. Then the Christian life is, and of necessity must be, a spiritualized life, evolved from carnal ruin, and lived, if lived at all, at the expense or sacrifice of the lusts of the flesh. "Let not sin, therefore, reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof; neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin; but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God." "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." "For me walk by faith, not by sight"—or sense. "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless, I live; yet not I, for Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me." This is but the merit of Christ's incarnate life in the triumph of the spiritual over the carnal conditions in fallen human life, voiced with practical results from man's redemption from carnal corruption and from carnal living. "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life.

R. S. CLARK.

Joyfulness and Usefulness.

Above all things see to it that your souls are happy in the Lord. Other things may press upon you; the Lord's work even may have urgent claims upon your attention; but I deliberately repeat, it is of supreme paramount importance that you should seek, above all things, to have your soul truly happy in God himself. Day by day seek to make this the most important business of your life. This has been my firm and settled conviction for the last five and thirty years. For the first four years after my conversion I knew not its vast importance; but now, after much experience, I especially commend this point to the notice of my younger brothers and sisters in Christ. The secret of all true effectual service is joy in God, and having experimental acquaintance and fellowship with God himself. But in what way shall we attain to this settled happiness of soul? How shall we learn to enjoy God? How obtain such an all-sufficient and soul-satisfying portion of him as shall enable us to let go the things of this world, as vain and worthless in comparison? I answer, this happiness is to be obtained through the study of the Holy Scriptures. God has therein revealed himself unto us in the face of Jesus Christ. In the Scriptures, by the power of the Holy Ghost, he makes himself known to our souls. Remember, it is not a God of our own thoughts, of our own imaginations, that we need to be acquainted with; but the God of the Bible, our Father, who has given the blessed Jesus to die for us. Him should we seek intimately to know, according to the revelation he has made of himself in his own precious word.—George Muller.

No Nunneries for Methodism.

The Nashville Christian Advocate says that it has received several articles commenting on the creation of "an order of nuns" in the Methodist Episcopal church, but since no such order of nuns was created, the articles will not be printed. The comments of some papers, based on the same blunder, are comical. Writers have rushed into print bewailing the popish tendencies of Methodism; some wonder if nunneries are to be erected for the new order; one asked if they were to take the veil, and so on to the end of the idle, ignorant extreme. The popish tendency in the order of deaconesses is just about equal to the bad trend toward popery which everybody sees in our order of deacons. We shall build monasteries for the latter at the time when we erect nunneries for the former. Just after that we will build a vactican and elect a pope.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

"The House That Jack Built."

DEAR CHILDREN: Last July with a party of friends I crossed the Rocky Mountains, visited the Golden State away in the far West, whose shores are last kissed by the rays of the setting sun, and spent a little time in the beautiful city of Helena.

You have all doubtless heard of Salt Lake and Salt Lake City. Some of you have been there and seen the Mormon Temple and Tabernacle and pitied the Mormon children growing up in ignorance and vice. I want to tell you of something that we saw while there which I think will interest you.

One afternoon as we were driving through the city, our driver said, "Do you wish to see the house that Jack built?" I had heard of that wonderful house when a child, and was delighted to think that now out on the desert plains beyond the Rockies, we were really going to see it. We drove off the main avenue into a retired street, and there, sure enough, it stood in all its magnificence, glittering in red and gold!

It looked like two square boxes, one set upon another, the upper one smaller than the lower; a broad, gold band of picture moulding was fitted under the eaves and extended several times across the front of the house. Below the moulding were several rows of red and orange fringe. On the outside of the upper story were fastened two brackets, each one representing a gold eagle with outspread wings. These brackets held pictures surrounded by evergreen and immortelles.

Between these brackets hung something resembling a huge wasp's nest, constructed of gray moss and evergreen, filled with flowers. It probably was intended to represent a cornucopia. The flowers were wilted, as it was a hot afternoon, but our guide said that Jack put in fresh ones early every morning. Many gaily painted chromos and lithographs hung between the windows and wherever there was a bare space. Two windows were hung with white lace curtains, two cosy chairs beneath them, a table covered with turkey red cloth stood at one side, holding two vases filled with flowers, and between them was the figure of an angel with outspread wings.

Many tropical plants were blooming in the little yard in front, each plant in a brilliantly-painted flower pot. All of his treasures were apparently upon the outside of his house, but those persons who have been fortunate enough to be permitted within, tell of a beautiful room in gold and blue and white, which is kept marvelously bright.

The door is in the side near the front and stands open night and day, summer and winter, the year round. Fine lace curtains hang in front of it from a marble face in the lintel.

After looking at the house for some time, we wanted to know something about Jack, who had built and decorated this remarkable structure, and this is the story the guide told us:

A few years ago an industrious young man came from the East to Salt Lake City. He was soon able to put up and finish a small cottage. When it was finished he wrote to a lady in the East, to whom he was greatly devoted, to come and share his life. In reply he received a telegram announcing her death. The shock was so great as to unbalance his mind somewhat, and the neighbors soon noticed his mania for decorating the outside of his house. Then he added the upper story and decorated that.

He fully believes that this beloved lady will come some day to be the light and joy of his little home.

That is why he leaves his door open day and night through all the seasons. In the evening when he comes from his work he looks into the gold and blue room he has prepared expecting to see her. Every morning he thinks she must have come during the night. He has ornamented it in this fantastic manner so that she shall recognize the place and enter. He keeps her informed by letter of all the changes he is making in the home.

While writing this I have been thinking of many other houses similar to the one "Jack built," with decorations less peculiar but more beautiful on the outside. These homes have a room within more glorious than the most beautiful jeweled room they have ever heard of or imagined. It is because the Loved One has come in and taken possession, and the glory of His presence fills the home with light and joy.

How many of you, I wonder, fully understand what I mean.

AUNT BESS.

A Boy's Composition on "Clumbus."

Clumbus was a man who could make an egg stand on end without breaking it. The King of Spain said to Clumbus: Can you discover America?" "Yes," said Clumbus, "if you will give me a ship." So he got a ship and sailed over the sea in the direction where he thought America ought to be found. The sailors quarreled, and said they believed there was no such place. But after many days the pilot came to him and said: "Clumbus, I see land." Then that is America," said Clumbus. When the ship got near the land was full of black men. Clumbus said: "Is this America?" "Yes, it is," said they. Then he said: "I suppose you are the niggers?" "Yes," they said, "we are." The chief said: "I suppose you are Clumbus?" "You are right," said he. Then the chief turned to his men and said: "There is no help for it; we are discovered at last."—London Standard.

The Editor Camping.

Much has been said of late about pastors taking vacation. No doubt this custom has prevailed too extensively among our city pastors. None, however, would dare do such a thing without a good excuse—especially among the Methodists. Many of us think we have unquestionable excuses. I confess I am one that is so persuaded. The heavy labors for two months before the conference, the regular work of the pastorate, special effort in the cancellation of a church debt, assisting my brethren in the inauguration of our conference paper, preparing for the entertainment of the annual conference in Butte, holding a protracted meeting just previous to the session, all taken together, made me feel like I needed some rest.

All my people said to me, you shall have a rest (this is not always because a preacher deserves it), and last of all the Episcopal authority said I should. I am intensely loyal.

At any rate, I find myself one in a party of six on the way to the great Yellowstone National Park. Mr. J. W. Kemper, Miss Fannie Brown, of Hannibal, Mo.; Mrs. Couey, Mary and Charles (our two children) comprise the company. We left Butte Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Aug. 21, having a distance of 180 to 200 miles to travel to see the great wonder to the American tourist. The camping, though incidental, and traveling through the country, make the vacation and, indeed, a very interesting part of the trip. We are keeping diary and may at some time detail.

I am forcibly reminded of a remark made by a friend that bade us good-bye a few minutes before we left Butte: "When you have gone a short way you will discover that you have many things along you do not need and many more you will wish you had taken." We are rapidly learning that this friend knew what he was talking about.

Advice is cheap, dear friends—let us advise any who may contemplate any such a journey. Never carry a saw; we have one and I am sure it has been in the way enough. I will not say who suggetted bringing the old thing. A coffee pot, frying pan, dutch oven, camp kettle, dish pan, water bucket and some few dishes (they may be of tin) are almost indispensable. Never have more than your horses can pull easily up hill unless you love to walk, for Montana is a mountainous country, you know.

For camping places there are three essentials, viz: Wood, water and grass. You may find wood and water, without grazing for your horses; you may find wood and grazing, but no good water; you may find grazing and water, but no wood. To be sure an oil stove may be carried, but it adds to the load. We have generally been very fortunate in getting camping places. A good guide is a great help, I imagine. Fifteen or twenty miles a day are nice stages. To enjoy traveling as we are, you must never get in a hurry. Don't leave home if you have to rush.

The fishing is an important part of the journey, especially if your meat has given out.

The broad, rich valleys, the grand Rocky Mountains, the cold, refreshing streams, the pure, bracing air, the great ranches with with fat horses and cattle, afford enlightenment to us all.

We have now been out nearly one week, having traveled 120 miles. We have come over the main range of the Rockies, through Jefferson valley, over the Jefferson range, down into the Madison valley, across the Madison river, and are now going up the east side. But for our desire to take in Henry's Lake, we would continue up this stream through to the National Park.

We have had a very pleasant time to-day admiring the various shapes of the peaks of the Madison range. We have passed Bear Creek and Indian Creek, and are now camped on Wolf creek. We would be startled, perhaps, to see the red man approach our flickering camp fire, hear the howl of the wolf or have Bro. Bruin make himself too intimate as a neighbor. We have fine appetites, and are getting fat, tanned and tough.

Near by our camp is a lonely bachelor, who has fenced a small ranch between the Madison river and Wolf creek. How he and his dog can stand such a life is to me a great mystery. I would not think him at all unwise to heed the counsel of Solomon about a good wife.

Deep sleep has fallen on all my fellow travelers. Though charmed with my surroundings in these mountain wilds, I, too, must submit myself to the sweet lullaby of the little stream near by.

Notes from the Field.

HELENA DISTRICT.

As noted in your last issue the first Sunday after conference was occupied by dedicating the new church at Victor. Bishop Galloway thinks this is an auspicious beginning of the new year. Brother T. W. Flowers will supply the pulpit at Stevensville and Victor in connection with his work in Corvallis circuit until a regular pastor is secured, which we hope will be soon.

The following Saturday and Sunday was the appointed time for holding quarterly meeting at Anaconda; but prostration from a sudden bilious attack prevented my leaving home before Monday. Having partially recovered on Sunday, I assited Brother Farris in the Sunday school in our church at Stevensville, and in the afternoon had the great pleasure of baptizing (by affusion) and receiving into the church a young man who is now secretary of the Sunday school, and who bids fair to be useful in the church. I would that more of our young people would follow the noble example set for them.

On Tuesday I reached Anaconda, and was met by Brother Barbee, who, with his family, is comfortably domiciled in the parsonage. He is cheerful as ever and hopeful of the future. The Sunday school, the prayer-meeting and the attendance on the regular Sunday service are all increasing. A subscription was started for the pastor's support with encouraging results. The people propose to see that their preacher is cared for. They have recently ordered a $125 organ. The pastor expects soon to organize, with a goodly number in society. The prayer-meeting on Wednesday night was a time of refreshing.

On Friday evening I ran down to Deer Lodge, and found Brother Moore and family comfortably domiciled in their own "hired house." We had preaching at eleven o'clock and at night, both on Saturday and Sunday, and held our quarterly conference on Saturday afternoon. The congregation was fine on Sunday night. The great need there now is a new church building, and it was decided to sell the old log building and proceed at once to the erection of a neat brick structure on the same lot, which is one of the finest locations in the city. The Bishop decided that the new building is essential to our success here. The brethren will do all they can, but will need help from the outside. It is a worthy enterprise, and I commend it to the consideration of our friends. We have a mission in Deer Lodge, and a new church will be a great factor in its accomplishment. Brother Moore is addressing himself to the work with great earnestness, and has made many friends. The people propose to stand by him, and I trust that his brightest hopes may be fulfilled. Services were kept up every night during the week, and we had some seasons of refreshing together. The pastor and members are praying and working earnestly for an old-fashioned revival of religion. This is the great need of all our charges, and I trust that they will all be visited by a wonderful outpouring of God's Spirit at no distant day.

The next Saturday found me in Helena, accopanied by wife and baby, having spent just three hours with them the day previous. The business of the District Steward's meeting was transacted, and the quarterly conference held in the afternoon.

Brother Britt is full of business, being the business manager and associate editor of the Montana METHODIST, in connection with his duties as pastor of an important charge. But he addresses himself to his work as though he were an old hand at the business. He is in fine spirits, and thinks the outlook very flattering for the paper, and also fine for success in Helena. We had a good congregation at both services on Sunday, and at night we felt that God's Spirit was manifestly present. Brother Hunter is succeeding well in the Sunday school, and he has the name of being one of the best stewards in the conference. Being a preacher helps wonderfully in making a first-class steward. He knows how much depends upon faithfulness in this office, and the sad effects that follow neglect of duty. I would that every steward in the church could only be made to realize that the bread and meat of the preacher and family are largely in his hands, and that the pastor's success or failure is often measured largely by the way in which the steward performs his duty. I hope that all our stewards will devise liberal things this year, and then put head, heart and hand together to execute them.

Our church in Helena is composed of men and women who are faithful to the Master, and I doubt not their fidelity and patience in long waiting will yet be rewarded, and that an era of prosperity and great usefulness awaits them.

The Faithful Steward.

Written for THE MONTANA METHODIST.

Unbar the doors, swing back the bolts,
Throw wide all avenues;
The house has now been closed too long.
'Twas builded for thy use;
Sweep from the dusty chambers
The cobwebs and the dust,
And cleanse the mind's rich jewels
From all corroding rust.

Then open wide the windows
Of the mind o'ergrown with weeds;
Let in the cheering sunbeams
Of useful words and deeds;
'Tis error clouds the mind with care,
And grows the weeds of sin,
Nor let truth's healthful light and air
That fain would enter in.

Then, friends, watch well the casket where Thought its fair presence hides;
Let in the streams of wisdom rare,
Where truth and light abide.
'Tis in the mind thought sits enthroned
In reason's high estate;
Then drive the accumulating clouds
Before it be too late.

Wake up from needless slumbers,
Ye souls by sloth oppressed,
And join the increasing numbers,
With wisdom for thy quest.
Nor rest from daily duty,
But from its torturing care
Learn more of life's true beauty,
In wisdom's pastures fair.

Keep watch within the mansion where
Thy deathless spirit lives;
Thy heart, thy mind, may safely wear
The seal thy Savior gives.
Use well thy talents, one or ten,
Nor let them idly lie—
Bnt bring them with thee safely, when
The Master draweth nigh.

I bring the jewels thou dost give,
Lord, are they shining bright?
I've tried to keep them while I live
From canker's rust and blight.

Friendly Notices.

Of course we enjoy the good things said of us by our relatives of the newspaper family. We have a hearty handshake and a Godspeed from many. The Nashville Advocate says: "A hearty welcome to this latest born of our Methodist journalistic family! It bears date Helena, Montana, July 25, and is announced as "the official organ of the Montana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." It is published semi-monthly at $1 a year. It is a neat little sheet and our heart warms to it as we look at it. No editor's name appears, but we think we see the marks of the author of that most readable book, "Rambles in Wonderland" —Rev. E. J. Stanley."

Wrong, Doctor, for once. Bro. Stanley doubtless appreciates the compliment.

The St. Louis Advocate seems to rejoice over our birth with real parental pride. Hear it: "Heigho! Here is a copy of—well, guess—"can't tell?" Don't expect you can. Listen—MONTANA METHODIST, Vol. 1, No. 1, Helena, Montana, July 25, 1888. That's it! Glad to see it. Eight pages, four columns to the page, good paper, well printed, a goodly share of advertisements, other matters interesting, to be issued semi-monthly at $1 a year in advance. Send up the dollars "thick and fast." Direct to the MONTANA METHODIST, Helena, Montana, and give it a good square lift.

How things do change! It seems but a short time since this writer "took up" the first collection ever taken in Missouri for the benefit of the California mission. One preacher was going from this State to join two or three other preachers already there; and now think of what is west of us! The Western Conference, the Denver Conference, the Montana Conference, the Los Angeles Conference, the Pacific Conference and Columbia Conference, to say nothing of the Mexican border and Central conferences south of us! All these since we have been pegging away at this paper, and they have three or four good papers among them. Glad of it. Not jealous a bit. The Western people by whom it has stood so firmly, will not forsake the old reliable Advocate. See if they do.

Many other good things have been said of us which, but for modesty, we would reprint. The Pacific Methodist closes its notice of us by commiserating the editor for having come "to this place of torment." We know, Bro. Winton, "that offenses must needs come," and woe unto that editor by whom the offense cometh, but this writer has the good fortune of having a scapegoat in the person of the senior editor, upon which he can lay the "spring poetry" and all other doubtful contributions.—ASSO. This is one of the stories of old times now going the rounds: "Cony Foster, of Crono, Me., was sick. He had made all arrangements for his death and burial, when he begain to gain. One day he remarked to his wife that as he felt better he thought it likely he might recover. "Cony," said his wife, "as you are prepared and I am resigned, I think you had better go now."

Woman's Rights.

[The following is from one of our Montana young ladies. We indorse the sentiment, and are glad that all of our western women are not advancing backward on this subject.—Asso. Ed.]

"So from the lovely Pagan dream,
I call no more the tuneful muse;
For woman is my muse supreme,
And she with fire and flight sublime
Shall light and lead me to my theme."

Greek mythology contains this legend of the origin of woman. Jupiter made and sent Pandora to earth to be the wife of Prometheus. He gave her as her dower, a box into which each of the Gods had placed a blessing; but, on the eve of her wedding, she opened her box incautiously and allowed all the blessings to escape, save hope. More pleasing, though nearly parallel with the mythological tradition, is the true account of the creation: "And the Lord said, it is not good for man to be alone, I will make him a help-meet for him." And he made woman, "out of a rib from the side of man; not from his head to overtop him, nor from his feet to be trampled on by him, but from his side to be equal with him, and under his arm to be protected by him." In return for this protection, woman bestows upon man the blessing of her love and confidence. As his companion, she occupies the place for which she was fitted, and the creditable filling of which should be her highest ambition.

"His house she enters, there to be a light,
Shining within where all around is night,
A guardian angel, o'er his life presiding,
Doubling his pleasures and his cares dividing;
Winning him back when mingling in the throng
From a vain world, we love, alas, too long,
To fireside happiness and homes of ease,
Blest with that charm, the certainty to please.
How oft her eyes read his, her gentle mind,
To all his wishes, all his thoughts inclined,
Still subject, even on the watch to borrow
Mirth of his mirth, and sorrow of his sorrow."

In the word of God we find woman's mission fully designated. She is to be the help-meet for man. Not, we think, as some of our sisters seem to desire, by taking an equal place with him at the polls and in political affairs generally, but in more modest, but yet more effective ways. The divine record is that man is intended to be the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church. Shall she, then, presume to think her judgment superior to that of her maker, and contend against the filling of the position for which he especially made her? The place for her immediate activity is without doubt in the home, beautifying it, and making it what home should be. William Murray says: "A great many homes are like the frame of a harp that stands without strings. In form and outline they suggest music, but no music arises from the empty spaces." The man who does not find his home pleasant and attractive, who frequently, on returning from his business, wearied with perplexity and the labors of the day, and finds his wife absent, or who does not find in her a sympathetic and loving companion, will become estranged.

In order that she may be his companion in the fullest, truest sense of the word, woman must approach man's equal in intelligence. She must know something of the business in which he is employed, and be ready to lend her quickness of perception and clear sightedness to help him. A woman can often foresee a danger that escapes the eye of man, or can find a way out of a difficulty which to him seems insurmountable. She should be informed on the leading topics of the day, that by interesting conversation the hours at home may be made delightful and helpful. It is common enough to see intellectual men choosing wives of little mind or knowledge, but it is also common to see them, in after years, wearying of the insufficient companionship and seeking that of intelligent men and women outside of the home. Man instinctively seeks the sympathy of others in his achievements as well as in his misfortunes and failures. Where can a more perfect sympathy exist than that which the wife gives to her husband—"Doubling his pleasures, and his cares dividing." Being his sympathetic and loving companion, what an influence woman has in her power to exert. Nearly every great man has had behind him and shining through him the influence of some good woman, and there is truth in the saying that "No man can be greater than his wife will let him."

"As unto the bow the cord is,
So unto man is woman;
Though she binds him, she obeys him,
Though she draws him, still, she follows."

But it is as a mother that woman's greatest inflence is felt. In reading history, if we read to any purpose, we can hardly fail to notice that certain periods seem full of corruption. Instead of assigning the cause of this degeneration to any agency of that particular time, it may usually be traced back to the mothers of the preceding generation. During the reign of Francis I. of France, the influence of woman received a powerful but unfortunate impulse. Francis invited the wives of the nobles to attend their husbands at court, and they began gradually to take part in public affairs. Their jealousies and rivalries entered largely into all political actions. As a result, we find in following years the society in France in a most deplorable condition. The substance of the nation was wasted in war, and in the luxurious excesses of selfish, dissolute and vain-glorious nobles. Napoleon cries, "The great need of France is mothers!" To this what a contrast is the picture of the Spartan mother who spent her life force in instructing her sons in the principles of virtue and valor. She smothered her own affections in the love of her son's glory, and sent him to the field with the admonition, to return with his shield or upon it. A Roman orator, in speaking of that land of the greatest orators, poets and statesmen the world has ever known, and of the bravest soldiers, said: "The secret of our nation is at the fireside." The home is the root of the great tree called society, and if the root be diseased, the tree can not be perfect. Rev. C. H. Parkhurst says in his sermon on religious family life: "It is with boys as with trees—a question of root and fibre—and warm Christian homes are just the manufactories God has expressly set up for the production of root and fibre, personal stamina and tensity. Infidelity in the world will not break down the boy whom faith inside the home has built up." Great indeed is the task of the mother. It is hers, not to make laws and lead armies, nor to govern enterprises, but to make true, stalwart men by whom just laws shall be made, armies led to victory and empires wisely governed. It is hers to inspire such principles and sentiments as shall shed their blessings on generations yet unborn. It is hers to breathe the enlivening spirit, to fire the generous purpose in the glowing breast. The mother in her office holds the key of the soul, and she it is who stamps the coin of character, and makes the being who would be a savage but for her gentle care, a Christian man. Not alone, however, as a mother and companion does woman prove a blessing to mankind. Those women who, unmarried, go through life, scattering blessings abroad to humanity in general, have been styled by some "superfluous women." Is the accusation just? In her poetry and literature she competes favorably with men of those professions. We need only mention the names of Hannah Adams, Gail Hamilton, the Cary sisters and Louisa M. Alcott. It has been her part also to take a high place in the arts, and to furnish the finer parts of music to the world. But her peculiar function seems to be to minister to the needy. So we find these single women, who have not a home of their own to care for, making homes for the homeless, becoming mothers to the motherless, and caring for the desolate. What life could be more beautiful than that of Sister Dora, as she went about among her patients, ministering to their souls as well as bodies, and how many poor friendless orphans have found a friend and mother in Catherine Wolfe? Or, again, the noble character of Francis Havergal, who, whatever her rank may be in the world of literature, was most assuredly "a polished corner stone in the church of the living God." Another field for her is the mission work, at home and abroad. Read the story of the short but beautiful life of Mary Campbell, and you cannot but be inspired with a desire to follow her example. Such is her mission. To visit the forsaken, attend the neglected, to remain unshaken when misfortune pursues and brethren flee. Yet how much like a little child's are the labors of woman. The child sees its mother bending o'er her work and is inspired with a desire to help. Its stitches at best are crooked and uneven, but, however imperfect, the mother accepts the work because done in love. So the dear Heavenly Father is pleased and will say, "She hath done what she could." If we trace a stream to its source, we come to a point where the current may be turned by the palm of the hand. At this point in the human life God has placed woman, to turn the stream in his direction. He has fitted her to take a leading part in the spreading of His gospel. There has been claimed for her a pre-eminence over man in her sentimental and religious nature. From the very first of Christ's ministry we find woman following his footsteps closely. She stood at his cross, was first at his tomb, and received the first command from his lips, "Go tell my disciples." She has been endowed with the rare gifts and graces, the emotional fervor, the warm sympathy and heroic sacrifice necessary to establish the Christian home and carry the knowledge of Christ to lowliest homes and humblest hearts.

"Not she, with traitorous kiss, her Savior stung,
Not she denied him with unholy tongue;
She, while apostles shrank, could danger brave,
Last at his cross and earliest at his grave."

The Fence Story.

ANONYMOUS.

A man who prided himself on his morality, and expected to be saved by it, was constantly saying, "I am doing pretty well, on the whole. I sometimes get mad and swear, but I am strictly honest. I work on Sunday when I am particularly busy, but I give a good deal to the poor and I never was drunk in my life." This man hired a canny Scotchman to build a fence round his pasture lot. He gave him very particular directions. In the evening, when the Scotchman came in from work, the man said: "Well, Jack, is the fence built? and is it tight and strong?" "I canna say that it is all tight and strong," Jack replied; "but it is a good average fence, anyhow. If some parts of it are a little weak, other parts are extra strong. I don't know but I may have left a gap here and there a yard wide or so; but then I made up for it by doubling the number of rails on each side of the gap. I dare say that the cattle will find it a good fence on the whole, and will like it, though I canna just say that it is perfect in every part." "What!" cried the man, not seeing the point, "Do you mean to tell me that you have built a fence around my lot with weak places in it? Why, you might as well have no fence at all. If there is any opening, or a place where an opening can be made, the cattle will be sure to find it and will go through. Don't you know, man, that a fence must be perfect or it is worthless?"

"I used to think so," said the dry Scotchman, "but I hear you talk so much about averaging matters with the Lord, it seemed to me we might try it with the cattle. If an average fence won't do for them, I am afraid that an average character won't do in the day of judgment. When I was on shipboard, and a storm was driving us on the rocks, the captain cried, 'Let go the anchor!' But the mate shouted back, 'There is a broken link in the cable.' Did the captain say, when he heard that, 'No matter, its only one link. The rest of the chain is good. Ninety-nine of a hundred links are strong. Its average is high; it only lacks one per cent. of being perfect. Surely the anchor ought to respect so excellent a chain and not break away from it!' No, indeed; he shouted, 'Get another chain!' He knew that a chain with one broken link was no chain at all—that he might as well throw the anchor overboard without any cable, as with a defective one. So with the anchor of our souls. If there is the least flaw in the cable it is not safe to trust it. We had better throw it away and try to get a new one that we know is perfect."

Romanists.

Recent investigations in the field of religious statistics have developed some facts which are of interest and of an encouraging nature, at leaat to Protestant Christians. The researches of Dr. Dorchester show that the year 1870 marked the point of high tide in the history of the growth of the Roman Catholic Church in this country. In 1850 Romanism only claimed that its members and adherents amounted to 6 per cent. of the population of the country. At this time the evangelical population was 53 and 3-10 per cent. So rapidly did Romanism increase that during the next twenty years from 1850 to 1870 the Catholic population rose from 6 to 11 9-10 per cent. of the whole, a truly remarkable and threatening state of affairs. But in the ten years from 1870 to 1880 they advanced only to 12 and 6-10 per cent., a relative growth of 9-10 of 1 per cent in the ten pears, while from 1880 to 1887, only six years, they had fallen off from this percentage 3-10 of 1 per cent, and at the latter date could only claim 12 and 3-10 per cent. of the population of the land. On the other hand, in 1850 the evangelical population was only 53 and 2-10 per cent. of the whole. In the following twenty years, while Romanism made such rapid growth, Protestantism advanced only to 60 and 5-10 per cent. But in the following years the tables are turned. Romanism advanced but 4-10 of 1 per cent. in the ratio, while Protestantism's advance was exactly 10 per cent., standing at 70 and 5-10 per cent. During the following six years, up to 1886, Romanism fell behind 3-10 of 1 per cent. from what it was in 1880, while Protestantism advanced its ratio from 70 and 5-10 to 73 per cent. of the population. These facts show that there is not that immediate danger some have feared from the Papacy; but what is more to the point, they show that evangelical Christianity has not lost its power among the people.—Methodist Herald.

The register of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., just received from an old class-mate, the Rev. W. R. Sims, Ph. D., shows thirty young men to have received degrees from that institution at the last commencement.

One, Ph. D.; three, M. A.; one, M. S.; one, C. E.; six, B. A.; three, B. S., and fifteen, B. L. Besides these, there were four graduates in the Biblical Department, classical course, and three given certificates in the English course. The University now carries an endowment of $900,000, and as a church school is the pride of the M. E. Church, South.

We take pleasure in calling attention to the advertisement of Vanderbilt Uuniversity in another part of the paper.

When you have closed your doors and made darkness within, remember never to say that you are alone. For you are not alone. God, too, is present there, and your guardian spirit; and what need have they of light to see what you are doing?—Epictetus.

It does not take a congregation long to find out that there is a live man in the pulpit. Life means warmth and motion. The absence of these indicate the presence of a pulpit mummy.—Nashville Advocate.

Notes.

Judge A. H. Barrett, the Democratic nominee from Silver Bow county, Montana, for the Legislative Council, is a member of the Idaho Street Methodist Church, South, Butte.

Hon. W. A. Clark, Democratic nominee for Delegate to Congress from Montana Territory, is a wealthy miner of Butte.

A note from Bro. William M. Bell, of Silver Star, brings us ten cash subscribers with the following words: "Long live the MONTANA METHODIST. It's a paper that one is not ashamed to send to his friends no matter where they are."

The gross earnings of the Northern Pacific for the year ending June 30, 1888, is said to be $15, 846,327, an increase over the preceding year of $3,056,879. The operating expenses were $9,-266,884; net earnings, $6,579,-443.

A very welcome message has been received from two "old Vanderbilt boys," E. E. Bramlett, U. S. Commercial Agent in Saxony, Germany, and Rev. J. W. Stovall, who is across the waters for the further prosecution of his studies and preparation for the ministry. Bro. Stovall writes: "This winter I shall devote to hard reading of German, Greek, Latin and Hebrew. I shall spend next winter in Greece studying modern Greek and observing. Then I may spend some months in Spain perfecting my knowledge of Spanish, which I learned long ogo. God willing, I shall then return to America and again enter the itinerancy."

A Note From California.

MONTANA METHODIST—Dear Young Friend: We of Southern California greet you across the mountains and wide extended plains. We welcome you to a sisterhood of more than a score of Christian Advocates published in the interests of our own dear mother church.

Although you are the youngest of them all, yet you are not the least of them all, by any means. Your bow to the public was a graceful one. Your debut was highly creditable to yourself and your friends.

The present is a critical period in our national and ecclesiastical history. This is the crisis of Southern Methodism in the Rocky Mountains and on the Pacific Coast. "Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this." Long may your banner wave over Montana and over the highest peaks in her lofty ranges, till the sceptre of righteousness shall break the sceptre of unrighteousness, Mormonism, Romanism, Vandalism and Spiritism.

D. C. BROWNE.

Letter From Colorado.

Editor MONTANA METHODIST:

Give us your hand. God bless you! Receive our heartfelt greeting from the Denver Conference. We have watched the struggles of the Montana Conference sometimes with anxiety, always with interest. God bless and prosper you and help you to be a blessing to that land! I am delighted to mark your progress. Heaven make you a host!

Some of your men I know. I have had Bro. Britt in my district, and you know we always follow a man with interest after that. I met Bro. Barbee when he was heading for the West. I felt the fire had begun to burn. I have served with Bro. Stateler in General Conference. I have stood for that old Roman and his cause for years. I love the Montana Conference. The call that Dr. Morton answered, I felt, but had to quiet my heart, as I was so situated I could not go then.

I was the bedfellow of your Bishop when he was elected. I know his fervor and his fire, and his faculty for lifting a collection. In the matter of collections you are an inspiration. Your statistics are growing. Hurrah for your projected school! How you do work, building parsonages and churches. And that great achievement, a conference paper! Let us bid you God speed all along.

Well, you know we are both the outgrowth of the Western Conference. We were one for four years and have been two for ten. We ought to love each other and feel some mutual concern about each other's progress. Your success this year springs us. It may prove also an inspiration to you to learn that we also have prospered. It has been a year of financial stringency, but we have scored our largest in membership and passed the half million line in our collections for missions.

After subtracting Deming, which is not counted in our returns this year from the returns of last year, we report 260 net gain, making our membership 1507. We have twenty-two churches, thirteen parsonages and two school buildings and a herd of cattle, amounting in all to $150,-437.

You are always on our heels or a little a head. Witness Church Extension and the Parsonage Aid and now the "Superannuated Preachers' Fund." That's what our herd of cattle means. A brother gave us forty cows, most of them with calves by their sides. We could not sell them to advantage, so he gave us ten more and we put them out for a part of the increase. We are first in this cattle business, aren't we?

If we count the five charges in our bounds served by the West Texas Conference we are ahead of any other Protestant church in New Mexico and abreast of any from Pueblo south. Our ranks are filling up finely and we are taking in new ground.

GEORGE NEEDHAM.

Las Vegas, N. M., Aug. 22.

What Shall the Harvest Be?

Summer, with its sultry days, its lurid, fervid heat, its gorgeous beauty of field and gardens, has gone and has surrendered the sceptre to autumn, who comes, as only autumn can, robed in the regal vestments of September sunsets and brown and russet foliage.

Yet autumn brings but the perfected fruitage of spring's saving and summer's benign and seasonable maturing. For how shall they reap who sow not? or if the genial warmth is withheld?

Then 'tis a happy consummation of spring's early promise, that in these lively autumnal days we gather into the garner the grain and fruits when the early frosts apprise us of the approach of winter and prudence admonishes us to prepare for its coming.

How forcibly do these thoughts, naturally suggested by the recurrence of the seasons, bring to our mind the lesson of life!

'Tis an oft-repeated story, yet exhaustless, as the fount from which nature derives its sustenance. The tender bud unfolding in the spring time warmth, blooming into the perfect flower when the dew of summer has kissed its tender leaves and painted with inimitable tints its delicate petals, an appropriate emblem of the growth and expansion of our moral natures and our spiritual lives under the solitary ministrations of religious counsel and instruction in youth, yielding a rich harvest of good deeds and exhaling the beautiful influence of perfected character when the "sun of righteousness" shall have sent the beams of "Gospel truth" athwart the garden of our hearts, and the dew of a heavenly father's care has blessed the sewing of the good seed; then in life's autumn shall we gather the perfect fruits of righteousness and a rich vintage.

'Tis a fitting end to a life well begun that its waning hours are bright with a halo from noble deeds and holy impulses. Stars are they in heaven's waiting crown, and gems of truth to sparkle and beautify our garments of salvation when this mortal shall have been clothed in immortality. A lesson all might learn, and in learning heed, that in youth, when the heart and mind are susceptible of good inpressions, the good seed of truth be sown, then shall the harvest be a goodly one.

Good News.

The outlook for THE MONTANA METHODIST is very flattering. The circulation is rapidly extending. Kind words are said. The cash is coming in and, of course, we are gratified. "On with the revolution,' brethren. Our friends abroad are receiving the paper warmly. We must not forget to help ourselves. Let the preachers of Montana, our authorized agents, see that the paper is in every home in the territory. The editors and management will pledge faithfulness to send out the best paper possible for $1.00 a year.

Good for the Methodist.

DEAR MANAGER:—I herewith send you (90) ninety subscribers for the METHODIST, with several other precincts to hear from.

E. J. S.

The Editor Camping.

I should have mentioned in my first letter that our first week out we passed over some historic country of Montana. Referring to my diary of August 25th I find the following: "We started from camp this morning at 7:19; came up Alder Gulch. Here there are several squads of Chinamen who are working over the old placer mines, considered worthless by the American. Visions of the early days of Montana could but flit across the mind, as we rode up this canyon. We passed the little, almost deserted villages, called respectively 'Junction City,' 'Adobe City,' 'Nevada City.' The houses were chiefly small log huts that were in keeping with the time and needs when built. About 9 a. m. we reached Virginia City, Montana's first capitol. This town has a number of substantial business houses and several real good residences, and many yards have beautiful flowers. Virginia City is the county seat of Madison. It has two good church buildings, (I don't know but there are more) Methodist Episcopal and Presbyterian, a commodious brick school building, court house, etc.

We called at the house of Bro. and Sister Herndon, purposing a stop of fifteen minutes. BUT NO. The ladies had to get right out—come in and take dinner, anyway, yea, more; stay over till Monday. We greatly enjoyed about four hours' rest, but then felt we should drive on across the range and camp on the Madison river at the Ennis bridge. Any one who knows of Sister Herndon's hospitality may guess the difficulty we met in getting off before Monday morning. We will do better next time."

Diary, August 28.—"Sound sleep was enjoyed too much this morning to wake early. It appeared that most of us felt indifferent about starting, though nothing was said. We, therefore, got breakfast leisurely and left camp about 8:30." It occurs to me just here that Bro. Kemper had quite a time mending our coffee pot. Our lack of experience cooking on a camp fire resulted in burning a hole in it. Bro. K. found a piece of lead and was trying his best to melt it and stop the hole. When he finished the coffee pot had about three holes, and was therefore left at Wolf Creek camp, a relic of the past.

We passed several beautiful streams running down across the valley into the Madison river from the snows of the Madison range. Among them were the Squaw and Pappoose creeks. Between these two creeks and along the Madison is a large stock ranch owned by A. H. Barrett and Geo. Bernard. Here we halted for a few minutes, having a message for Mr. Bernard. We were all soon treated to a refreshing draught of cold milk. We crossed the Madison river on a toll bridge about 12 m.; drove a mile and camped for dinner. "Kit" and "Dolly," our plucky horses, had been very faithful all along (except one occasion when they ran back about fifteen miles, causing us to lose nearly a day's drive) but now Kit was becoming quite lame. The cause we could not detect. Dinner over, we hitched up and drove very slowly about eight miles to the top of the divide, known as the "Horn." We hauled wood several miles, knowing that we would not find any here. I wish I had a picture of the scenery at this place. It is both grand and beautiful. The long range of mountains on the east, a wide valley stretching between us and its base; a beautiful little stream running by our camp; the Madison canyon dividing the great mountain, down which rolls and tumbles and boils the river. Here, too, are the browsing cattle and herds of horses, fat and sleek. The very sky above is calm and restful to look upon. I am reminded of an expression in Dr. Talmage's great lecture on "The Bright Side of Things." "I love the earth because it's green; I love the sky because it's blue, and I love the sea because of its crystaline flash."

August 29.—Refreshing sleep prepared us for an early ride, and after a hearty breakfast we were off for Henry's Lake, the source of Snake river. A travel of eight miles brought us to this beautiful body of water, which is in Idaho. We had expected to fish here but were disappointed. It could not be done without boats and these we could not well secure. We therefore, made a short stay here, and took up our line of march for Targee river. Just before we reached this stream we came to a small ranch with meagre improvements. We halted to get some instructions about our route over the pass and camping for the night. This ranch is owned by three bachelors, named Smith, Rock and Counts. One of the men were at home. We had not been stopped but a moment when he asked us if we would like to see some bears. We responded yes, and alighted. There were two, something more than half grown, caught this spring in the mountaias near by. One was perfectly black and the other brown, though the man said they were cubs of the same dam. This was new to us on the bruin family. In passing by the great one-roomed cabin I took a look and saw that there were many game specimens, and after looking at the young bears, intimated my curiosity to go in and see. We were invited in with some apologies for the dirt floor and the general appearance of things in a home of bachelors. I have not enjoyed such a "show" for many years. Here were the heads and feet, and wings and tails, and bills and claws of all the birds and wild beasts of the Rocky mountains. Among some of the animals of which there were the horns, heads, feet and hides were bear, mountain sheep, mountain goat, elk, buffalo, deer, antelope, etc. Among the birds were the wings, claws or some other part of the eagle, swan, hawk, curlew, mountain blue jay and others we cannot remember. We were highly compensated for the time we spent in this almost weird home on the borders of civilization.

"Will we be likely to see any wild game among the mountains as we go through the Targee pass," asked one of our party.

"Yes, indeed, you will be very apt to see plenty of it."

By this time it was turning the middle of the afternoon. We drove about two miles, where we crossed Targee river, and turned to the left up the stream. A half mile brought us to a small cabin, with some few other little unpretentious huts, which indicated a ranch. This was right at the mouth of the canyon, and the very last place we expected to see before reaching the Park. There was a board tacked up on the house with a sign, written with charcoal and something else we could not figure out: "Fresh meat—Milk and butter." We stopped and laid in a supply of such as we needed for our two weeks' absence from where we could again secure such delicacies. A fine camping place was found a mile or so up the canyon where we stopped for the night. The ladies were not anxious to hear bear stories that night, for we did not know what hour in the night we would have such a visitor. We were not troubled, however, with even the sound of a wild beast.

When we consider the influence of immigration, it is by no means reassuring to reflect that seventy-five per cent. of it is pouring into the formative West. If the movement westward continues, as it probably will, until the free farming lands are all taken, 25,000,000 of that foreign element will be west of the Mississippi. And this will be two-thirds of all the population of the West, even if that population should increase 350 per cent. between 1880 and 1900. Already is the proportion of foreigners in the Territories from two to three times greater than in the States east of the Mississippi. We may well ask—and with special reference to the West—whether this in-sweeping immigration is to Foreignize us or we are to Americanize it.

Christianize the immigrant and he will be easily Americanized. Christianity is the solvent of all race antipathies.—Our Country.

The MONTANA METHODIST makes its first appearance among our exchanges this week, the number we received being the first issue of the paper. Neat, clean, gentle and devout, this new paper starts on its mission to spread Scriptural holiness and advocate Methodistism in the great West, We bid it God-speed on its high and heavenly mission. May its gospel be like the Word of the Lord which shall not return void but accomplish the thing whereunto it shall be sent. We give the MONTANA METHODIST a hearty welcome.—Texas Advocate.

Rev. Pleasant Thurman, father of Allen G. Thurman, nominee for Vice-President, was admitted for trial into the Virginia Conference, M. E. Church, 1806, and was appointed as junior preacher (William Jean, senior) to Amherst circuit, Richmond District—the circuit numbered 864 white and 167 colored members. He was appointed in 1807 to "Roan-Oak," Newbern District, junior to Rev. James Boyd—692 white and 528 colored members. In 1808 to Williamburg as preacher in charge—James Harris, junior 783 white and 113 colored members. In 1809 to Petersburg Station, Norfolk District. Ordained deacon 1808 and elder in 1810; locating after ordination to eldership.—Richmond Advocate.

Transfers to the West.

How grandly works the law of supply and demand as shown in our Methodist itinerant system! We know not how this great Western field could be otherwise evangelized. The people in our cities and larger towns possibly might have remaining in them sufficient desire for the word to call a man to minister to them in holy things, but as a rule secular matters receive the first consideration. Just now there appears to be more interest in our Western work than ever before—thank God for this. An intelligeut, aggressive Christianity is what we love, and it is what we are having in a less stinted measure than in former years. As Moses, and Aaron, and Joshua, and Caleb and many more looked with eager eyes upon the far away land flowing with milk and honey, so have many of our latter day prophets cast their eyes Westward. Think of it! Our people here ahead of the leaders! Notwithstanding this, some petty prophets have come "spied out the land," have found giants who would eat up Israel as grasshoppers, have 'chode with Moses, and wished that they had died when their brethren died before the Lord.' They have said, on the borders: "It is no place of seed, or of figs, or of pomegranates" and have returned to make evil report.

The editor of our general organ, who labored so many years in the West, and but for the voice of the church would be there now, aptly says: "Superficial observation and ex parte representation may lead to hurtful mistakes despite the highest order of administrative ability and the very best intentions."

This is a time of transfers to the West. How we hail the day—brethren giving themselves to God and coming West. It may be well for us to pause just here and consider some important points in connection with this subject. It is already conceded by the church that we need transfers to the West.

Will the church now allow us who are here and believe from what we have seen that we are able to say what kind of transfers we need. Though we realize our own inferiority, and would not for a moment claim to fill the bill, we believe we know what will. In the first place, we will say what kind of transfers we do not need. We do not want "rice eaters." We are a long ways from the land of rice, but have not forgotten how a rice eater looks. If you do not know what a rice eater is, we want you to find out.

In the second place, we do not need men that you do not need in the older conferences. If there are in the bounds of any of the older conferences "crippled and crotchety men who make trouble," we do not want them in our young conferences to kill them. No! No! Let such men locate rather than come West.

Third, we are not prepared for men who have no experience. It is very true some of our young "boy preachers" do more in their first four years than any other period of their ministry, but as a rule this is where they have the tenderest sympathy and co-operation of large memberships. All of us have our nursing periods, but nurslings in the West stand in jeopardy of their lives. There are elements here, too, that love to see them cry for milk. Our environments in many places here are such that men of large experience have their faith and tact strained to the utmost, and hence these words on this division.

Fourth, we do not want men who are not wholly given to the one work of the ministry. A kind of double-purpose, half-hearted committal to preaching the Gospel is enough to kill the man in the eyes of the people. They very soon see it and withdraw their support, moral and material, and therefore lose hope for our cause.

The Grand Street Church congregation, of Helena, during the absence of Pastor Britt, is lighting the church with gas. There are to be three jets on each side, three jets along the centre of the ceiling, one on each side of the pulpit, and one in the vestibule, in all twelve. "And six branches shall come out of the side of it; three branches of the candle-stick out of the one side, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side. Ex., xxv: 32.

Temperance — Prohibition.

No wise friend of his fellowman will fail to be gratified at the growing prominence of this great moral reform. Every year records a growth that surprises us. He whose observation runs back but fifteen years can remember the infancy of that movement which has now grown to great proportions. The strengthening of the term used to express the idea from Temperance to Prohibition indicates the growing zeal of its promoters. It may also indicate an extravagance in that zeal, but extravagance seems unavoidable in the success of every great movement.

The suppression of the liquor traffic is engaging the thought of the world. In every nation we see this question coming to the front. England is aroused, and even beer-drenched Germany is awakening from the stupor on this subject. Switzerland has taken a novel course in the matter. "The Swiss alcohol act recently passed, giving the government control over all alcoholic drinks sold in that country, provides that ten per cent. of the net revenue which the cantons will gain from the tax is to be spent in unfolding to the people the effects of alcohol."

It is reported that "the six powers contiguous to the North Sea—Great Britain, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany and Denmark—have entered into an agreement whereby the sale of spirituous liquors to fishermen and other persons on board fishing vessels is prohibited."

Our own country is in the fore front of the great reform. Every church convention, conference or assembly has its Resolutions on Temperance, which are expressed in more emphatic terms at each succeeding annual meeting. The various orders are also beginning here and there to take up the matter. Recently the Grand Lodge of Masons, of Mississippi, passed a resolution to the effect that saloon-keeping is an offense against Masonry, and that a saloon-keeper cannot be a Mason.

Good men differ as to the best methods of opposing the evil, but the determination that the saloon must go, unites a vast and growing multitude. Let us trust with Joseph Cook that "Prohibition is the index finger of Providence pointing to better times."

Personals.

Bro. Moore, our pastor at Deer Lodge, writes us in a private letter: "We have just let the contract to build our new church at a cost of $2,365. * * * The paper (meaning THE MONTANA METHODIST) is in favor with the people here and I predict for it a bright future, and shall centainly do all I can to help it along." We are rejoiced to know that this church enterprise is moving forward with such rapidity. We wish we had $100 to give toward it. We will rejoice, Bro. Moore, when you and your worthy people have a desirable temple of worship. THE MONTANA METHODIST is also grateful for favor with the good people of Deer Lodge, and for the personal interest of her authorized agent, the pastor at that place. Think of it! A new M. E. Church, South, in Deer Lodge. That sounds musical. May the voice of praise soon be heard within her walls.

The associate editor, Rev. W. M. Britt, is on a visit East, to be gone a few weeks. He joins his wife, who preceded him, in Ohio, at the celebration of her parents' golden wedding. They return by way of Missouri, the home of Mr. Britt's parents, and will reach Helena about Oct. 10.

Rev. E. J. Stanley, P. E. Helena District, is succeeding in his mission to the States in securing transfers to the Montana Conference. We will gladly welcome good men to fill our ranks.

The Editor returned to Butte from his visit to the Wonderland much invigorated by the few weeks' rest in camp life. Such a trip is better than swallowing pills, and far more agreeable.

This time last year we were down in the great Bitter Root Valley, enjoying the hospitality of those good ranchers around Stevensville and Corvallis, who have good gardens, orchards, water melon patches, butter and eggs and Methodist preachers' special favorite in the way of meats. No guessing necessary here.

Any man who can come to Montana and travel through the Jefferson, and Madison, and Gallatin and Bitter Root Valleys, and then complain that we havn't a good country, ought to go back where he came from, and we reckon had best stay there.

Dr. Boland's work, "The Problem of Methodism," is the subject of much controversy among our doctors.

We suppose the Montana Conference is the only one in our connection not afflicted with doctors of divinity. Let others say whether we are to be congratulated in our uncommon distinction.

The editor of THE MONTANA METHODIST is the happy recipient of a $60 set of the "International Cyclopedia," a present from friends who do not wish their 'left hand to know what their right hand doeth.' For this act of high appreciation we shall ever be in most grateful remembrance. We purpose a faithful use of these bright fifteen volumes. It does us good to make this addition to our little library.

The contract has been let for building a parsonage for the Idaho Street Methodist Church, of Butte City, for $1,650. The work is to commence right away, and is to be completed in about sixty days.

The exchanges of THE MONTANA METHODIST are divided between the editor and the associate editor. Will you please, notice kind friends whether you are asked to send your paper to A. C. Couey, Butte, Mont., or to W. M. Britt, Helena. This little precaution on your part will confer quite a favor on us.

Butte seems to be entering upon an era of unprecedented prosperity. New snd substantial buildings are going up in many places over the city. There is scarcely a house to be seen for rent. In suburban sections, old deserted cabins are being fitted up for occupancy. A new line of street cars is just about finished by the enterprising Bennett Bros. The contract for a cable line to Walkerville has been let. One motor will soon substitute the horse car now in use. Business is quite brisk and everybody goes in a hurry. It is a time for Christian watchfulness.

Boulder and Elkhorn Circuit.

EDITOR MONTANA METHODIST.

DEAR BRO.:—Thinking perhaps you would like to hear from "Our Bachelor Brother," he now sends greeting. I was the only one to move at Conference, or rather, the only one moved. Oh! it is delightful, under such circumstances, to enjoy "single blessedness."

Coming from Butte one passes through some of the most picturesque and romantic scenery imaginable, especially the Elk Park with its Italian sky, Swiss mountains and sparkling streams of ice-cold water. There the Silver Bow and Boulder rivers head, one running to the Atlantic and the other to the Pacific. Indeed, this can be none other than the house of the gods; but judging from the many signs left behind, a gay old time they must have of it playing quoits. Yonder, towers upon the left the remains of an old Titanic castle. Here upon the right unexplored depths of canyon, zealously guarded by cragged peaks of many ages. Boulder piled upon boulder in wildest confusion declares "the hand that made us is divine," and the mournful pines whisper, 'tis God who made us. Now we plunge into a dark place (a tunnel) beneath the mountain's towering height. "The thing at that moment most desired is light." A moment later and we are at Boulder City. Like a gem from the jewelled crown of prosperity she sits embossed within a setting of interminable hills. Met by kind friends, your correspondent of "short, stout" mien is taken to the very pleasant home of Bro. Morris, where a most cordial welcome is accorded him in the name of the Master. "Verily, they shall have their reward." Thence to the kind home of Bro. Beasley, God bless him and his kind family. We, that is, Bro. Beasley and the "Bachelor Brother," together enter upon an active siege of visitations. We enjoy the prayer meeting and visiting. Congregations large Sabbath morning and evening. Communion 11 a. m. Sunday. Sunday School Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. I go to Elkhorn next Sabbath.

Most truly,
E. C. FINLEY.

Deer Lodge Letter.

Editor of THE MONTANA METHODIST.

Having just finished reading the last issue of THE MONTANA METHODIST, I feel impelled to follow the charm which is still unbroken and tell you how much I appreciate your effort to give the reading public a good paper. I congratulate you upon the achievement. The paper is bright, newsy and full of good things. It must reach the goal of success. But I propose in this short letter to kill two birds with one stone. While I desire to express my most unqualified appreciation of the paper, I have been thinking of another matter equally dear to our hearts.

I refer to our church building enterprise at this place. As you know when we came here we found our church building very much dilapidated. So much so, indeed, that it was found advisable to build a new house, if possible. Accordingly, we addressed ourselves with earnestness to the task, disposed of the old building, and with the earnest and efficient co-operation of Mr. Phil. E. Evans, whose wife is a very devoted member of our church, we have succeeded in securing a building fund which is a credit to the liberal spirit of the people of Deer Lodge. And in this connection, permit me to say that, in my judgment, no preacher ever served a kinder, or more generous people.

In addition to our home subscriptions, which are liberal, we are much indebted to Bro. Stanley, whose earnest representation of our cause in person has caused the Board of Church Extension to desire liberal things for us, for all of which we feel very grateful. But we need more money. The new church has passed the ideal stage and become a real fact. The foundation is already laid. The contract for building has been awarded. The work progresses. Soon the church will be completed—and then the money must be forthcoming. Now, in order to finish up creditably, we need a long pull and a strong pull on the strings which open the pocketbooks of all our friends in Montana, which will enable us to dedicate to our loving Heavenly Father a beautiful church, by which the interests of His kingdom may be more rapidly advanced and permanently established. Now, dear friends, will you not help us? We need $600 at once—and we are safe. Who will be the first to help? Any remittances, however small, will be gratefully received by us and duly acknowledged in THE MONTANA METHODIST.

Now, dear friends, all who can, forward remittances at once to Phil. E. Evans, or the undersigned, at Deer Lodge, Mont.

JOHN MOORE.

Bozeman Circuit.

BY REV. AARON KELLY.

I arrived within the bounds of the Bozeman circuit August 4th and began my first itinerant work without delay. We found our members enthusiastic, and willing to hear what the "boy preacher" had to say. Our members of the Bozemen circuit are nothing but Southern Methodists of the highest type; this, of course, is what the Georgia preacher likes. This I say because I am one myself. There is no name more honorable than Southern Methodistism.

Young preachers have different experiences. One of our young brothers on his first circuit in the South was accosted by one of his stewards, who said: "I can beat you on a sermon." The young minister let him try it. He stepped into the pulpit, gave out his hymn, and after the congregation had sung, he read his chapter, took his text and looked at his astonished audience and stammered out: "If any man thinks he can beat the preacher let him try it."

Bro. Jarvis, of Tennessee, has come to his appointment on the evtensive Bozeman circuit, and begins work.

Idleness.

BY E. L.

Written for THE MONTANA METHODIST.

What must the life of the idle be?
Surely they none of a true life see.
Can it be that God ever gave
One of his children that lite to live?
No, no! I think I understand;
I think it is Satan that leads their band.

Many are they who travel along,
Mingling each day with life's great throng,
Leaving their duties all undone,
Spending their life in idle fun;
Then at the end of life's short space,
And of life's labor, they leave no trace.

Think of an aimless, idle life—
It must be a weary, toilsome strife;
A life that ever ends in shame,
Spent to honor Satan's name;
Laid in the grave without a sigh—
They live for nothing save to die.

It is the idle that soweth the seed
Of every wicked and sinful deed;
Yes, 'tis they who ever show
The work of life God would have done.
They it is who seal their doom
And carry others to the tomb.

The idle life must end in shame,
Knowing nought of truth and fame—
Labor thus to pave the way
That leadeth to eternal day.
For here it is we seal our fate,
Open wide or close the gate.

Jesus left the gate ajar
That His light might shine afar,
To light the laborer's weary feet,
When earthly toil is thus complete.
Jesus stands with ready hand
To cast the idle from His land.

Life has its wisdom, its joys and cares;
Mortals should shun the tempter's snares,
Be always ready their work to do,
Llve to be honest, kind and true.
Every mortal live with one aim—
And that be to honor the Savior's name.

A Presiding Elder Abroad.

On Monday, August 27th, we boarded the Montana Central train at 4:30 p. m., for Butte City. Met Bro. R. S. Clark, on his way to Boulder. He made a gratifying report of the outlook on his charge. Got a glimpse of Bro. Finley as we passed Boulder, where Mrs. Stanley and baby stopped off en route to White Hall.

An engine having jumped the track right ahead of our train in Elk Park, brought us to a dead stop. A runner had to go on foot ten miles to Butte for another engine, where we arrived tired and footsore at 12 midnight.

At 9:30 a. m. next day, I started on the U. & N. train for Kansas City, Kansas. A misconnection at Pocatello sent us by way of Ogden and delayed us about twelve hours in getting through. A few hours were delightfully spent on Thursday afternoon visiting old friends at Denver. We had to lay over from 2:30 p. m. till 8 p. m. I preferred the renewing of precious Christian friendships to seeing the sights of this wonderful and growing city of the plains. How marvelous has been its growth! How hearty the handshake; how cordial the welcome, and how refreshing the meeting and converse with Sister Morrison, Brothers Brinker, Rhodes, Packard and others whom I met during my brief stay. I had been entertained at the house of the first named when attending the first session of the Denver Conference in 1874. How wonderful the change in the church. Then the congregation worshipped in a small frame building; now they have one of the finest brick churches that I have seen for many a day, well located with a new brick parsonage built largely by the efforts of the ladies, and all worth perhaps thirty or forty thousand dollars. Besides, there is a neat brick chapel (Mission) and parsonage in another part of the city. The house is lighted with electricity and the light is most pleasing and can be turned on in the twinkling of an eye, just by touching a small knob on the side of the wall. Brother Packard was just ready to leave for Missouri, and Brother Bolling, the new pastor, was expected every day.

In Western Kansas and portions of Colorado the drouth has been very severe. I noticed many corn fields that were literally parched by the hot winds, and the crops not even worth cutting for hay. The roads were lined with covered wagons, filled with people leaving the country. Further east there seems to have been more rain, and from Junction City eastward the crops are much better.

How refreshing to look once more on growing fields of corn and to see the beautiful foliage of the oak, elm, walnut and hickory trees. How vividly they reminded me of my childhood days.

On Friday, the third day after leaving Butte, at 5 o'clock p. m., our train rolled into the great Union depot at Kansas City. I walked into the new and elegant church in Wyandotte, where the Western Conference was being held from day to day, just as the audience was assembling to hold the Church Extension anniversary. "The brethren knew not Joseph." This is my old conference, but there was not a man in the house who knew me. I walked right by my own father, and sat down beside an old and beloved friend and co-laborer, Rev. Charles Boles, while Rev. T. C. Downs, my former classmate, was in the chair. I was a stranger among them until I afterwards introduced myself, and then there was handshaking all around.

It was a great privilege to meet with the brethren of this conference. They are a band of Christian heroes. They are "enduring hardness as good soldiers." They are not working for worldly emolument, but for the cause that is dearer to them than all beside. Their trials are very similar to ours in Montana. Our sorrows, hopes, joys and fears are one. "Blest be the tie that binds." The brethren are doing a noble work. God has greatly prospered their labors in she conversion of souls. There was a moderate increase in numbers the past year.

Very many precious memories were called up. The session was harmonious. The Church Extension anniversary was a success. The sermon on Sunday by Bishop Hendrix on the work of the Holy Spirit was in the Spirit. The conference love feast, in connection with the celebration of the Lord's Supper, was a time of refreshing that need never fade from memory. The MONTANA METHODIST met with a favorable reception, and a number of new subscribers were procured. The appointments were read out on Sunday night at the close of the Misssonary Anniversary, and the brethren are dispersing to their respective fields. God bless and prosper them. We will not all meet again in this life. May we meet in the "temple not made with hands." E. J. S.

Kansas City, Kansas, Sept. 3, 1888.

M. E. Church, South, in Montana.

Our work here in this grand territory is no longer to be considered an experiment. We are here to do the Master's work to which we have been called. We now have in the territory nearly $50,000 worth of church property, over 400 members, 500 Sunday School children, 15 pastoral charges, 35 organizations, a number of good parsonages, an endowment fund of nearly $1,500 for the support of superannuated preachers and the wives and children of deceased preachers. Besides this, our church occupies a position of importance in this field. Many look to us for the gospel. Having known us elsewhere they have many of them stayed out of other churches waiting for our ministry. Being non-political, and knowing nothing but "Christ and Him crucified," and like our Savior, our "kingdom is not of this world." We have nothing to do but to win souls to Christ and scatter holiness over these lands. For over forty years we, as a church, have stood upon clear ground, refusing to use or be used by any political power, preferring to keep ourselves unspotted from the world. While others have sought to influence political parties and dictate terms to political conventions, we have been engaged in keeping alive a pure spiritual religion in the hearts of the people. While others boasted that they "Saved the Union," "Freed the negro," "Saved the flag," etc., etc., we have boasted that we have been peaceable citizens, doing all we could to get the people converted and by prayer and example, stay the dangerous spirit of worldiness which threatened the church. These things have been so well known in the east and south that within a few years in a country devastated and ruined by war, it has added to its fold hundreds of thousands of members and built thousands of churches, hundreds of schools and secured several millions dollars worth of church property. Many of her educational institution are endowed and are doing a grand work. Having so much to do in the east and south, our church has been unable to do what it wished in the west. Having evangilized the south and east, the church is now taking hold of the west and will use both men and means here till the west is brought to Christ. We have never been the rival of any church or sect; we claim the right of preaching the gospel to the poor and needy, and of teaching the people to fear God and love each other.

Our position is so well known here now that from more than a dozen fields unoccupied by us, the Macedonian cry is heard, saying "Come over and help us." While jealous rivals have sought to do us harm, we have moved on slowly bearing all manner of hardships for Christ's sake. While others have misrepresented us, and falsely accused us, we have kept on till now, our object and aim is being understood and felt. We have been toiling up the hill, till at last the top is in sight. We have both means and members enough to be a great factor in evangelizing this country. The road yet to travel will not be so long nor so steep. Victory is in sight and soon we will be able not only to live ourselves, but to push the battle westward. and to all the "ends of the earth."

B. E. H. WARREN.

Willow Creek, Montana.

By two wings a man is lifted up from the earthly; namely, by simplicity and purity. Simplicity ought to be in our intention; purity in our affections. Simplicity doth tend toward God; purity doth apprehend and taste him.

The Pulpit to the Front.

As the pulpit is the great representative of His friends, the pulpit should be the first to make the attack. It should lead in the fore-front of His army. It should give the watchward. It should make the first forward movement. Its artillery should be the first to open upon the enemy's works. It should claim this precedence as its right, and this right should be exercised without hesitation and without delay. It should never be craven; never be unprepared; never yield its place in the van; never beat a retreat. The pulpit to the front and the first aggressor upon all the works of the devil!—The Treasury.

What Two?

A strange echo is heard from our church extension secretary. 'A failure in the first two conferences to meet their assessment on church extension.' The precedent is considered a bad omen, etc. The Montana and Denver conferences must be the ones. We can't speak for Denver, but we do speak for the Montana Conference. She claims to have paid every dollar. There's a mistake somewhere, Doctor. Speak, or the brethren will be after you.

An Interesting Card.

DEAR EDITOR:—Three preachers—one for Stevensville, one for Bozeman circuit, one for Townsend, $1,000.00 for Deer Lodge church. Bless the Lord. Will be at home as soon as I can get there.

A CLERGYMAN'S WORK.

The Many Demands Made Upon the Time of Faithful Pastors.

The sunbeams streamed in from a bay window through the curtains and foliage plants, and flooded the room with a mellow light, says the New York Graphic. The birds sang in their gilded cages, while their less melodious, though freer friends without, added their pretty chirps to the chorus. A stray sunbeam rested caressingly on the head of a man seated at a desk, the green baize top of which peeped out from beneath a mass of papers and correspondence. Around him lay scattered books, papers, magazines and pamphlets of all descriptions.

The central figure was a prominent clergyman of New York. His pleasant face was seamed with the lines of thought, while his pen, scratching rapidly over the paper, was laying the frame-work of a brainy, vigorous sermon. Looking up and observing a visitor, whom he had been too busy to notice before, he courteously motioned him to a seat and proceeded to the completion of his task.

"You catch me in a busy time," he said, pleasantly, as the pen ceased moving and he threw himself back in the chair with an air of relief. "The general public seems to be under the impression that we ministers have nothing to do but to laugh and grow stout, preach a sermon or two and enjoy the good things of this world," said the clergyman. "This idea, strange to say, is shared by some members of our own congregations, who, if they took the interest in the church they should, would soon learn to know better.

"Not long ago I was accosted as I came out of my study one morning by an old parishioner of mine with the remark: 'Ah, how do you do? What do you expect to find to do that will enable you to kill the time between now and next Sunday?'

"This, I am sorry to say, expresses the idea formed by the masses of a clergyman's life. Idle? No, indeed, we are not. I have been in both the business and Christian world for over twenty-five years, and I never worked so hard in my life as I have since I became a minister.

"The world of laborers and mechanics are crying out for less hours, yet we work from fourteen to nineteen hours a day, Sundays included. To be sure, there is a certain advantage in our business—for such I must term it—in the fact of its not being monotonous. We generally try to spend our mornings in our studies, but we are subject to so many interruptions that I do my best thinking and almost all my writing after nine p. m., and have for nearly twenty years. We are public men, the servants of the people, and should be at their disposal at any hour of the day or night. I have always made myself easy of access, and hold myself in readiness to extend sympathy or do good where good can be done. We are subject to sudden calls for funerals, baptisms, weddings and sick calls, and are expected to lend an ear to the wail of sorrow from whomever it may come

"As a minister you are justly expected to give consolation. To do this you must give the matter your undivided attention. Then comes the preparation of our sermons. This necessarily takes time, and a great deal of it. It takes thought and study to enable a clergyman to present to his congregation Sunday after Sunday and year after year thoughts that will reach their hearts, and preach sermons which will not pall upon them, and do more harm than good by turning them from the church with a feeling akin to disgust at the minister's poverty of expression or meagerness of thought.

"What time I can get from my sick calls and other drains upon my time I devote to study, but I have not an idle moment, and have no opportunity for social calls whatever. My method of making a sermon is this: In the first place I settle on a theme early in the week, read about it, investigate it and think about it until the inspiration seizes me to write, and then it is my habit to write it at one sitting. It is done by simply letting my thoughts accumulate. Every thing a man reads, sees and thinks about in his life and travels is held by the cumulative power which stores up ideas. These are occasions when a sermon comes like a flash and is seen from beginning to end by pure inspiration, and some of the best sermons I ever preached have come in that way, suggested by something I had seen or somebody had said."

"Are these studies all retrospective, dealing entirely with the traditions of the past?"

"They should not be, but I regret to say that in some cases they are, and this accounts for the failure some men make as ministers of the Gospel. They seem to forget that the world is progressing, that every year the people to whom they preach are becoming better informed on all subjects; that the minds of the young, like sponges, are absorbing all the knowledge they can, and that each generation is becoming better informed than the last. These points are vital to the success of a clergyman. He must not only keep abreast of the times, but if possible in advance of them, as a school-teacher must ahead of his class. Once let your congregation pass you in this education, so that they look down upon you from the height of this superior knowledge, and your usefulness is destroyed. The narrowness of your views is at once detected by their better trained intellects, and the truths you may tell them lose their value. A congregation look to their minister for guidance and for help, and it is folly for the blind to lead those who can see, or the weak to assist the strong.

"We can not preach a sermon that furnishes food for reflection without first reflecting, nor can we hope to elevate the thoughts of those to whom we preach when we ourselves stand on a lower intellectual plane. Infidelity is narrow, while faith is broad. Knowledge begets liberality. By liberality I do not mean liberality in its abused sense. I mean that the more extensive a man's knowledge of the world becomes the broader his comprehension of its spiritual needs.

"This is the life and these are the duties of a clergyman, and you can readily see that I am not amiss in my statement that the clergymen of this city can be classed among its busiest men."

Notes.

In our late visit to Cass county, Mo., we were gratified to learn that she had gone dry at the recent local option election, by a jority of 1,300.

The hammer and saw are making quite a noise now on the Idaho Street Church parsonage in Butte. There is something that savors of harmony in it, however.

The short, plainly written communication, if not so meritorious, is more likely to get early attention and is more likely to be read. "Is that so?" Yes, indeed it is. "I shall not forget that."

As we had no special gale in the vicinity of Butte in September, the members of the M. E. Church South stormed Pastor Couey with an equinox of good things for his larder, on or near the 21st inst.

A bright little weekly entitled The Press and Printer, published in Boston, has reached our table. A glance over it shows that 50c. a year is a very moderate price for the paper. Send us another copy, please.

We call the attention of our readers to our advertisements. We are very particular as to whom we represent. Our purpose is not to advertise for any firm in any line of business not worthy the patronage of the paper and the people who read it.

There is quite an addition to our subscription list on the books of the MONTANA METHODIST this week. We certainly feel very thankful for the great interest demonstrated in this enterprise which has the work for God in Montana so much at heart. May the Lord bless all our friends and enemies too.

At a meeiing of the Butte Ministerial Association, Oct. 8, some strong terms headed "Whereas," followed by as strong headed "Resolved," were used concerning a certain Col. Hawkins, who has been visiting these parts for some months past. The terms referred to were condemnatory, with no equivocation. The ministers of this association had grown very tired of the gentleman's course in their city.

Some matter intended for this week's paper, sent by the editor from Butte, has been miscarried by the mails, and is therefore left over for another time. There is some inconvenience in one of the editors living four hours' railroad ride from where the paper is printed.

The Church in its organized form is the body of Christ, and hence the various collections that are ordered by the church are but the various methods by which we do the work that Christ has given us to do—which He would do if He were here on earth in person. In this way we are preaching the gospel both at home and abroad, building churches, caring for widows and orphans, binding up the broken hearted and opening the prison doors to them that are bound. At the commencement of the year set apart, if possible, a certain amount that you will endeavor to raise for each of these objects.

Ripeness in Character.

Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon beautifully illustrates the marks of ripeness in Christian character somewhat as follows: One mark is beauty. Ripe fruit has its own perfect beauty. As the fruit ripens, the sun tints it with surpassing loveliness, and the colors deepen till the beauty of the fruit is equal to the beauty of the blossom, and in some respects superior. There is in ripe Christians the beauty of realized santification, which the word of God knows by the name of "beauty of holiness."

Another mark of ripe fruit is tenderness. The young, green fruit is hard and stone-like; but the ripe fruit is soft, yields to the pressure, can almost be moulded, retains the mark of the finger. So it is with the mature Christian; he is noted for tenderness of spirit.

Another mark of ripeness is sweetness. The unripe fruit is sour, and perhaps it ought to be, or else we should eat all the fruits while they are yet green. It may, therefore, be in the order of grace a fit thing that in the youthful Christian some sharpness should be formed which will ultimately be removed. As we grow in grace we are sure to grow in charity, sympathy, and love; we shall have greater and more intense affection for the person of Him "Whom having not seen, we love;" we shall have greater delight in the precious things of His gospel; the doctrines which, perhaps, we did not understand at first, will become marrow and fatness to us as we advance in grace. We shall feel that there is honey dropping from the honeycomb in the deep things of our religion. We shall, as we ripen in grace, have greater sweetness toward our fellow Christians. Bitter-spirited Christians may know a great deal, but they are immature. Those who are quick to censure may be very acute in judgment, but they are as yet immature in heart. I know we who are young beginners in grace think ourselves qualified to reform the whole Christian church. We drag her before us and condemn her straightway; but when our virtues become more mature I trust we shall not be more tolerant of evil, but we shall be more tolerant of infirmity, more hopeful for the people of God, and certainly less arrogant in our criticisms.

Another, and a very sure mark of ripeness, is a loose hold of earth. Ripe fruit easily parts from the bough. You shake the tree and the ripe apples fall. If you wish to eat fresh fruit, you put out your hand to pluck it, and if it comes off with difficulty you feel you had better leave it alone a little longer; but when it drops into your hand, quite ready to be withdrawn from the branch, you know it to be in good condition.—Selected.

Personals.

Rev. R. F. Beasley, who was transferred from the Montana to the Pacific conference this fall, has been appointed to the Linden charge.

Our associate editor, Rev. Wm. M. Britt, has been quite ill with an attack of pleuro-pneumonia since his arrival from the states. He is at this writing very much better, and hopes to be on duty in a few days.

Rev. H. B. Cockrill, a recent transfer from the Kentucky conference to Montana, was an old schoolmate of ours at Vanderbilt University. We have noticed his career since leaving school, in the itinerancy, and that he has been doing successful work in Kentucky. We give him a hearty welcome to our ranks, and hope he may be equally successful in preaching the gospel in the Rocky Mountains. He is appointed to the Townsend circuit.

Bro. H. B. Cockrill stopped over in Helena en route to his work, and preached for our Grand Street congregation Sept. 30th, to the delight of those who heard him. Pastor Britt's pulpit has had variety in men, manner and matter during his absence. We trust there was harmony in it all.

Rev. J. B. Parnall, a recent transfer from the Missouri Conference to Montana, arrived Sept. 29th, and began his work by preaching twice the next day, Sept. 30th, in Stevensville, his home for the Conference year. We rejoice to know that this important work has been so readily supplied with an active vigorous man.

Rev. J. H. Johnson, of the Memphis conference, recently transferred to the Montana conference, comes to us highly recommended by his brethren. Just such men we need—those who are wanted where they are well known. No doubt our brethren in the Bozeman district are greatly rejoiced that their ranks are filling up so rapidly. We rejoice with them.

Rev. J. B. Parnall has arrived and commenced work on Stevensville charge. Brother Parnall is a married man, comes from the grand old Missouri conference, brings with him the experience of a number of years in the ministry in that field, where he has been successful and gained the confidence and esteem of his brethren. We bid him and his excellent wife a cordial welcome to our fair mountain land and wish them the greatest possible success in their loved employ.

The Way Dr. Godbey Looks at It.

"The Montana Methodist promises to be a sprightly and interesting paper. It ought to be supported by subscriptions from all the old conferences. It brings news from a mission field; its prompt support will be a good contribution to the missionary cause."—South Western Methodist.

A Remarkable Golden Wedding.

At Tallmadge, Ohio, Sept. 18, 1888, occurred the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. F. Berger. It was a time never to be forgotten by those who were present. Mr. and Mrs. Berger are among our oldest and most respected citizens. They are known and honored by a multitude of friends far and near. For some time past the children had been planning for a family reunion on this occasion. So on the above named date, after a long separation, the entire family, without a missing one, gathered at the old homestead. There were present besides the eight children and eight of the twelve living grandchildren, the wives of two of the sons and the husbands of three of the daughters; also Mr. Gledhill, pastor of the Methodist church in Tallmadge, with his wife; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Parmlee, of Tallmadge, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Jackson, of Akron. The bride's sister, who was present at the first wedding, was present, and also a neice from Cleveland. The exercises of the occasion began about 11 o'clock with song, prayer and scripture readings. After this there followed addresses by Rev. Mr. Gledhill, the pastor, Rev. W. M. Britt, one of the sons-in-law, whose home is in Helena, Montana, and Frederick, the oldest son, whose home is in Crestline, Ohio.

In Mr. Britt's remarks he compared the present anniversary with the wedding day fifty years ago, and noted the more substantial joy of the memory of a life well spent with the end accomplished as compared with the uncertain hopes and prospects connected with its beginning. He dwelt upon the Christian influence of the early home life and the debt of gratitude due the parents from the children.

After an appropriate song Dr. F. C. Berger, the oldest son, proposed that they form the circle as they were of old accustomed to, for family worship. There they were, father, mother and the eight children. In the whole half century death had not once entered the circle. It was "a time for memory and for tears," though only tears of gratitude. It was easy to be eloquent, and the son, in well chosen remarks full of affectionate pathos, expressed to the parents the thanks of all the children for their careful Christian training, and then in behalf of all he presented to them on a platter ten gold half eagles. The scene was inexpressibly affecting. Father and Mother Berger could only respond with tears of joy and expressions of benediction upon the happy group before them. The emotions of all found expression in the hymn, "God be with you till we meet again."

A recess was then taken in order to partake of the bountiful feast provided for the occasion. The repast was concluded by toasts and responses.

Mr. Andrew Jackson, of Akron, responded to the toast, "The Bride and Groom," in a very happy manner, though professing not to be much of a speech maker. His remarks were heartily applauded.

Mr. Charles Parmlee, of Tallmadge, responded to "The Present Occasion." As he looked at the unbroken circle and spoke of the goodness of God to this family, he thought of other homes with vacant chairs and empty cradles where the "Reaper whose name is Death had cut the flowers for the Lord of Paradise," and his emotion almost overcame him.

Mr. John Anderson, of Cleveland, distinguished himself by a speech in response to the toast, "Oh, Why Did I Get Married?"

Dinner over and some time spent in a general chat, the company assembled in the parlor again to witness the children's exercises. They began with the baptism of the youngest grandchild, the infant son of Wm. H. Berger, of Chicago. He was christened William Alvin. Rev. Mr. Britt performed the baptismal rite. The other grandchildren then each responded with a recitation or song. In the evening many of the neighbors and friends in Tallmadge came in to congratulate the aged bride and groom, and to see once more the faces of the children who had come up to the family reunion. It was indeed a rare day, one that will always be a bright spot in the memory of everyone present.—Akron (Ohio) Beacon.

One may measure his own growth by looking back upon his own record of his likes and dislikes, his thoughts and convictions, his moods and humors. Have you an old scrap-book of your own making? Have you a once favorite volume which five, ten, twenty, forty years ago you pencil-marked? How many passages that pleased you then please you now? How many statements that you disagreed with then do you agree with now? How many that you agreed to then do you agree to now? How many of those scraps that you thought worth pasting in a book seem puerile and as so much rubbish now? Few of us there are who have not some such record of our past selves; and there are few of us who are not half ashamed of our own measure as thus disclosed. In the light of such revelations of one's past self to his present self, it would seem that one would have no room for over self-confidence, lest the future should pass like judgment upon the present shall have become the past.—Sunday School Times.

The attention of the preachers and official members of the Helena District is called to the amounts apportioned to the different charges by the district stewards for the various collections ordered by the discipline. Let plans be devised for raising these collections early in the year, and let each preacher see that these amounts are raised in full. It is painful to see our conference anniversaries burdened with the heavy collections that have to be made to make up the deficits reported by many of our preachers and stewards every year. It is often the case that those who tax themselves heavily to pay their assessments on their charges go to conference and then have to go deep into their pockets to pay what might have been raised if other brethren had done their duty. A hint to the wise is sufficient. Brother, see that you are not the delinquent this year.

Brethren of the Montana conference, let us all unite in work and prayer for a general revival thoughout our bounds this year. Let us catch the fire that burned in the heart of John Knox when he cried to the Lord "Give me Scotlaud or I die." The machinery of Methodism is adjusted with a view to revivals. Without them we become but as sounding brass and tinkling cymbal. Even our material progress will amount to but little unless we have revivals. They are needed in every pastoral charge, and in every community. They will reconcile the pastor to his charge and the people to their pastor, heal neighborhood feuds, bring men and women to the Lord Jesus Christ and build them up in the faith. Let the prayer of every soul be "Oh, Lord, revive Thy work," and let the preachers unite and assist each other in holding revival meetings.

Since Brother Stanley's return he has held the quarterly conferences of Boulder, Helena circuit and Butte charges. Urgent duties limited his stay at those places for the present, and hastened him to Stevensville to assist the new preacher there in starting upon his work. He will return in a short time and spend more time with the brethren on this side the moudtains. He reports a most delightful and profitable quarterly meeting service last Saturday and Sunday with Brother Clark at Alhambra. It was a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. The class meeting was like the olden times, and the sacremental service a scene that angels would delight to witness. There was a deep interest among the unconverted. Brother Clark, assisted by Brother Finley, continued the meeting with fine prospects for success.

Brother Stanley has returned from his tour of visitation among the conferences east. He was present at the sessions of the Western Conference at Kansas City, Kansas, the Missouri, at Gallatin, Mo., and the Kentucky, at Nicolasville, Ky. He also attended a called session of the Board of Church Extension, at Louisville, besides meeting with a number of our leading men from various other conferences in our church. He met with a cordial welcome wherever he went, and reports a decidedly increasing interest among the preachers and people there concerning the church in the west, and in Montana particularly. As evidence of this he brings one hundred and twenty new subscribers to the MONTANA METHODIST, with the promise of more, a donation of $600 by the General Board of Church Extension, and a loan of $400 to our church at Deer Lodge, and three new preachers, with the promise of others as soon as we are prepared to take care of them. A number of promising young men have signified their willingness to transfer to the Montana Conference at no distant day. More earnest prayers are being offered up in our behalf than ever before. This should encourage us and stir us to greater activity. The Church will expect something of us. Let her not be disappointed. Let us keep well to the old landmarks in doctrine, experience and practice, be sure that we have the divine presence, work and pray for and expect revivals of religion in every charge, and we shall succeed gloriously.

The Love of Christ.

Love, love on earth appears;
The wretched throng his way;
He heareth all their griefs,
And wipes their tears away,
Soft and sweet their strains should be,
Savior when I sing to thee.

"I die for thee," he said.
Behold the cross arise,
And lo! he bows his head,
He bows his head and dies.
Soft, my harp, thy breathings be,
Let me weep on Calvary.

Now in the grave he's laid,
In deaths funeral gloom;
Stern watchman in the shade,
And seal upon the tomb.
Hush'd my harp, thy breathings be,
Christ is sleeping there for thee.

The angel cometh at dawn,
The stone is rolled away,
The living dead is gone,
And bursts eternal day.
Loud, loud the strains should be,
Jesus conquers death for me.

He lives! again he lives,
I hear the voice of love;
He comes to soothe our fears,
And draws my soul above,
Joyful now the strain should be,
When I sing of Calvary.

A Good Beginning.

ANACONDA, Oct. 10, 1888.

We closed a two week's series of services last Friday night, resulting in one conversion, two additions to the church, and eight sinners requesting the prayers of the Church—several of the sinners being men of mature life. We had old-time shouting and hand-shaking. At one time all the Christians in the house were on their feet, rejoicing and praising God. Quite a novel feature of this meeting was that prayer and praise were offered in two different languages. A young woman, a Swede, happy in a Savior's love, offered a prayer of thanksgiving in her own native tongue, which produced a powerful impression. We have had our Pentecost, and some of us are yet "tarrying until we be endowed with more power from on high." Everything considered, I have never seen a better meeting. My constant prayer is, "O, Lord, revive Thy work!" Before the blessing came, I had a measure of that agony of soul-desire that always precedes the gift of the Holy Ghost. O, my dear brother, I want the afflatus of the Holy Ghost for my peculiar work here in this western country, whose entire life is estranged from God. Nothing but the Holy Ghost can do the work to be done for our people, and Southern Methodism is challenged by the Lord Almighty to the inspiring work. In the name and power of the Cross, and in the interest of souls, let us humbly accept, and take the West for God. I expect to renew my meeting when the October moon shall have fully begun to wax, and my purpose is to continue as long as sinners express their desires for my services. Pray constantly for your poor brother, whose only purpose in life is to save sinners. S. W. BARBEE.

I Know Where He is Going.

When Philip Henry, the father of the celebrated commentator, sought the only daughter and heiress of Mr. Mathews in marriage, an objection was made by her father, who admitted that he was a gentleman, a scholar, and an excellent preacher; but he was a stranger; and "they did not even know where he came from." "True," said the daughter, who had well weighed the excellent qualities and graces of the stranger, "but I know where he is going, and I should like to go with him;" and they walked life's pilgrimage together. How honored would that reluctant father have been could he have foreseen that his daughter would become the mother of Matthew Henry! And how different would the world's estimate of men if they were judged less by their origin and more by their destiny! There is one pride of family highly commendable; there is another pride of family ineffably contemptible.—Anonymous.

Theatre Going.

You wish a deliverance from me on the matter of theatres, etc. I give it freely, fully. The nearest road to the Devil that I know of is through the theatre, whether ancient or modern. It gives impressiveness and attraction to every species of villainy; it corrupts the family and the Government. This is especially true of the modern drama and the opera. —Bishop Keener, in Raleigh Adv.

EDITORIAL.

More About Transfers to the West.

We have, in a former issue of the paper, made some statements on the negative side of this all important question. Some further considerations may not be out of place on the positive side, or, as to the kind of men we want and must have in order for our work to advance.

First, we want men of solid piety and good common sense. Men of loose religious convictions and inconsistency of life may possibiy get along when surrounded by strong Christian influence in large memberships, but out here a minister should, if necessary, be able to stand firm though he have no moral and religious support. Discretion, too, in a leader of the people here, is quite necessary. We haven't strong official boards of Godly men in every appointment in the West to counteract unwise statements or actions, but in many places the preacher is almost the sole representative of the church.

Second, we want men of pulpit and administrative ability. The average ability required of the ministry in the West is far in advance of that in the strongholds of the church in the states East.

Most of the church people in this country have been accustomed to the very best pulpit ministrations in the East and South, and demand it here. Our stations, to instance, in the Montana conference, have in them people from New York, Boston, Chicago, Phildelphia, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Louisville, Kansas City, St. Joe, &c., and many smaller cities where first-class men have been stationed. Our idea has always been that our strongest men in our strong conferences should go to the weak places, and be supported, if necessary, with missionary aid.

So, we in conclusion say, we have grand resources in the West, here will soon be the balance of power, and we need strong men to develop these resources and control this power for Protestant Christianity. Some charges in the West that pay the paltry sum of four, five, six and eight hundred dollars, if properly manned, and thereby developed, would pay first class salaries. Let us have true and strong men, men of God, and our cause will move grandly on.

Hear us, if you please. We want men of solid piety, good common sense, discreet, first-class pulpit and administrative ability to plant Methodism in the West. Let the church pray that laborers may be sent into the harvest.

"All Republicans

In Centerville are requested to assemble on Thursday, Oct. 4th, at 8 p. m., at the M. E. Church, for the purpose of organizing a Carter republican club.

By order of
CENTERVILLE REPUBLICANS."

In answer to this call we see in Friday's paper that "fifty representative Englishmen of Centerville assembled in the M. E. Church to organize, etc."

Concerning the close of the meeting, in which there were several political speeches, the Inter-Mountain says, "Three rousing cheers were proposed for Carter, and given with unbounded enthusiasm. The meeting then adjourned, to meet in the M. E. Church next Tuesday."

In the dedication service of our non-political church we have the following words: "We present to You this house, to be set apart from all unhallowed or common uses, for the worship of Almighty God." This is why the M. E. Church South is needed in this country, and it is for the above-named purpose, as shown in our dedication service, that we are building churches all over this land.

Some one has figured it out that if the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church had contributed per capita as much for missions as her ministers did, instead of one million there would have been seventeen millions raised. Why can't the membership contribute as much as the ministers? Answer: They have not as much of the grace of liberality. Why have they not as much of that grace? Answer: because they don't want it! That's the whole of it.

The interest shown in the temperance convention now being held in Bozeman, Montana, evinces the fact that our territory falls in line with the great question of reform. The METHODIST may be relied on as a wide awake helper in this important matter. She is a representative of a church fully committed on this subject.

We purpose in our next issue an article on the relation of the Church of England to Methodism, through the Wesleys, Whitefield, Dr. Coke and others, for the benefit of some of our Montana patrons.

The supreme court of Utah has entered a final judgment in the case of the United States against the Mormon Church. It is said the decree entered is a complete triumph for the government. It declares the corporation of the church dissolved, and ascertains that the voluntary religious sect now in existence has no right to tae corporate property, except the Temple Block. And thus it comes to pass that what is not of God "cometh to nought." May the Temple Block go too.

We, as editors of the MONTANA METHODIST, look at the matter somewhat like many of our worthy contemporaries who have a great deal more experience—"not to push at every red rag" hung out by our neighbors. When the purity and integrity of our church is assailed, then we will bare our arms.

Brethren, while the land is rife with zealous politicians and stirred with campaign meetings and speeches, is it not highly important that we be earnest about the 'election of grace'? Let us also be ready to do our special work for the souls of men.

Dear reader, you may be a lay member of the church. How do you feel about seeing a goodly number of your neighbors and friends converted to God? Would you be surprised next Sabbath morning or evening to see sinners praying for mercy, and Christians praising God for joy?

A preacher need not think that building a church, or parsonage is inconsistent with Holy Ghost gospel preaching and the conversion of souls. Is it not a matter of common observation, that great spiritual health, prepares us for material growth? A grand revival of religion of the genuine type is a sure pledge to success to all lines of church work.

Among the territorial nominees for important public office are some of our Methodist laymen. May we say brethren, in all things, be loyal to God? You will doubtless have many temptations.

Another reason why we will be glad to see Christmas come, is that Dr. Barbee promises us the new hymn book at that time. Oh, how we have wished for it!

We are glad to note that some of our laborers are beginning with the season to sing the "harvest song." May many souls be gathered in.

A report has been submitted to the school trustees which shows the total enrollment in the public schools of Butte and vicinity to be 1,589.

Some of the New England states are ahead of Montana in having an October snow.

Fishing for Husbands.

Recently there was a gathering of young married couples in Louisville, and the conversation turned on the manner in which the wives had secured their husbands. One had paved the way to the altar by making a face at the fated one because she thought he had stared at her impudently. He admired her mettle, and sought an introduction. Another made the acquaintance of the man who is now her husband by accidently sousing him with a pan of dish water, which she tossed out of the kitchen window into an alley just in time to catch him as he was passing. The one that was, however, voted to be the most novel was the experience of a young man connected with the municipal government. The latter was in the habit of passing, on his way home, the residence of the young lady who is now his better half, and one evening, out of a spirit of mischief, she "accidentally on purpose turned the hose on him." He faced about, blushed violently, and stammered a "thank you" in response to her roguish smile, and from that moment he knew he was fated.—Chicago Herald.

Some Strange Figures --- Why Not Do It Right?

Have you read the "Forty-second Annual Report of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South?" Some things contained therein are strange, others suggestive. For instance, when the figures show that the four Conferences paying the largest amounts per capita of membership are young mission Conferences, the exhibit is very gratifying, and suggests to the older Conferences to "raise" their assessments. The China Mission Conference paid last year the largest amount, $1·27, and the Montana Conference paid the fourth largest amount, 97 cents. The Los Angeles paid $1,22, and the German Mission, $1.28. These figures, when considered in comparison, give the four mission Conferences in question reason to be proud of their distinction; but do they not likewise suggest to the Conferences "at home" that there is something wrong there?

The Tennessee Conference, the "Old Jerusalem," paid only 37 cents per capita of membership, or only a fraction more than one-third as much as the Montana Conference. The Tennessee Conference has a membership of 56,-829; and had she paid as much per capita as the Montana Conference—and every one knows she could have paid more—she would have contributed to missions last year $55,124.13, instead of $21,505.76, the amount she did contribute. What a lesson these figures teach!

The whole amount paid for missions by all the Conferences was $327,011.15. The total membership was 1,107,447. Now had each of the Conferences paid as much per capita of membership as did the Montana Conference, the sum raised for missions last year would have been $1,074,-223.59, in the place of $27,011.15—a gain of $747,212.44. This, on the basis of the recent appointment of the Parent Board, would have given the Montana Conference for the current year $9,000 instead of $3,000, as is the case. Is there not a wrong somewhere? And who is responsible?

And look at this. The Montana Conference, having a membership of 307, is assessed for missions for the current year $352—that is $1.40 per capita of her membership; while the Tennessee Conference, having a membership of 56,829, is assessed $19,600—that is 34 cents per capita of the membership. Thus, while the old, rich, influential Tennessee Conference—the "mother of us all"—is assessed for missions 34 cents, the young, poor, neglected, "less than the least" Montana Conference is assessed 140 cents. Or, while the Tennessee Conference is expected to pay 3 cents per member less this year than she did last, the Montana Conference is expected to pay 43 cents more. Will some member of the Board rise and explain? "Why not do it right?"

S. W. BARBER.

ANACONDA, Montana.

Growth.

Last year the charges of the Columbia Conference, including three districts, were twenty-seven. This year there are forty-one. Last year there were twenty charges to whom ministers were sent. This year there are thirty-three. Eight charges are left to be supplied; the preachers for most of these are in sight. When all are filled the working force will be double what it was last year. The net increase in membership was not very great, though there was some, but this want of large results was accounted for on principles not discouraging to the present workers. This increase has been made with but little more missionary money than was appropriated last year, and the appropriations while not so large as we could wish in some cases, are, nevertheless, respectable, and we start out on another year of hard work with bright hopes.—Dr. Atkins in the Pacific Methodist.

Children's Hymns.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY YEARS OLD. GOOD FOR THE YEAR 1888.

Idle men and boys are found
Standing on the Devil's ground;
He will find them work to do,
He will pay their wages, too.

Are they not of wisdom void,
Those who saunter unemployed?
Young or old, who fondly play
Their important time away?

What a bold and foolish lie
When we hear a trifler cry,
"I no other business have."
Has he not a soul to save?

ANOTHER WITH A MORAL HANGING THEREON.

Let children that would fear the Lord
Hear what their teachers say;
With reverence meet their parents' word,
And with delight obey.

Have you not heard what dreadful plagues
Are threatened by the Lord
To him that breaks his father's law
Or mocks his mother's word?

What heavy guilt upon him lies!
How cursed is his name!
The ravens shall pick out his eyes,
And eagles eat the same.

But those who worship God, and give
Their pnrents honor due,
Here on this earth they long shall live,
And live hereafter, too.

More About "The House That Jack Built."

DEAR CHILDREN. — Having read what Aunt Bess told you about "The House that Jack Built," I thought perhaps you would be interested to hear what a little girl has to say about her visit to Salt Lake City, Denver, &c., on her way to Kansas City, Mo., with her uncle and aunt.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 1, '88.

DEAR ONES AT HOME.—"We arrived here last night on the 5 o'clock train, and now I am going to try and write a long letter for once in my life. I will begin at the beginning and tell about every day. We left Dillon on the 2 o'clock train and reached Pocatello in the night, where we changed cars and went to bed. (She was born in Montana and had never been on the cars before this trip.) I slept in an upper berth and did not awake once in the night. We reached Salt Lake City Sunday afternoon and rested until Monday afternoon, when Uncle Mac hired a carriage and we went all over the city, and saw everything there was to see, from the Mormon tabernacle to the crazy man's cottage, or "The House that Jack Built," as it is called. It is owned and was built by a Swede that came to Salt Lake City in an early day. Eight years ago he had this house built and furnished, and sent to Sweden for his bride, who, no doubt had been awaiting the invitation to come. She started, but the ship was wrecked and she was drowned. When he heard of her death he went crazy, and he still thinks she is coming and has expected her every day for eight years. The front of the house is a perfect confusion of images, fringe, lace, red stuff, gilt, etc. Of course these decorations he has put on since he lost his mind. He says he is keeping it ready for his wife's coming. It is pointed out to strangers as one of the sights of Salt Lake City. Poor man, I am so sorry for him. Surely he could not have known anything of the mansions that Jesus has gone to prepare for those who love him.

We went through the tabernacle and Assembly Hall, and all I can say is that they are truly wonderful and magnificent. Words cannot describe the beautiful gardens and orchards. (You know I never saw an orchard before.) Boys, just imagine—if you can—that you are walking through a garden with pear, peach, plum and apple trees all around you, where you can help yourself to all you want. That is just the way I was fixed last Monday afternoon. We left Salt Lake Tuesday noon and reached Denver Wednesday night, having passed through the Grand Canyon of the Arkansas river. It was magnificently grand, but there were so many turns that it made me sick, and I was dreadfully sick I assure you. We stayed in Denver until Thursday night and had a delightful time.

Our next stop was here in Kansas City. Uncle Mac and Aunt Belle have a lovely home. I have a delightful room, and really everything is just splendid. I fell in love with aunt Fanny the first thing. School begins the seventeenth. I was disappointed this morning because I did not get a letter. You must write often or I will get homesick. All of you please write to your loving child and sister." GRACE.

Sin and Its Consequences.

BY MRS. E. M. APPLEBURY.

When darkness brooded like a pall of gloom, and chaos reigned amidst the impenetrable and voiceless solitude of a pre-historic creation, the Spirit of God, possessing the eternal and inherent attribute of creative power, spoke to the inert mass, and imparted a portion of his divine and moving energy.

At the command of omnipotence, the orb of day emerged from chaotic and solemn inertia, and in obedience to Jehovah's mandate, "Let there be light," diffused the effulgence of his beams athwart the measureless ocean of space; still, throughout the vast, unpeopled realms, there reigned an unbroken solitude, deep, solemn, sombre, which, as yet, echoed no sound save the voice of Deity.

Then did the command go forth again, and from the shapeless mass resting under the omniscient eye, a system of worlds is evolved. The earth came forth from the hands of it's architect, not a vast plain, but a sphere, indented with mountains, valleys, lakes and plains, with the radience of the new-born sun lending to the heights their splendor, and to the vales the charm of shade and perspective.

Let us behold with the eye of intuition, aided by sacred history, the grandeur and glory of the new creation.

Out of these voiceless depths there emerged, at Jehovah's word, countless worlds, all moving in their appointed order around one vast centre—the sun. Then the "morning stars sang together" a song of jubilee in honor of Creation's birth, and the sound echoed down the vaulted arches of illumined and radiant space.

Light, earth, water, fishes, fowls and beasts of every kind attested the power of creative energy, and last, man, the crowning act and central figure in the world's creation, made in the fullness of God's power, in the Divine image, came forth, vested by his creator with the high perogative of absolute rulership over all created beings.

Above him, like a giant in his might, arose the fountain of incandescent light, swinging in grandeur like a lamp hung from the frescoed dome of heaven; around him are scattered on every side the many tokens of the Creator's love and benificence; beside him flow crystal waters, at whose brimming font he may quaff delicious nectars, as yet unimpregnated with impurities. Tall trees, laden with beautiful foliage, and bending with delicious fruit, grow on every side; the air is rife with aroma from fruits and flowers, and a chorus of melody ascends to the Divine presence, from birds of wondrous plumage, and with music's soothing tones charms this lordly autocrat, who, yet unsated, listens, wonders, and adores creative power.

Alas, the scene too quickly changes; With all the splendid magnificence and power of his newly acquired domain, there are permitted to enter his heart the elements of discontent, which were to involve him in possible and dire calamity.

Notwithstanding that he was surrounded by all things essential to his happiness, the tempter came, and by subtle and insinuating arts, won him from allegiance to Divine authority.

From this Paradise, or Eden, where he reposed in peace, he was driven by the mandate of the offended Deity, and gathering about him a mantle improvised from nature's loom, he went forth with the curse of sin upon his soul, to win from Earth his bread.

Oh, direful hour of man's temptation!

She, whom heaven bestowed to share his joys, and with him learn, from nature's manifold and wondrous sources of delight, the just and loyal tribute due to God alone, proved recreant first, and dared with sacrilegeous hand to touch the one forbidden tree; she plucked and ate, and Adam sharing in her sin, lo! their birthright of innocence is forfeited, and man, "created a little lower than the angels," has merited and tasted the bitter fruits of disobedience.

Disposing of the Surplus.

While our politicians are considering what shall be done with the surplus in the treasure chests of our government, the Pope of Rome discovers a surplus of pious works in the treasuries of the church, and resolves to use them to purchase release of souls in purgatory. The Catholic World, of this city (St. Louis), in its issue of September 29th, contains the following language:

"Our Holy Father, Leo XIII, on to-morrow crowns the gifts and blessings of his sacerdotal Jubilee by placing the treasures of the Church at the disposal of the souls of Purgatory."

If we know what it costs to get to heaven the Catholic church will have enough to do to furnish each one of her living members a through ticket, and his Holiness ought to be very sure that this be done before he takes the risk of squandering the church's treasures in a "wild-cat" speculation. We commend to our Catholic friends the prudence of the wise virgins who refused to divide their oil with the foolish, saying "not so; lest there be not enough for us and you."

But if, indeed, the church has a surplus of good works above her current needs in her treasury, it seems to us that it would be a wiser policy to use it to save souls from getting into purgatory than in trying to pay them out when once they are in. It certainly indicates a very bungling management of the interests of the church by his Holiness to allow his children to get into purgatory while there is an available surplus in the treasury to pay their way to heaven. —North-Western Methodist.

The Untrodden Way.

There is one untrodden path before us. God is training us—training us for the crossing. The Jordan of death is before us, as this river lay between the Israelites and Canaan. The long journey prepared them for the unknown way. So we live in the world, to be trained and prepared for the mysteries to come. In Athens, we are told, there were two temples; one was the temple of honor. To reach the latter, one had to go through the temple of virtue. Before we can cross this last river, to enter heaven, we must go through the work of preparation. No possible entrance without it. Just as the Israelites camped on the bank of the Jordan, so did Thomas Payson, dying in the prime of life, lay for quite a time in the land of Beulah, just in sight of the celestial city. The writer tells us one said to him, "Do you feel reconciled?" "O, that is too cold," he replied; "I rejoice, I triumph! and this happiness will endure as long as God Himself, for it consists in admiring and adoring Him." Hitherto I have viewed God as a fixed star, bright, indeed, but often intercepted by clouds; but now He is coming nearer and nearer, and spreads into a sun so vast and glorious that the sight is dazzling for flesh and blood to sustain, I see, I see clearly that all these same glorious and dazzling perfections which now serve to kindle my affections in to a flame, and to melt down my soul into the same blessed image, would burn and scorch me like a consuming fire if I were an impenitent sinner.—Rev. John Mathews.

A gentleman of considerable reading was censuring the excitement which attended the religious exercises during a revival. The penitents cried aloud for mercy; some of the converts shouted aloud for joy. Parents rejoiced with their children who had found the Savior. All this excitement offended the man of refinement and good taste. He approved of religion, he said, when it was kept within the bounds of reason; but this excitement, he affirmed, was strongly tinged with fanaticism. A religious friend asked him if he remembered the scene when the herald of Titus proclaimed the freedom of the Grecians. The people crowded around him in their eagerness until the herald's life was endangered. It was not until the agreement was read the second time that the Greeks comprehended the reality and extent of their deliverance. And then they shouted for joy, making the heavens ring as they cried: "A Savior; a Savior;" and all night long they surrounded the tent of Titus extolling him as a God who had delivered them. If that people, said the Christian friend, proclaimed with shouts their deliverance from temporary bonds, why should not these converts rejoice when they realize that the Crucified One is indeed their deliverer from the bonds of sin, and when they experience that joy which the pledge of a title to a blessed immortality confers? "The wonder," he continued, "is that you, my friend, and so many others, can be unmoved when they are confronted with the possibility of forfeiting forever the great salvation God has provided for them."—Selected.

Marching on to Zion, over hill and plain,
Our scattered ranks we're trying to rally once again,
Now do not be discouraged, though others may oppose,
The God of Truth shall lead us, to put to rout our foes.
Arise in might with this true blade,
No quarter give to sin,
Armed by faith and courage our marching we begin.

Many from South, from East, from West,
Encouraged, join our ranks,
They glad obey our Captain and know His behest,
Heaven's citadel to capture and offer praise and thanks.
Of loyal tribute to its King,
Demanding that each subject bring
Into the treasures of the Lord
Some true memorial of His word—
To try our faith, our love to test.

Express Your Thankfulness.

An interesting anecdote is related of King Alphonso X, surnamed "the Wise," who succeded to the throne of Leon and Castile in 1252. On learning that his pages neglected to ask Divine blessing before partaking of their daily meals, he was deeply grieved and sought diligently to find the best and most impressive way to point out to them the evil of this omission.

At length succeeded in finding a plan, he invited the pages of his court to dine with him.

A bountiful repast was spread, and when they were all assembled around the table the king gave a signal that all was in readiness for them to begin. The all enjoyed the rich feast, but no one remembered to ask God's blessing on his food. What transpired at this memorial meal? Unexpectedly there entered a poor, ragged beggar who uncermoniously seated himself at the royal table, and ate and drank, undisturbed, to his heart's content. Surpise and astonishment were depicted on every countenance. The pages looking first at the king, then gazed upon the audacious intruder, expecting momentarily that his majesty would give orders to have him removed from the table. Alphonso, however, kept silence, while the beggar, unabashed by the presence of royalty, ate all he desired.

When his hunger and thirst were appeased he rose, and without a word of thanks departed from the palace.

"What a despicable mean fellow!" cried the boys. Calmly the good king rose, and with much earnestness, said, "Boys, bolder and more audacious than this beggar have you all been. Every day you sit down to a table supplied by the bounty of your heavenly Father, yet you ask not His blessing, and leave it without expressing to Him your gratitude. Yes, each and all of you should be heartily ashamed of your conduct, which is far worse than was this poor beggar's." — Yugend Freund.

The Vanderbilt Missionary Brotherhood.

It gladdens our hearts in the field to see such movements as this in our great seats of learning. Already the ties that bind us to the Vanderbilt are strong. In September, 1886, this institution had her first representative in mission work in Montana. Now she has three. We would be very glad to have the most intimate relations existing between the Brotherhood at Vanderbilt and her representatives in this part of the great mission field. Is not Methodism repeating itself? She was born in a college. Now she has more of true, genuine aggressive church work in colleges than she has ever had. May all the learning, and all the enterprises of our colleges, be consecrated to God for His glory.

Retrogression.

In one of our exchanges we read: "Dr. Arnold, of Rugby, was broad in his religious opinions. His son, the late Matthew Arnold, was a cultured pagan. On the death of a child, he was found reading for consolation a stoic writer, and his son is a dude, gambler and spendthrift." If this is the fruit borne on a free-thinking or so-called liberal tree, we want none of it in ours. We would have grand state work in a few generations with this character of progress(?).

Arrangements are being made in Butte for a county Sunday School convention, to organize all the schools in Silver Bow county. Nov. 13th is the date and the M. E. Church South is the place for holding it.

Personals.

It is said by a visiting brother to Bozeman station, that "Rev. R. F. Jarvis is successfully filling the Bozeman charge. He received two members into the church the fifth Sabbath in September.

Rev. John H. Johnson, of McKenzie, Tenn., writes that he will reach his work on the Bozeman circuit by Nov. 10th.

Arrangements have been made for Rev. B. E. H. Warren to preach at White Hall monthly the remainder of the year.

Rev. Wm. M. Britt, our associate, has been in bed sick with a slow, treacherous case of pneumonia, for about three weeks. He is not now considered dangerously ill, but has been quite enfeebled by the protracted case. Sister Britt, his devoted wife, does not look the stronger from the wakeful hours of tender watching at his bedside.

We notice in the appointments of the Pacific Conference as given in the Pacific Methodist there are sixty-five regular traveling preachers, a number of supplies, and several men transferred to the Columbia Conference. The West is being manned.

Rev. Geo. B. Winton, one of the editors of the Pacific Methodist published at Santa Rosa, Cal., has been transferred from the Pacific Conference to the Central Mexican Conference.

Among other good things in the Texas Christian Advocate of Oct. 4, is a selection written by Dr. W. F. Whitlock, on "The Preachable Doctrines of Methodism." A good thing for preachers to read and practice too.

The Arkansas Methodist, having a circulation of 10,500, comes to us this week as an exchange. Editor Bennett, we would judge, is keeping the paper up to the mark of the late, versatile, well-known Dr. Winfield, his predecessor.

The Colorado Methodist has changed its name to the Rocky Mountain Methodist, with Rev. Boone Keeton, editor, and Rev. Geo. Needham, business manager. With new name, new dress, new editor and new management it can but be a very newsy paper. It is certainly a very attractive sheet and we hope to have it on our table every two weeks, being a semi-monthly at $1.00 a year, 50 cents to preachers.

Do you know that there is not another religious paper of as neat mechanical get up in Montana for the small price of $1.00 a year? We are not ashamed to place this paper in every first-class news store in the Territory for examination. Let every subscriber send in his dollar, for that is the price in advance.

International Cyclopedia.

We have for some time been using the International Cyclopedia, published by Dodd, Mead & Co., and sold by subscription in Montana by Mrs. S. R. Herndon, of Virginia City. We believe it ranks with the very best in the land. For mechanical neatness, good print, full treatment on all subjects for general information, for bulk, in fact in every respect, we deem it the most desirable of any that we have been privileged to examine. We heartily commend it to everyone wishing a first-class cyclopedia.

It seems that the endowment of the Pacific Methodist College, an institution of learning belonging to the M. E. Church, South, and located in Santa Rosa, Cal., has become a very live question among the patronizing conferences. Very decided action was recently taken at the Pacific conference, where the fire already burning, was given new glow under the strong arguments and fervent appeals of our wide-awake Bishop Galloway. We rejoice to note such movement. May it prosper abundantly. We hope to see much more of our western resources put into our religious educational institutions in Colorado, California, Oregon, Washington and Montana. We wonder how our agent, appointed at the recent session of the Montana conference, is getting on.

There are twenty-five to thirty stationed preachers in the Los Angeles conference, M. E. Church, South, five or six charges filled by supplies, and several to be supplied. The good work goes on in the West. We delight in the onward march of the Lord's hosts.

The Editor Camping.

By reason of miscarriage in the mails a break has been made concerning our trip to the National Park. We resume, hoping that what we might say will prove of interest to many of our readers who have never been to this wonderfully strange land.

Aug. 30.—In our diary of this date we find "We rose at 5:30 a. m., made ready and left camp about 9 o'clock. Be it remembered we are still in Idaho. We passed up the canyon, through some very thick timber. One place we considered very fine for a stock ranch, which was untaken. Timber, water, and splendid grass, which make the chief constituents. By 10:30 we came to the top of the range, the dividing line between Idado and Montana. Our descent down the slope to the South Fork of the Madison River was quite rapid. Here we stopped about 11 a. m. and concluded to try our "luck" fishing.

Grasshoppers were the first thing in demand, and certainly they were almost as hard to catch as the fish. A good mess of fish was provided, however, and we ate them with a relish.

At 3:30 p.m. we left our nooning place with eight miles before us to reach what we supposed was River Side. We were in camp about 5:30 p. m. Water was very inconvenient. We hurried through for an early rise next morning.

Aug. 31.—We were off by 7 o'clock this morning. Reached River Side about 8 a. m. Here is the military post and entrance to the Park. A slight halt was made with the expectation that we would be examined for arms. The simple question by a polite government official was readily answered, assuring him that the "Weapons of our warfare were not carnal."

Now for a climb up the mountain, a distance of five miles. We reached the summit about 10 o'clock, warm, dusty, tired and thirsty. Having rested our team, as well as ourselves, for we walked up the mountain, we resumed our journey. Just then we discovered that Mary had lost her hat. This reminded Miss Fannie Brown to see that her's was safe, where it had been tied in the top of the wagon, and lo, she too was hatless. We traveled on a distance farther and passed by Mary's Lake, a very pretty body of deep, clear water. Shortly after we discovered that the top of our provision box was gone; thus the mountain climb cost little Mary, Miss Brown and the provision box their tops. It is hardly necessary to tell you the box made the least "to do" about it. At 12:30 we drove down a long hill and camped in Lower Geyser Basin. Here we began our work of wonder. Dinner over, we made a short stay before leaving for better observations, about three or four miles from the point of camping.

The large boiling springs, with their peculiar deposits and varied formations about the edges, afforded us much to admire and talk about. There are many of these springs. A drive of half a mile and we came to our first geysers—the Fountain, Constant Indicator, Impulsive, and Jet. We were told by a young soldier that we were twenty minutes late to see the Fountain "play." This is the misfortune of nearly all tourists, but as an introduction we thought the Constant did first-rate. One hundred yards southeast and we were in the midst of ever boiling "Paint Pots." Surely this great natural manufactory can supply you with a variety of colors, and to any amount if the government allowed.

After very courteous treatment by the young soldier, with further directions about the Midway Geyser Basin, three or four miles south, we drove on and reached this point by 6:30 o'clock and camped for the night quite close enough to see the greatest geyser in the Park erupt every two hours. This was the Excelsior, once known as Hell's Half Acre. About two years since this geyser began first to erupt. We were glad to be on the opposite side of Fire Hole River. The walk, talk and sights of the first half day prepared us for early retirement; not, however, before we had seen the Excelsior make a magnificent display of his power.

Sept. 1.—Bro. Kemper was the first to rise this morning. We were all anxious to get breakfast over so as to make thorough examination of the entire basin. While eating the Excelsior "went off." There must certainly be some guess work as to how high the water is thrown. The distance is safely stated when we say all the way from 200 to 300 feet. What a volume it does pour forth! Water, steam, rocks!

The objects of interest here are almost innumerable; among them are: The grand old Excelsior geyser, the Pool, the Morning Glory—which is a cold spring, most appropriately thus named—the Prismatic Lake, with many large springs. We dare not attempt descriptions. In connection with all the grandeur and all the beauty, and all the impressions of wonder, one leaves this awful place more convinced than ever that there may be a world in answer to that taught in the Bible. Of course we did not doubt it before seeing this. Hell can never have any of its beauty, but its likeness in heat is very probable. We remained at this place till 5 o'clock, and then drove six or seven miles south to the Upper Geyser Basin, where we were to camp over Sabbath in the midst of strange sights and sounds.

Missionary Progress.

Missionary progress of the M. E. Church, South, as shown by the following table from our Missionary Reporter, by Dr. John, our secretary:

"Figures, better and more concisely than words, will be able to tell the tale of progress. Appended is a table showing the condition of the work of the Board fifteen years ago and now. The treasurer confesses great pleasure in the growth which has marked these years of his connection with the Board.

The table shows that fifteen years ago almost all of our work was in the United States. It also shows that the extension of our foreign work has not decreased our work in the United States. The home work is not only more vigorously prosecuted, but much of the work then counted as mission work has now become self-supporting, so that the last figures do not give the full results of this work. Let the reader remember that this does not measure the extent of our home missions; each conference has its own missions within its own bounds, which exceed those under the care of the parent Board.

So far as my knowledge extends no other church in the land has made the same relative progress in the same time. Our Church has nothing comparable to it in any other fifteen years of our history; no other department of our church work equals this in comparative growth during these years. It is believed that the story told by these figures will be received with devout thanksgiving by the whole Church.

Sin of Neglect.

Let the extract below, from the Episcopal Methodist, be read and prayed over by all our readers:

"And we feel sure that this neglect begins at home. There is enough respect for public opinion to keep a man at least nominally devoted to the Church of his choice—at least, as far as public acts are concerned. He attends the Sabbath services with some regularity; he contributes to the church funds; he desires the welfare of the church, and speaks of it as his choice and preference; but, alas, he has no family altar; the voice of prayer is never heard in his home; the Bible is not studied, nor does he retire for pious meditation and secret prayer. Soon he neglects the class meeting and objects to it. Then the prayer meeting is gradually ignored, and at last excuses are prodigal for his neglect of public worship. All this time he is absorbed in his worldly affairs, and manifests a commendable energy in pushing them to greater prosperity. And with him time becomes more valuable than eternity. The sin of omission is strongly entrenched in his nature, and really he becomes spiritually dead. And among these people are found the complainers and disturbers of Zion. The church might be better off without them, but they are to be borne with and carefully nursed, if haply they may yet be saved."

We learn from an exchange that the "Presbyterian missions in Brazil, north and south, have united and organized the Presbyterian Synod of Brazil. Bishop Granbery, of the M. E. Church, South, was present, and congratulated the Presbyterians upon the happy consummation of so important a work."

Holy Ghost Power.

BY REV. S. W. BARBEE.

The imperative need of the pulpit to-day is the power of the Holy Ghost. For lack of it the ministry has been shorn of its strength—the Delilah locks of our ecclesiastical Sampson have been cut off, and we are before the Philistines as powerless as other men. We repeat, the pulpit needs and must have the baptism and power of the Holy Ghost, or vain will be our efforts to convict sinners and save them from hell. I boldly maintain that a preacher's only panoply is the Holy Ghost. With this, although he may be "ignorant and unlearned," his preaching will so move upon the hearts of sinners that they will cry out in the very agonies of despair: "Men and brethren, what shall we do?"

This thought burdens my heart, and has far a long time. Why are not sinners convicted and converted now as they were in the days of Wesley and his colaborers, and for the first half century of the American Methodist Church? Methodist preachers at one time always looked for present results, when they preached. They expected conviction for sin and conversion from it—and their faith was always honored of God. Why do not such results follow the preaching of their successors of the present day? We need not attempt to disguise the fact that our ministry is far more barren of positive results in the awakening and salvation of sinners than was that of our fathers. Nothing like the number, in proportion to preachers engaged in preaching the gospel, are nowadays brought into the Church, and, judged by the subsequent lives of such, there is still a much greater disparity in the number of those who are not conformed to this world. "Why is this," is the earnest and anxious inquiry of every true preacher of the Methodist pulpit throughout the land. The terrors of the law are more potent in the conviction of sinners than is the story of the cross. As preachers we should bend low to catch the faintest whisper of dying love that floats to us on ambient air from glory-crowned Calvary where the Lamb for sinners was slain, but we should likewise awake and alarm the sleeping souls of wicked, perishing men and women in every sermon that we preach, by reinvesting Sinai with all the terrors of an avenged, broken law and an avenging Lord God, from whose mouth goes forth the startling and unrepealed declaration of jealous, divine sovereignty: "The soul that sineth, it shall die."

But how can we do this? Only by preparation. We must be clothed with power from on high. The Pentecostal fire at Jerusalem was kindled by the Holy Ghost, and whenever and wherever revived since that day it has been through the same channel and from the same source. The agonizing cry extorted from the three thousand was superinduced by the Holy Ghost speaking through the lips of Peter, who, with the other disciples, had obeyed the divine command and direction, "Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endowed with power from on high." Every preacher to-day needs—must have—the same preparation and qualification for his work, and then similar results will follow his preaching. O God, baptise the Methodist pulpit with the Holy Ghost and with fire!

The M. E. Church, South, in Name, Spirit and Location.

In the Montana Christian Advocate of Aug. 12, '88, may be found, in an editorial note, the following: "There is in our city (Helena) a Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which is its legal and self-elected name. It was instituted in a former day for the especial accommodation of slaveholding Methodists. But now that slavery is dead, and it (the M. E. Church, South) has progressed as far north as Montana, the word South might well be stricken from its name; not that we would have two Methodist Episcopal Churches, but there is no reason outside of sinful prejudice why our Methodism should not be one."

Seeing that here—as in nearly everything written and spoken by our M. E. Church brethren, concerning this subject — is error, that the term South in the name of our church is misapplied —in many places ignornantly, in many others designedly — we would state that the term in our name as a church does not declare adherence to slavery, nor to the Southern States exclusively, but, as any fair, unprejudiced mind may see, is that which distinguishes us from the name of any other branch of Methodism, of which there are many.

Very true, there was a time when our church was in the bounds of the southern part of the United States, but now she is not so prescribed, having been providentially drawn out of such limits in a way not necessary to mention. We now stretcth beside the waters of the North American Continent from Maryland, along the Atlantic, Gulf of Mexico, aud the Pacific to the British line, and occupying a vast amount of the interior lying between those waters, to say nothing of our Missionary fields abroad. Anybody can see that "South" cuts no figure as to location, and since "slavery is dead" it has no meaning in connection with that.

Our friend adds: "The word, South, might well be stricken from the name—not that we would have two Methodist Episcopal Churches, but there is no reason outside of sinful prejudice why our Methodism should not be one."

We take it for granted that he means the prejudice is all on one side, and that on the part of the M. E. Church, South. To say the least this is a very broad assertion; as to the Christian spirit in such a statement we leave every reader to judge. If this be so, that the M. E. Curch, South, today remains a separate and distinct ecclesiastical body, upon nothing outside of "sinful prejudice," we would think that the M. E. Church, in her fraternal visits every four years to this body of sin, practices the most open, self-inflicted abuse, and violates her duty in not avoiding the very "appearance of evil." She criminates herself to associate with such company. If this be the rock on which our Church stands, we imagine it would not be of any advantage to any body of holy people to unite with us, lest we also soil their pure garments. Thanks be to God the M. E. Church, as represented by her noblest and purest men every four years, does not think as the editor of the Montana Christian Advocate.

In another editorial note our neighbor says:

"As to the old controversies of the past, we desire to forgive and forget, and earnestly pray that our Southern Methodism (meaning the M. E. Church, South) may be what Bishop Galloway said in this city (Helena) it was, a non-sectional church."

Here our benevolent editor has misplaced his charity, for we do not ask any forgiveness, and as a church would be heartily ashamed of ourselves to be found imploring mercy, pardon or forgiveness of any man or body of men or Christians whom we have never wronged. We are glad the brother was thoughtful enough not to say that he more than "desired to forgive and forget."

"We earnestly pray * * that our Southern Methodism * * may be non-sectional." Here, too, our brother has "zeal, but not according to knowledge(?)"

If we were sectional, we might draw a line around us with the determination to stay within and keep everybody else out. This we do not, as our very presence in Montana declares every day. Not only are we non-sectional in the sense of territory occupied, but we are non-sectional in Esprit de corps. We never have to know a man's nationality or party before admitting him into our pales. How many poor, ignorant people have been prejudiced against us by enemies who said such and such about politics? We have men of the varied political faiths in our land in our communion. True, we do not open our churches, or allow them opened, for campaign hurrahs, etc., to any party, nor will we, but for religious purposes our doors are open and our seats are free.

Early Church History in Helena.

A few months ago the M. E. Church of Helena was torn down, and in a box taken from the corner stone there is said to have been found the following record: "In March, 1865, Rev. E. T. McLaughlin came to Helena and organized a small society, and on Aug. 30 of the same year a small log church was dedicated by Supt. Hough. In November following Rev. McLaughlin resigned this position, and Rev. J. H. Pritchett, of the M. E. Church, South, was appointed to the vacancy, on a pledge that he would unite with the M. E. Church, but after serving the church about three months he deserted it and organized a Southern Church, which left our society here without a pastor," etc. The above savors of error, and we trust that our brethren of the capital city will not preserve such, lest the stone cry out of the wall and the beam out of the timber answer it. Therefore, as a matter of justice to all concerned, we quote the following from a reliable historian of the M. E. Church, South, in Montana, the Rev. E. J. Stanley, who got the facts from records in Helena. Concerning Helena he says:

"In the summer of 1865 Rev. J. H. Pritchett, of the Missouri conference, M. E. Church, South, arrived in Helena and preached to the people during the following winter and spring. He did not organize a Methodist Church, but formed a union society, which was not called by any denominational name. Mr. Pritchett was very popular as a preacher and lecturer. The people rented a large hall for him, as there was some disagreement about the use of a shall church building that had been erected."

Rev. B. M. Baxter was employed at Helena. Stateler went there first in December, 1867, and held the quarterly meeting on Christmas day. They then organized the society and wrote the names of the members in a book, as follows:

Jas. R. Boyce, Sr., Mariah Boyce, Geo. L. Duke, Catharine Duke, Sally Duke, Mrs. Phineas Miller, etc.

Thus history plainly shows that Rev. J. H. Pritchett never did organize an M. E. Church, South, in Helena, and, furthermore, that the M. E. Church, South, was first organized in 1867, two years later than the "corner stone record" shows, and that by Revs. L. B. Stateler and B. R. Baxter.

The question of tariff, which is now the bone of contention between the two great parties of the United States, was introduced into our political affairs over sixty years ago, under tne administration of John Quincy Adams, who was inaugurated March 4th, 1825. It is said that "the principal event of this administration was the adoption of a high tariff for the purpose ot protecting American manufactures from the competition of foreign importations."

As we stood in the front door of a business house in Butte, a few days since, we noticed a freight wagon unloading a great cargo of kegs a few doors up the street. A candidate in the democratic party said, "that is democratic campaign material." "What is it?" we asked. "Sweet cider." We wish we could know that neither party would use anything stronger for the next two weeks. Truly there is no need of stronger "material" so far as liquids go.

The decision has been rendered in the United States circuit court in California upon the two test cases under the recent Chinese exclusion act, in which the court affirms the constitutionality of the act, and holds that all Chinese now in harbor, as well as those on the way here, must be sent back. By this 33,000 Chinese will be affected.

Let all communications for publication be sent to A. C. Couey, Butte, Montana, otherwise they will be delayed and may be lost till they become stale.

Ignorance In High Places.

One of the writers in the Century gives us some idea of religious ignorance among young college boys in our New England States. He says that a student of Harvard recently called upon the librarian for "The Acts," with no suspicion that it formed part of the Bible, and writes of a senior at Yale "who had no knowledge of the historical person known as Pontius Pilate." Notwithstanding this, upon the seal of Harvard is to be found the words "Christo et Ecclesiae." Can our institutions of learning be perpetuated under such auspices? Will these young men have proper qualifications to take the place of the present faculty and teach the succeeding generations? We will not live to see it tested, but no prophetic ken is needed to say what the facts will be.

How true the following from one of our exchanges: "What vast power lies latent in our churches. We talk about the latent power in steam—latent till it was called out and set its giant arms to turning massive machinery and rolling cars on the iron track. We talk of the latent power sleeping in the clouds till science drew its thunder and made it abolish distance, outstripping the wings of the eagle, and flashing messages across rolling seas to distant continents. Yet what are these compared to the spiritual power sleeping in the hearts, the minds, the consciences, of our millions of members? O, if the fire of heaven were to touch all these latent forces and wake them up—energize and set them vigorously to work, what mountains they could lift and cast into the sea! If such multitudes were filled with faith and fired by the Holy One, who gave tongues of fire on the day of Pentecost, every mountain would be removed, every valley be filled up, to make a highway for the coming of the Lord in millennial glory."

Brethren of the conference let us have a "Postal Card Correspondence." This is the way to keep the work of the Montana conference before the people, and this we wish to do. Now let us hear from you every two weeks. If you have nothing of great interest to report tell us what you are planning. If you have neither report nor plans, you will be in the predicament of the preacher in charge, who, in his written quarterly conference document, has nothing to report, but after many words of explanation finally closes by saying we hope to do thus and so by next quarter.

An exchange has this:

"A boy in a printing office, having received some 'copy' to set up, in which were many Scripture quotations, came to the foreman and asked whether he should strictly 'follow copy.' 'Certainly, why not?' said the foreman. 'Because these are not like the Bible.' 'How do you know that?' 'Because I learned some of those texts in Sunday school and I know that two of them are different from the Bible.' 'Well then,' said the foreman, 'you need not follow copy there; set them up as they are in the Book.'"

The same incident has occurred in this office several times during the present editor's reign.—N. O. Adv.

The wealth of the principal nations is set down as follows: The United States, $57,000,000,000; France, $46,500,000,000; Great Britain, $46,000,000,000; Germany, $25,000,000,000; Russia, $15,000,000,000; Austria, $14,000,000,000; Italy, $8,000,000,000; Spain, $7,500,000,000; Asia, $65,000,000,000; Africa, $5,000,000,000; British Columbia, $5,000,000,000.

Butte is said to have handled 497,385 gallons of beer from June to October, 1888. Is it any wonder that the religious tide is at a low ebb when there is such a flood of beer? Election season, no doubt, will even increase the flow.

Trip to Craig.

Going north we wheeled around a group of low mountains made historic by the discovery of Scratch Gravel Gulch, or rather basin, that lies well up toward their summits facing and sloping down towards Helena, where gold was discovered in the grass roots, hence the name. Then up Silver Creek, which has proved to be Gold Creek, for from its placer diggings and from its quartz leads much of this precious metal has already been obtained. And up there a few miles, under the main range of the Rockies, is Marysville, a quartz camp and the terminus of two railroads. We ascended this stream on horse back to perform a marriage service, when the site of Marysville was a lone miner's cabin. Fortunes have been made and may be lost where then there was nothing in sight. None understand the uncertainties of fortune so well as the practical miner. If the value of gold as the representative of commercial commodities consists in the labor and means that are expended to obtain it, then its value stands largely in the former. Going through a low pass we dash into Little Prickly Pear country. The first object of interest that attracts our attention is the ranch of Malcolm Clark, a government officer of the long ago, who married a squaw, by whom he had several children, and one of them, a daughter, has been superintendent of public instruction in Lewis and Clarke county for several terms. Her father was murdered by the Indians, who made a raid up this creek in the fall of 1871, before we reached Helena in December following. This was then on the frontier, but the savages have been driven far back towards Her Majesty's domain, thus opening up extensive fields for the use of that civilization that God started in the house of Abraham for the advancement of the human race as a whole. Now the country monopolizes our attention. Much has been done here for the eye and pen of the tourist. Here rocks have been lifted hundreds of feet into perpendicular, though irregular, walls, whose summits are broken into steeple-like spires as if to pierce the heavens more effectually. And then they slope back into somewhat regular shelves upon which the fir and pine and rich grasses are growing. Some mighty force that had accumulated through the ages until the rocky incrustation in which it was imprisoned was overmatched and lifted by it and shoved back at irregular angles from the opening right and left, and lo! a beautiful mountain stream, animate with white fish and mountain trout, plunges along the track of its escape from its prison cell. Some of Hugh Miller's school might be able to tell us in what age of the world this was done, but a more valuable service might be rendered in the interest of science were we informed by what and for what it was done. There are facts connected with it that seem to inculcate both the one and the other, but facts though stubborn things, do not always teach the cause and design of existing phenomena. Lumber, wood and coal camps are here started up by the presence of the railroad. What a civilizer the railroad is? and by the way, what a friend to the laborer? Wolf Creek is announced and we step off to find a pony provided for us by our friend, A. Harvy, to ride out to his place four miles away. With this outfit we feel more like a frontier preacher than we did awhile ago in the car coach. Here we pass a place on the Benton road, now vacated, where a stage driver was taken with smallpox and conveyed down there in those low mountains on the Missouri river to a lone cabin for treatment and for quarantine purposes. Here in this secluded spot, attended by a single nurse, he died, and when he was passing into the great future he said: "Put on the brakes." Alas! the lever that had so often yielded to the pressure of his foot and held the stage upon the mountain side, had no application to the car of time that was now sweeping into eternity with him. How many there are in this country who can and do control the business that they are driving will find if they change not, like this poor man, that their success in life, however good, will serve them no purpose when they come to die? After spending the night at our friend Harvey's, where we we were treated to a nice mess of trout caught by Mrs. Harvey from the little stream that runs close by the house, we passed on our way on the Sabbath to Craig. Here stands the Moore house, where the tragedy occurred a few years ago, in which Moore and his wife lost their lives in an affray between themselves, with no one to witness the dreadful affair. They were found dead with the blood yet warm that they had shed from each other. At Craig we were greeted by a good congregation in the waiting room of the depot, where we delivered our message to an attentive people. When through with the services a Mr. Wells approached us and asked us if we would preach for them in Rock Creek basin, ten miles away, to which we consented. This is a mountainous country with small valleys and ranches, once large ranges well supplied with rich grasses with which to raise and fatten herds, flocks and bands which constituted the chief industry of that locality. And now, Mr. Editor, allow me to say that the Montana Central R. R. exercises greater care to prevent injury to stock than any road that we have yet traveled. This is a praiseworthy departure and deserves public commendation.

R. S. CLARK,

Helena, Mont.

The Relation of Methodism

To the Church of England and Protestant Episcopalians, Through John Wesley, Dr. Coke and Others.

Under the ministry of Strawbridge, Embary, Robert Williams, John King and their successors many souls had been converted to God, classes formed and circuits planned in New York City snd throughout North Carolina and Virginia.

Peace had been proclaimed between England and the American colonies, thereby making these colonies independent of the kingdom in state, and in church if so desired.

The people called Methodists pervaded these colonies with their societies, and the question arose, "What shall the Methodists now do—about ordinances?" They had no ordained ministers, and their deference to their training to be "regular" forbade them to administer the sacraments without the imposition of hands. These "irregular" preachers had been meeting from year to year in conference, representing a number of Christian converts whom they could not organize into systematic church work. Some friends had written to Mr. Wesley, desiring him to select a suitable young man and send him out to America, ordained by one of the English bishops. Mr. Wesley applied to Dr. Loth, bishop of London, but was refused. There were 15,000 members, forty-six circuits, eight-four itinerant preachers, not one of whom could administer the sacraments. If these ministers received the communion it was at the hands of the ministry of Protestant Episcopalians, Congregationalists, Presbyterians or Baptists. It is said by the historians of the Protestant Episcopalians then in this country, that "Seven clergymen were all that could be convened to transact the most important measure." Presbyterians and Congregationalists would not baptize the children of Methodists without at least one of the parents professed faith in their doctrines; nor admit them to the communion table unless they became members of their church. Baptists were more rigid, and would not fellowship with any unless they had been baptized by immersion.

Conference was coming on, and there must something be done to meet the emergency. With these facts before Mr. Wesley, who was now in England, he says: "The English government has no authority over the provinces of North America, either civil or ecclesiastical. No one either claims or exercises an ecclesiastical authority at all. Here, therefore, my scruples are at an end, and I conceive myself at liberty, as I violate no order and invade no man's right, by appointing and sending out laborers into the harvest."

Again Mr. Wesley says: "I still believe the Episcopal form of government to be scriptural and apostolical. I mean, well, agreeing with the practice and writings of the apostles. But that it is prescribed in Scripture, I do not believe."

With reference to apostolic succession, Mr. Wesley says: "I never could see it proved, and I am persuaded I never shall. I firmly believe I am a scriptural episcopos, as much as any man in England, or in Europe. For the uninterrupted succession I know to be a fable which no man ever did or can prove."

Hence we find that in Bristol, England, on Sept. 2, 1784, Mr. Wesley, in answer to the urgent demands, "ordained Richard Whatcoat and Thomas Vasey presbyters for America, having first ordained them deacons; and, being peculiarly attached to every rite of the Church of England, he afterward ordained Dr. Coke, who was already a presbyter, superintendent, or bishop, being assisted therein by presbyters according to the usual order, and gave him letters of ordination under his hand and seal."

Dr. Coke and the two above named presbyters arrived in New York some time in November, 1784. A very short time after this they met Mr. Asbury in Delaware, and after due consideration it was agreed to call a conference of the preachers looking to the organization of the Church. So, on Christmas eve, Dec. 24, 1784, these ministers met. At this conference Mr. Asbury was ordained deacon, elder, and after the unanimous election by his brethren, to the office of superintendent or bishop. He was ordained by Bishop Coke, assisted by Vasey, Whatcoat and Otterbein.

Several days more were spent in enacting rules of discipline and electing preachers to orders, and the Sunday following ten deacons were ordained elders. Thus, at the "Christmas conference," Dec. 24, 1784, to Jan. 2., 1785, was organized the Methodist Episcopal Church in America.

The Church of England and the Protestant Episcopalians state, and restate, that Methodism is a self-instituted society, and out of the line of succession, and hence is not a church.

Mr. John Wesley, as a churchman, looked at the matter differently. So, if the Church of England or Protestant Episcopalians can ever see, as did John Wesley, that a presbyter and bishop are one and the same order, then they can bear the thought of Methodism claiming to be a church. Protestant Episcopalians have been here in organized form longer than Methodism, but while they have about 450,000 communicants to-day Methodism has grown to the immense number of nearly 4,000,000, or to the ratio of ten Methodists to one Episcopalian. It does not matter particularly whether we are considered "in order" or not, since God thus honors our labors.

A Rich Man on Riches,

The following story is told of Jacob Ridgway, a weathy citizen of Philadelphia who died many years ago, leaving a fortune of five or six million dollars:

"Mr. Ridgway," said a young man with whom the millionare was conversing, "you are more to be envied than any gentleman I know."

"Why so?" responded Mr. Ridgway. "I am not aware of any cause for which I should be particularly envied."

"What, sir!" exclaimed the young man, in astonishment. "Why, are you not a millionaire? Think of the thousands your income brings you every month."

"Well, what of that?" replied Mr. Ridgway. "All I get out of it is my victuals and clothes, and I can't eat more than one man's allowance, nor wear more than one suit at a time. Pray, can't you do as much?"

"Ah, but," said the youth, "think of the hundreds of fine houses you own, and the rentals they bring you!"

"What better am I off for that!" replied the rich man. "I can only live in one house at a time; as for the money I receive for rents, why, I can't eat or wear it; I can only use it to buy other houses for other people to live in; they are the beneficiaries, not I."

"But you can buy splendid furniture, and costly pictures, and fine carriages and horses—in fact, anything you desire."

"And after I have bought them," responded Mr. Ridgway, "what then? I can only look at the furniture and pictures, and the poorest man, who is not blind, can do the same. I can ride no easier in a fine carriage than you can in an omnibus for five cents, without the trouble of attending to drivers, footmen and hostlers; and as to anything I desire, I can tell you, young man, that the less we desire in this world the happier we shall be. All my wealth cannot buy me a single day more of life—cannot bring back my youth—cannot purchase exemption from sickness and pain—cannot procure me power to keep afar off the hour of death; and then, what will all avail when, in a few short years at most, I lie down in the grave and leave it forever? Young man you have no cause to envy me."—St. Louis Adv.

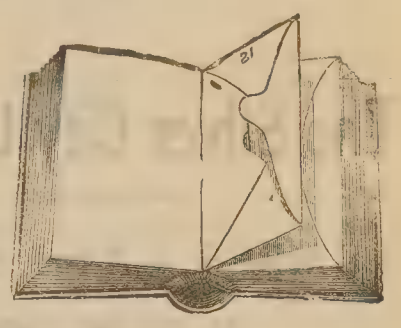
Such an investment pays better than anything else one can do.

Unless they are handy so that they can be used at all times and at the same time properly preserved and cared for, clippings have little valne. This can only be done with

BREED'S
Portfolio Scrap Book

Which has a place for everything and keeps everything in its place.

Very useful for preserving newspaper clippings, or any sort of memoranda desired to be kept collected and classif.



It is composed of 3- large, heavy, Manilla Envelopes, or Pockets, 6x9 inches in size, firmly and handsomely bonnd together like an Invoice or Scrap Book, with an index in front. As a receptacle for valuable scraps of information, or of your own thoughts and illustrations (reduced to writing) on any given subject, no other Scrap Book compares with it. Instead of pasting the scraps fast, an in an ordinary book, simply drop all you have on a given subject, into one of the Envelopes. Write the subject on the outside of the Envelope, and enter it properly in the index. In addition to the "subject," the time and place of delivering the address can be written on the back of the Envelope, thus preventing danger of repeating same talk in same place.

Notes and Personals.

We are very grateful to be able to announce in this note our partial recovery from a month's illness. We hope by the next issue of the paper to be able to do full duty both as editor and pastor. In all our affliction we had many blessings—the comfort of God's presence and the attendance of kind friends.

Bro. J. B Parnall writes us of the very hearty reception the people of Stevensville have given him in his new work. Their generosity supplies him with a well furnished parsonage and a well filled larder. We doubt not that as they have shared with him their "carnal things," he will also minister to them well in "spiritual things."

Bro. Clark and Bro. Cockrill were in Helena last week, each to purchase a buggy in which to travel his circuit. They give favorable report of their work. Bro. Cockrill's report of preaching twenty times the first month sounds like old time itinerancy.

Extensive improvements are being made to the inside of our church in Helena. We expect soon to have an attractive place of worship which will not only add to our comfort, but we trust will also prove a means of grace.

Dr. Morton compels us to acknowledge our error. At the last session of our Conference the impression prevailed with every one that our assessment for Church Extension was $75.00. It was in fact $100.00, as Dr. M. clearly shows. Bro Stanley says the deficit shall be brought up so the Doctor may rest easy.

Rev. John Moore, our pastor at Deer Lodge, writes us that the new Church is nearing completion and presents quite an improvement on the old one. This is in good season for the winter's work, and we congratulate Bro. Moore and his noble helpers.

Rev. E. J. Stanley, our presiding elder of the Helena district, writes that he has been very busy of late making his own home comfortable for his family while he is away on the district this winter. The office of presiding elder in Montana means a great deal of self-sacrifice and no little responsibility.

Rev. L. B. Stateler purposes selling his home and appurtenances and thus relieve Sister Stateler and himself the responsibility and care of such in their present personal bodily affliction. We hope they will go to one of our towns where Church privileges may be enjoyed in their declining years.

The Tennessee conference, known as the "Jerusalem Conference" of the M. E. Church, South, held its seventy-fifih session in October. Three-fourths of a century old. She now has nearly 60,000 members. How many are in the Church triumphant we know not.

The horse-car is soon to be a thing of the past in Butte, Montana. The cable and motor are to take the place. This is an exponent of western life. People go in too much of a hurry not to go by steam. Although not accustomed to such rapid transit, we take to the way such things go on in the West, with some exceptions. The cable car runs through the city north and south, the motor east and west.

At the recent session of the Tennessee conference of the M. E. Church, South, the Rev. J. J. Ransom was appointed missionary to Cuba. Thus our field grows larger.

President Cleveland has issued the proclamation fixing Thursday, November 29th, for Thanksgiving Day. The markets will soon be filled with big fat (?) turkeys. We should not be too Epicurean.

H. Clay Fleenor, who deserted his post of duty in Bozeman, Montana, and returned to Missouri, ignorantly hoping to get work in any of the conferences there, has made a forfeiture of his former religious views and joined the Baptist Church. He must have had a very singular experience before immersion. If he was repentant of his many misdoings here and after his return, we pray that he may be blessed in his new relationship.

Methodism.

In the leader of one of our exchanges is to be found these words: "Methodism means the adoption of the method that will do the work that ought to be done at any time and any place. It is flexible, adaptable, progressive—a gospel and a movement in the present tense. The changing conditions of society demand new adaptations to meet them while there is and can be no change in the principles and facts of the gospel according to Methodism, which we believe to be the true, sweet, glad gospel of the grace of God for all men and for all times.

Bishop Keener in a recent sermon said: "The awful height of the atonemement demanded the awful depth of hell."

We would call your attention to the books written by Rev. E. J. Stanley and advertised in our columns. About one year ago we read "Rambles in Wonderland." It is enough for us to say, that no book on such a subject has afforded us sucn entertainment. This work has been well received by the reading public far and near. Get it for the very small price named in another column. We purpose reading it again at the earliest opportunity.

Governor Leslie's Annual Report.

Below we give an extract from one of our Montana dailies, containing a synopsis of the Governor's annual report to the Secretary of the Interior: Washington, October 29.—Preston H. Leslie, Governor of Montana, in his annual report to the Secretary of the Interior, estimates the population of the Territory at 140,000, an increase of 10,000 over the estimate of last year.

All the industries of the Territory have been highly active and prosperous during the year. Agriculture has made rapid strides forward. It can be stated in truth that the average yield per acre of wheat, oats, potatoes and cultivated grass in Montana for 1887, has not been equalled by any other Territory or State.

The commercial operations of the Territory during the year aggregate $49,000,000 of assessed value. The taxable property of the Territory is $69,000,000.

Upon the subject of education the report says that in each of the cities and large towns there is the very best and highest class of graded schools, every child of school age in the Territory being on the school roll and at school nine months of the year.

The mines are more productive than ever before.

Townsend Circuit.

Just one month ago I arrived here on what is known as Townsend Circnit, to begin work as pastor. I have preached about 20 times during the month, have received two into the Church, and have become acquainted with most of our members in this region.

If Townsend Circuit is a representative section, I believe I can safely say I am pleased with Montana. The people seem to be honest and industrious and very sensible, and from what I can see and hear, they are also generous. If these claims be true, it may be appropriately said of them as of one of old, "One thing thou lackest." To make good citizenship there must be added to those naturally commendable qualities, industry, sense, honesty and generosity, the more excellent one of religiousness. In this, if I am competent to feel the spiritual pulse of a community, there is much lack. Montanians have let go to a great extent, if they ever held it—the God-fearing and God-honoring spirit which ought to characterize all people. Yet I find they are kind to ministers, remarkably attentive to preaching, making one feel that truly the harvest is great and ready for reaping. I enter upon my work with hope, and keeping my present determination, mean to teach with all dilligence, God being my helper, the fundamental doctrines, repentence toward God, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, the necessity of being born from above, and of being perfected in love. I desire the prayers of my brethren that I may be a faithful minister of Christ and steward of the mysteries of God, making full proof of my ministry.

H. B. Cockrill.

The Editor Camping.

As we have before intimated, we make no attempt at a description of the Park, for this we do not think we could do. We believe the very meagre outline of what we saw, just as it appeared to us at the time, will prove as interesting as a studied account. We would be too long writing up the whole trip to give much detail. We will, however, follow our diary pretty closely in this letter.

Sabbath, Sept. 2, 1888.—This morning we did not indulge in late sleep. We heard the eruption of a geyser which we afterward learned was the Bee Hive. We got into camp so late last evening that we could not see very distinctly just what kind of camping place we had. It might, therefore, be more intelligible to the reader for us to give some account of our surroundings as seen by the light of the Sabbath's beautiful sun. We were in the upper geyser basin. Our tent was in the deep shade of a thick clump of pine trees, about 400 yards northwest and across a cold water stream from the Park hotel. It was also about 200 yards west from the soldier's tent. The Castle geyser was northeast 100 yards. Old Faithful was a short way farther off than the hotel and somewhat to the left from the camp. Though he was so far we could plainly see him play regularly every hour. We had unfortunately gotten into camp too late the evening before to make preparation for this day of rest. Cooking was very undesirable from several considerations, but at last breakfast was announced. We considered ourselves quite fortunate in being given a half gallon of fresh sweet milk. When the others had assembled about our improvised table for the morning meal one of the party was missing. He had been the first to rise, and with a good excuse he had gone to find good grazing for our horses. We were too hungry to wait, so by the time we were half through eating the missing one came in. "You must have been out looking at geysers as well as giving attention to Kit and Dolly." "Yes, I was." We thought him perfectly excusable, as we knew there was no risk on our part to be left without anything to eat.

Shortly after breakfast Bro. Kemper and Miss Fannie Brown went out sight seeing. Mrs. Couey, the two children and myself remained at the tent. Although surrounded by such wonders, we felt some obligations upon us by the Lord's commandment to keep that day holy. So at least a part should be spent in reading the Scriptures and in prayerful meditation. In this way the most of the forenoon was occupied.

About 11 o'clock Bro. K. and Miss B. came in, and it was agreed that we have dinner early and spend the afternoon in beholding the marvelous works of God. Dinner over, all except myself and little Charles went out to see the play of certain geysers which would not erupt again while we were privileged to see them. It was needful that someone stay at the tent, and necessarily so, now that Charles was sick—at least not well enough to bear the fatigue of the walk. So I spent most of the afternoon reading, writing and napping. The Old Faithful gave me something of interest every hour.

At 5 p. m. the party returned filled with wonder at the great sights. After a short rest, Bro. K.—who was ever ready to see—and myself concluded to go down in the neighborhood of the Splendid, which was to erupt once more that day. We had gotten in good view, and this highly prized geyser, which is near the extreme north end of the upper basin, made a very fine display. We then walked to it, saw the formation, which is very peculiar, and affords very interesting study. Near this geyser is the Comet, the Daisy, the White Pyramid, the Punch Bowl, and some farther west. Somewhat to the back side of the basin is the Black Sand Basin, Specimen Lake and many small boiling springs, few of which are named. Some are called "spouters." We continued back up a small stream which ran along west of the basin and separated from it by heavy timber, finding along its banks many objects of interest. Our purpose now was to keep up this stream to where our horses were staked for grazing, about a mile west of our camp. On our way up we came to an almost impassable quagmire of boiling, seething springs and marshy ground. We could but think of the memorable "slough of despond" of the Bedford prisoner. We finally made our way through this dangerous place to where our horses were grazing sumptuously on good grass. Thence to the tent by way of more geysers, among which were what are known as the Three Sisters.

When we returned to camp we felt thankful that we were not engulfed during our ramble among the almost interminable boiling springs and marshes. What a day! Was ever a Sabbath spent among such awful displays of God's mighty power?

Sin, its Consequences and Antidote.

The seeds of sin bear in after years the bitter fruit of spiritual death. We see this in the sin of Cain, which stamped him as a murderer.

Time passed on freighted with crime, wickedness, lawless violence, licentiousness and corruption.

Then was apparent the evil consequences of man's departure from primitive innocence, and his fatal error. The voice of God came in warning tones, by his servant, Noah. Dark were the clouds which veiled the presence of God from a people, deaf to the tender remonstrances of divine love.

Yet the Being who created man for his glory, recognizing that justice must be tempered with mercy, and whose spirit was moved with compassion provided means for the transplanting of the race, and the worship of the Creator.

Afar off through the vista of ages, the omniscient eye beheld a light through the night of sin, a remedy whereby lost and sinful man might be restored to favor. Even from the crest of Ararat the first faint beams of prophetic truth heralded the coming antidote for sin.

Rising from the angry waves of the deluge, and resting in safety on the Mount, the ark waited for the subsidence of the waters and descending from its shelter the eight once more stood on the earth the sole representatives of the race, and were permitted to enjoy again the light of Heaven, and to see the bow shining in prismatic splendor, a signed seal of God's protecting power, "I do set my bow in the clouds," and no more will I destroy the world by flood.

Time passed, the patriarch, Noah, has been blessed, houses and land and possessions have increased; children and grandchildren have gathered about him, sons and daughters have blessed his declining years, and at last in the maturity of a long life he is laid to rest, and a mighty nation mourn his death.

Yes, a great nation has been established, to whom is promised a priest and king, "Melchisedec," whose name shall be called Emanuel, the prince of peace, and from Abraham, by promise, shall come the "light of the world," in whom all nations shall be blessed.

On still the ages roll, and the light of prophetic revelation points with unerring precision to the coming of the promised Messiah whose appearing shall bring life and salvation to sinners.

Behold, by retrospective vision, the morning of a new day, radiant from the countenance of a Savior. Look towards the sunclad hills of Judea, and behold thy Savior's lowly birth place, and know that for thee he "became poor."

Hear the angelic hosts, chanting the good tidings of peace and good will; follow the light which shines from the pathway of the sinless one; listen to the words of wisdom which fall from lips which "speak as never man spake;" follow thy Savior to the mount of beatitudes, and drink in those divine precepts which he bade thee obey; then go with the incarnate Son of God to the mount of transfiguration where he wore the garments of glory and light, with which His Father clothed Him; and while standing in its splendor, say if thou canst, that Christ came not.

Learn the heavenly mission of the lowly Nazarene; then wilt thou behold the plentitude of the sacrifice which put to death the Son of God, the promised Savior, and let thy soul rejoice that though sin came into the world by one man's disobedience, all may live by faith in the atonement of Jesus Christ our Lord.

Have faith which dispels doubt and fear,
Accept salvation while 'tis near;
To the blest altar bring thy faith and come,
A Savior bids thee share His heavenly home.—

MRS. E. M. APPLEBURY.

New York Christian Advocate: "Those who habitually come late to Church ought to know that they are not only guilty of great impropriety, but also of conduct which inflicts real injury on many. They not only lose a part of the services themselves, but they take from others a large share of the benefit which they would otherwise derive from the sermon, the Scriptures, and the songs of the sanctuary. They disturb the devotions of the worshipers, divert the attention of the hearers, and distract the mind of the preacher."

Boys Wanted.

Boys of spirit, boys of will,
Boys of muscle, brain, and power,
Fit to cope with anything—
These are wanted every hour.

Not the weak and whining drones,
That all trouble magnify;
Not the watchword of "I can't,"
But the nobler one, "I'll try."

Do whate'er you have to do
With a true and earnest zeal;
Bend your sinews to the task,
Put your shoulder to the wheel.

Though your duty may be hard,
Look not on it as an ill;
If it be an honest task,
Do it with an honest will.

At the anvil or the farm,
Wheresoever you may be—
From your future efforts, boys,
Comes a nation's destiny.

Young Missionares.

The following letter taken from the Sunday School Visitor stirs tender memories. Little Deo was one of our best friends when we were pastor in Albuquerque, N. M., three years ago. We wish all our young readers would catch her missionary spirit: "Deo McK. Clayton, Albuquerque, N. M.: I am a little girl seven years old; I live three miles and a half south of Albuquerque, N. M., on a ranch. We came here four years ago from St. Louis county, Mo. I like to go to Sunday School; my teacher is Mrs. Dr. Ames, from Misissippi, and we all love her. I have a nice Visitor book, and almost enough papers for another; we send some to a little girl who lives forty miles away and cannot go to Sunday School. My papa is a Southern Methodist preacher, and is one hundred and fifty miles from us where there are no other preachers. I have a missionary hen, 'Hindoo;' one of her chickens is named 'Jappy,' for Japan; her egg-money goes to Brother Lambuth; I sent him some cards and papers, a book and a letter last year."

Appreciation.

Love of appreciation seems to be instinctive in the whole animal creation. Whoever does good work is encouraged and strengthened by merited praise. Well does the writer remember a good farmer, whose sleek, fat horses were admired by all the neighbors ronnd about. This good condition was not a result of their not being worked hard, for the farmer did much of the heavy trucking of the village, over a hilly road. There was a long steep hill between the station and the village, and here the horses were allowed several resting spells on the way up.

Mr. Small always carries a chunk of wood, with which to block the wheels during these rests. Before he started he always rubbed their noses, patting them encouragingly, and when he gave the word, up they went with a will, till the driver stopped them for another breathing spell.

When they pulled well, he always petted and praised them, telling them they were good fellows; and they seemed so pleased at this little act of appreciation, that they would hardly wait to rest, so eager were they to prove themselves worthy of the praise.

Children, and grown people, too, are not less susceptible to the influence of encouraging words.

A little fellow of five years of age was doing something which his father disapproved.

"My son, you must not do that," said his father.

It happened to be something which the child wanted to do, and for an instant he hesitated, as if qnestioning what would be the consequence if he persisted. Finally his better self triumphed, and he replied, "All right, papa; I won't do it any more."

Perhaps most of us would think that was all there was to be said about it, and so the father thought; but the little fellow evidently had different ideas, for not long after he spoke out:

"Papa, why didn't you tell me 'That's a good boy?' An' twould 'a' been easier to be good next time."—Youth's Companion.

"If we were asked what are the two greatest human aids to pulpit power, we should say, self-possession and self-abandonment."

The Election.

It might be thought by some that, as Montana is yet a territory, the matter of the election is of small import; but not so. Except in a few of our states east, which are said to have something of the balance of power, where the parties are about equal, there is more interest in Montana than is manifest in most of the Union. So far as our observation is concerned, there is more political enthusiasm in Montana than any place we have yet seen.

The "two great parties" of our country are the only ones that amount to anything of consequence. The third party has scarcely reached recognition in these parts as yet.

The highest honor in the gift of the people of our Territory, in politics, is that of delegate to congress.

The two gentlemen, representing the two parties, in the race for congress, are said to be of Erin's Isle, and one of them a Roman Catholic.

The second highest place given by the people's suffrage is that in the council or senate of the Territory. Of these there is one from each county. While there is not the importance attached to represetatives to this body that there is to the representative to congress, they are in fact more important. By the council our home affairs are to receive attention, and at once affect every interest the people have.

The question as to what is the man, rather than what party does he represent, is fast gaining ground. This we deem a very favorable omen.

Now in all the speeches and all the torch-light processions, and all the barbecues, and in all the club room caucuses, and in all the "treating," and in all the buying and selling of votes and party influence—in a word, in the election how much of true, unsullied, unselfish patriotism has there been?

How many who have ranted, and shouted and betted on candidates, have known just what the issue between the democrats and republicans has been?

It has been well said, "Patriotism does not consist in following a brass band, parading in torch-light processions, and giving three cheers and a tiger for the orator of the day." One of our ex-presidents has truly and beautifully said, "I have seen the sea lashed into fury, and tossed into spray, and its grandeur moves the soul of the dullest man. But I remember it is the calm level of the sea from which all heighths and depths are measured."

We might ask a more vital question than that mentioned above. How much of genuine Christian religion has there been in the election? To say that this has nothing to do with an election is to maintain a false position. Have Christians no right to suffrage? Yea, have they not a duty as citizens in all questions of government?

Now that the election is over, let us accept the situation and be ready to do what we believe to be in accord with true patriotism, and in harmony with true Christian manhood irrespective of partisan likes and dislikes.

When it serves a purpose how easy it is for men to laud the rich to the very skies—and again when it serves a purpose how the use of wealth may be minified by those who have it not. True character is the only thing possible for all men, that is worthy persistent effort. This alone can stand unshaken amid the storms of political strife.

We rejoice to know that there are some of the candidates now before the people of the U. S. and some in our states and territories against whom the bitter breath of political partisanship dare not come. It is not diffiult for pious men to be called cranks, but this will not blast moral heroism nor render it less useful when placed in power.

Perhaps one of our Bishops would be greatly surprised to learn that his photograph occupied a prominent place in a large frame in a group of other good-looking people, exhibited as an advertisement on Broadway street, Helena, Montana. To say the least of it, there is no mistake that our chief pastors are servants of the public in more ways than one. For our part, we are not ashamed of the face as compared with those around it.

Dr. Simmon's Book.

I have been charmed while recently reading the History of Southern Methodism on the Pacific Coast, by Rev. J. C. Simmons. It is like a romance. The vividness with which it portrays the characters that figure in it and depicts the scenes enacted during the early days of California, and sets forth the difficulties encountered and the victories gained by those noble men who planted our holy Christianity in that land of gold, engages your attention and thrills you from beginning to end.

With the names of men and places changed a little it is, in many respects, the history of Southern Methodism in Montana, nay, Colorado and all over the West. There is observed the same difficulty of getting suitable men for the work, and of keeping them after gotten. The same call for patience, forbearance, and perseverance, and the same evidence that these graces are not without their legitimate fruits. The author is a charming writer and has done his work well. The book is a valuable contribution to our Church literature. Every preacher will be profited by reading it. May God bless the labors and the memory of those sainted men who did so much to lay the foundations of a pure Christianity along the shores of the great Pacific.

Notes From the Field.

Since last report from the Helena district the quarterly meeting for Stevensville circuit was held at Stevensville. Brother Parnall, the new preacher in charge, did the preaching. His message was received with great favor by the people. The communion service on Sunday was a profitable occasion. The good people of Stevensville and vicinity showed their appreciation of the new pastor and his wife by assembling at the parsonage Thursday night, bringing with them many articles that are necessary to housekeepers. It was a time of refreshing in various ways to all who were there. Bro. Parnall and wife are pleased with our country and people. He is addressing himself to his work in earnest, is planning for protracted meetings for raising collections, and we shall expect to hear from him in the future.

The quarterly meeting for Corvallis circuit was held at Corvallis, and was a profitable time. Bro. Flowers enters upon his work with good heart, has found a number of new members, and expects to organize a new society in a short time.

The presiding elder was quite busy for a time, moving his family from Stevensville to the home near Corvallis, and putting the house in condition to be comfortable for them during his protracted absence from home during the winter. He is now in the field on his second round among the churches.

The N. W. C. T. U. Convention.

We have received the five copies of the Daily Union Signal which give a very full report of Fifteenth N. W. C. T. U. Convention, held in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York City, Oct. 19, 23, 1888. The proceedings of this convention as shown in the Signal, show that the work of this great host of women is making rapid advances along the lines of reform, so much needed in our land. Our prayer is, that God may bless them in "every good word and work."

One Right View of It.

A preacher sending cash on subscription for the MONTANA METHODIST says in a note therewith: "It is now time all had paid." This brother realizes the fact that it requires money to run a church paper just like it does to keep in grace with a butcher or grocer, to whom monthly payments are made. It is well to have an eye to the practical as well as to the beautiful. Keep up with your row brethren. No time for resting in the shade when the corn is grassy.

Stevensville Circuit.

Editor MONTANA METHODIST :

I have now been in the Territory and in charge of the Stevensville Circuit a little over a month, and after having had the opportunity of a careful survey of my new field of labor, I am glad to be able to report my first impression of the work as of the most favorable and gratifying nature. The circuit as at present constituted, embrace six different points in the Bitter Root Valley. Stevensville and Victor where we have neat and attractive church houses, being the principal ; the other appointments being at school-houses adjacent to Stevensville, except the one at Lo Lo, which is about 20 miles distant. It is a field sufficiently compact to be worked without great difficulty, but broad enough to call out all the resources that the willing laborer may have at his command—in fact, in this respect, an ideal Methodist Circuit.

Among the 80 members whose names are found on the Church roll we have discovered already not a few earnest Christians who are devoted to God and the Church, and appear ready for any and every good work. Taking our appointed and honored place at the head of this little "Gideon's Band," we are encouraged to hope that soon we may be able in the name of the Lord of hosts to lead them on to victory. We would not be boastful however in this matter, remembering that the enemy is strong and firmly entrencehed behind the walls of covetousness, intemperance, licentiousness and other forms of Godlessness and evil. Our trust, however, is in Him and we believe as beforetimes in the history of His followers, He will deliver the enemy into our hands.

Our purpose in coming to this field of labor has not, we believe, been a selfish, mercenary, or ease-loving one ; but solely to glorify God in the salvation of precious souls, and in the upholding of the Redeemer's Kingdom. To endeaver to do this in co-operation with the noble band of workers who have so long been holding and extending the outpost of our beloved Zion in this region, has long been our desire. And having at last found an humble place amongst you, we can truly say we feel glad we are here, and greet you heartily in the name of the Lord.

I might extend this communication, which was only meant to be a short one (you significantly called for a "postal card correspondence," you know Mr. Editor), by referring to the generous hospitality, so characteristic, I understand of Montanians, that has everywhere we have gone in this beautiful valley been accorded us—the special deep and thoughtful interest taken in our welfare by our large-hearted as well as large-framed Presiding Elder, Rev. S. J. Stanley— and the lavish kindness that was evinced not long after our arrival on the occasion of the Donation party at the parsonage when both the cupboard, cellar and "cup" of the grateful "Parson" and his equally appreciative wife were filled almost to overflowing—the heart did overflow—by the generous friends of various denominations who then assembled—but we forbear, lest in the absence of more correct information you and your readers, Mr. Editor, might take me to belong to that unenviable class of individuals, "long-winded preachers !" Respectfully,

JAS. B. PARNALL.

Nov. 5, 1888.

A Preacher's Home.

One parsonage at Butte is nearly completed. The brick-masons and carpenters, are just about through, and the lathers are not out of the way of the plasterers. The pastor and his wife will welcome the finale. The house when finished will be one of the very best homes for our Montana itinerants.

The "Negro Problem" Solved by One of their Own Number.

We hope our readers will read the following letter published in the Nashville Christian Advocate:

BY BISHOP H. M. TURNER, A. M. E. CHURCH.

In your issue of the 6th inst., I find an elaborate article entitled, "The Negro Problem," which article essays to solve in part this grave question about which so much has of late been said and written. The Negro question is no problem to me, nor has it been for years, nor will it be to any one who examines it in the light of history and providence.

There is a God that runs this universe; nor are nations and people any exception. True, an infinite number of laws may harness up the mighty machinery, and serve as so many potencies in its mysterious and marvelous revolutions; but there is a God in the background nevertheless, and he rules in the armies of heaven and among the inhabitants of earth.

Slavery was a providential institution, not a divine institution; for had it been, it would have been as eternal as any attribute belonging to the Godhead. One is temporary and contingent, the other immutable and eternal. God was not asleep nor oblivious to passing events, when the Negro was being captured, and brought to this country, and subjected to a state of unrequited servitude. He knew the horrors of their past and their present condition, and foresaw the grand sequel which awaited the termination of their slave ordeal. God knew that the slave regime, although exceedingly pyrotechnical at times, was the most rapid transit from barbarism to christian civilization for the Negro. Negro as I am, and being thoroughly acquainted with the characteristics of my race, I am frank to make this declaration, odd as it may seem to many.

But what is to be the sequence of this thraldom, with all of its ills and evils, culminating in war, bloodshed, political bitterness, sectional strife, the expenditure of money by the billions, and race legislation?

Reason, the philosophy of history, the indications of Christianity, the signs of providence, the gist of our Lord's Prayer, and the scope of the atonement, all answer the question. They solve the Negro problem by proclaiming the betterment of the world in general, the redemption of Africa, and the addition of infinite resources to commerce, business, and wealth. Men talk about evotntion, but here is to be evolution in its fullest grandeur. God intends that this degraded race, which has been dwarfed through ages of heathenism, shall imbibe your civilization with its religion, and when sufficiently sobered through generations of self-possession, return to Africa and bring its millions to Christ and Heaven.

All will not return to the land of their ancestry. All of the children of Israel did not leave Egypt—tens of thousands remained. But millions of the Negro race will return as soon as we are fit for self-government—I mean as soon as we are able to plant and manage civilized nations. God will never let the Negro leave this country until he can do as the Israelites could when they left Egypt. You will remember they could work in all kinds of metals, woods, fine fabrics, textures, and manufacture anything they needed. Nor will the Negro ever leave this country till he can manipulate every form of civilization—trade, art, mechanism, civil government, churches, and whatever tends to form the bulwarks of a civilized people. So there is but one solution of the Negro problem: Let the people, as God intends, help the Negro to general enlightenment, and he will seek the land of his fathers, as the heart seeketh the waterbrook.

If the rich men of this country would only open their eyes and see what agencies they have in the Negro, and would utilize him as they might, what untold wealth would pour into this nation! Africa is the richest continent under the canopy of heaven. Her natural resources are incalculable. England and other European countries keep 240 ships hugging her coasts the year round, pouring her wealth into their coffers; and this country could double the number by utilizing the Negro, if it could just look beyond its prejudices and adjust itself to its possibilities. A line of steamers between Charleston, Savannah, New Orleans, or Willmington, and Africa, could in a few years be made to flood the South with unnumbered milllions. The Negro as an agent might be made a thousand-fold more valuable to the South than he was as a slave, and at the same time more valuable to himself as a freeman. If England can keep steamer lines running all the time, burdened with gold-dust, ivory, coffee, camwood, palm-oil and a thousand other things which bring wealth and give business to the world, why cannot this country, with millions of men at its disposal adapted to the climate of Africa, and as faithful to their trust as any race in the world, do as much or more? If the Negro is a burden, a problem, a menace, and a source of vexation to our white friends, let them open up a highway to the land of his ancestry by a line of steamers, cheap transportation, and a little business thrown in, and the dark Negro problem will solve itself in a few years. The white man brought him here, and the white man must provide for his return.

The Negro problem will never be solved by abuse, villification, magnifying his faults, cold-shouldering him, elbowing him to the right or left, commenting upon his inferiority, or any species of proscription—that will only prolong the solution of the Negro problem.

Let men see and recognize the hand of God in the institution of slavery, and dispose of its remains as God directs, and endless blessings will flow alike to white and black. The christianized Negro will be a blessing to the millions of Africa, and the wealth of that giant continent will be a blessing to the white man. Slavery has been a dark providence, humanly speaking, but behind it God hides a smiling face, if men will only see their duty and adjust themselves to it.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 8, 1888.

Light and Cheer.

In ordinary social life a cheerful spirit compensates for many faults. Society delights in light hearts, smiling faces and pleasant words. Don't be too gruff and grum anywhere, but especially in the social circle. Keep sweet in your inner life, and then you will manifest sweetness before folks. Don't have it said of you that "he is a crabbed old fellow." Profundity of thought will not atone for generosity of soul and sunshine of life. Why have your influence marred by defects which you can easily remedy by taking proper pains? There are some things you cannot prevent or change. If you are homely, you cannot help that. If you lack erudition, you may remedy it in a measure, though perhaps not wholly. But if you lack a cheerfull spirit, it is possible to gain it. Think of the happiest facts and experiences you have ever known. Look at the bright side of your present circumstances and surroundings. Look up, not down; forward, not backwards. Help others and you will help yourself. Repine only when you can do nothing else but die. You were born to help, not to be helped. "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister," is the mission of the saints. Fulfill your calling. Make the world brighter and better for having lived in it. God's sunshine will flash around you if you will only keep your own light burning and sending out its warmest, brightest rays upon those in closest contact with you.—Michigan Advocate, Jackson, C. A.

Burdette's Opinion of the Parson's Vote.

An Iowa saloon-keeper challenged the vote of a Methodist minister on the ground that, being subject to removal by his bishop, he can not be a good citizen of any town. The case has gone into the courts. Whatever the courts may say, the, stern stubborn fact remains that the Methodist preacher has been far too numerous a citizen for the Iowa saloon keeper. That's what is troubling the bar tender. The parson is apt to be the citizenest kind of a citizen, a citizen of no mean city, free-born and holding his right of citizenship only less dear than his religion, if not, indeed, a part of it. Whatever the saloon-keeper may think or desire, it is likely that the parson will keep on voting just the same, and when "the people," and "also publicans," and "the soldier, likewise," come to the pulpit for their politics they will get it without any boodle, snide or gin-mill influence. The saloon-keeper will have to sell his shop to pay the costs. The parson isn't half through voting yet. He's just begun.

"Men Carefully Selected."

"Our Brother in Red," commenting on Bishop Hendrix's phrase, "Men carefully selected for this field," gives this personal recollection:

The writer, "once upon a time," received a letter from an eastern friend which read on this wise: "My son, Blank, cannot sustain himself in this conference, and I have advised him to go to yours and remain until he learns how to preach, and then return to this one."

"Sustain himself!" What does that mean? If a man has not "learned to preach," what is there about him to "sustain?" And if a man will not learn, will the conference continue forever to "sustain" his incompetence and at every session turn him over to the bishop to receive an appointment? That thing ought to be stopped.—New Orleans Advocate.

A New Route to Heaven.

Mr. Michael Murphy, a member of the Ontario base ball club, was killed during a ball game on Sunday. Resolutions were passed unanimously by the club, the preamble of which contained these words: "Whereas, the Great Ruler of the universe has entered our organization and taken our beloved brother, Michael Murphy, to the happy home above; and although we bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we feel that we have sustained a great loss." It is quite possible that Michael was a Roman Catholic, and had not been brought up to keep the Sabbath; but it sounds very queer to Sabbath-keeping Christians that being killed in a Sunday base ball game is another form of being removed to the "the happy home above" by "the Great Ruler of the universe." Not a great while ago an Episcopal minister expostulated with one of his congregation for playing a base ball game on Sunday, and the yonng man said he guessed it must be right as Father ——— (naming a prominent Roman Catholic priest in a neighboring city), umpired the game. The Romanist and Greek Christians have so many man-made days to keep, that to observe the fifty-two recurrences of the Lord's Day is a heavy tax upon them.—New York Christian Advocate.

Geography and Its Related Sciences.

Mr. H. J. Mackinder would define geography as the science whose main function is to trace the interaction of man in society, and so much of his environment as varies locally. According to Mr. Bryce, the environment comprises the influences due to the configuration of the earth's suaface; those belonging to meteorology and climate; and the products which a country offers to human industry. The first of these categories depends more largely than has been acknowledged on geology, and is related to physiography, which asks, "Why is it?" to topography, which asks, "Where is it!" to physical geography, "Why is it there?" and to political geography, "How does it act on man in society, and how does he react on it?" and itself asks, "What riddle of the past does it help to solve?" We may stop short at any of these questions, but can hardly answer a later one with advantage unless those which preceded it have been answered. Of meteorology, average or recurred climatic conditions alone—not weather-forcasting—come within the geographer's ken. In considering the productions of a region, the distribution of minerals is incidental to the rock structure. The distribution of animals and plants is pertinent in so far as those organisms form an appreciable factor in man's environment, and is so far as it gives evidence of geographical changes, such as the separation of islands from continents and the retirement of the snow-line. But the study of the distribution of animals and plants in detail, and as illustrating evolution, is in no sense a part of geography. Geography and history are related in their elementary stages, but diverge in their higher stages. The geographer must furnish to the historian the ideas and facts in science which he requires, and must go to the historian for the verification of the relations which he suggests. The body of laws governing those relations, which might in time be evolved, would render possible the writing of much "prehistoric" history. Mr. Green's "Making of England" is largely a deduction from geographical conditions of what must have been the course of history.—Popular Science.

Bishop Galloway in the West.

Says the New Orleans Advocate: "Bishop Galloway came in upon us Friday evening from his long tour in the West. He has evidently been busy, as the following information extracted from him shows: Absent from home, 96 days; traveled 9,200 miles by railroad, steamship and stage coach, without missing a connection or a meal; held four Conferences; delivered seventy sermons and addresses; baptized seventeen infants and one adult; dedicated seven churches and raised nineteen thousand and four hundred dollars for various connectional enterprises. Tne Bishop looks well, but considerably bronzed by western suns and breezes.

Banner: "Some Easy Mistakes.—Don't judge a man by the clothes he wears. God made one and the tailor made the other. Don't judge a man by his family, for Cain belonged to a good family. Don't judge a man by his failure in life, for many a man fails because he is too honest to succeed. Don't judge a man by the house he lives in, for the lizard and rat often inhabit the grander structure. When a man dies, those who survive him ask what property he left behind him; the angel bending over the dying man asks what good deeds he has sent before him."

Notes.

At the dedication of our new church at Victor, Bro. W. R. Young, who is agent for the Idaho Nursery, gave $30 worth of fruit trees to help pay off the debt. Parties present offered to take the trees and pay cash for them. May that brother be "like a tree planted by the rivers of water that bringeth forth his fruit in his season, whose leaf also shall not wither, and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." S.

Bishop Hendrix's sermon at the session of the Missouri conference at Gallatin, on the great need of the Church praying the Lord of the harvest to send forth more laborers into the harvest, was as a nail driven in a sure place. It was a masterly effort, and will bring forth fruit in the days to come. We are praying and laboring that our children may have their daily bread, may have a good education, a good situation —be prosperous and happy in the world, but how few, alas! are praying that the Lord will call them to be preachers of the gospel. I hope the bishop will consent to have that sermon printed and scattered broadcast all over the church. S.

Bro. Barbee's article in a recent number of the METHODIST, entitled "Holy Ghost Power," was right to the point, and deserves to be read and pondered and prayed over by every minister and member of the church. S.

The impression prevails, and we hope it will be permanent, that we are receiving some valuable additions to our ministerial ranks in this conference. We welcome our brethren in the name of the Lord and wish for them the highest measure of success that is possible. S.

Brother Calvin Beach, of Prickly Pear valley, recently made Brother Clark a present of a good buggy horse. The generous gift was well bestowed and highly appreciated. Brother Beach in this way helped no little in that gracious revival reported by Brother Clark in another part of this paper.

That was a grand love-feast on Sunday morning at Gallatin, during the session of the Missouri conference. A mighty tidal wave of glory seemed to sweep over the vast audience, and everyone present felt the thrill of a higher and purer life. It was a Pentecost, and the memory of it furnishes fresh inspiration to more than one preacher in the great West. S.

We assured our brethren of the Kentucky conference, when they were raising money for one of our churches and sending one of their number to help us, that we are preaching the old-time doctrines of "repentance, justification by faith, regeneration and the conscious and direct witness of the Spirit." Let us make good the claim, and may God set His seal to our ministry by the happy conversion of hundreds this year. S.

Two Methodist preachers have been lately added to the ministerial force of this city, namely, Rev. Emil Uhl, of the German Methodist church, and Rev. —— Jones, of the African Methodist Episcopal church. We give these brethren a hearty welcome and trust that they may gather much fruit from their wide fields of labor

Considerable impetus has been given to the cause of Sunday school since the territorial convention was held here last summer. Several counties in the territory have organized county associations and others are soon to organize. Last week a very interesting convention of Sunday school workers of this county was held in the Baptist church of this city, which resulted in the organization of the Lewis and Clarke County Sunday School association. The machinery for church work is being greatly multiplied in these times. It is all well enough, provided, it is not substituted for the power of the Spirit. But there is the danger. A little more Holy Ghost power would doubtle simplify our machinery. As Spurgeon says: "The swiftest current cuts the straightest course."

The protracted meeting in Bozeman in the M. E. church, South, is progressing finely. The attendance is fair. There were three accessions by letter Sabbath morning. The congregation was very good at night. Deep interest was manifested on the part of the whole audience. The church gave expression in keeping with revival interest. Penitents knelt for prayer. The congregation was dismissed Sunday night under most promising auspices. The meeting continues.

A note from L. B. Staleler informs us that his own health is good as could be expected, that he is able to do some preaching, but that Sister Stateler's health is quite poor, causing him no little solicitude. Let prayer be offered in their behalf.

Why this Opposition?

We are sorry that any controversy should arise between us and our brother editor of the Montana Christian Advocate, and still more sorry for the unkind insinuations made againit us in the Advocate of November 7th.

The editor wishes to know what meaning is to be attached to the word "south" as it occurs in our name. For his enlightenment we will say that when the church was divided in 1844 the word "south" was added to our name to indicate that branch of the Methodist Episcopal church which was in the south. The church was not "established to foster a sin" as is insinuated by our brother, for it held to the doctrine and policy of the church as it had previously been without the change of jot or title. We grant that in view of the wide-spread growth of our church the name south is in many places a misnomer. But why stop to discuss that? Half the names in the world are misnomers. Is any branch of the church of Christ to be circumscribed because of its name?

It is not true that our church has gone only where it has been preceded by imigration from the south. We served as pastor of one of our churches in Colorado in which but one member out of twenty or thirty came from the south. Our preachers have gone out as pioneers in all this western country according to Methodist custom. They have gone into destitute fields regardless of where the people came from. If people from the south gave them the readiest hearing and the heartiest welcome it was but natural and right that they in turn should give them first service. We deny that their purpose has been to "keep alive sectional prejudice." We would ask what point of "sectional prejudice" our preachers try to keep alive? It is easy to make broad assertions, let the brother specify. We are conscious of doing no such a thing.

But why this opposition of our Methodist Episcopal brethren against us in the mission field? Is there not room for all? With both churches and all the other Protestant churches in the field there are yet many communities without the gospel. This opposition does not show the spirit of Paul who rejoiced in every means by which the gospel was preached.

Moreover God has blessed our work in these mission fields For the number of men and amount of missionary money expended we can show as much and as good fruit as any other chuch. We invite comparison with any.

Again, we ask why this opposition? We say let us work together. Let us oppose the common enemy. Let fraternity be real, then organic union may be possible, but not so long as this unkind opposition continues. B.

Is There Anything in a Name.

For these years we have gone under many names. This has not been of choice. Never yet has it been needful to represent ourself under an assumed title. From the time we joined the itinerant ranks in the report of the conference proceedings the newspapers have had great labor over us. We are sorry to have occasioned such annoyance.

Last summer when Bishop Galloway read us out as editor of this organ we felt the day had come to get ourself right before the world. We found it even difficult to get the press in harmony with our plans, so that today we feel compelled to own up and let our exchanges and readers know what is our true name. It has been published as follows: Conway, Cowey, Cooey, Caney, Coney, Cooley, Couly, Couie, Coey, Ceuoy, Conly, Cory, Coury, Cohey, Covey. Permit us to say for the benefit of all our friends that we are beyond a douht named Asbury Coke Couey. A name in part, at least, of as good Methodist make-up as could be asked. We take no offense at the many misnomers, for we do not know that there is much in a name. We purpose to do our best whatever we may be called.

My Savior.

I am not skilled to understand
What God hath willed, what God hath planned;
I only know at His right hand
Stands One who is my Savior.

I take God at His word and deed;
"Christ died to save me," this I read,
And in my heart I find a need
Of Him to be my Savior.

And had there been in all this wide,
Sad world, no other soul beside,
But only mine, yet He had died
That He might be its Savior.

One wounded spirit, sore oppressed,
One wearied soul that found no rest
Until it found it on the breast
Of Him that was its Savior.

Then had He left His Father's throne—
The joy untold, the love unknown—
And for that soul had given His own,
That He might be its Savior.

And O that He fulfilled may see
The travail of His soul in me,
And with His work contented be
As I with my dear Savior.

Yea. living, dying, let me bring
My strength, my solace from this spring—
That He who lives to be my King
Once died to be my Savior.

It may be of interest to our friends in Missouri to know that Helena, Montana, is within a few miles of the Missouri river. Up here, however, it is not the Big Muddy as its name indicates, but a beautiful, clear stream. Yet we have not heard of anyone insisting that its name ought to be changed because it is not appropriate to this part of it. But that would be as reasonale as to insist that the name of our Church should be changed because it is not all in the South.

The Editor Camping Out.

Sept. 3d, '88—Be it remembered we are still in the Upper Geyser Basin.

Shortly after breakfast Bro. K. and I started out to finish our sight-seeing in this part of the Park. A few minutes before the time of eruption we were standing at the base of Old Faithful. It is generally held that this geyser does not vary, but that is not the case. It does vary from five to fifteen minutes. According to the most correct observation we were able to make, it went over the time at this hour at least fifteen minutes. The compensation lies in the increased force with which it plays. Near the Old Faithful is the historical China Spring. As we stood on the bank of the Firehole River and thought of the Chinaman's amazement at the eruption of his spring, when he dropped soap into it, we felt excusable for some unseen amusement.

Across the river from Old Faithful, and on the east side, is a very extensive group of geysers and springs. We name the principal ones: Bee Hive, Giantess, Blanche Springs, Wild Hog, Little Minute Man, the Sponge, the Beach, the Lion, the Lioness and Cubs. Many we do not mention. On the formation of one of the springs we found the names of two young lovers from Montana and Kansas, registered Aug. 29, 1880. Their name is no more twain. One preservation of pencil writing is very remarkable. This writing was as plain as the day of its inscription.

Leaving this locality we crossed and recrossed the river and went down to the middle of the Upper Geyser Basin, on the east side of the river, where there is another large group of geysers and springs. Among these is the Chimney Cone, Saw Mill, the Spasmodic, the Bulger, the Triplets, the Grand, the Turban, the Minute Man, the Queen's Laundry, the Beauty, the Catfish, and the Chromatic. It is needless to say one can remain among these under perfect charm for hours. Time is one of the needful things.

We were to be in camp before twelve, as our time limit had about expired. We purposed an early dinner and a few hours of sight-seeing in the extreme northwest corner of this basin, and then our departure for other parts of the Park in the afternoon.

In the midst of our preparations for breaking camp the signal was given for the play of the Castle, one hundred yards from our tent. This geyser had gone over its time about five days. It was now about 11:30 a. m., Monday, Sept. 3d. The first spout of water from this furiously mad geyser shot up into the air hundreds of feet, the steam curled beautifully for many hundreds of feet higher, while the welling, thundering, seething noise, with the quaking, jarring earth beneath our feet—as we stood as near as we dared—made this an awful spectacle. We had not waited in vain. We left this locality with a sense of intense satisfaction in beholding the Castle do its very best.

We drove out of the Upper Basin about 3 o'clock, after having spent some time among the geysers and springs of the north end. On our way down we stopped a short while at the Midway Basin, which we have noticed before. Thence we came down to the Lower Geyser Basin and again visited points of interest. That night we stopped on the opposite side of East Firehole river, near Camp Reunion, the headquarters for the soldiers of this section of the National Park. We here had a good night's rest, preparatory to a long day's drive to the Yellowstone Falls, about twenty-five miles distant.

Sept. 4.—We rose early this morning for our drive to the Falls. We drove right up East Firehole river, crossing it seven times in the distance of seven or eight miles. We now came to the main divide between Madison and the Yellowstone valleys. We reached the summit at 11 a. m. By noon we were about fifteen miles from the Lower Basin, having passed Mar'y Lake, a beautiful body of blue water. (We stop here to say we made the mistake in a former letter in stating that we passed Mary's Lake before reach- the Lower Geyser Basin. This lake is, as here stated, within the Park, on the divide just mentioned. A short distance from the lake are ugly sulphur springs. Shortly after noon we came to a rude signboard, marked "The Coldest Water in the Park." This being quite the exception in this country of fire and sulphur, we soon alighted to test its genuineness. It proved to be very good, though the quantity was seriously at fault.

Just here a soldier came hurriedly from toward the falls, who asked us if we knew anything of fire breaking out in the forest near the Lower Basin. We had not heard of such and were afterward glad to learn there had been none. The appearance of the Park has been seriouly injured by this greatly destructive element. By inquiry from the soldier we learned the falls were ten miles away. It was now about 2 o'clock p. m. A few miles farther we came to Trout Creek, a stream on which the Butte Liederkraus (?) is supposed to have camped when the doctor in the company had such a novel experience in carrying wood on horseback. The next stream was Antelope. This we crossed about one-half mile from the Yellowstone river, which we could now plainly see. Five miles from the falls we came to Sulphur Mountain. The material was there in abundance.

Between this and the falls we crossed Alum Creek. The water of this little stream was so clear as to invite us to taste. For the benefit of any future travelers we will say it is best not to take too much of this in the mouth at once. It has an effect something similar to a very green persimmon. We were forcibly reminded of the tricks of boyhood.

We drove into a beautiful grove of thick pines about 5 p. m. The roar of the beautiful Yellowstone, a few hundred yards away, told us the scene of the falls was soon to be onrs. Sharp appetites well satisfied, the soft moan of the pines, and the deep bass voice of the roaring water of the Yellowstone were physical conditions for sweet slumber.

Helena.

We proposed in the beginning as one object of our paper to give our friends in the south and east some general knowledge of Montana. During our recent visit east we were asked many questions which showed a lack of information concerning our territory that surprised us. We propose, from time to time, to give some description of our chief towns and valleys and of the various resources of the territory.

We begin with Helena, the capital, which is situated on the south side of the beautiful Prickly Pear valley. It started as a placer mining camp at the mouth of Last Chance gulch, and from this point has grown in all directions—up the gulch, on the foot hills and the side of Mout Helena and down a considerable distance into the valley on the north. Its manner of starting accounts for the irregularity of the streets in the older part of the city. Streets at that time were of much less importance than the mines. The newer parts of the city all have broad streets, many of which have been graded with great labor and expense.

The population of Helena numbers about 15,000. Most of these came from the states east, though we have representatives from almost every nation under Heaven. Native westerners are not numerous yet, though one is occasionally surprised, when asking what state another is from, with the answer, "from California" or "from Oregon" or "I am a native Montanian."

The houses in Helena are mostly brick or stone, and average large. There are few shanties. The size of the buildings indicate that congestion of wealth for which the place has reputation. This wealth has brought its usual accompaniments. We have all the modern improvements and conveniences of an eastern city; excellent public school; churches for all who will attend; culture, taste and refinement. We have also it must be confessed, the extreme of vice and degradation with "wickedness in high places" which is to be looked for amidst so much unsanctified wealth.

We have no particularly imposing public buildings, excepting the court house, which is a fine structure, built of granite, and of unique architecture. It cost about $200,000.00.

The scenery around the city is charming. Close on the west is Mount Helena, rising a thousand or more feet above the city, while a lower range embraces the south and southeast. To the east and north lies the beautiful valley, twelve miles across, checked with lines of fence and dotted with farm-houses. Running through the valley the tortuous courses of the Prickly Pear and Ten Mile creeks are distinctly marked by the willows which line their banks. The valley seems set in a frame of mountains, among which rises as a prominent figure, Bear Tooth Mountain, with its perpendicular face. It is a noted land-mark, forty miles due north from the city.

Helena has never had a boom, its growth has been rapid, but by all the signs ii has been healthy and permanent. We quote the following with slight alterations, from a correspondent of the St. Paul Pioneer Press. It is reasonably accurate:

"Helena's progress this year will be greater than ever before. There is now in progress, and will be in progress with the next three months, over $4,000,000 worth of improvements in and about the city. There are now going up within the limits of Helena over $1,000,000 worth of residence and business buildings. The enumeration was made by actual count and publication not three weeks ago. A bank building is going up which will cost between $60,000 and $75,000. There is within five miles of Helna, and now in course of erection, a smelter plant, which is to cost upwards of $1,000,000. Among the factories which are now, or will shortly be, in course of erection, are a soap factory, fire brick factory, pottery and vitrified pipe factory and sampling works. Within three miles of the city, at the natural hot springs, there is going up a hotel which will cost $45,000, with other improvements which will aggregate $100,000.

Of city improvements, there is sewerage system to be built, which will cost from $100,000 to $150,000. The old electric light company is erecting new works and putting in a new plant, and a new company has also a plant in course of construction. There is a new line of street cars being built, and a steam motor railway laying track. Add to all this the probable construction of the Wesleyan university at a cost of $100,000, the railway improvements now in progress, upon which $80,000 will be expended, the street grading in all parts of the ctiy, which has already cost $15,000, and it will be seen that Helena is not lagging benind the procession of wide-awake western towns. Only the other day the city assessor completed his roll for 1888, and placed the value of taxable property at $9,000,000. This is an increase of over $1,000,000 since last year, and, at our estimated population of 15,000 people, makes the city's wealth an even $600 per capita. Work has already begun upon the sewerage system and it is calculated to have eight miles of main sewers completed by winter. The balance of the work will be taken up and finished next year.

Morbus Sabbaticus.

This is a descriptive phrase of a disease not sporadic, but epidemic. It attacks Church members with violence on the Sabbath from 10 to 12 o'clock, and it takes the rest of the day to recuperate, for in no case does it last until Monday morning. The patient begins to convalesce after the meridian, and about three o'clock a stroll is taken, or, if his finances will permit, a drive in the park. It is very fatal in large cities. In the country it attacks the horses, and during these same hours they are too sick or stiff for duty, and the pious family that owns them are obliged to stay away from church. Like malarial diseases, it observes the law of periodicity and runs through the scales of sevens. This disease never interferes with sleep or appetite, but is so regular in its returns that many take pills on Sunday and repair themselves for Monday, as some Christian manufacturers stop their mills piously on Saturday night, but devote Sunday to cleauing their boilers. The disease has, if continued, proved fatal to the soul, and in the end the body has gone down too. It is contagious. Beware!—The Presbyterian.

"A Sectional Church."

It is very evident that our contemporory, editor of the Christian Advocate, stuck his subject on after writing his editorial of November 7th, for there is not a line that could claim kin with the caption. He is not unlike some preachers who preach away from the text so far as never to return after its enunciation.

As to the term in the M. E. Church, South, about which he labors, we refer him again to the Montana METHODIST of October 25. If by careful reading he does not then "understand," we give him up as we have had to do in the case of a certain kind of boys at school. We quote: "The way our contemporary does deem necessary to mention, which it calls providential, was the emigration of southern people to sections of the west, carrying with them peculiar prejudices which we do not understand, refusing to affiliate with the Methodist Episcopal church and demanding the Methodist Episcopal church, South, to come and administer to their Spiritual needs and their sectional prejudices." (Italics ours.)

Will the Montana Christian Advocate explain how it was that the M. E. Church only a few yeaas after '44 had preachers in sections of the South where she had pledged not to go? In addition, will it tell us why so much money is being wasted; so many chuches are unfilled in Texas and other parts of the south where the M. E. church has gone in positive violation of her agreement of '44? If the answer in part be (for it can only be a meagre part) that her members of the north have gone there, we ask why did they not affiliate with the M. E. Church South? There was quite room enough. The west, as now understood, is a territory of heterogeneous make up—of classes to which we feel as providentially called as any church. We can assure the Montana Christian Advocate that we are not here simply for the evangelization of southern emigrants. Surely the M. E. church has not preceded every other church in all sections of the northwest. We have been pioneers in thousands of sections where there was not a preacher from any other denomination. We can not see how it is that our right to be in Montana or any other territory or state is questioned. Much less can we see that we are here to "administer to prejudice.

We have many churches in the northwest, in which there is not five per cent. of southern emigration, where the warmth of the pure gospel as given by men of God from our church has melted the hearts of men from the extreme north and all sections of this country as well as from foreign lands. If the southern people were our only material in this country we could not move along so prosperously as we do to-day. The Presbyterians are cited as patterns for our example. Possibly our contemporary will allow us to say that the southern assembly and northern people of Presbyterian faith in the south might also be worthy examples for the M. E. church in southern states. Be calm, dear friend, and think of the matter closely. There are two sides to the question. We would also remind every reader of this paper that the time and circumstances of division in Methodism and in the Presbyterian church in the U. S. were very different. The perplexities of organic union or affiliation among Presbyterians are very small compared with those of Methodism. Methodism was divided in 1844. The Presbyterian church during the late civil war. If the latter ever had any trouble in adjusting church property it seems not to have gone so far as to require the civil courts to labor for years that jusmight be done. The M. E. church has never had the genuine humility to say to the M. E. church, South, we acknowledge we strove ten years to deprive you of three to five hundred thousand dollars worth of church property. She has never said we treated your first fraternal delegate to our general conference very shabbily. The M. E. Church, South, has never had an opportunity to say we freely forgive you all, without a compromise of selfrespect—a selfrespect which God's word allows. We wish furthermore to state that there are the fewest, if any sections, where our members have gone, in the absence of their own church, that they did not join the M. E. church, and as a rule make the very best of members too.

Again, "she (the M. E. church) knows no north, no south, no east, no west. She was not established to foster a sin, nor has she a record she is obliged to ignore."

We also state, the M. E. church, South, knows no north, no south, no east, no west, and furthermore, we were not established to foster a sin, for we have been in America just as long as the present M. E. church. The M. E. church, South, is as much the original M. E. church as our honored sister. Indeed, it is a fact worthy of note that the M. E. church, South, has ever been more conservative than the M. E. Church. The very radicalism of the M. E church is to-day one of the great hindrances to organic union of the two bodies. Lest our contemporary say different, we call his attention to a resolution passed by the general conference of the original M. E. church in 1836, in the City of Cincinnati:

Resolved, That they are decidedly opposed to modern abolitionism, and wholly disclaim any right, wish or intention to interfere in the civil and political relation between master and slave as it exists in the slaveholding states of this union. Bang's Hist. M. E. C., vol. 4, pp. 245, 246.

This very view of the question was maintained by the southern delegates in 1844, and to-day, with reference to similar questions of a civil or political nature, the M. E. Chnrch, South is where she has ever been.

As to the partisan character of the M. E. church, we have not space to say more this issue, but simply add, that we have on hand a pamphlet containing the political status of the M. E. church as taken from her general and annual conference records. We will give this subject due notice another time, provided, the editor of the Montana Christian Advocate insists. In conclusion, we congratulate our contemporary in the concessions made to our last editorial on this subject.

Rev. J. M. Johnson and family arrived in Bozeman, Saturday, November 17th. The family will reside in Bozeman, and for the present, Brother Johnson serves the Bozeman circuit.

A New Field.

With a horse given us by Brother C. Beach, of our valley, to serve us in the ministry, and with a buggy bought with the help of a little missionary appropriation, we made our way to Rock Creek basin on wheels. This method of going, though not so pleasant as car traveling, enables the minister of the Gospel to visit, talk and pray with those who live between settlements where public preaching is impracticable. Such service is usually received with marked appreciation. Rock Creek basin which is about ten miles west of the Missouri river, is an irregular group of low hills hedged in by mountains, where Rock Creek is lost in little streamlets which lead to their respective spring heads. This basin has a radius of about four miles, and though unsurveyed, there are a number of settlements made in it. The first settlement was made by E. N. Jonhson, in March, 1881, and the first living child, was a daughter born to Mrs. Mattie Evans, about the 1st inst. The people in this basin are thriving in this world's goods, and what is better still, many have gladly availed themselves of God's plan, through his adorable Son, to bring them and their houses into normal relations with Him. We held among these kind people, a meeting of eight days, commencing the first Sabbath in November and ending the second at night; and, although they were quite busy, the services were well attended, and as one of its immediate results, we organized a society of twenty members, about half of whom start from the world. The religious people here, with a few exceptions, although they are of different faith, hailed with joy the opportunity of uniting in church relations. I have never seen a more signal display of God's power in the religious unity and purpose of a people, than it was my happy privilege to witness on this occasion. This is as it should be, and we thank God that he has permitted us to live to see in Montana what we have long and much desired to see —that realized need in God's people of church relation in communities where each cannot be favored with his or her own church. In such a case all should unite in church relations when an opportunity is offered, and thus be knit together in Christian fellowship that God may come and dwell in them and shine through them the beauty of holiness. Building material in its kind may be at hand, but it can never enter into a habitable structure until it is brought and built together therein. So God's people may be at hand in a community with their letters in their trunks or their memberships far away, but God is not likely to dwell in them in His Spirit's power until they are united in church relation. Alas! in their former relation they are seen soon to loose their spiritual power and become much like their ungodly neighbors, even desecrating the Sabbath of their Lord. God's grace is a unifying agent, knitting in love its recipients that God's power may be effectual in and through them in the overthrow of Satan's kingdom in their midst. "Out of zion, the perfection of beauty,hath Gods hined" in all ages of our lost world, and in all communities where his redeeming power is displayed. "Except the Lord of Sabbath had left us a seed, we had been as Sodoma, and been made like unto Gomorrah." R. S. CLARK.

HELENA, Nov. 15.

Watchman, What of the Night?

The first quarter of the conference year is gone, and it is fitting that we give a brief review of our work. There has not been the prosperity that is so desirable to every true minister. Many things have contributed to prevent the fullest measure of success. The country has been passing through one of the most exciting political campaigns in our history. It has been in the midst of the busy season among the country people; farmers were harvesting their crops and stockmen attending to their herds, and hence it has been almost impossible to get their attention.

Then, it takes time for the preachers to get moved, get acquainted with the people in their new field, and to organize for work.

One preacher, we are sorry to say, deserted his post without cause, and his place had to be filled, and was filled at once.

Several of the preachers were necessarily absent from their charges for several weeks at a time.

Brother Britt has been prostrated for several weeks; Brother Warren, also, for awhile, and unsupplied pulpits had to be filled by brethren dividing their time to the best advantage.

Notwithstanding these difficulties, the labor has not been in vain. A handsome new brick Church at Deer Lodge has been commenced and carried forward almost to completion. It was a grand achievement.

An elegant and commodious brick parsonage has been planned, erected and is nearly ready for occupancy at Butte.

The Church at Victor paid out of debt and dedicated to the Lord, and the Church at Helena completely renovated and rendered far more comfortable and beautiful inside. Parsonages have been improved and better furnished.

There have been a number of baptisms, conversions and additions to the Church in various places.

Five new and effective men have been added to our ministerial force. The MONTANA METHODIST has been favorably received and its circulation greatly increased.

And now, at the commencement of the new quarter, the preachers are all at their posts—except Brother Goulder, who is expected to arrive upon the field in a short time. They are reasonably well provided for, and are cheerful and hopeful in their work. Better yet, they are of one accord and one mind praying for each other, and praying and working for a mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

Upon the whole their is much to be grateful for. We thank God and take courage. And now, brethren, keeping the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace, let us put on the whole armor and press the battle at every point until the notes of victory shall greet our ears from one end of the land to the other. "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." E. J. S.

The Silver Bow County Sunday School Convention.

The Silver Bow county Sunday School convention was held in the Idaho street Methodist Episcopal church, South, November 13th, 1888. A well digested programme had been prepared, which gave the order of the proceedings. There were so many points of interest for consideration that time was at a premium. The convention was well attended. A very fair representation from the Sunday schools of the county. From the reports we gather the following:

There are twelve schools in the county. An enrollment of 1,044 scholars—average attendance of 739. Officers and teachers, 79. All the schools use the International Series of Sunday school literature. The schools were all reported in good financial and otherwise healthful condition. There was only one school outside of Butte and suburbs. It is well know however, that Silver Bow county is very small. These schools do not represent the Episcopal denomination and of course not the Roman Catholic.

Helena District.

I am most happy to report that the outlook for our cause in the bounds of the Helena district is quite hopeful. The preachers are at their posts organizing for a winter campaign, while some of them are already in the midst of the battle and report that victory is perched upon our glorious banner. God's work is being revived and souls have been happily converted, for which we give praise to the Lord of Hosts.

The second round of quarterly meetings was begun at Anaconda on the 11th day of November. The services on Sunday morning were reasonably well attended and were quite refreshing, and the Sunday school in the afternoon was an occasion of interest. Bro. Barbee has had a protracted meeting, doing all the preaching himself, during which there was quite an interest awakened and there was a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. There have been some additions to the church and others are expected to unite soon. A beautiful and well-toned organ has been purchased and placed in the church, and paid for, and our friends are beginning to take hold of the work with more earnestness. Bro. Barbee is diligent in his labors, is in favor with the people, and is hopeful of still greater success. He says that the District Conference, which is appointed for that place, will be hospitably entertained. Anaconda is growing rapidly and is one of our most promising towns. The finest hotel in Montana is being built on the lot adjoining our church and parsonage there.

From Anaconda I went to Deer Lodge, where Bro. Moore is actively engaged (together with our friend Mr. Phil Evans, who has taken a very active part in the enterprise and contributed largely to its success) collecting money for the new church, and doing much other work that has to be done in the building of a church. It is a grand success. Scarcely two months ago the old log building stood on the ground, unsightly and uncomfortable, and, as our people thought, unfit to represent Methodism in such a beautiful city and among a people of such refined tastes as Deer Lodge. Since that time the old house has been removed and a beautiful brick structure 26 by 46 feet, with gothic windows, gothic roof, and a vestibule at one corner, surmounted by a tower and handsome spire about fifty-five feet high, has been erected and is now almost ready for occupancy. It is the handsomest church of our denomination in the territory, and by the way, is pronounced by many, as handsome as any in Deer Lodge, and is a monument to the liberality of the people of Deer Lodge and the energy of those who projected and carried it forward. Brother Moore intends to commence a protracted meeting as soon as it is completed, and we are praying that it may result in an old time revival of religion. The Master above knows how much the prayers and efforts of a few faithful Christian women have had to do in this noble work.

Brother Moore grows in favor with the people. He has organized a promising Sunday school and is doing good work at Stuart. Our Sunday services were held in the court house where we felt the presence of the Master, as we worshiped together in an upper room. In the afternoon by invitation of my young friend, Brother Moore, a young minister of the Presbyterian church who is attending school at the college, I preached to the prisoners of the penitentiary. Never did I feel more sensibly the Spirit of the Lord God upon me and within me, as, locked up within those prison walls, I preached the glad tidings of Salvation to the poor unfortunate creatures who sat behind the bars and listened with eager interest to every word that fell from the speakers lips. Never did I realize more fully the force of that passage that exhorts us to remember those who are in bonds as being bound with them." Tears flowed from many eyes, and I trust good was accomplished. Brother Moore is doing a good work among the prisoners, a number of whom have united with the Presbyterian church.

While in Deer Lodge I visited the Montana college, which under the presidency of Dr. McMillan is enjoying great prosperity. I found among the pupils a number of friends that I had known when they were little children. It is pleasant to see them growing up to be such accomplished young ladies. A number of the students were present at our services on Sunday, and several of them will assist in our Sunday school as soon as it is organized in the new church. E. J. STANLEY.

The Chief Object of Sunday School Teaching.

A paper read by J. E. Rickards at the Silver Bow County Sunday School Convention.

If the theme assigned me was in the form of a question, which I was supposed to answer in as few words as possible, I would say, "The Chief Object of Sunday School Teaching" is the religious education of children. I would then affirm the religious education of children is the most important matter before the church.

Let us look at these for a few minutes, but, reversed, considering first the statement that "the religious education of children is the most important matter before the church." If this is true the church needs an awakening. Not that the work of the Sunday School does not receive attention, but because so few, comparatively, seem to realize the importance of the work. Can I say a word that will in any manner increase the enthusiasm and zeal of the Sunday School workers before me? If so I shall have some hope of reaching through you the local churches, and have more who will see and feel the importance of the work in which we are engaged.

Some one has said, "The children of to-day will in twenty years wield the social and civil power of the world. Whoever wins the youth will govern the world." This is apparent to every one.

The religious education of children is important from every standpoint, look at it how we may. Their own temporal and eternal interests demand it. The perils that beset the family and society demand it. The needs of the church demand it, to supply the call for intelligent workers and willing burden-bearers. And above all, God demands it and is calling us to his work.

In our children is the hope of the world. To be intensely practical, the hope of this community is in our children. How many conversions have there been among the adult population in all the churches of this city? The membership of our churches in this county is made up almost entirely of those who brought their church letters with them. The children of six and eight years ago are the young men and women of to-day. Very few of them have been religiously educated by our churches. Three thousand over four years in city and suburbs. Who believes one-fourth of them are reached by our Evangelical churches in their Sunday School work?

The religious education of the children is important from the standpoint of the possibilities in them. And in the use of that term I do not mean the possibilities for good only, for I think we do well to keep in mind also the corresponding possibilities for evil. I have often visited penitentiaries where are confined the convicted criminals of a commonwealth. As I look upon them and talk with them the thought always crowds itself upon me, "They were once somebody's innocent darlings"—innocent, tractable children.

O, friends! look around us at the pitfalls open for our children—open to engulf them. Dou you say, "My boy is safe?" Somebody's boy is in danger. Let me tell you, cut off all recruits to dens of crime and infamy that come from the young, and such places would soon have to close their doors, and our jails and penitentiaries would, in a few years, be almost empty. If we would save the world, we must save the children. Every child will grow up to be either a blessing or an injury to his fellows. Oh! Sunday School workers, do we ever stop to think how much is involved in the future of the child before us? Think of them a few years hence as actively entered upon life as young men or women. Consider the MANY, that young man or that young woman, when they step aside from the path of virtue, may take with them and bring many others in generations to come, all working to bring men and women passionward, earthward, hellward.

I must express my deep conviction that the church does not fully measure up to her responsibility in this matter. Every christian father and mother in this community should be alive to the fact that their own now innocent child, which they so lovingly press to their bosom is in great peril if the children all around us are not brought in and religiously taught to believe that sin separates us from God. A very large per cent of the children in this county will never receive any religious instruction unless they are reached and taught by the church.

This community needs a quickened conscience—a love for truth and purity. The inspiration for whatever is good, pure and holy comes from God's word. It needs to be brought home to the hearts of the people that the Book from which we teach is the Word of God. We should impress this upon our children, have them grow up to reverence and respect it as such.

Fellow workers, this is our text book; not of men, it is of God. Not a cunningly devised fable, but the power of God unto salvation.

Do we believe this? If so, let us study how to use it, how to make the most of it. We send our childred to school five days in the week for mental development and are content to crowd into one hour out of 168 a little training on spiritual things. Let us learn a lesson from the Roman Catholic church. We see them within a stone's throw of us to-day, gathering their children into their parochial school where they are being taught daily, not an hour a week. When will we be as wise? Oh, that we were more alive to the necessities of this work!

Teacher, the chief object of Sunday School teaching is the religious education of the child before you. In other words, you should study, teach and labor to bring your scholars to a saving knowledge of Christ as a sin-pardoning Saviour. Anything short of this, if not failure, is certainly falling short of your privilege. Instruction, edification, winning their affections, all this is good work, all on the right line, but yon should not rest content until you have won them for Jesus.

We know very well the difficulties in the way; but believe us they are not so great as they will be a few years hence if we allow them to go from us unsaved, and they can be overcome.

1st. Have a personal experience.

2d. Have a knowledge of what you want to teach.

3d. Have a knowledge of human nature—know your scholars.

A Visit to Bozeman.

In answer to a call from our young active pastor, at Bozeman, Rev. R. F. Jarvis, I came over to this valley city Thursday, November 22nd, or rather I reached it at 1 a. m. Friday morning, too late to expect to meet my brother at the depot. I stopped at the LaClede house, where I found a good warm bed and the next morning a very palatable breakfast. Shortly afterward I walked up Main street to the postoffice, and upon coming out I stood for a moment on the sidewalk enjoying the bright sunlight. Upon looking up the street I saw a gentleman coming whose face looked familiar, and I believed at once that I knew the party. By the time he had got within twenty paces I saw it was a well known friend from the states. Sure enough it proved to be Judge Thomas A. Garrett. A pleasant meeting it was. We soon found ourselves in his office in the court house, engaged in a slight review of the days gone by. I received a hearty invitation to go around and see Mrs. Garrett and the children who had just arrived a few days before. I in turn gave my friend a cordial invitation to come out to our protracted meeting, and he will do it.

As I was walking down the street, I felt the nudge of some one behind me, and upon turning around found it was Brother Jarvis, who had been pursuing me from the hotel where he had found me registered. I was truly glad to see him in such a hopeful mood. He was very cheerful indeed, and thought the prospects very good for a meeting. I was soon escorted to the hotel, my satchel gotten and we were off to Sister Gitthens, where the young pastor boards. Dinner over, we were out among the flock visiting. In in our rounds we stopped at Brother John H. Johnson's, a recent transfer of the Memphis conference. Brother Stateler had been to Bozeman and bought a house and lot, and had Brother Johnson and family domiciled for the winter. I found him and his helpmate in good spirits, busy at arranging affairs, as they had only been in a few days. He will keep his family in town and serve two appointments in the Bozeman circuit for the winter, as planned by the presiding elder.

At 7:30 p. m. we were in our cozy temple of worship on Church street. We had a very fair congregation indeed, for a week-night service. The people appeared to hear the words gladly. The after meeting showed revival interest. Services dismissed, I met a number of good people who lingered, and we talked up the meeting. I am quite hopful of our cause here. We have much for profound gratitude to God, the little band rallying to the help of our highly esteemed young pastor, and all are working well. We wait for further developments in the meeting and hope Brother Jarvis will have a good report for our next issue.

Notes and Personals.

Dr. Fitzgerald, according to his usual custom, gave us a good editorial November 24, on "Christianity the Religion of the Body."

Rev. W. F. Goulder got in from Kentucky November 25th, and we suppose by this time, is on his work in the great Jefferson valley. We congratulate our friends at White Hall and Silver Star in getting the services of this young man, for a few days acquaintance with him at Bozeman on his arrival made a very favorable impression.

From what we learned of Brother J. H. Johnson while in Bozeman, we judge him to be a man who will see to it that the people of his circuit take our church papers and read our late publications from Nashville. Brother Johnson is also one of our best peachers. We hope he will do us much good.

We are sorry to record the recent serious illness of Bro. Warren, our preacher at Willow Creek. He has had an abcess in his right lung, but reports in a letter received this week that he is much better. We pray he may sood be restored to his usual health.

We notice in the report of the Memphis Conference, that there are nine Church schools under her auspices, with an attendance of 883 scholars.

Rev. J. H. Riggin, writing on the origin of "infant baptism," has traced it in history as far back as A. D. 305, and says "the origin is not yet." This is an old subject, but we will watch his articles in the Arkansas Methodist, with interest to see if he can go back to the days of the Apostles. The next article will be number 8.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Idaho Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Butte, Mont., had a grand "Thanksgiving dinner" November 29, and netted a handsome sum with which to furnish the new parsonage. The pastor and family are now cozily domiciled in as comfortable a home as any itinerant in Montana. How pleasant it is to have an appreciative band of noble women as ministers to our temporal wants in Butte. The Lord help us to feed this flock in Spiritual things.

The postoffice of Rev. E. J. Stanley is Corvallis, Montana, though he is absent in the district most of the time.

"Three classes of preachers: The losing class; the holding class and the gaining class. To which class do you belong?—Ala. Chris. Adv.

Brother W. F. Goulder, from the Memphis conference, arrived in Bozeman, Montana, Sabbath, November 25th. We do not yet know where his work will be. We suppose our presiding elder will find a withered field somewhere in the bounds of the conference.

Is there not more meaning than at first appears from the statement of Dr. J. E. Godbey, when he says: "A Methodist pulpit will make a Methodist membership?" As long as there is a necessity for distinctive church organizations we take it that there is a necessity for distinctive doctrinal, denominational preaching. Our meaning here of the word doctrinal is not in that narrow exclusive sense known as sectarianism.

An old friend in the city of Monroe, Louisiana, sends us a paper containing an account of the unceremonious arrest of a preacher on his way from Texas to Georgia, having been transferred by Bishop Hendrix. He was landed in prison, kept until next morning, and tried on suspicion of being a noted express robber. We are surprised that our officials in the states are so uncivilized. We don't do things up in that style in Montana. Preachers have great courtesy shown them up here.

That steward who went sixty miles to attend the quarterly meeting, carrying with him a good collection from his society to report to the quarterly conference, and to give in his testimony as a Christian at the experience meeting, shall not loose his reward. It has the old time ring and augurs favorably of success. If our offlcial members knew how much their presence at the quarterly meeting cheers the pastor's heart and contributes to the success of Christ's Kingdom, they would surely never be absent without good cause. S.

It was with pleasure that the writer observed the expression of painful solicitude on the countenance of a lady teacher in the Sunday school recently when on taking charge of her large class of interesting girls she remarked: "I notice that two of my girls are not here. I wonder what can be the matter?" No wonder that lady has a a large class and holds it, and no wonder there is life in that Sunday school. Personal interest and sympathy and painstaking efforts are great secrets of success in Sunday school as well as in pastoral work. The great Shepherd left the ninety and nine and went in search of the one that was lost and was missed from the fold. An eminent minister remarked that a great proportion of those who had been converted under his ministry were "hand picked"—gathered in by personal and individual effort. S.

The Union Pacific Railroad company is making a survey from near Melrose up the Big Hole river and down through the Bitter Root valley, and it is expected the line will be built next summer. If so, it will assist wonderfully in the development of the vast resources of that country. S.

The weather throughout the territory is delightful. The ground is generally free from snow. Cattle, horses and sheep are doing well on the range. Improvements are being made and business goes forward almost the same as in midsummer. A wonderful country, this. S.

Our paper is prospering, but its friends must not relax their efforts. We want to double the present subscription list before the year is out, and we can do it easily if all will be diligent in canvussing for subscribers. The paper commends itself wherever it is seen and read. It will prove a valuable auxiliary to every pastor. S.

Let all our brethren send contributions to the METHODIST. There are now fifteen active men in the field, and while there would not be room enough for a long article from each one in every paper, yet there is always room for short, crisp communications and reports from the field of battle. We want the paper to be an exponent of life, particularly religious life and activity in Montana. To this end all should labor. If an article now and then is overlooked, just thank the editor for it and try again. Such things have befallen the greatest writers of the world. Resolve to bear and forbear and work early and late for ths success of this paper. S.

Rev. W. W. McMurry, one of the solid men of the Missouri Conference and a subscriber of the METHODIST, writes to have his paper changed and compliments our conference organ. He was chairman of the examining committee when this scribe applied for admission on trial into the traveling connection, and his genial face did much to quiet the fears and inspire confidence in the heart of at least one member of the class of 1869. May his shadow never diminish. S.

If some of our ladies could have attended the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society at the Kentucky Conference held at Nicholasville, listened to the able address of Miss Bennett, the president, and the earnest words of Christian experience and exhortation from Mrs. Hughes, and the fervent prayer of other Christian women there, it would surely have awakened a greater interest in Christian effort both at home and abroad. It is a grand work that we are doing in this Montana land to-day, laying the foundations, educating public sentiment and giving type in a large measure to social and religious life for generations to come. The women of the church have much to do in this mighty movement. S.

We regret to learn of the continued serious illness of our senior Bishop McTyeire. He is one of the great men of the church, and has always been a friend to Montana. We will not soon forget his kind and encouraging words betore the Kentucky Conference at its last session in behalf of our work in this territory when he announced his intention to send our Brother Cockrill to this field. We hope to hear of his recovery soon. S.

The Great White Throne.

On the glassy sea of green
Flooded with God's noontide keen,
Can there be for sin a screen?
Omnipresence none can flee;
Flight from God to God must be.

Evermore my changeless past
Will gaze on me from out the vast;
Thou art first and thou art last;
Evermore with God must I
Dwell in strife or harmony.

O, if now before thy face,
In thy brightness I had place,
With the past unscreened from thee,
Thou from whom I cannot flee,
How could peace abide with me?

Since from thee in heart estranged,
If this instant, I, unchanged,
Were in heaven, thou, God, dost know,
Highest heaven were deepest woe,
I and it are variant so.

God, O God, thy likeness give,
In and of thee let me live!
God, O God, for sin atone;
By thy love awake my own;
I must face thy great white throne!

The Editor Camping Out.

Sept. 5, '88.—As we expected to spend most of the day at the falls, we thought on retiring that we would not rise very early the next morning. Having been in camp life now for several weeks we had gotten accustomed to early rising, so this morning Bro. K. and I were ready for sight-seeing by 5:30 a. m. The first thing for Bro. Kemper was to see to his horses, which had been picketed some distance from camp the evening previous, while my first morning task was to get the buckets and scramble down the bluff for some Yellowstone water. This gave me an early opportunity for seeing the upper falls. Just about sunrise I found myself entranced with the scene. It appears to me that it is enough to reduce anyone to a solemn pause at least once in life to stand here and watch and hear this beautiful and yet grand volume of water roll over the great precipice. I crawled out on a projecting rock to a place where I considered myself safe, and, while I supposed there was no danger, I must confess I was better prepared to enjoy the grandeur rather than the beauty of the scene.

On the left side of the falls there was a slight pink tinge, in the center it was blue, while on the right side it was apparently snow white. To behold the falls by sunrise gives one too much to describe. While standing looking at this most interesting sight there came down from the hotel a young man and lady whom I judged to be spending their honeymoon, and you need not ask me why I thought so. I would think this would be a most delightful place for passing a part of that eventful month of married life—or even preparing for that relation. The sentimentality must be quickened by such a scene.

Breakfast came at 8 o'clock. This over, we were all eager for going down to the lower falls, a mile below, where, according to all tourists' accounts, a sublime sight awaited us. About 9:30 o'clock we walked down to the lower falls, and what scrambling we did have. To worm along down the narrow pathway was no easy task. Finally, however, without accident, aside from a fall or so by some of us, we reached the point of observation just over the falls. By this time it was raining some, and the heavens looked as though they threatened a storm.

We were filled with a deep sense of awe as we stood and saw this roaring, leaping, furious river plunge over the mighty precipice to rebound twenty, forty, and possibly fifty feet to fall again as softly as snowflakes. With a black cloud in the background the scene was unique, and chiefly that of the sublime. We amused ourselves for a while by throwing rocks over to see them go down, down, until lost in the spray below.

We had not been here long before a sense of some disappointment came over us lest we should not see the falls by sunlight. The clouds soon rolled away, however, and in just the proper time for the scene to be the prettiest, in contrast with what we had already observed, the sun burst out in all his morning glory. Quoting my simple language at the time, "Oh how beautiful the water as it leaps over the mighty precipice and turn into white spray as it rebounds from the fall into the depths below." A sweet young bride with her flowing bridal veil could scarcely for one hour be more charming than this pure, innocent child of nature. Here, too, was the "bow of promise" spanning the beautiful Yellowstone, and making it impossible to describe.

After returning to the point of divergence from the path leading on down the river to the Grand Canyon, the ladies had grown faint and said they would return to the tent and rest and prepare the noonday meal. Bro. K. and I could not resist the temptation to make further investigation by going down the Yellowstone to the place known as "Point Lookout." From this we got a view that was worth the walk. While here we thought of the adventurous E. J. Stanley, whose descriptions of this very place are so interesting in his "Rambles in Wonderland." We could but think of his dangerous experiment in trying to go down these almost perpendicular walls to the water's edge to get a better view the falls. I imagine I know just where he made his descent, but I had not the courage or strength to follow in his wake. Had he then been along it might have been otherwise.

Our alotted time having expired we returned to camp to prepare for going to other parts of this great wonderland.

From Willow Creek.

DEAR EDITOR:—The bright beautiful face of the METHODIST beams upon us every two weeks, filling my heart with gratitude and praise. Among many things I thank our God for this bright "Thanksgiving day" is that Southern Methodism is taking deep root in Montana's soil, and is becoming a power. I was thankful that we had a church organ well edited and well patronized. I am also thankful that God put it into the hearts of so many preachers to come to our assistance. My congregations are good and there is an increased interest taken in the general cause over last year. The prospects for a general revival on my work is growing better all the time. Many of those gathered in last year are faithful and are doing good work for the Master, while a few, alas! have gone back to the beggarly elements of the world. I am persuaded more and more that the need of Montana is not "fine sermons," so called, to convert and save sinners, but Gospel truth simply, delivered "in demonstration of the Spirit and truth power." The ministry as well as the church needs to be baptized with the Holy Ghost. We must tarry in the closet till fire from Heaven comes down and touches our hearts and lips. As Southern Methodists, we have no other work but to save souls. We are not anxious about who is president or delegate to congress. We want no offices. We spend no time in political canvasses. Our churches have been consecrated to the service of the Almighty God alone, and we are not bothered with so called "Grand Army" reunions in our houses. Being clear of the world, and not of the world what a field for work there is before us! Let us pray now for the presence and power of the Spirit to prepare us for a general move upon the fortifications of sin and Satan. Let us preach holiness of heart, "without which, no man shall see the Lord." Many of the professors of religion in Montana, I fear, are only nominal Christians. We need a revival in the church as well as out of it. The "loaves and fishes,' though few and small, if "blessed" will abound and increase until the thousands are fed. Oh, for hearts burdened for sinners! burdened until our eyes weep and our hearts break for the salvation of the people.

My health has been poor since conference, a few appointments have been missed on account of affliction. I hope to be myself again so that I can do more for the Master. I send greeting to all of our people and preachers and say to them, let us in God's name move up and push the battle for the right into the enemy's camp. God has ordered us to the front and expects that each one will do his duty.

Your Brother,
B. E. H. WARREN.

Stevensville Notes.

Without wishing to occupy any more than my share of your valuable space, I venture once more to send you a few items that will possibly be of some interest to your readers.

We are making some progress at Stevensville both spiritual and financial. On Sunday last at the night service, it was our great privilege to reap the first fruits of our labors in Montana. In response to a call for seekers of religion made at the close of the sermon, a dear girl, the daughter of one of our principal friends from whom we have received great kindness, came forward, bowed at the altar, professed conversion, and offered herself for membership tn the church. A gracious feeling pervaded the congregation at the time. Others evidently, were under conviction. It was an hour to be remembered.

We held a church conference on the following Monday night, at which, after the correction of the church roll, the disciplinary plan in regard to ministerial support was adopted. A committee was also appointed consisting of two male and two female members, with the pastor, to solicit subscriptions in "cash, produce, goods, stock, or any other marketable articles" towards liquidating the debt of nearly $400 remaining on the church property here. This method of raising the amount needed, although, perhaps a slow one, was unanimously chosen in preference to a series of suppers, festivals, etc. A wise choice we think.

We are especially gratified at the interest that some of our young men and youug ladies are taking in church matters. This is as it should be. The old standard bearers will fall some day and these will then be needed to take their places.

A very interesting Sunday School convention for the purpose of affecting a permanent organization of the county was held here on the 14th and 15th inst. Rev. T. V. Moore, of Helena, represented the territorial association as organizer and greatly enlivened and enriched the proceedings of the convention with his earnest, wise and weighty words. Several other ministers were present and the attendance of lay delegates from the various Sunday schools in the county was fairly good considering that such gatherings are a "new departure" with us. We noted that Union Sunday Schools were not in favor in the convention. "Makeshifts for something better" was the designation given them. Strong objection was taken to the Lesson Helps to the neglect of the Bible. A traveling Sunday school was found to exist in a sparsely settled part of the country.

We are now co-operating with our Presbyterian friends in a protracted effort at Victor. Rev. M. Bishop, of Deer Lodge, is the principal preacher. The attendance is good and the interest is increasing.

Oh, for a signal outpouring of the Spirit on all the churches in Montana, on our own valley and church in particular. For this we pray and work and wait.

Fraternally,
JAS. B. PARNALL.

Nov. 22, 1888.

Fraternity.

Dr. W. T. Bolling, one of our pastors at Denver, Colorado, writing with reference to fraternity, gives no uncertain sound, as follows:

"I have not yet had the pleasure of meeting any ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church, and presume they visit only by a fraternal delegate once a year. We have political and social humbugs, but the crowning humbug is to be found in cheap talk fraternity with nothing to back it. There is nothing in it. Dr. Steel and others may talk themselves hoarse, still it is as "sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." I must freely confess I am sick of it, and do not propose to act either the hypocrite or the dummy with reference to it.

Pulpit Leverage.

It is said that the lever is the most simple and common, but the most important of the seven mechanical powers. What is true of the lever in mechanics, is also true of the pulpit in the ministry. "Preaching," says Dr. Broadus, "is characteristic of Christianity. The great appointed means of spreading the good tidings of salvation through Christ is preaching—words spoken, whether to the individual or to the assembly. And this, nothing can supersede."

If then, the pulpit is the source of such power, whatever makes the pulpit what it should be is the thing for our most serious and devout consideration.

1. We must have somebody to hear us. Can that man fail who has great crowds in the pews before him twice every Sabbath? Yes. Many have done it. Success does not follow of necessity because a preacher has many hearers. He may have throngs and yet fail. While this is true, for success the preacher must have the ear of the people. He need not rest content, and feel that he is filling his function, when preaching to empty seats. But, hearers alone fill not the bill.

2. It is not our intention to write at length upon the qualificatious for the pulpit. A man, called of God, filled with the Holy Ghost, who makes the word the man of his counsel, who unfolds the Scriptures, one of whom it can be said, "truths divine come mended from his lips"—be it understood that such a one is the preacher.

3. The leverage about which we feel so concerned is in the church itself. The body of Christ—the visible church—our brethren and sisters who hear. Where there is no church, the hearers being all "of the world," we believe God will honor his word faithfully spoken by his servants. But when he has a "people" is there not vested in them the leverage necessary for the pulpit to become the power that God purposes?

Moses was very near the Almighty on Sinai, but came down to find the people in idolatry. Joshua, the great leader of Israel into the Holy Land, was blameless, when the sin of one man brought a great curse, and stopped the onward march of the Lord's hosts. Peter preached a grand Holy Ghost sermon on the "fiftieth day," three thousand souls were converted and were added to the church, but the brethren had met in the temple "with one accord."

Dear brethren and sisters of the laity, in you is the leverage. Own the responsibility. Help your poor struggling preacher with your prayers and sympathy and look for great blessing in your congregation. Leave not your home for the house God on Sabbath without going to God in secret prayer for the outpouring of his spirit upon your preacher, the congregation and on your own heart. Let us sow in tears, we will reap in joy.

Substantialism.

By degrees the scientific world is making new discoveries along the lines of investigation. Development is on the alert and men have found something new under the sun(?).

Mr. Swander, of Fremont, O., writing in the Microcosm, says: "The fundamental tenet and teaching of substantialism maintains that besides the material substances in the general constitution of nature there are also forms of immaterial substance as real as the adamantine rocks of the earth or the glittering stars of the firmament."

This is spoken of, or written about as "the new philosophy."

A. Wilford Hall, Ph D., LL. D., is said to have put a quietus upon the thinkers of the age, about the middle of the afternoon of the 19th century, by introducing the "Substantial Philosophy" in the form of "The Problem of Human Life."

Now as to the newness of this philosophy as such, it may be as new as is claimed, but is it not from the standpoint from which it is viewed? Were the writer above referred to, Mr. J. I. Swander, not a divine, we would be led to think that he supposed this was new even to the theological world. As such, however, he has been living on this philosophy for years, knowing that Christianity as taught by the word of God has not been ignorant of this philosophy. Job, even, many centuries B. C., held that in great comfort to his soul.

We are then led to this conclusion, viz: That this doctrine of substantialism is new from a scientific standpoint only. Paul said, "There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body." To extend this theory to anything beyond humanity is carrying it beyond any teaching we have from God. If it be held by this new philosophy that all nature has its immaterial counterpart, why then, we hold that it is a theory "wise above that which is written," and we prefer to wait to see how it works.

The spirit of organic union amongst the churches in missionary fields abroad, seems to be growing. This will doubtless knit them more closely together in the home churches. We see that "the plan for the organic union of the Presbyterians, Congregational and the Reformed churches in Japan has been completed." Should the plan be carried out, it will doubtless result in great good. We say: "Let brotherly love continue."

Let Success Be Followed Up.

Brethren of the Montana Annual Conference, we know of no better time than just now for you to double the number of subscribers to the Montana METHODIST. We have succeeded admirably this year. The thing to do is to pursue this line. As early as the income of the paper will justify it, we should improve our paper, by enlarging it or issuing it every week. Let us grow. See how many cash subscribers you can get before the new year comes. A strong pull, and all together.

To the Stewards

And others who have the responsibility of looking after the preachers' support committed to them: Dear brethren and friends:—Let me remind you of the importance of promptness and diligence in your work. The preacher is depending largely on you for his living, according to the plan that the great Head of the Church has ordained. If you are unfaithful, he not only suffers in consequence, but is largely shorn of his strength and the entire church suffers. There is nothing like starting with the year. There are many who will give a dollar or more a month, and give it every month, beginning with the year, merely for the asking, who would not think of giving ten or twelve dollars all at once. Many people give three times as much as others in proportion to their means just because they pay a little at a time, pay often and keep it up. It may require a few hours of your precious time to do this work, yet it is better for you to bear part of this burden than for the pastor to bear it all. Many hands make light work you know. We expect the peacher to do his whole duty—to spend and be spent in his work. But he cannot succeed without your co-operation. We are "members of the body of Christ and members one of another." Let each member perform faithfully the duties of his office and Zion shall triumph gloriously. E. J. S.

Field Notes—Helena District.

After the quarterly meeting at Deer Lodge, I took a trip over home near Corvallis in the Bitter Root valley. Thankful for even a brief visit with the loved ones and again committing them to the care of Him whose servants we all are, I left on Friday afternoon, and the next day at 1 o'clock dined at the home of Brother and Sister A. Collet, who happened to live in walking distance of thc depot at Helena, and whose house has been a home for our preachers in Montana for nearly twenty years. It is a pleasure to share their hospitality after a lapse of years. It revives pleasant memories and awakens pleasant anticipations. What a pleasure it will be after the battles of life are over to meet in the "home over there" and recount the trials, triumphs and incidents of the journey here below. Oh, how many we expect to meet in that "innumerable company" by whom we have been helped and refreshed in our labors in Montana.

Brother Britt has quite recovered from his sickness, and is gathering fresh life and zeal from his affliction, and is addressing himself to the work, if possible, with redoubled energy and vigor. The work of associate editor and business manager of the METHODIST, which necessitates reading proof, soliciting patronage, collecting bills, seeing that the paper is brought out and mailed to subscribers, all in addition to the duties of the pastorate, keeps one man pretty busy to say the least of it. We had a pleasant service on Sunday morning and evening. The Sunday school shows a good degree of vigor, and is in a healthy condition under the leadership of Brother Hunter. The good ladies of our church here have surely acquitted themselves nobly in repairing and re-arranging the audience room of the church. The walls and ceiling are handsomely papered, and a vestibule with a class room on each side, has been cut off the front end. All of which may be connected with the audience room when necessary by means of the folding doors. May the Lord accept the offering and hear the prayers of the pastor and people and send a time of refreshing and a great ingathering of souls. I verily believe he will.

After spending a few days with Brother Britt, visiting and helping with the paper. On Thursday, Thanksgiving day, Brother R. S. Clark and I boarded the north-bound Montana Central train for Rock Creek station, thirty-seven miles distant, where we arrived at 1:30 p. m. We expected to meet a team to convey us to Rock Creek basin, seven miles distant, where the quarterly meeting was to be held. But no conveyance was at hand. After getting our dinner, for which we were indebted to Mrs. Wynne and Mrs. Howton, we started on foot to Craig. Mr. A. Harvey kindly offering to furnish us a team from there to use for several days. We had completed two.thirds of the journey and were just thinking of the rest that awaited us at the home of our friend when we were overtaken by a man who came at break-neck speed, hallooing at the top of his voice and bringing the team that was sent for us but had not arrived until after we left the depot. We took passage, returned to Rock Creek, and from there over a mountainous road, drove to the "basin," Brother Clark holding the lines and talking theology, which accounts for us not arriving at the home of Brother and Sister Willis, who had sent the team, until after dark. The reception was just such as two weary and hungry Methodist preachers were prepared to enjoy.

Learning that the school house was not in condition to hold a meeting in, the next day the neighbors were visited and arrangements were made for underpinning and pointing the building which was completed early in the day on Saturday and the house ready and comfortable for service on Saturday night. The preachers joined in with the rest, one carrying mud and helping to mix it, and the other daubing the cracks, much after the fashion, I imagine, of Robert Strawbridge and his co-laborers when building the first Methodist church in America, near Baltimore, more than one hundred years ago. Well, it was a decided success, and the meeting reminded one of olden days. Our hearts were refreshed as we visited these sturdy mountaineers at their humble, but comfortable homes and worshipped God together. Brother Clark took sick and we closed on Sunday night. The people cheerfully contributed the sum of twenty-five dollars in cash to assist in paying for a buggy for the preacher in charge.

This is a comparatively new settlement. The people are intelligent, industrious and well disposed. They are in a way to prosper. Brother Clark is doing a good work among them, and I shall expect to hear good things from this quarter in the future. He is the first preacher that ever visited them. A society of twenty has been collected. May it increase more and more. We had a good experience meeting on Sunday night. It was good to be there. May the Lord bless those good people and carry forward His work. On Monday Brother Woodruff brought our party, consisting of Brother St. John, a steward, who had gone all the way from Alhambra, sixty miles, to attend the quarterly meeting, and two preachers, over to the station and we reached Helena at 5 o'clock p. m.

Holiness.

My experience of conversion was clear. I received the witness of the Spirit that my sins were forgiven, and with this, after a few years, entered the ministry. But I never felt that my experience or character measured up to that promised to me and demanded of me in the Bible. Such Scriptures as "He that drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst," and "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled," condemned me, for my soul often panted for God as the hart pants for the waterbrook, and the promise was plain that if I would drink I should never thirst, and that I need no longer be hungry and thirsty, but that I could eat and drink till I was filled. This, through ignorance and unbelief, I failed to do, until the doctrine of "Holiness or Christian Perfection" was brought fully to my knowledge through the writings of Wesley, Fletcher, Watson and others. I sought the blessing with much prayer and fasting, glad to receive the light these men threw upon the subject, and God filled me with His Holy Spirit in a measure I had not known before and I have had His conscious presence ever since. The God of hope filling me with all joy and peace in believing, I have abounded in hope through the power of the Holy Ghost.

The simplest and most unobjectionable way of describing the experience is, "being filled with the Holy Spirit." Not an imaginary, but a real, conscious filling. If a man can only get filled with the Holy Spirit, then he is entirely sanctified. But there are some things which necessarily accompany this fullness of the Spirit.

1. Complete consecration. If a man does not surrender himself and his all to God he seeks this experience in vain.

2. He must be cleansed from all sin. The law of sin in the heart must be eradicated through faith in Christ our atonement, in order that the Spirit may take full possession. For how can the Holy Spirit occupy the heart when sin occupies it? One or the other must go. Pure oil and water will not mix.

3. We abound in joy and peace and hope.

4. We possess the love which is the fulfilling of the law.

5. We have a prayerful spirit, being "fervent in prayer," and "praying without ceasing."

6. "In everything we give thanks."

The above are only some of the things which accompany an entirely sanctified life. Now just so long as a man keeps himself filled with the Spirit, just so long is he wholly sanctified, and just so long will all Christian graces abound in him. If he allows sin to encroach upon the territory that rightfully belongs to the Holy Spirit and which he gave to Him in his consecration, to that extent he is not entirely sanctified, for he is not then filled with the Holy Spirit. Or if, through unbelief, he allows the deceitfulness of riches, or the cares of this world, or its pleasures, to get possession of his heart, he becomes barren and unfruitful.

Then the question arises, can a man keep filled all the time with the Spirit? Yes, certainly he can. The same condition, faith, on which he obtained the fullness of His presence, if exercised, will retain the fullness of His presence.

Few men have ever appropriated fully the blessing placed within the reach of all through the atonement of Christ. The ministry, especially, are without excuse for not getting all that God has for them.

H. B. Cockrill.

Consolation.

The St. Louis Advocate gives the democrats consolation over their late defeat in the following words.

1. It is only the one side that is depressed; if the whole country was in depression it would be a grave condition. Four years ago, when the news of Cleveland's election came, we were riding in the street cars and a gentleman got in who was greatly troubled and he gave vent to it without reference to his surroundings, declaring that it was too bad, most afflictive. We were not troubled a bit and said to him, "That depends on which side a fellow is on." He brightened up at once and said, "That is true." It seemed never to have occurred to him that the whole country had not gone down in his calamity and he was relieved by the suggestion.

2. Think how many happy people their are. More than one half of this glorious people are rejoicing at what seems a sorrow to others. If our sorrow can't effect them, it will be virtue in us to be consoled by their joy. For they are happy and there are a great many of them, and some of them are not the worst fellows in the world, some of them are not worse than our crowd, and several of them are as good as our best.

3. A great many of the religious papers coming to us seem well content at the result. It is true, they do not come from a very warm climate, but some of them are hot with joy. Most of them, though, seem quit sober and thoughtful and satisfied; even those who took no political stand and who seemed by their silence to be impartial, if not democratic. We, of course, have all confidence in editors; some of them are not as moderate as we think they ought to be, not even as religious, may be, as their profession demands; not even so good politicians as they are partisans—but they have a good mixture of politics and religion and withal are a very clever, kindly, philanthropic set; they are, in the main, not only satisfied but highly gratified at the results. Maybe we ought to respond a feeble Amen to their hearty thanksgiving. At least if we cannot get up to the injunction to rejoice with those who do rejoice, we ought to restrain our tears and be happy conditionally.

4. It is said that President-elect Harrison is a Christian of the Presbyterian type, active, earnest, sincere—no mere politician church-membership. At least he will send no gifts to the Pope, nor join, for popularity, the people who are marching to Rome; but will be a true blue Presbyterian, and the White House will have those sturdy and pious things, the Westminster confession of faith and shorter catechism and family prayers, and that is a great improvement on many things that have been there, and we are inclined, though very sorry, to be happy at that.

5. The country is safe, the politicians can't kill it, and that fact gives us confidence.

6. God reigns. "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls; yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation."

7. We will, if faithful, soon be in heaven, where they neither vote nor elect. No change of administration, no political revolutions, no wire-pulling, no election frauds. All settled, happy, free forever.

The following figures from one of exchanges show an encouraging contrast in the rising generation: "The total enrollment of children in our public schools last year was 12,000,000, and the average attendance was 8,000,000. The Roman Catholic parochial schools have an enrollment of 500,000."

Work Every One Can Do.

Don't talk louder than you live. Hypocrites are poor witnesses. The first person to help is yourself, the next one is the nearest and most needy.

Help the lost sinner first; the weak Christian will get to heaven; help him afterward.

Invite the lost ones to service; do it by kind word or letter, or any good way. Pray for them in private; speak of the meetings, praise them.

Cut and send clippings out of the paper; use your pen; quote apt passages of Scripture.

Introduce the unsaved to some one who will better tell them the way of salvation. Go with the inquirer to the altar or inquiry room. Ask them to your homes; talk and pray with them.

Help make every meeting you attend a good one. If you cannot sing, move your lips in harmony with the singing. In public service be brief, both in prayer and remarks.

Live for Christ in your homes. This is the great need of to-day. Wash dishes, broil steak, make beds, sell calicos or silks like a Christian. Keep sweet, happy and hopeful. Be a walking sermon. Don't growl with your face. If you are sick, show what grace can do. If you are tried, bear as only a heaven-helped man can. If you are in trouble, let the world see in you the peace of God.

Let love to God flow out from all your actions. Lead the children to Christ. Keep away from doubtful things, and thus help a weak brother.

Ask God to direct you to work, and He will do it inside of forty-eight hours.

Don't quit work until the breath quits the body; then begin service on the other side, in heaven.—Rev. C. H. Yatman.

Teachers' Association.

We have received a programme of the Territorial Teachers' association and Siver Bow County Institute to be held in the astembly rooms of the Butte high school, Butte, Montana, December 26 to 29, 1888. This will no doubt be a profitable use of the holidays by the teachers of Montana. If properly attended it will be a great benefit to the profession as well as to all who may visit the sessions.

Drunkenness increases since the barrooms were re-opened in Atlanta. This means that the young manhood of the city is being wrecked, and that the hearts of many mothers and wives are breaking.—Nashville Advocate.

Echoes from the West.

Once upon a time, in Nashville, Tenn., at a certain hotel, Dr.—— and a young engineer from the West were seated at the same table. The old doctor's appetite not being very sharp, he was scolding at the waiters a little. The young engineer, noting this, remarked, "Your appetite seems rather hard to please this morning." With an expression not entirely free from amazement, the doctor looked at the engineer, and said: "Rather, sir. Young man, do you know who I am?" The engineer, nothing abashed, and with the frankness characteristic of railroad men, and yet pleasantly, replied: "Pardon me, sir; but I was just thinking that you were what we out West call an 'old crank.'" "Young man," replied the other, "I am Dr.——, a member of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. You are from the West, are you? Our Board is greatly interested in your country. Do you know anything of our Church and preachers out there?" "Oh, yes, sir! I often go to our churches and hear our preachers." "How is our Church work progressing out there?" "Not much to speak of, sir." "Well, can you give any reasons why it does not prosper?" "I can give one reason. Your Church makes the same mistake that our railroad companies make. The old and experienced engineers are allowed to choose their places, and they select the easier and safer runs back here where not much experience is necessary, and the young, inexperienced engineers are sent out West on those new and dangerous runs. Your Church keeps big preachers back here where the work is well organized—as we railroaders would say, where the runs are easy—and sends the young and inexperienced preachers to the west." "That is how it is you think? You seem to have studied the subject." "No sir, not at all—just been keeping my eyes open, as we engineers are expected to do. Why, sir, there are churches who have some of their biggest guns out there." "Now, that our breakfast is over, will you mind walking down town with me?" asked the doctor. "Certainly not," replied the other, not suspecting that he was further wanted on the question of our church's work in the west. By and by they stopped in front of a large building, and the doctor invited his new-made acquaintance to walk in. In one room they found several gentlemen engaged in earnest deliberations. After awhile the subject of our church work in the west came up, and, to the astonishment as well as bewilderment of the engineer, the old doctor rose, and said there was present a young man from the west, and moved that they now hear from him as to the work out there. Though by no means accustomed to public speaking, yet, like a true brave engineer that he is, the young man rose, and made about the same statements he had made to the doctor before. (If there are any who would like to hear further from the engineer, I will say that he has both married and got religion since the above occurred, and is now an enthusiastic Southern Methodist.)

Game Laws Now In Force in Montana.

The following sections from the game laws are published for the information of sportsmen, many of whom may keep out of the penitentiary by heeding their provisions:

Section 1,143, page 965 of the compiled laws of Montana, provides that any person or persons who shall shoot or otherwise kill or cause to be killed any buffalo, moose, elk, white tailed deer, black tailed, deer, mountain sheep, Rocky mountain goats or antelope, between the 1st day of December and the 15th day of August of the ensuing year, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty dollars nor more than fifty dollars for each offense.

Section 1,147 provides that any person or persons who shall shoot or kill, or cause to be killed, any grouse, prairie chicken, pheasant, fool hen, sage hen, partridge or quail, between the 15th day of November and the 15th day of August of the next ensuing year, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than fifty dollars for each and every offense.

Section 1,151 of the same act provides that the possession of the dead bodies or any part thereof of the animals or birds mentioned in this act shall be taken as prima facie evidence that such person is guilty of killing the same.—Ex.

If in our church statistics we could have a column showing the number of members lost to the church each each year in consequence of having changed their residence and gone into other churches, or, worse still, having abandoned all church-fellowship, it would be one of the most painfully suggestive of any in our year-book.—United Presbyterian.

Christmas.

Clear was the night when Syrian shepherds saw
High in the starry heavens a wondrous light;
Reclining on the ground they heavenward gaze
In trembling expectation, awe, and praise.
Seraphic strains float o'er the silent earth!
Ten thousand harps proclaim the Saviour's birth!
Mercy and Peace! Foretold by prophets hoary;
Announced by angels from the hights of glory;
Such was the Syrian shepherd's simple story.

C. Jay Smith.

Notes and Personals.

The MONTANA METHODIST greets her friends with good wishes for the NEW YEAR.

We have recently seen it stated that a proposition has been made to dam up the canyons of the Rocky Mountains in order to gather water for irrigating the plains that they may become fruitful.

We note in the appointments of the Mexican border conference that of the six presiding elder's district, five of the presiding elders have work as preachers in charge also. The question arises, how can a pastor be a presiding elder without loss to his flock?

In the life of Bishp Pierce we read: "There was not a Methodist college in the world in 1831, and few educated men, in the generally received meaning of the word, entered the traveling connection." How matters have changed in the Methodist family in the past half century.

One of our local C. E.'s report the weather in Butte for the first half of December, shows the coldest weatheer 14°, the warmest, 56° above zero. The mean temperature for the time, 35°. This means very pretty, open weather. Be it remembered that our city is 5,800 feet above sea-level.

We are glad to see that Bishop McTyeire, our senior bishop, in convalescing from a serious attack of illness.

From the number of contributions to the paper on the Holy Ghost, power, revivals, and kindred subjects, from the protracted efforts and from the good reports from various parts of the field, it is reasonable to conclude that our brethren are moving along the good old way which our fathers have gone. We predict the best ingathering of souls we have ever had in our conference.

Our overworked congressmen take a vacation in the extra session from December 21st to January 4th. It is just as well we presume.

John G. Whittier, the poet, was eighty-one December 17th, and is said to be in fairly good health.

A movement is on foot in West Virginia to change name of the state to that of Kanawha.

The improvements recently made on our church in Helena have cost about $500. The money has been well spent. Most of the amount has been raised by the Ladies' Aid Society. Last week they had a sociable and sale of articles of their own handiwork at which they cleared nearly sixty dollars.

We call attention to the advertisement in another part of this paper under the heading "The 50,000." It is a liberal offer made by our Nashville publishing house to all new subscribers to the Christian Advocate. The paper is more than worth its cost, and the premiums are among the best of recent publications. Every one will be better for reading such literature. All our preachers are agents for the Christian Advocate and any of them will take pleasure in forwarding your subscription.

We are gratified at the good news of revivals that comes to us from various points in our conference. We have just received intelligence of a gracious work in the Bitter Root Valley. Will the brethren write us fuller accounts of their meetings. Nothing else is read with such interest as news of revivals.

We learn that Brother Moore and his congregation at Deer Lodge occupied the new church for the first time December 23rd.

It is said that president elect, Harrison, will hold family prayers as usual after going to the White House. We have some curiosity to know at what hour prayers will be held the night of the inauguration ball, which is likely to cost fifty to seventy-five thousand dollars. We suspect it will be w giddy whirl.

Every one acquainled with the work of Henry M. Stanley, the the great explorer, is interested to know that he is yet alive and is pushing ahead in his praiseworthy mission in the Dark continent. The last reports are favorable.

We regret to learn that Spurgeon, the great English divine, will probably not be able to preach again during the winter. Bodily affliction compels him to desist from his labors.

Dr. D. C. Kelly, late missionary treasurer of the M. E. Church South, in addition to his pastoral work at Gallatin, Tennessee, has been given the editorship of the Monteaglan and Southern Evaegelist combined. This is to be published in Nashville.

We have not yet seen it authoritatively stated that our new hymn book is on the market. We are a long ways from headquarters but we do not wish to be the last in having our churches in Montana supplied. Watchman, tell us of the hymn book!

Quarterly Conference At Butte.

We had something of an old fashioned Methodist quarterly conference at Butte, December 14, 15, 16 and 17. The pastor announced on prayer meeting night that there would be preaching Friday night as an introduction to the conference occasion. The presiding elder, Rev. E. J. Stanley, came in about 6 o'clock. We had tea, and at 7:30 p. m. we began services with a fair congregation for a week night. At the close of a pleasant service we announced preaching for 11 a. m. Saturday, and also for 7:30 p. m. Though the attendance was small at 11 we had a profitable meeting. Saturday evening we had another fair congregation and a good sermon. Sunday 11 a. m we had a most precious time A good sermon by the presiding elder on "Jesus' walk with the two disciples to Emmaus" followed by the sacrament of the Lord's supper. Two members were received into the church. A better spiritual feast had not been enjoyed by us for some time.

At 2:30 p. m. the Sunday school assembled. Forty-five to fifty were present. Brother Stanley gave the children a very impressive talk. There seemed to be unusual zest in the singing of the children, and indeed the hour was pleasant. At 7 o'clock the people gathered for a Lovefeast meeting. This also was a pleasant and profitable occasion. Brother Stanley then followed with a good sermon on "The Old Paths." The congregation was dismissed under the wholesome influence of the Spirit's presence. The business session of the quarterly Conference was announced for Monday 10 a. m. There were present, the Presiding Elder, the pastor, Benjamin Mitchell, steward; J. W. Kemper, steward and trustee, and A. H. Barret, steward and trustee. The reports showed good work done by the sisters of the Church, advance in the Sunday School, the social meetings, in accessions to the Church, in the financial report of the parsonage building committee, in money raised for ministerial support, and in the Annual Conferedce collections. The Presiding Elder having finished his work, bade us good-by saying that we had had a refreshing time. We thank God and take courage for renewed effort another quarter, trusting God for an ingathering of precious souls.

Mystery Made Plain.

God, as Creator and Ruler of all things, moves in mystery. He maketh darkness his secret place; clouds and darkness are about him, and he directs us to be still and know that he is God. We must wait until we stand before him, redeemed, sanctified, immortal, for the full solution of what is often so mysterious here; for a lifting of the darkness which so often hides him from our feeble vision. And yet, this side the river, there comes to us times when we think we see and understand dealing that were once dark and mysterious. A patient and prayerful waiting may make all things plain.—Evangelist.

Emperor Frederick's Favorite Hymn.

[Emperor Frederick, of Germany, in his long and heroic struggle with a fatal malady last spring, became so attached to a little hymn, especially appropriate in his case, that it is called his favorite. The words are by Ernest von Millich, a twelve-year-old boy, composed as he lay on his dying-bed. The following is a translation.]

When the Lord me sorrow sends,
Let me bear it patiently,
Lifting up the heart in prayer;
Comfort he will not deny.
Therefore let there come what will,
In the Lord my heart is still.

Though the heart is often weak,
In despair and all forlorn,
When in days of utmost pain,
Not a day of joy will dawn,
Tell it: Let there come what will,
In the Lord all pain is still.

So I pray, O Lord my God,
That my faith and hope may stand;
Then no care I know nor need,
Guided ever by the hand!
Therefore let there come what will,
In the Lord my heart is still.

—The Advance.

Helena District—Wayside Notes.

There has been quite an improvement on the Boulder and Elkhorn charge during the past quarter. The pastor is much encouraged and the people seem to be taking hold of the work in earnestness. Brother Finley reports fine congregations at Elkhorn.

The second quarterly meeting at Boulder was a time of refreshing. The services were continued from the prayer meeting on Wednesday night preceding until the next week resulting in a number of conversions and thirteen applications for membership in the church up to the time that I left. The church was much revived and Brother Finley rejoiced with joy unspeakable. Brothers Currin and Sanford, local preachers of our church, and Brother Guyler, of the M. E. church, rendered efficient service. Brother Currin did most of the exhorting. The vigor and fire of his younger days seemed to come upon him again. Brother Finley preached two excellent sermons. A goodly number of the accessions were young persons. The success realized is largely due, first, to parental interest in the spiritual welfare of the children, and secondly, wholesome religious instruction and influence in Sunday school. My heart was deeply stirred, as a brother called us to prayer and remarked with great earnestness, "my dear friends, let us ask the Lord to convert our children."

The Suneay school, under the leadership of Brother Currin, is prospering, and the children are expecting a fine time Christmas eve when they intend to have a Christmas tree well laden with good things.

From Boulder I had planned to make a visit to the home of Brother and Sister Stateler, but felt prompted to stay and assist in the meeting, which prevented a trip that would otherwise have afforded me great satisfaction.

On Thursday at 1 o'clock p. m., I mounted the one-horse buck-board, and with the division agent, a lively young man recently from California, and Fred, the driver, an old time friend, we crossed the mountains on the old overland road and arrived at Whitehall at 6 p. m. How times have changed since '64. Then two or three six-horse Concord stages were necessary to carry the crowds of excited gold-seekers. Now the driver plods his lonely way with his "one-horse shay," and entertains his occasional passenger by narrating skillful feats, hair-breadth escapes and daring deeds performed by the Jehus of other years. Next morning at 10 o'clock, in company with E. G. Brooke who drove a spanking team hitched to a spring wagon, we started for Butte. Of that ride across the main divide of the Rocky mountains, over icy roads with a slick shod team, a heavy load, up and down steep mountains where rocks and stumps are plentiful, I will not say much now. It is sufficient to note that the major sustains the reputation given him by Bishop Hendrix who had something to say about "driving furiously," etc. The story of Hank Monk and Horace Greely was called vividly to mind. At first I thought we would never get up the mountain and then I feared we would never get down—with necks unbroken. But Major Brooke always gets there. At 5:30 p. m. we drove into Butte, and this writer was warmly welcomed by Brother Couey to comfortable quarters in the elegant and commodious new parsonage that has just been completed and is now occupied by the pastor's family.

Quite an advance has been made in this charge. The new brick parsonage is handsome, and a model for convenience and would be a credit to a much older and stronger charge. It takes faith and courage, and plenty of grace and perseverance to undertake and carry onward such enterprises. It adds greatly to the comfort of the preacher and his family. Brother Couey and his little band of co-workers have done nobly. There is a debt yet remaining upon the property, but with good management and persevering efforts its liquidation will afford only healthful exercise, while the comfort to the preachers family and the assistance that it will render otherwise will far more than balance the interest of the debt. The labor and expense of building churches, together with that of supporting the preachers, makes it hard both for preacher and people in our new fields.

The religious services commenced on Friday night and were interesting and profitable throughout. The morning service on Sunday, including the sacrament of the Lord's supper, was a melting season. Our hearts were strangely warmed and knit together with love.

The Sunday school is vigorous and is doing good work, though I am sorry to note the absence of so many teachers that day. Two persons were received into the church by letter.

The labor of editing a paper, soliciting and collecting money for a parsonage, in connection with the principal burden of such a work that the pastor has to carry on his mind, all in addition to pulpit and pastoral duties are about enough for one man in a place like Butte City. Brother Couey looks feeble, but he is cheerful and hopeful, and I trust he will soon see the desire of his heart realized in a gracious revival of religion. The spiritual condition of the membership is greatly improved, and the indications all point to better times.

E. J. STANLEY.

Power.

"But ye shall receiue power when the Holy Ghost is come upon you." The one thing needful to-day and always, by Christian workers, especially the ministry, is power. It is a vain thing to look about in the world for this power. It is not found then. The world's wisdom, the world's skill in devising plans and organizations are good enough in their place but will never overcome Satan nor eradicate sin from the human heart. What the steam is to the locomotive the Holy Spirit is the church. The machinery of the locomotive may be ever so good and well adjusted and may fairly shine but if there is no steam there is no go. Our church management may be faultless in its workings as the machinery, we claim this for our system, but without the Holy Spirit there is no progress. If there is not other power than that furnished by human skill and wisdom the world will never be brought to Christ. By this means they may be brought into the visible church but not into the kingdom of heaven.

What the blood is to the body, and the blood is the life, the Spirit of God is to the church. We are dead if we have not the Spirit, we are salt having no savor.

It was not the thought of the apostles after the ascension of Jesus to devise prudential means for propagating their Gospel, but simply waited the descent of the Holy Ghost, whose coming, they were taught would bring power. And they were able to overcome the terrible opposition of their enemies and win thousands of souls to Christ. What could they do before they received the Holy Ghost? Nothing but go into the upper chamber and pray. Now, if we are not endued with power that should be our line of action. For as certainly as we worship the God of the apostles he will give us the very same power. This example of the apostles waiting for baptism of the Holy Spirit ought to be initiated in every Christian church. I see where lately the Presbyterian church had a special convocation of her ministry solely for the purpose of spiritual improvement. Why can't we Methodist preachers have a similar meeting for the purpose of being baptized with power from on high? Wesley and his co-workers often waited whole nights upon the Lord and they were often filled with unction of the Spirit. If spiritual power was ever needed anywhere at any time it is in this country and now. Some one may say that our district and annual conferences ought to answer this purpose, but they do not for the reason that this is not the special object of the meeting and the work of the church occupies much more time and thought. A meeting like this at Helena, a point accessible to all our preachers and where many of our laymen could come, would do our whole church good. If we believe in the special baptism of the Holy Ghost and that we need it, then let us act up to our convictions. Such a meeting would help me wonderfully, I am sure. H. B. COCKRILL.

If such a meeting cannot be held, let us individually wait upon God in our closets, daily, which should be our custom all our lives.—[ED.]

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

Engineering Skill of Beavers.

Deep Creek and Poverty Flat are the names of two fine bodies of land on the Missouri river, forty-five or fifty miles a little south of east of Helena. These bodies are divided by a small stream known as Dry creek. Away up this creek into the mountains where it becomes small from the loss of its branches the beavers, we have been informed, built a dam across it that they might collect water in which to swim and gather and sink their food out of sight for safety and convenience also. Off to one side of the dam there was in a clump of quaking asp trees, some small spring heads, and having need of these trees, they found out by some means, evidently, that these springs could be collected and the water conveyed into their pond, and they went to work and dug a canal, using their long sharp teeth to cut the roots that lay across its track and to spade up and remove the sod also, until their little enterprise was completed. Now, what is curious in the building of this canal is in the facts, first, that the fall was so light that it required perfect grading to convey the water above the dam, and second, to do this all a levee had to be built along the lower side of the canal to raise and force the water a little, and we find that this they did by carefully placing all the dirt taken from the canal along this side of it, and the third fact is, that the raising of the water was not only necessary to overcome the want of running grade in the canal but it was needed to obtain depths of water in which to freight the poles that they needed for food from the little orchard of quaking asps that surrounded the springs. Now children, we can only wonder how these little creatures that have no compass nor grading instrument that we know of at least, did so lay off and dig this ditch as to meet and secure these ends.

UNCLE BOB.

Quiet And Effective.

An old man and a young man were riding in a stage coach. The old man was grave but sprightly, short of stature, spare, with a smooth forehead, a fresh cemplexion and a bright, piercing eye. The young man swore a great deal, until once when they stopped to change horses, the old man said to him: "I perceive by the registry books that you and I are going to travel together a long distance in this coach. I have a favor to ask of you. I am getting to be an old man, and if I should so far forget myself as to swear, you will caution me about it." The youth instantly apologized, and there was no more swearing heard from him during that journey. The old man was John Wesley.—Northwestern Chris. Adv.

Spiritual Lock-Jaw.

The church at Maple Grove is afflicted with spiritual lock-jaw. The presiding elder held the love feast there last Sunday. After he had read a chapter, sung and prayed, and delivered an earnest exhortation, and passed the bread and water, he called upon the brethren and sisters to speak. Not a soul responded, out of a congregation of forty-seven, except Sister White. Physical lock-jaw always results in death; spiritual lock jaw is no better.—Southwestern Methodist.

We know of other churches in the same sad condition of that at Maple Grove.

The last days of the old year, and the new glad Christmas Day has come again—the holidays now pass, the last day of the year comes apace, and then the new. In all the world where the festal Christmas Day has been known, what diversity of joy and sadness in the lives of the poor and the rich, in the strong and in the weak, yea, in the same life what changes have been recorded?

In the days of innocent childhood, in that unbroken family circle, what a joy the Merry Christmas brought—but now that life once free of care, is burdened with sorrow, too much to bear alone. One cries in bitterness, these are not like the days of yore.

In one home misfortune has come—the hand of death has been placed upon the fairest—the one that made the home so bright and cheery a year ago, is not. Where plenty blessed the home a year ago, the sad face to-day declares want.

But why this diversity? "Hath God forgotten so be gracious?" No, no. Christ was given for all. That home, now blighted with the loss of the perishable, may be rich in Christ, and who knows but what this is the purpose of the loss, by Him who "was born in Bethlehem of Judea." In the language of Prentice we read:

"Remorseless Time!
Fierce spirit of the glass and scythe! What power
Can stay him in his silent course or melt
His iron heart to pity? On still on
He presses, and forever. The proud bird,
The Endor of the Andes, that can sour,
Through heaven's unfathomable depths or brave
The fury of the northern hurricane,
And bathe his plumage in the thunder's home,
Furls his broad wings at nightfall and sinks down
To rest upon his mountain crag—but Time
Knows not the weight of sleep or weariness,
And night's deep darkness has no chain to bind.
His rushing pinions."

Let Christ be in every home—whether there be sickness, loss of dear ones the flight of earthly store, ore all these, there is happiness. The new year comes, and ere it wanes, may Christ become a guest in the hearts of many precious souls.

"Asking for Bread and Getting a Stone."

This is the caption to the closing article of the Montana Christian Advocate on the differences of the two Methodisms. We regret that we did not get the paper so as to give our last also in our a former addition.

We promise our readers a brief notice of the editorial referred to in the above. Says the Montana Christian Advocate: "We inquired if a Southern Methodist, standing on the North Pole, was a Southern Methodist still." We answer, yes, on the same principle that we remain members of our Church when in our mission fields in China, Brazil, Mexico or elsewhere. Our contemporary asks, "Is there any difference between us, outside of sinful prejudice and a bondage to a dark chapter in the past history of the Church and nation?" We answer, yes.

1. Since the beginning of the "dark chapter" referred to we differed on the question of the Episcopacy. The resolutions offered in regard to Bishop Andrew, brought out the difference. The M. E. Church thinks a bishop the creature of the General Conference, subject to a majority vote as to whether he shall continue as such. We hold that a bishop is the creature of the Church and continue such till death, if good behavior warrant. A bishop has the right of trial by his peers.

In the case of Bishop Andrew, the Northern element of the General Conference violated the third Restrictive Rule of what we hold as a part of the Constitution of the original Methodist Church.

2. We differ in our views, so far as public print is concerned, in the "Social Equality" question with the Negro. We think it best for the Negroes to have their own separate and distinct church organization. The M. E. Church prefers gathering that race within one organic whole. It is not for the social feature alone, but for the best interest of the Negro himself that he should have his own church.

3. Though our contemporary denies the fact, we differ from them on the question of "Church and politics." Facts show this, and we need not go to the records, of which we have an abundance.

4. We believe in adhering in practice to the agreement of the Joint Commission at Cape May, Aug. 17-23rd, 1876, when it said:

"Each of said churches is a legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism in the United States, having a common origin in the Methodist Episcopal Church, organized in 1784. Since the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church South was consummated in 1845, by the voluntary exercise of the rights of the southern annual conferences, ministers and members to adhere to that communion, it has been an evangelical church, reared on scriptural foundations, and her ministers and members, with those of the Methodist Episcopal Church, have constituted one Methodist family, though in distinct ecclesiastical connections."

That is—we recognize the fact that these two bodies have a right to go where the gospel is needed at our hands, without the continued envy of the other and the declration that "sinful," "peculiar prejudice" is the great actuating principle of the M. E. Church South. We ask our M. E. brethren to go ahead and win as many souls for Christ as possible, and let us do the same thing without bickerings, and if it ever becomes expedient, we may the more easily have a marriage in the Methodist families, for as yet we don't wish to get married, lest we have the shame of divorce.

"With so many unoccupied fields, why should the two Methodisms war to possess the same field?"

Surely it is not absolutely necessary to unite the churches to keep from war, and here is where the Cape May Commission has practical application. If our contemporary is as anxious to marry as it would seem, it is altogether expedient that we keep peace preparatory to that end. Whoever thought of a marriage as necessary to keep peace? We should think agreement first very necessary to have such a consummation.

We have no doubt that when it can be clearly seen that organic union will be most conducive to the salvation of souls—and furthermore, when there is the proper love to warrant a marriage, it will be effected. To date neither of these points are tenable as seen by the M. E. Church South, and she must, in honor to herself and honesty to her suitor, decline the overture, called by the Advocate, "popping the question." Our contemporary most signally fails to show in his rehash of history the consistency of the M. E. Church in the "plan of separation," and on the question of the "Episcopacy." The Third Restrictive Rule of our government could be very easily ignored to save trouble to New England, but the Sixth Rule must be scrupulously guarded to withhold "more than was meet" and make good the charge that the Church South severed its relation with the Methodist Episcopal Church, "so mildly" stated. It has been well said, by the College of Bishops of the M. E. Church South. "We separate from you in no sense, in which you did not separate from us. The separation was by compact and mutual."

Heart divisions must be cured before corporate division can be healed.

Our friend, in a very Methodistic way, at the end of his last, said: "Let us pray"—to which we, as another good Methodist, would say—Amen; yea, more, let us "pray without ceasing."

Some important matters for the consideration of the new administration, suggested by the New York Christian Advocate:

1. The right to vote on the constitutional amendment, providing for the suppression of the liquor traffic.
2. Some form of local option, where oppressed sections, oppose to the sale of liquor may protect themselves.
3. In the absence of ability to have above, to pass such restriction laws as they can carry.

This paper then adds: "Consideration of duty, and political wisdom unite to make this question the peer of any other. Education, coast defenses, tariff revision and civil service reform are important, and the people expect them to receive attention. But this question cannot be neglected without such neglect being the cause of apathy or positive alienation."

Bishop Galloway In Mexico.

In one of our exchanges we find some very interesting and instructive letter from Bishop Galloway on Mexico and our church work in that mission field. We regret that we cannot copy them for the benefit of the readers of the Montana METHODIST.

From the St Louis Conference.

DEAR BROTHER:—We get much from the West and Northwest through various sources. Do you want anything from us? I am sure you will be always glad to have a kind word from any of the older conferences. Brother Warren was so kind as to send me your paper of Nov. 14. I did not see a sentence in it from anyone, I believe, outside of your own Conference. This made me fell that the brethren in Montana would highly appreciate a few words from some of us.

I have a grand work, at Arcadia, in the St. Louis Conference. The Arcadia Valley and its surroundings are lovely and wonderful. I am so thankful to God and to Bishop Hendrix and Bro. Batten, for this most delightful field of labor, where the possibilities are so grand as to be a continual inspiration. I never realized so much divine light and help before. My audiences are good, and often, upon their minds and hearts, there is a deep, divine impression. This is manifest. We are laboring and praying for a very powerful and a pervasive revival. We need it. We must have it. We can't live and prosper without it. Somebody is praying. I feel it mightly sometimes when I am preaching. We are looking for the Lord to do "great and mighty things for us which we have not known." I think there is much prayer, and work, and earnest effort in the St. Louis Conference this year. I think God is greatly blessing the labors of our gifted and pious pastors in St. Louis. Dr. Chilton takes Dr. Hammond's place at First Church. I don't believe that our entire Southern Methodism could have furnished Central College with a grander President that Dr. Hammond. I think he has few equals and no superiors. He is really great intellectually, but the best of all is he is a pure and a consecrated man.

Father Browning, you know, has passed away, and we are confident that he has gone to dwell still more closely with God, and to enjoy Him forever. Dr. McAnally will write a biographical sketch of this holy man. But no pen can chronicle the permanent and far-reaching benedictions of a holy life. Father Browning believed, and preached, and exemplified the doctrine of Christian Perfection, as it was believed and taught, and exemplified by Mr. Wesley.

Mr. Wesley's little work on Christian Perfection will never die while God and truth are known on the earth. Its truthful and searching utterances and its spirit of power, will live and burn in human souls until the end shall come. L. PULLIAM.

Notes From Willow Creek.

A new stable has been built, and other improvements have been added to our parsonage property here.

Our Sunday school and the Good Templars united in a Christmas tree and a song service Christmas eve.

Rev. W. F. Goulder, on his way to White Hall, circuit, stopped over the third Sunday in December with us. He is a bright consecrated young man, gifted in song. He will make his mark in Montana. Our people in the Jefferson valley are to be congratulated in getting such a preacher.

Rev. A. J. Rundell, local elder, who came to us last year from the M. E. church, is preaching some in Madison county. He is an acceptable man and a good preacher and his usefulness is widening. He is an enthusiastic friend of the MONTANA METHODIST.

South Boulder church, which was organized last year with fifteen members, seven of them coming to us from the M. E. church, is active and on time in raising the preacher's salary. Over $100 has been subscribed on the P. C.'s salary and considerable of it paid. Brothers Black and Cooley make excellent stewards.

My congregations at Harrison and Pony are good. In time we will have strong societies at each of these places.

Brother Stateler is able to preach and do effective and acceptable pulpit work, though too lame to get about with ease. Sister Stateler, his noble companion, is greatly improved in health. May God spare them to the church many years.

A note from a member on the Bozeman work says: "Brother Johnson is a good preacher and a noble man." I am sure this verdict is correct.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—On the first Sunday in December I preached at East Gallatin and Weaver's to attentive audiences.

The Sunday school at Bozeman is growing in numbers, and, we trust in interest. The venerable L. B. Stateler is here holding the quarterly conference. His words in the family as well as in the pulpit are weighed in the balances of truth. He uttered a grand truth is his sermon yesterday from the text, "Be careful for nothing, but everything by prayer, etc.," when he said, "anything which you cannot take to the Lord in prayer is not worthy of your attention."

I wish to state through the METHODIST to our preachers and people in Montana that I will be glad to supply them with our books and periodicals, to the laity at catalogue prices; to ministers at twenty per cent. discount. If there be no other agent for our publishing house here, I expect to have a good supply of our literature on hand at district and annual conferences. If the brethren will kindly inform me by postal card, what books they want I will supply them as early as possible, either in person or by mail or express, charges for express or postage prepaid. I am agent for "Life and Times of Bishop Pierce" and "Light in Darkness," or the latest, most complete and reliable "History of Modern Missions," by the Godbeys. I expect to have on hand the "Life of Dr. McFerrin" and the new "Hymn Book," in large quantities.

Yours in the Bonds of Peace,

JOHN H. JOHNSON.

Great Need Of a Revival

Is evident on every hand. We need it as ministers to strengthen our faith, to fire our hearts with greater zeal and to put us in better condition for the great work that the Master has given us to do. We need it as church members to purify our hearts, to brighten our armor and to better qualify us to stand in our place in the great battle against sin. We need it as parents to help in re-establishing and in keeping up the family altar and in saving our children from the ten thousand snares that the devil is laying for them. Society needs it to help educate public opinion, stay the tide of corruption and tone up the morals of the country to a higher standard. Sinners need it to help turn them from their evil ways, save them from the power of evil appetites and snatch them as brands from the burning." We need it for the good of the church. The Methodist church has been aptly styled "the revival church." It began in a revival, all its machinery is adjusted with a view to revivals. Here is her chief glory—to go out after the masses, rescue the perishing, bring them in and build them together "for a habitation of God through the spirit."

Other churches may live and prosper; go on with their forms and ceremonies; but not so with our church. We lose our spiritual life and are shorn of our strength and glory when revivals cease in our midst.

Then, brethren in the ministry, let us look well to the charge committed to our trust. We are responsible in a large measure, for the state of life and activity in the church. "Like priest, like people" is an old adage and a true one. Water will not rise higher than its source. We are examples of the flock. The revival must commence with us. The Lord demands truth in the inward parts. The disciples were to tarry until power came from on high. We must first have the Son revealed in us before we can witness his power to others. Barnabas was a good man, full of faith and the Holy Ghost and much people were added to the Lord. David prayed "restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, then shall I teach transgressors thy ways, and sinners shall be coverted unto thee." This has been the divine plan from time immemorial. What need is there for the church if sinners are not saved and God's cause advanced? We must have revivals else the Lord will remove his candlestick from us.

Let us improve the time during the winter months while the people are more at leisure than in the spring or summer. Don't wait, commence at once.

Whenever practicable, let the preachers adjacent to each other unite in protracted efforts. Don't let a false pride keep you from calling for assistance. Two are often better than one in this work. The devil unites his forces to increase his power. The Master sent his disciples out two and two and they came back reporting that even the devils were subject unto them, which so gladdened the Saviour that he broke forth in strains of exultant joy. This is the plan by which our fathers have made their great conquests for Christ and Methodism. Let us inquire for the old paths and walk in them.

We have much to encourage us. The revival fires are already being kindled and reports reach our ears that souls are being converted to God. More than forty persons have been gathered into the church during the last month or so. This greatly cheers our hearts, and shows that Lord is with us in power. Let us praise him for what has been done and pray and work for still greater displays of divine love and power.

E. J. STANLEY.

A Presbyterian On Methodism.

Talmage is quoted as saying: "Methodism has purified, invigorated and revived every denomination of the Christian world." If this should not be literally true of the past, may it not be so in the future. To do this we should keep Methodism pure, fresh and aglow with the revival spirit.

Mathematico - Religio - Calculations.

From the Southwestern Methodist we clip the following statistics, gotten from some one who has reduced the evangelization of the world to a minimum. Read and ponder for yourself. It may do you good. If the spirit should work as rapidly as figures, preachers could soon have a rest:

Of the 1,400,000,000 human being that people the earth, 135,000,000 are Protestant Christians. If the number of Protestant Christians should double themselves ever year, their churches would, in four years, include the human family.

Supposing there was only one Christian in the world at the present moment, and were he to be the means of bringing only one perishing soul to the Savior in the course of a year—and were these again to bring one soul each during the following year, and so on—each saved soul bringing in one lost one in course of a year—how many years would it take to evangelize the whole world? The result seems so marvelous that one is naturally tempted to try the calculation. (I did so myself, to make sure there is no mistake.)

Beginning with one single soul, the geometrical progression referred to comes in thirty and one-half years to one thousand, six hundred millions!

The Unpopular Application.

From the following selection from one of our exchanges, entitled "My Scrap Book, No. 14," we get an idea of failure in many practical applications of our sermons of to-day:

A farmer went to hear John Wesley preach. The farmer was not a Christian man but was thrifty and upright though rather inclined to be too economical. His attention was soon rivited upon the sermon, for Wesley was preaching about money, and his first point was—"Get all you can." The farmer nudged a neighbor and said: "This preaching is not of the usual sort, but I like it. I like to hear a preacher who urges me to get all I can, for it is just the thing I am trying to do."

By and by Wesley, after speaking in praise of energy and living to purpose, makes this second point, which was quite in keeping with his first and which was still more gratifying to the farmer. It was, "Save all you can." Wesley went on to denounce prodigality and waste and the sinfulness of useless luxuries, while the farmer rubbed his hands and thought: "This is the sort of preaching that suits me. All these things have I observed from my youth up. If getting money and keeping it is religion I am certainly a religious man and salvation has come to my house." Such was the current of his thought, but it was rudely checked when Wesley made his third point, which was—"Give all you can." "Dear me!" said the farmer to his neighbor, "the man has spoiled his whole sermon by such an absurd application. As long as he talked about getting and saving I was with him, but when it comes to giving, count me out."

"In ye olden time" our forefathers placed clocks on the outside of their "meeting houses" that they might not be too late in their attendance upon worship. In these days the clocks are frequently fonud upon the inside of the house of worship, to prevent the worshippers from tarrying too long before God. Surely we do not love the message of salvation less than the grand men and women of other days. Then let us not become infatuated in our worship with the race-horse way of the world, and when the sermon exceeds thirty or forty minutes by two or three seconds, fidget and examine our watches as though we might "lash the lingering moments into speed."—The Trowel.

The Dying Scotchman.

"Asleep in Jesus! Far from thee
Thy kindred and their graves may be;
But thine is still a blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

A Christian man was dying in Scotland. His daughter Nellie sat by his bedside. It was Sunday evening, and the bell of the Scotch kirk was ringing, calling the people to church. The good old man, in his dying dream, thought that he was on his way to church, as he used to be when he went in the car across the river, and as the evening bell struck up, in his dying dream he thought it was the call to church. He said: "Hark, children, the bells are ringing; we shall be late; we must make the mare step out quickly!" He shivered, and then said: "Pull the buffalo robe up closer, my lass! It is cold crossing the river, but we will soon be there, Nellie; we will soon be there!" And he smiled and said: "Just there now." No wonder he smiled. The good old man had gone to church. Not the old Scotch kirk, but the temple in the skies. "Just across the river." How comfortably did God hush that old man to sleep! As one whom his mother comforteth, so God comforted him.—Talmage.

Personal.

H. Clay Fleenor deserted his charge at Bozeman last August and left under peculiar circumstances. On investigation by a committee appointed by the First Quarterly conference at Bozeman station, he was found to be guilty of gross immorality under six specifications, including fraud, embezzlement and lying. A copy of the charges was sent to him at Dallas, Texas, where he was operating as a Baptist preacher, and denouncing what he called the "tyranny of Methodist Bishops and the "iron rule of Methodism." His reply to the charges was full of rude, foul epithets hurled against his accusers and against the two Presiding Elders. His language is too foul to be quoted. He denounces all of our preachers as "fools" and made savage threats of what he would do if dealt with. His words force us to believe he is void of all moral honesty and decency. At the session of the Second Quarterly Conference of Bozeman, held recently, Fleenor's lester was read, which only added insult to injury. The charges having all been proven, the Quarterly Conference proceeded to expel him from the church, he having been suspended from the ministry at the First Quarterly Couference. We regret to thus chronicle the downfall of any man, and especially a minister, but in justice to ourselves and in behalf of the Church everywhere, we give the public this information. If any one desires further information they can get it by addressing Rev. L. B. Stateler, Willow Creek, Montana.

Where Heaven is.

There was a Methodist preacher who preached one day on heaven. The next morning he was going down town and he met one of his old wealthy members. This old fellow met the preacher, and he said: "Pastor, you preached a good sermon about heaven, but you never told me where heaven is."

"Ah," said the pastor, "I am glad of the opportunity this morning. I have just come from the hill-top yonder. In that cottage there is a member of your church. She is sick in bed with fever; her two little children are sick in the other bed, and she has not got a bit of coal or a stick of wood, or flour, or sugar, or any bread. If you will go down town and buy fifty dollars' worth of things, nice provisions, and send them up to her, and then go up there and say, 'My sister, I have brought you these nice provisions in the name of our Lord and Saviour,' you ask for a Bible, and you read the 23d Psalm, and you then get down on your knees and pray—if you don't see heaven before you get all through, I'll pay the bill."

The next morning he said, "Pastor, I saw heaven, and I spent fifteen minutes in heaven as certainly as you are listening."—Wesleyan Advocate.

Notes.

Our compositors decapitated our leader in the last issue of '88, so as to run the title or head into the body, thus producing a deformity for which we have had to suffer pain two weeks before getting relief. When it is understood that one of the editors has not the opportunity to read his proof it will be a sufficient apology for such blunders. So we will not worry longer over that for which we are not responsible —except in poor chirography.

That man who got drunk on the first day of the year made a poor start for success in '89. It may have been the old year's debauch. Either is bad. It is not too late, however, to stop such now.

Our friends frozen up in the south and east may wonder what kind of weather we are having away up here in Montana so near the north pole. Well, just now we are having a chinook, i. e. a warm west wind It is melting the snow and making us think of spring. Our friends are welcome to move up here and thaw out.

The Disciples church in this city suffered a fire last week which damaged it to the extent of about $500. The Congregational church is hospitably sharing their house with the unfortunate sister while repairs are being made.

Reports from fourteen of the sixteen counties of Montana enable the authorities to say that the total valuation of property in the Territory for the year 1888 is between sixty-nine and seventy millions of dollars. This does not include her mineral resources.

It is said that a little girl in De Kalb County, Ga., rejoices in the name of Susan Julia Melinda Mariah Savannah Sophia Elizabeth Lady-Bug Towers. Can any of our readers guess her alias?

Nearly all agree that there is nothing in a name, and yet it is very noticeable that among men of prominence in the world a large per cent. have but single given names. More than two-thirds of the presidents of the United States were without double names. The president-elect, as well as the present incumbent, belongs to that majority. The bishops of our church will also show a large proportion of single names. Those who are looking for names for their young hopefuls might get a point here.

Riches and Rich Men.

As being out of the usual line we quote the following from a New York writer in the Raleigh (N. C.) Christian Advocate:

"Some people see in the accumulation of great fortunes a sign of inevitable ruin to American society and its institutions. The cry is that the rich are growing richer and the poor are growing poorer. The census statistics of land holdings and savings-bank deposits do not support this theory. Nor does observation support it. Nor does the history of prices and of the purchasing power of wages support it. They all proclaim the gradual amelioration of the condition of the poor under the free institutions of American society.

"But aside from these economic aspects, are great fortunes necessarily a source of menace and danger to the poor and to free government? From a religious standpoint, rich men are among the things we should be most devoutly thankful for on Thanksgiving Day. Take the support of rich men away from the colleges and seminaries; from the churches and missions; from charities and benevolences, and where would the Christian world be? One-half of its organs of usefulness would collapse in a day. And yet we sometimes join the chorus of anarchists in bewailing the riches of the rich.

"Riches accumulated by dishonesty, fortunes erected on the ruin of honest men, are indeed abominations; but riches of this sort are not the kind that bless the churches and the poor. But the riches of scoundrels are no more dangerous to society than the poverty of other scoundrels. In either case it is not the instrument that is the source of danger, but the character that employs it. There are men who glorify God with their poverty, just as there as there are others who glorify him with their riches. Now, I believe there are plenty of rich men who hold their riches in pure hands, just as I believe there are many poor, pious Christians who are poor through no fault of their own."

The writer continues by speaking of the beneficence of the Vanderbilt family and others in New York.

And since we think of it, we are not sure but that the Lord gets a better return from the goods he entrusts in the hands of the rich than from those he puts into the hands of the poor or middle classes. We remember, in 1872, when our church purposed to build a central university, the effort to raise a subscription of $500,000 from the whole church was given up as a failure. But at last the amount was given by one rich man—Cornelius Vanderbilt. A wealthy man in Richmond, Va., has recently given $15,000 to the Board of Missions. This is about as much as the whole Virginia Conference gives to foreign missions in a year. Some unknown person of wealth has just given $300,000 to establish a Christian university at Pekin, China. We wonder how long it would have taken to get that amount from a thousand persons whose aggregate possessions were equal to those of the one donor.

We do not mean to encourage the hoarding of wealth until one can give large sums. Better follow the scriptural plan of giving constantly as the Lord prospers you. We are glad, however, to see there is a bright side to a dark subject.

Excerpt From "Governor Leslie on Montana," in Holiday Miner.

The annual output of our mines ten years ago was estimaten at $7,000,000; now it is over $34,000,000. The total value of taxable property in the territory then was $12,000,000; now it is $70,000,000 (not counting the ualue of the mining property). The number of cattle in the territory was then 220,000, now it is 1,500,000; number of sheep then was 120,000, now it is over 2,000,000; number of horses then was 40,000, now it is 200,000; number of acres of land then under cultivation was 265,900, now there are over 2,000,000 acres appropriated and settled for farming purposes; then the commerce of the whole territory was $20,000,000, now it is $40,000,000; then there was but a dozen or so miles of railroad, now there are over 2,000; then the population was 30,000, now it is 140,000; then the territory was in debt $112,000, now it is out of debt and has plenty of money in the treasury; then taxes were high, now they are low; then the contest for the mastery of this country between the Indian and the white man was red with human blood, and every household waited in anxiety the triumphs of peace and of rest, now all is quiet, and the hostile foe has laid down his battle-ax, put on the robes of civilization, and treads the path of industry side by side with the white man.

The Sun's Eclipse.

The sun's eclipse on January 1 was the source of much interest to thousands of people. It took place, as seen from Butte City, Montana, from 2 to 4 p. m. About four-fifths of the sun's disk was hid. There was enough smelter smoke hovering over our city to enable one to look at the sun without the use of smoked glasses or other contrivance. This reminds us again of the accuracy of astronomical culculations. Several universities had representatives in California for the purpofe of making observations, as it was a total eclipse there.

A Convincing Argument.

Dr. Vincent, speaking of playing at cards, dancing and theatre going, appeals to the judgment of the young people in the churches in this way: "I draw a picture of Rev. Dr. John Hall, Bishop Matthew Simpson and D. L. Moody sitting down together and shuffling cards for an evening, dancing themselves red with half dressed women or going to the theatre. They always seem shocked at the mere mention of such conduct by such Christians. But I ask them if they want as good a place in heaven as a bishop shall have. And I can tell them that, if they can approve these amusements in church leaders, then of course they may ask the leaders to approve the same in them; otherwise not." It is a good putting of the issue.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

The Editor Camping.

[CONCLUDED.]

SEPT. 5th, 1888.—At 2 o'clock p. m. we left the charm of the Yellowstone Falls for the Norris Geyser Basin. The distance between the two places is twelve miles, over the best road found anywhere on all the trip since leaving Butte. About the only object of interest to us was the little falls and canyoc of Norris Fork, a small stream running in the direction we traveled.

We reached the Norris Basin shortly after 4 o'clock. A cold wind from the north gave us the first serious premonition of a change of weather. Let the reader mark the fact that we had not had a rain since leaving home. An early supper gave Bro. Kemper and myself an opportunity to make a short tour of observation among the geysers of this point, the last to be seen. The Monarch, the Minute Man, the Hurricane, the Fearless, the Vixen, the Steam Valve—which is misnamed — with some few others of minor importance, constituted about all that was of special interest. The chief thought abiding with one in this basin is not to make a misstep and be engulfed in the fiery liquid beneath a thin crust on the surface. "Danger" signs are put up most everywhere. A great change has doubtless taken place in this once interesting group of geysers. After having seen the unsurpassed wonders of the Upper Basin this proves of little interest. It should be the first seen, and is by those who visit the Park by the railroad.

Sept. 6th.—Our report to the ladies last evening as to the character of the geysers was sufficient to satisfy them without personal observation, we therefore made ready and left camp about 9 o'clock for the Mammoth Hot Springs. We passed several springs, a burning sulphur mountain, and a number of lakes—among them the Beaver and the Twin Lakes. The Obsidian Cliffs were of note. There were millions of specimens, some of which we secured, in addition to those we had gotten elsewhere, without feeling that we had violated the spirit of the law forbidding specimen gathering.

About 1 p. m. we came to the second stream, called Indian Creek, where we "nooned." Even in midday we found fire and sunshine very comfortable. It was decidedly the chilliest morning we had felt. Thin ice and a big frost made it seem quite the thing to be seeking a lower altitude.

Our camping place at noon was six or eight miles from the Mammoth Springs. We traveled a few miles and came to Glen Creek, and going down this stream we soon found ourselves in a very interesting canyon. Rustic Falls in this canyon were most beautiful. Kingman's Pass was the next, and now we beheld the wildest scenery as yet observed. The fearful cliffs on our left and above us, the narrow road blasted from the side of the mountain of rocks, the yawning canyon below to our right, with the tremendous decline, down which we were descending, all together were enough to keep us silent with fear, lest the slightest mistake hurl us into eternity. A short distance and we come to the Golden Gate. Still farther down and to our right was what is known as Devil's Slide, which is a smooth space from five to fifteen feet wide down the mountain side, from top to bottom. From Rustic Falls to Mammoth Hot Springs, a distance of three miles, there is a descent of 1,100 feet.

We reached the springs about 3 p. m. We spent about two hours in beholding this, the eighth wonder of the world. Here we got our first mail for three weeks, which, of course, was read with a relish. Leaving the springs we came down Gardiner River, a beautiful stream that rushes madly on to lose itself by and by in the Yellowstone. We camped on the banks of the Gardiner, which seemed all the night long to echo some weird story of the scenes of the day. Among the package of letters enjoyed by the camp fire to-night was an encouraging note from Bro. Britt on the success of MONTANA METHODIST, which was then at about No. 4.

Sept. 7th. — A mile or so brought us this morning to the little village of Gardiner. One side of Main street is in the National Park, the other in the Territory of Montana. A short distance farther brought us to Cinnabar, the railroad station, where tourists from the Northern Pacific begin the sights of the great "Wonderland."

Now that we have carried our readers with us in a camping tour through mountains and valleys, over streams and through canyons, among geysers and springs for the space of about three weeks, we close our notes by saying we have not attempted description, but have simply purposed a synopsis of our diary to give you some faint idea of what you can some time see for yourself if you should have the opportunity.

Suffice it to say we had a pleasant trip, through valleys, over mountains and down canyons, enjoying all that is incident to camp life, and reached Butte safely without accident or loss within four weeks from the time we left. We were much pleased with what we saw.

[THE END.]

Anniversary Address Before the I. O. G. T., Lodge No. 14, Butte, M. T.

BY A. C. COUEY.

The following is a synopsis of the address delivered at the thirteenth anniversary of the I. O. G. T. of Butte, Dec. 31, 1888.

1. Brief history of the temperance reform in the United States since its origin in Moreau, Saratoga county, New York, April 1808. The "Moderate Pledge," its failure, and origin of "Teetotalism" as given in the story of Dicky Turner.

2. Temperance defined. Thoughts by Dr. Thomas Guthrie: "Before God and man, before the church and the world, I impeach intemperance. I charge it with the murder of innumerable souls in this country blessed with freedom and plenty, the word of God and the liberties of true religion. I charge it with the cause, whatever may be their source elsewhere, of almost all the poverty, crime, misery, ignorance and irreligion that disgrace and afflict the land."

3. The Relation of Temperance to the Christian religion. Along side faith, virtue, knowledge, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity, the apostle Peter placed temperance as an important star in the constellation. A person can be temperate without being a Christian believer, but he cannot be a Christian without being temperate. As a part to the whole, so is temperance to the Christian graces. As Good Templars we note the work of temperance largely as to its effect upon the body; as Christians we study the effect upon soul and body. * * *

4. The relation of temperance to politics. All temperance work, being moral, should be kept nonpartisan. Church and state should be kept apart; so temperance and politics should be kept apart. As citizens we can vote the prohibition ticket; as temperance workers we can support no party.

5. The relation of the temperance cause to the strife between capital and labor. As temperance workers we should persuade them to make a strike against the monopoly of the saloon. In the language of Powderly we say: "Working men, boycott the saloon for five years and you will settle the labor question. No question of interest to labor has been settled over the bar of the saloon." We have a duty as temperance advocates in the never ceasing Sabbath work of the mines, mills and smelters of Butte and vicinity.

6. The hopeful outlook for the temperance cause. There are seventy thousand protestant mininters, fifteen million church members, with a constituency of forty-five million people favorable to the cause, and of these there are over four million total abstainers to work for reform. For every martyr for temperance we gain a hundred workers, so that nothing but cowardice and depravity can rescue the saloon from complete overthrow in the near future. Surely it cannot be far distant "when the solitary place shall be made glad, and the desert blossom as the rose."

It may not be out of place to say that the address, occupying about half an hour, was most cordially receiud by the audience assembled at the Good Templers' hall on that occasion.

In a recent interview Senator Ingalls spoke in the following eloquent terms of Mrs. Cleveland:

"The mistress of the White House has no enemy and no rival in the affectionate admiration of the American people. Amid many temptations to levity and many opportunities for frivolty, she has borne herself with unexampled grace, dignity and composure. Adulation has not disturbed the charming and unaffected simplicity of her character. She will carry with her into retirement the unabated honor and regard of all who have been so fortunate as to know her. She will remain among the noblest illustrations of American womanhood so long as virtue has a votary or beauty a champion."—Ex.

Great Fun.

It is wonderful how uncomfortable people can be, and still be happy. Wonderful, too, is a boy's idea of a "good time." Take this California scene:

Just before we reached our destination, we passed a tent where an adventurous party of pleasure seekers were camping out. A small boy, with the greater part of his head and face tied up in a blue veil, was piling brush on a large bonfire, close to the door of the tent.

"To keep off the black flies?" called I, as I rode by.

"Yes, and skeeters too," said he, lifting up his roguish eyes, reddened by the smoke.

"Oh dear! said I. "Do you like camping out?"

"Yes, indeed!" shouted he. "Its splendid! We killed six rattlesnakes yesterday!"—Ex.

An Incident.

As Will and I were returning from prayer meeting last evening, we passed three fine looking men standing in front of a saloon; two of them were urging their companion to enter the saloon, and take a drink with them. "Come in Jack, it shan't cost you anything," said one.

"No, thank you," said Jack. "I will wait out here for you."

Come, now; be sociable, and have a drink with us," said the other, taking hold of his arm, and trying to pull him along.

"No, I will wait here," was the answer again.

I was anxious to know if Jack remained firm; so when we had passed further on, and could watch him without being observed, we looked back, there stood Jack, alone, waiting for his companions.

I said to Will: "Isn't that grand and noble? I feel like going up to that young man, and saying, 'God bless you!' I believe he remembered that good old text: 'My son, when sinners entice thee, consent thon not.'"

Said Will: "I think that it would have been more grand and noble, if he had remembered, before he left home, that other good old text: 'Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners.'"

I think Will was right, What do you think, young readers?—The Orphan's Friend.

Why Should we Always Attend Church?

1. It helps ourselves. The church services give vigor to the best thoughts and purposes, strengthen our integrity, develop and solidify right character, and develop the moral and religious part of our nature. We cannot afford to lose those sweetening and strengthening influences for a single week.

2. It helps the minister. Nothing is more disheartening to a minister than simple neglect. What sense is there in preparing a message for those who do not come to hear it? How can he preach with vigor to empty pews? The dullness of any services is often to be laid to the account of the absent ones.

3. A church lives on the devotion of its friends. Nowhere is the devotion so fully shown, so quietly felt, or so plainly seen, as in attendance on the Lord's day. Every one in his place, and the church rejoices in the consciousness of strength and vitality, and goes forth with zeal and power to its appointed work. With half the seats vacant, there comes depression, and the church sinks to inaction. A live church helps the community. The moral tone of a community depends largely on its churches. If church goers become negligent, the outside community will not go to church. The example of every neglector of the Lord's day worship is so far an obstruction placed before the door of the church to keep others away. If the friends of the church will attend, the strangers will be sure to do so.—Church Union.

The New Year.

This is our first issue for the new year, and with it we wish our patrons great successs in all things laudable, but specially for things spiritual. From the editor of our Sunday School Magazine we quote words intended for our consideration the first day, but they are good yet if we but profit by them. Please read;

"It is wise to spend a moment on the threshold of a new year in a brief review of the past. Merchant overhaul their books, take account of stock, and ascertain as near as they can the conditton of their business at the end of the year, and lay their plans for the future. We ought to be as thoughtful as to our spiritual interests as we are in respect to temporal matters. How does the account stand with us? Have we gained anything the past year? God help us to examine carefully into our spiritual condition, revise what has been wrong, improve all things good, and so grow in grace that we shall be ready for every good word or work. We know not what shall befall us the coming year. It is wise therefore to be ready for any event. Let us be diligent and faithful workers in the Lord's vineyard, that when he calls us to give an account of our stewardship we may do so with joy."

The Salted Track.

A few days since I was going up the street along which one of of our street car motors run, and in passing noticed a man springling something on the track. I did not at first know what it was, but upon examination found it was salt. No explanation was needed of course, as I had known from childhood that snow and salt mixed would burn the hand almost equivalent to the presence of fire. The effect of this sprinkling was fine, while the car track would otherwise have been clogged with snow and ice, so as to retard the speed of the car, if it did not stop it altogether.

I then began to think of the uses of this element. It is said to be a splendid fertilizer of the soil. In the rice fields of the east, sea water has been used from a very early antiquity with beneficial results. In sandy soils the English farmers have found salt very successful in checking the rank growth of the grass, greatly increasing its quality and succulence.

Milch cows need it almost daily to preserve the sweetness of the milk. Wild animals are sometimes found dead because of a failure to get a sufficiency of salt.

It is used in curing meats as every one knows. We also find that it is used in ship material where timbers are continually exposed to the water. Our housekeepers use it, as every boy knows, for making ice cream, etc.

It is to be found—i. e. rock salt—in strata of large quantities almost everywhere. In the United States the total production in 1880 was valued at $4,829,566. The great Salt Lake of Utah, is known world-wide.

But to our track. Doubtless salt has been used for running street cars in cities of such climate as Montana for many years, but I had not seen it on that fashion.

After reflecting upon its various uses is reducing our ores in the great smelters, for the stock on our ranches, for preserving the milk and butter of our dairymen as well as to run our street cars, I could but think of the Saviour's words: "Ye are the salt of the earth." "The world," wise in its generation teaches us an important lesson in the agricultural and industrial uses, but to me, the use to which the Bennett Brothers put it on their street car lines in our city was new.

The salt is very effective for a few days, but it then loses its savor, and must be renewed.

Now let us see. For the sake of a few hundred dollars per day the motor lines of our city are kept salted. The way is kept open for easy and successful transit from one part of Butte to another. How is it with us as the "salt of the earth?" We as ministers of the gospel in Montana have much to do to keep the way, the narrow way to heaven open for travel. The laity, in their associations with the people have no small part in this all important highway. May we all learn the great question for practical application. The people of Butte have the reminder every time that they go on the street at this season, the working men have it before them in the mills, the ranchmen among their herds and the people everywhere that this savory element is used in material development. It is our high calling to save the world for Christ, by "preparing the way of the Lord."

Chips from Anaconda

Dr. Fitzgerald, editor-in-chief of the Nashville Christian Advocate suggests a somewhat novel plan for supplying the south with imigrants—one at least, the propriety and wisdom of which it would be well to consider in these times of expatriation, and where, too, so many of our young men are going elsewhere for wives and our girls are being unequally yoked together with foreigners who have little or no sympathy with our form of government or free institutions. The doctor says: "If these southerners of the best quality will only stay at home, marry, and be industrious, enterprising and economical, they need not bother about immigration schemes. The people they want would come fast enough—the other sort they can spare." If our young people believe in the doctor's "scheme," let them begin at once by calling in the parson.

On Christmas eve our new electric lights were turned on the city of Anaconda. The Methodist church stands between two of these, so that all who wait upon the ministry here will walk in the light. Let the light be turned on—all the light of historic truth and ecclesiastic experience—the Methodist Episcopal Church, South has nothing to fear, but contrariwise challenges an investigation of her record. If all who speak of us will only tell the truth of history, we will not be ashamed, but will glory in the revelation, and will likewise rejoice in a comparative estimation of her work and worth in the vineyard of the Lord. We are proud of the fact—which none can gainsay—that our church has always been non-political. The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but spiritual, and we have always from our pulpit echoed the words of the Master: "My kingdom is not of this world." Can some of our co-religionists of Montana and other places, who are wont to misrepresent us say as much?

"I have just thrown in a boy seventeen years old," were the words of a policeman of Anaconda to us a few nights ago in making known the fact that for drunkenness he had locked up a youth to spend the dark cold hours of the night in a prison. Our heart was sad. I thought, 'has our civilization done so little, and has our Christianity been so powerless for good, that now after more than one hunredd years of religious freedom, the law of the land authorizes, to say the least, the church tacitly indorses and encourages the rum traffic, by which our youths are destroyed and our homes laid waste.' The above named victim of strong drink is somebody's "wandering boy," and thousands of mothers' hearts while we wait, are pining in sorrow, never to be healed by sons who have been lured from home never to return and never to repent, by the infatuation of the bowl. Oh God, help the people save the boys by destroying the temptation.

The temporary suspension of the great reduction works at this place, a few days ago, caused considerable anxiety except those behind the scenes. It is reported that 4,000 men would be thrown out of employment were the works to discontinue operations. Connect with these the women and children of the men out of employment—and this too, in midwinter—and some idea can be formed of the irreparable damage that would result. One report is to the effect that the proprietors have been offered $4,000,000 to discontinue operations for six months, but that $5,000,000 was asked. Another report is that the annual repairs are needed and this will require perhaps three months. I do not know how it is. Almost a full force are at work, and we can but hope that every furnace will be kept hot and every man at work.

Suffer us, editors Couey and Britt, to wish you a very happy New Year and that the MONTANA METHODIST under your excellent control may add to its subscription list 1,000 new names before the annual gathering at Stevensville. S. W. BARBEE.

Stevensville Notes.

ED. MONTANA METHODIST:—Already intelligence of the gracious revival we have recently had in the Bitter Root valley as noted by the last number of the METHODIST reached you. I hasten to give you some of the particulars of the same and embrace the first opportunity.

On Friday, December 7th we started a protracted meeting at the Burnt Fork school house, five miles east of Stevensville, which continued without intermission for three weeks, lacking one day, and resulted in the conversion of between twenty-five and thirty souls (including backsliders), and nineteen additions to the church and more to follow. To God be all the praise.

This being our first protracted effort in the territory, we began it in fear and trembling not knowing what might be the number, strength and equipment of the forces arrayed against us as compared with similar engagements in other parts of the country where we had labored, but David-like, we went forth in the "name of the Lord of hosts" believing that the gospel of Christ was as much the "power of God unto salvation" in Montana, as anywhere else.

We found a soil already prepared, yea, the seed had already been sown in many hearts, and the fields were white to the harvest. From the first, good attention to the word was paid. Soon the hearts of the Lord's people were stirred, lukewarm professors were aroused and then it was evident that something had taken hold of the hearts of the unconverted. They looked so serious and thoughtful. Gradually as the convictions deepened, one and another would break loose from the world and come to the "mourners' bench" to pray, (it was no mere "shake-hand" conversions) and then as the light and peace would come they would tell us of it, either with the illumined face and beaming eyes or oftener with the unloosed tongue that now for the first time, amid falling tears of joy, was employed in the service and praise of the Redeemer. And then to hear them sing, "Happy Day," and "O how I love Jesus!" afterwards was a real benediction. Do you wonder, Mr. Editor, that some of the dear friends shouted in true "Methodist" fashion, no, it was "Baptist," according to the example and testimony of one good brother from Georgia—well, we'll compromise, and say "Bible" fashion—anyway they did it, and nobody but the devil, that I heard of, got offended at it.

The work was mainly amongst the young men—the "boys" we like to call them—whilst the heart beats in deepest love and sympathy on their behalf, for who knows the perils and possibilities for good or evil that lie before a young man, perchance away from home, in this wild western region? Seven of these dear boys bowed at the 'altar' one night was a sight that must have sent an extra thrill of joy through the angelic ranks. One dear fellow recived the blessing of pardon after returning home from meeting on his way from his father's house to the stable. The family were a little startled at the noise he made at first, fearing that something had befallen him, but their hearts were soon set at rest when on coming into the house he exclaimed at the bedside of his pious parents: "I wouldn't care if there were forty preachers around now."

I could write more, but must forbear. Will add, however, that out of gratitude for the heart warming they received, the friends in turn proceeded to warm the preacher's back but not with a cowhide be it remembered—the skin of some coons or other animals in the shape of a beautiful fur overcoat, to the grateful surprise of the recipient.

With humble gratitude to God for great mercies to us in the past, we now move forward in his name to another battlefield. "Brethren, pray for us."

Fraternally,
J. B. PARNALL.

Sabbath Observance.

The following is a memorial prepared by the Butte Ministerial Association to present to the labar organizations and capitalists of Butte City, Montana:

We present this memorial not only as ministers of the gospel, whose business is everywhere, and to all classes and at all times, to proclaim the truth of our holy religion, and to advocate a pure morality among the people; but, as citizens also, and as such we realize that whatever is your interest, is ours also. We would not for a moment have you think that we are forgetful of the material interests of our citizens. To build churches and have homes, where the social, religious and civil interests may be conserved, we must have money. The very institutions that we would foster depend upon resources, which you are endeavoring to develop. We therefore, as citizens, have common interests in whatever tends to improve capital and reward labor. It is with this view that we present for your consideration this memorial.

First. We hold and teach our respective constituencies that the Sabbath, or weekly rest-day, is founded in the constitution of man, that it was recognized and observed by our Lord Jesus Christ, and to it has been given new spiritual significance in the Lord's Day of the Christian churches of our land and time. We aim to promote among Christians the sense of its Divine authority, and the more conscientious observance of it against the influences which now prevail to secularize it.

Second. While the state cannot, and should not, enforce or interfere with the religious observance of the Sabbath, yet the weekly rest-day exists only as a civil institution, maintained by law and custom from the beginning of our history, and vitally related to the well-being of individuals and society, and to the stability of our free institutions. We aim to promote among our fellow citizens of all classes such a true understanding of its value to themselves, to their families and to the state, as will lead them to resist whatever tends to deprive them of it, and to sustain just laws which protect their right to it.

In affirming the foregoing principles and our advocacy of them we need not say that we find difficulty and discouragement in our work, from the prevalent disregard of these principles, among the capitalists, resident and non-resident, of our city and vicinity, and the laboring classes. But believing as we do that the intelligence, freedom, security and happiness of the people depend largely upon the recognition and observance of our religious and civil Sabbath, we therefore hopefully ask your honorable body to aid us by resolutions of commendation, and your example and influence individually, in measures that are just, wise and honorable, in the direction of persuading all those who have made investments in our industrial interests, of all classes, to cease all unnecessary labor on the Lord's Day, also the recognition of the moral and legal right of the employees, to a Sabbath free from liability to discharge for non-performance of Sunday work.

We believe that without the religious sanctions of the Bible, without God's positive institution of the Sabbath and Sanctuary, men have never been able to live under a free government. Just as soon, and in so far as, we lessen the power of Christianity, by taking away the Sabbath and Sanctuary, and those functions of the ministry and church, which are indispensable to the prevalence of the Christian religion, we lessen every moral restraint, and imperil everything in society that we and you value, and without which we would not consent to live in the land at all.

Respectfully submitted,
Ministers of Butte.

In the Toledo Blade we read: "Nebraska has its Paradise Valley, Milk River, Honey Creek, Thunder Canyon, Lightning Fork, Doughnut Prairie, Baker's Reef, and Cake Basket Precinct. For style and variety of product this commonwealth has no rival." Montana is not willing to take a back seat, since she can claim a Big Horn River, Tongue River, Powder River, Box Elder River, Thick Timbered River, Bitter Root River, Milk River, Bear Tooth Mountain, Bear's Paw Mountain, Wolf Creek, Indian Creek, Squaw Creek, Pappoose Creek, Muscle Shell River, Hell Gate Canyon, Prickly Pear Valley, Horn Divide, et cetera.

Thoughts By Sim.

"Pulpit Leverage," in the Methodist of December 12, was keen-edged and discovered the Archimedean fulcrum. With the lever and fulcrum properly adjusted, and the power applied, we can certainly move the moral world—yea, "turn the world upside down." "We preach not ourselves" is the true shibboleth of every consecrated and sanctified pulpit in the land. Let the whole church of God be sanctified, and the power be applied by the Holy Ghost, and one supreme sweep of holy courage would convert the world to Christ. You were happy, sir, in the selection of a subject by which to express your timely and suggestive thoughts.

I ask for another morceau from "Engineer." Let him turn that "old crank" a few times more, and I think the "Board," if it should not furnish more experienced engineers, will at least sustain those who are now employed and make their "runs" a little more "easy." I would like to know "Engineer." I wonder if he would let me ride on his engine? How it would please me.

Suffer an appreciative reader of everything in the Methodist to congratulate you on your very able defense of the truth in your editorial of Dec. 26, "Asking for bread and receiving a stone." You not only answered every question of your opponent, ably and in the true Christian spirit, but you likewise vindicate the truth of history in a manner very much like one who is not only familiar with that history, but who is likewise willing, if need be, to become a martyr in its confirmation and establishment. A shrinking, cowardly spirit to the rear always when the truth must be defended against the slanders of those who would falsify history, and especially the history that they themselves have made. Let us have the three hundred that lap water like the dog to establish the Joshuan truth of a history more dear to true Christian men than aught else beside. The M. E. Church South only asks that the facts of history be spoken and written. We are willing to stand or fall on the result. How puerile the question of the Advocate, "Is a Southern Methodist standing on the north pole a Southern Methodist still?" As well might the editor of the Advocate ask "Would an ass be an ass in Helena," because, forsooth, one spoke to Balaam in a country as remote from Helena as is the north pole? "Let us pray."—Advocate. "Pray without ceasing."—Methodist. "And the truth shall make you free." Sim.

Our Mineral Wealth.

Any estimate of the mineral output of Butte for the year 1888 which might be made public before the full returns for December are in would be necessarily inaccurate and misleading. The combined value of the copper, silver and gold product will considerably exceed $20,000,000, but until the price for which the various companies contracted their copper shall be separately figured, any estimate of the amount and value of the metal shipped would be wholly unreliable. According to the express office returns, as published in the Inter Mountain of last week, we know the value of the silver bullion produced in the mills to have aggregated $5,000,000. To this should be added the silver in the crude ore and copper matte shipments probably amounting to $3,000,000, though the conservative gentleman in charge of the smelting companies might protest that is too much, which it is not. Thus we have $8,000,000 as the value of the silver product of Butte, unofficial. The copper product at present is an unknown quantity. Nobody except Mr. Haggin and Mr. Daly themselves know what the Anaconda has produced and therefore no paper can say what the camp has turned out. The Inter Mountain believes that Butte has contributed to the industrial world not less than 100,000,000 pounds of copper and perhaps a good deal more for 1888. Figuring this at 14 cents we have a total of $14,000,000 which, with the $8,000,000 in silver, brings the total up to $22,000,000, though it may vary a million either way. This easily keeps Butte head and shoulders above any other mining town in the world and is more than any state or territery in the union produced during the same peried. It is an increase of $7,000,000 over the product of last year, which is largely owing, however, to the rise in the price of copper.

The mines outside of Butte have fully maintained their reputation. The Granite Mountain, Drum Lummon and Hecla properties are among the great bonanzas of the world. Outside of Butte the great mining districts of Montana have probably produced from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000, and not unlikely that the product for the territory in base and precious metals may foot up over $30,000,000 for the year ending at 12 o'clock to-night. It will probably be some weeks before authentic information on the subject can be obtained, but if the output shows $30,000,000, and it will certainly not show less, the Inter Mountain will be more than satisfied. In the order of their importance the record of the mineral producing states and territories will probably stand as it did last year, to-wit: Montana, Colorado, California, Nevada, Utah, Idaho, Arizona, New Mexico, Dakota, Washington and Oregon.

The dividends paid by the stock companies aggregated for the first eleven months $3,103,000, while the profits of the close corporations (mostly copper) amounted to over $5,000,000, to which must be added the net receipts of thousand of private properties of which it is impossible to secure accurate information. The Inter Mountain believes, however, that the mines of Montana during the past twelve months have paid in dividends, private and public, not less than $10,000,000. Montana is a world beater.—Inter Mountatn.

Self-Control.

There is no kind of person so rare as one who is lord of himself. The other day we met an amusing illustration of this sad truth.

"The first few days of January," said a tobacconist, "trade is very dull with me. I do not sell more than half as many cigars and cigarettes as usual."

"It's the bad weather, I suppose," suggested the customer, as he lighted his cigar.

"No," replied the dealer in the weed, "it is not the weather; it is good resolutions. On New Year's Day a great many men "swear off," and for some days a good portion of them keep their resolutions; but toward the middle of the month they come dropping in, and by the first of February I have about as many customers as usual."

Probably a few succeed in breaking themselves of the habit, but there are always young men coming under the yoke, and thus the average of smokers is kept up.

There are ladies and students who have a daily struggle with "Giant Coffee," and they suffer many a galling defeat. It is strange that the more a thing hurts us the more we are apt to crave it. We once knew a student who had a weak digestion in general, but there was one kind of food that gave him horrors of dyspepsia. This deadly foe was nuts, and of course he longed for nuts.

"I dare not," said he, "look into the window of a fruit-store, for fear of being tempted beyond my strength. I dream of nuts in the night."

The enemy occasionally threw him, and he writhed in the dust of humiliation.

And that, after all, is the most bitter penalty of yielding to an appetite of which we clearly disapprove; we fall in our own esteem. If we are not lord of ourselves, something else is lord of us, and that means slavery. If our despot is one so gross and so mean as a morbid appetite, we do well to ddspise and abhor ourselves. Our self-abhorrenc is the homage due to virtue, and shows that we have still a chance for freedom.

The lesson is this: Cultivate the moral power of the will. The time will come when such moral training will receive the attention it deserves, and become a protection to society.—Exchange.

The Pope's Hold Giving Way.

Some of the Catholics of Ireland are said to be greatly exercised because the pope has refused to bless medals and relics to be distributed among them. Leading Catholics hold that he should permit the Irish faithful to conduct their political affairs in their own way, under the guidance of those who surely know as much about the needs of their country, gathered from a lifelong residence in the Emerald Isle, as his holiness has been able to learn from hearsay.

As far as has been discovered the attitude of the pope, as revealed by his latest burst of indignation, has had no effect, even among the bulk of the Irish clergy, other than to create a counter feeling of indignation and render the Catholics of Ireland even more determined—if that were possible—to continue their present system of warfare against landlords and uphold their leaders in any species of agitation against English rule that their experience and the exigencies of the situation may suggest. It is also assumed that the present mood of his holiness is inspired by the report of Mgr. Persico, which will soon be published, and it is hinted it will be decidedly unfavorable to the Irish.—St. Louis Ad.

Notes.

Governor Leslie's message read at the opening of the legislature last week, sounded like a strong, sound, practical sermon. If there is not a wide difference between the sentiments therein expressed and those of the body to which it was addressed, we may look for some wise legislation during this session. All the leading interests of the territory were laid before the assembly, each accompanied by wise recommendations concerning it. On the subjects of gambling, saloons and Sabbath desecration the Governor expressed himself in no equivocal terms.

Alhambra Springs is a favorite summer resort for the people of Helena, and in winter the scenery is scarcely less beautiful with its covering of snow. We had the pleasure of a short visit there last week and of preaching to a good audience one evening. Brother Clark has a noble people there.

The weather report for the first fifteen days in Butte City, Montana, shows the highest temperature during the day forty degrees above, the lowest temperature at night, 10 degrees below, mean, 18 degrees above.

Mrs. Mary E. Willis of Rock Creek Basin, sold from twenty-five hens in twelve months $150 worth of eggs and chickens. After deducting $35 for feed, there is left $115 net profit, or $4.60 per head on the hens. That is better than raising sheep.

The medical fraternity of Montana asks the present Legislature of the Territory to pass "An act to establish a Territorial Board of Examiners to regulate the practice of Medicine."

The following methods for removing the smelter smoke from the city of Butte have been recently given attention: One is to run a flue, from the smelters where the smoke is to be accumulated, to the mountains, at a point high enough to produce a strong draught. This flue would have to be four miles long, and it is said would cost $100,000. The other method, which has been offered, is for a "spray of water to be inserted in a flue near the bottom, arranged so as to play directly on the smoke as it comes from the furnaces, the noxious elements can be condensed and run off from the bottom of the flues." We know not whether either scheme will prove successful. The last named is not so expensive.

We know a grand system for purifying the moral atmosphere. The work is greatly needed. We have a pure gospel, which, if properly exemplified in the lives of the Christians will do wonders in this all important matter.

It is said that Judge Vincent of New Mexico has been offered the Chief Justiceship of Montana in place of Judge McConnel resigned.

A new history of Montana has been prepared by Henry McDonald and is now going through the press in New York city. The writer is an old resident of Montana.

The W. C. T. U. of Montana is now soliciting signatures, petitioning the Legislature to pass a law prohibiting the opening of saloons and gambling houses on the Sabbath. If we mistake not something akin to this is already on our statutes, but of no avail, because public sentiment is not yet strong enough to enforce the law. Let us pray for better times.

Some good articles contributed for this issue had to be laid over for next time owing to lack of space. We regret this the more since it will be three weeks before another issue.

We give a good letter this week from Mexico by our schoolmate of other days, Rev. Geo. B. Winton. We are glad of the promise he gives us of sending us an occasional communication from that far off field.

The Superannuated Preachers' Fund.

It was learned shortly after the session of the Montana Annual Conference, that we had failed to comply with the laws of Montana in creating a coporate body to which the fund above named should be paid, and such were the conditions of incorporation, that it would be impracticable to consummate such before another session of the conference. The question might arise in the minds of some, what shall we do in the mean time. If we have the money to pay our subscription to this fund, we think it would be well to send it to Brother A. G. Clarke, our treasurer, and with the approval of the executive committee, he might place the money on deposit in one of our safe banks of the territory, so that it may be accumulating something. At our next annual meeting we could complete the matter according to the laws on the subject. This is too important to neglect.

From Mexico.

Mr. Editor:—The clean and smiling pages of the Montana Methodist come to us in our far away home like a breath of air pure from the snow and frost of your mountains or a draught from the clear cold brooks, that begin among them their weary journey to the sea. The good news of revival, of church and parsonage building, of spiritual Methodism alert, aggressive, successful, is indeed like "cold water to a thirsty soul." And so across the breadth of North American Methodism I extend a friendly "how" to your readers, greeting them in a common cause and in the name of a church and Master beloved of all. I have always felt a peculiar interest in Montana as a field for our church, it being largely occupied by members and preachers from the sturdy stock of Missouri Methodism which fostered my youth and left its beneficent influence upon me for life. Our work in every state and territory of the west attests the vitality of that parent stock, which giving has not impoverished, but which while spreading its branches over this great territory from the Mississippi to the Pacific ocean, and from Mexico to Washington Territory, has struck deeper and deeper its roots in its native and congenial soil.

Montana and Mexico, though so far apart, are alike picket posts of the great army of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. With you we can send back the message to the anxious inquirers, "the morning cometh." Broader and broader are we laying foundations, wider and wider extending our lines, while at the same time filling the ranks with willing recruits and presenting ever a more solid front. We have in the Republic of Mexico, two conferences with twelve American preachers and perhaps seventy-five native preachers, itinerant and local, available as supplies, about three thousand members, with various schools, church properties, etc. A special high school for the training of preachers and teachers is a recent addition, the building is secured, the principal is on the ground, abundant material is at hand and a hopeful beginning will be made next week.

One of our brethren, Rev. R. W. McDonell, of the Border Conference, young, strong, consecrated, proficient in Spanish, universally beloved, has just died. But at the very time, two others, one from each conference, were just ready to start for this field. One has already arrived, pernaps the other. Of course the Captain knows, but to us it seemed that we could ill spare this strong soldier from the battle.

Bishop Galloway, who so pleased the brethren in Montana swung in a long arc of Episcopal itinerancy to this field also, captured and was captured. We have every reason to believe that he returned full of the enterprise of pushing things hereabout. Our latest recruit is a near relation of his, Rev. J. M. Weems, of Mississippi. Among our present equipments not the least important and encouraging is the residence at Nashville of a competent translator into Spanish and the provision by the house to publish books for us as rapidly as they may be edited. We have suffered much from the dearth of literature current and permanent; now we hope for better things.

Do you exchange with our Evangelist? Its size of page is near that of your neat Methodist, though in quality of paper, advertising, etc., the Methodist shows plainly that it comes from the United States. Paper is very expensive in Mexico on account of heavy duties. Indeed there are not many things to which we are accustomed as the natural and necessary comforts of life upon which the Mexican tariff has not laid its requisition. One can submit more gracefully here than in the United States, however, knowing that instead of a useless and cumbrous "war tax" it is an indispensable necessity to the government.

A Mother's Care.

I do not think that I could bear
My daily weight of woman's care,
If it were not for this:
That Jesus seemeth always near,
Unseen, but whispering in my ear
Some tender words of love or cheer,
To fill my soul with bliss.

There are so many trivial cares
That no one knows and no one shares,
Too small for me to tell;
Things e'en my husband cannot see,
Nor his dear love uplift from me—
Each hour's unnamed perplexity
That mothers know so well:

The failure of some household scheme,
The ending of some pleasant dream,
Deep hidden in my breast;
The weariness of children's noise,
The yearning for that subtle poise
That turneth duties into joys,
And giveth inner rest.

These secret things, however small,
Are known to Jesus, each and all,
And this thought brings me peace.
I do not need to say one word,
He knows what thought my heart hath stirred;
And by divine caress my Lord
Makes all my throbbing cease.

And then, upon his loving breast,
My weary head is laid at rest,
In speechless ecstasy!
Until it seemeth all in vain
That care, fatigue, or mortal pain
Should hope to drive me forth again
From such felicity.

Stringing the Fish.

Ed. Montana Methodist:—The above suggestive caption brings back to memory the halcyon days of "auld lang syne" to all of us. Who does not remember the happy days of childhood, when in buoyant glee beneath the genial warmth of summer, tempered by the umbrageous cool of the brook beside the old mill, many long hours were whiled away by the most exhilarating of all sports—angling. What excitement was ours, when after patient waiting with eyes so intent upon the bounding cork as it floated lazily upon the water, we are at last rewarded by a bite. With what a quick nervous jerk the line is brought in, merely, as the slang though expressive saying of to-day has it, to find we are "too previous." Having gained experience we wait until from a nibbling there's a decided pull, the cork 's out of sight and we draw in a little beauty—a sun perch. Then deftly readjusting the bait upon our hook we make a second cast but this time with such eagerness as to catch—not one of the finny tribe but the limb of the nearest bush instead. Ah! with what pains we unloose and untangle this line. Now how cautiously we make a throw. But that fickle jade, dame fortune, plays a sad trick and deserts us entirely. We change to a more inviting hole farther up, here the current sweeps in long graceful girations; our hook is either too light or possessed, for in spite of all we can do it wants to float upon top, but by the wise advice of an elder fisherman the lead is made to sink deeper by moving the floater. Now for it! Soon there is what we take for a pull, we are astonished to look at our hook, being assured we have a prize, but alas!

"The ways 'o men and mice aft gang aglee."

We are fast, not to a huge fish as had been vainly hoped, but to the root of an old snag of a tree. Oh! what skillful engineering it took only to have to break our beautiful new catgut. We could have cried through sheer vexation but for that other fellow, who lent us another hook. Having learned wisdom we go back to the first hole. A notion strikes us. We will fish for larger game and use No. 1 for bait. But where is he? Echo answers where. Ah, the problem is solved, he, the perch, floundered very wisely back into the water.

But, dear brother, we did not intend to write a chapter upon the science of pisciculture but did upon the start intend to draw a practical lesson from the news our dear brother P. E. wrote in the last issue of what the Lord was doing for us in Boulder, "whereof we are glad." Like too many, I was perhaps a trifle too anxious to string the fish as soon as they were caught urging the necessity from the argument there might be other strings read to catch those already in hand, very wisely Brother S. remarked, "if they were as fickle as that they were not worth looking after." I have thought a good deal about the wisdom of this remark: "We can go too far upon either extreme," and I am convinced that too great haste is not wise. If a "sincere desire to flee the wrath to come, and be saved" is followed up, or as the Discipline expressed it, is "evidenced," then he can trust to the spirit's leading. We want good fish, such as were accepted in the miraculous draught. The bad will flounder, even though they might be strung, back into the water. A hydrocepholite will remain one, though their names be upon a dozen Methodist registers and besides they are apt to cause others to taint.

Field Notes.

CORVALLIS AND STEVENSVILLE.

The quarterly meeting for Corvallis circuit was held at Grantsdale, a promising young town on the Bitter Root railroad, about fifty miles from Missoula. This at one time was considered the head of the Bitter Root valley, but now the valley is settled fifty miles above this point. This place is the outfitting point for Mineral Hill, a rich silver mining district about seventy-five miles to the southwest. We had services on Saturday at eleven o'clock and Saturday night. I like the old custom. Brethren, let us keep it up. Brother Flowers is in favor with the people here, and reports good congregations. He is enthusiastic over the prospect of building a church here next spring. Mr. H. H. Grant, the public spirited gentleman who laid out the town, kindly offers a lot each for the church and the parsonage, and greatly desires to see a minister located here. It would be very central for this new charge, and Brother Flowers talks of moving up.

Our services were much interfered with by the storm that prevailed on Saturday and Sunday.

Three persons who formerly lived at Fayette, Mo., came forward and identified themselves with our church here. With several others who live in the community they will form the nucleus for a good society, which I trust will grow and prosper. There is a large and inviting field in the bounds of this charge which I hope the pastor will be able to occupy most vigorously before the year is out. Living at Stevensville makes it quite laborious for the pastor and prevents him from giving the time necessary to insure the fullest measure of success in his work.

We went next to Stevensville. A break-down on the road caused us to be late for the morning service but Brother Parnall preached at the appointed time, and the quarterly conference was held in the afternoon, and was the largest body of the kind in point of numbers, that I have presided over for some time. There were not only several new members—secretaries of church conferences—but quite a number of spectators—the fruit of the last revival at Burnt Fork. I could see the fruit of this wonderful work of grace in the faces of the young men, of the fathers and mothers, and feel the change in the very atmosphere as soon as I arrived. Both pastor and people are greatly elated over the victory that has been gained. And none rejoices more than this writer. Our Sunday morning service was well attended, notwithstanding the fact that there were services at four other places in town, and the communion was a season of refreshing.

Brother Parnall is taking hold of the work in earnest and shows the skill of a master workman. Tne people are visited from house to house, class meetings and church conferences are held, plans devised for paying off debts and improving the finances generally, and all the interests of the church looked after. Sister Parnall is an invaluable helper in the work. It is hard telling which is the most popular. While the men were holding the quarterly conference the parsonage parlor was full of ladies reorganizing the parsonage society, and planning for more efficient work. The work is on rising ground on the Stevensville charge. The Lord is present in converting power, and we expect to hear more from this field later on. Brother M. J. Hortonbury was licensed to preach by a unanimous vote of the quarterly conference, and from the zeal with which he is entering on his work he intends that the office of local preacher shall be no mere sinecure in his hands. May it be thus with all of our local preachers.

Upon the whole I think we can report quite an advance all along the line during the quarter that is just closing, and I trust that this is just the beginning of a work that shall spread throughout Montana. I have urgent calls for a preacher to be sent into a hitherto unoccupied field, and hope to supply the wish in a short time.

Brethren of the ministry and laity, God has heard and is answering prayer. He is working in us and through us to the building up of his kingdom in this fair land. Let us praise him for what he has done, and go forward and work and pray and look for still greater things from him who encourages us to ask largely that we may receive largely.

E. J. Stanley.

A Call.

To Secretaries of Annual Conferences:—Will the secretaries of all Annual Conferences please forward to the undersigned as soon as possible the number and value of the churches burned within their respective conferences during the last ten years?

This can be very readily accomplished if every presiding elder who reads this call will forward to his conference secretary a postal card containing the value and number of churches burned in his district during the last ten years.

In answer to a memorial presented to the Knights of Labor, by the Butte Ministerial Association, requesting their co-operation in minimizing Sunday work in Butte the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That while as citizens, we would like to see Sunday laws enacted and enforced in all branches of trade, as a body of Knights of Labor, we refrain from any action thereon.

Children's Corner.

For the last few weeks the children of Helena have had unusually fine coasting. By petitioning the city council they otained exclusive use of a part of one street for their sport. Besides this they have largely taken control of several other hills in town. This has annoyed the drivers of teams no little, and is always dangerous for the children. Several serious accidents have occurred by the collision of teams and coasting sleds.

Our Boys.

Many people seem to forget that character grows—that it is not something to put on ready made with womanhood or manhood but day by day, here a little and there a little, grows with and strengthens with the strength, until good or bad it is almost a coat of mail. Look at a man of business—prompt, reliable, conscientious, yet clear-headed and energetic. When do you suppose he developed all these admirable qualities? When he was a boy. Let us see how a boy ten years of age gets up in the morning, works, plays and studies, and we will tell you what sort of a man he will make. The boy that is late at breakfast and late at school stands a poor chance of being a prompt man. The boy who neglects his duties, be they ever so small, and then excuses himself by saying: "I forgot; I didn't think," will never be a reliable man; and the boy who finds pleasure in the suffering of weaker things, will never by a noble, generous, kind man—a gentleman.—Busy Bee.

How a Little Dog Did.

We once met a little dog on a sidewalk in a city after a snow fall that had crusted enough to make going out of a beaten way difficult. The sidewalk upon which we were meeting had narrowed into a foot path through the snow. The little dog, as we neared each other, began to show signs of trouble. He saw that he must pass us in the trail, retrace his steps, or take the snow. The first he had not the courage to do, while his love of ease, and may be, the importance of his errand, forbid him either of the other means of relief. But the difficulty was approaching. Something must be done. He finally wheeled upon his hesitating steps and ran back the trail glibly for several rods, when he struck upon an expedient. He seemed to think of a limb that had been injured, and on account of which he had, no doubt, received many favors, and he took it up and ran off up the track as if much disabled, looking back. on first one side and then on the other as if to say: "It is such a pity for a poor little lame dog to have to go all the way back, or take the snow, when you could step aside so easily, and without injury to yourself, and let him pass." Moral: Never use deceit, or allow yourself to stop to form excuses in the midst of life's engagements, when courage and self-sacrifice will meet them. Such a course can only increase your trouble while it rewards you with guilt and shame.

Now is The Time.

Milton has been quoted as saying: "Childhood shows the man as morning shows the day." If this be true of individuals, it must surely be true of society made up of individuals. This granted, what of the land toward the setting sun? There is much involved in the present and more in the future condition of the west to interest the observant moralizer.

In a recent editorial in the general organ of the M. E. Church, South, we find an ideal church and an ideal ministry set forth. The chief element of the church is her possession of the true missionary spirit, and the all-important characteristics of the ministry are intelligence and consecration. These are given as factors of the "church of the future."

Now is the time for us to fix our eyes, our hands and our hearts upon what we might call the new west.

Dr. Josiah Strong says, "It is the first permanent settlers who impress themselves and their characters upon the future," and "The west is to dominate the east."

This is unquestionably the time to prepare for our welfare, both civil and religious. To-day, we might ask in deep solicitude, are the first settlers capable of assimilating the great tide as it pours into the west from every quarter of the globe? Is the church wise in all her measures in the west to Christianize, yea, spiritualize the incoming population?

According to Dr. Dorchester, we find that in 1880 the Evangelical church membership as compared to the population in the states and territories in the northwest were as follows: In Oregon, one in eleven; Dakota, one in twelve; Washington Territory, one in sixteen; California and Colorado, one in twenty; Idaho, one in thirty-three; Montana. one in thirty-six; Nevada, one in forty-six; Wyoming, one in eighty-one; Utah, one in two hundred and twenty-four; New Mexico, one in six hundred and fifty-seven; Arizona, one in six hundred and eighty-five. An average of one church member to a population of one hundred and forty-five.

We say, with emphasis, now is the time to take hold of the west vigorously. Let the ideal missionary church look this way, and seeing, send this way, of her treasuries and her intelligent consecrated ministry. Heterogeneous immigration, Romanism, Mormonism, Intemperance, Socialism, Mammonism, corruption incident to city life, all threaten us. So, again we say, send help to the front of the battle, for reinforcements we must have and that speedily—not men alone, but men and means.

The Open Switch.

We often see notices of serious accidents and tedious delays by negligence on the part of brakemen on our railroads. Brethren of the ministry, it is just as easy for us to mislead some of our hearers by not keeping everything adjusted for travel on the main track. We have recently heard it said that a minister of one of our sister churches in Montana assailed the doctrine of a personal devil. This is certainly sidetracking. To the old paths brethren, we need no new theology for the west.

The question of "Methodist Mutual Insurance" is now receiving much attention in the M. E. Church, South. We do hope a plan may be agreed upon, and the church saved the enormous sum paid out annually for the protection of our church property.

Notes and Personals.

Governor West of Utah says: "To give these people the sovereign rights proposed would be to place every non-Mormon in Utah completely at their mercy." With this consideration before him he opposes statehood for that territory.

It is said that the Rocky Fork & Cooke City railroad is being rapidly built. This will give the cities of Montana access to the largest coal fields in the territory. The quality, it is held, is the best yet discovered in the northwest.

On organizing the territorial legislature of Montana January 14th, there were in the council seven republicans and five democrats and in the house of representatives nineteen republicans and five democrats. This is about the ratio of the two parties as might be seen had all the members of both houses been present.

We hope our lawmakers now in session may neither buy nor sell, but do what is "just and right and good."

From notices in our church papers we may judge Bishop Hargrove is now in Oregon, having been called there on special business requiring Episcopal counsel.

Brethren of the Montana Conference, we again urge you to give us semi-monthly postal card reports of your work. Do not understand by this request, that you are not to send contributions to the columns of the paper, upon miscellaneous topics suited to a religious organ if we may be allowed to so denominate the MONTANA METHODIST.

To whom does the MONTANA METHODIST belong? To the preachers and laity of the M. E. Church, South, in the territory of Montana. No dividends have been declared, although six months have elapsed since its inauguration. Whose business is it to see that the paper is kept running? Every one who would have the cause of our church sustained in this territory should help—chiefly the traveling preachers. Don't forget, dear brother, that the work is all gratuitous. Are you helping all you can?

We would remind our Montana brethren that the two preachers upon whom falls the chief care of this paper, are those who have as difficult pastorates as are to be found in the bounds of the conference. We most cheerfully do the work given us, but do most sincerely wish your co-operation.

Rev. G. W. Nollner returns from the Denver to the St. Louis Conference. Rev. Olin Boggess is transferred from the St, Louis Conference and goes to the Denver. We are glad to see the front ranks kept solid.

Our territorial legislature convened Monday January 14th to continue in session sixty days.

To our way of looking at it, there is a strange inconsistency in the electoral and popular suffrage in our government.

An effort is being made to get rid of the terrible smoke that hovers over Butte, Montana, from the smelters of the city and vicinity.

Butte is to have cable cars running her streets in a few days.

We have had three very decided revivals in the Helena district during the second quarter. Fifty to sixty souls converted, and as many accessions to the Church. Success is being followed up, and we are moving forward for new victories.

The latest news from the Bitter Root country says that Bro. Parnall is pressing the battle in the second engagement. Victor is now the scene. About thirty conversions and twenty-three accessions reported up to the date of the message. The glad harvest time has come. One soweth and another reapeth—both shall rejoice together. We thank the Lord for the good news from many points.

A note from Bro. E. G. Brooke of White Hall says the people are well pleased with their young pastor, Rev. W. T. Goulder, who reached the work early in December. We hope Bro. Goulder is equally well pleased with the people whom he serves, and in one accord may preacher and people do a grand work in soul saving.

Bishop Pierce once said: "I do think breaking hearts with the hammer of the word is better than splitting hairs with metaphysical acumen."

Thursday. March 28th, is the date fixed for the Helena District Conference to convene in Anaconda. We trust many precious souls may be brought into the kingdom in the meantime.

Desired Legislation in Montana.

In one of our Montana exchanges we find a synopsis of the governor's message to the law-makers now in session. The following selection is characteristic of Mr. Leslie, and we will anxiously await the action of the legislature to see if there's as much virtue in the body as in the head of our territorial government. We read:

"He deals with the financial condition of the territory and says that the territory is out of debt and has on hand a balance of $114,340.48 in the general fund, besides about $14,000 in other funds. On the temperance question he takes advanced moral grounds and advocates high license and all necessary restrictions. He refers to public derelictions of duty, favors the enactment of a Sunday law, recommends a law for the appointment of a public examiner of financial accounts, dwells on the educational needs, puts in a few words for the establishment of an agricultural and mechanical college, suggests that a new and large penitentiary be built, also a house of reform, recommends amendments of the law governing commitments and care of the insane in a territorial institution, wants politics to be kept out of state institutions, favors laws for the better protection of the ballot to insure honest elections, urges the enactment of a registration law and indorses the movement for the codification of the laws of Montana.

The message is well received and is believed to be in the line of public welfare.

A Well Directed Blow.

Sim "has hit the nail on the head," and we could wish that it were "driven in a sure place." It is "the truth," prayer or no prayer, that "makes us free" from all abnormal or hurtful relations, whether of a social, eclesiastical or spiritual character. And therefore, we say in behalf of her who has been charged with "sinful prejudice" as the reason why her modest suitor has not gained her fair hand in holy wedlock, and who has on this account, been placed (not in "sinful prejudice," but in tender love?) on the "north pole" to ridicule and freeze her into submission, that it would be a pleasant service to her, indeed, if the truth of her eclesiastical existence and career, governed her suitor in his fraternal intercourse with her, as in this event it would be seen that her relation to him is, on her part, unavoidable, and hence, if it is unpleasant to him, is self-inflicted. It is not always, Mr. Editor, that prayer is either ordered or offered in the interest of the truth, for some "prayers are an abomination to the Lord." If the truth prevailed in our relations to each other, there would be no need of a call for prayer to bring us into harmony in our coordinate mission, in "spreading scriptural holiness," not only to the "north pole" if need be, but all over this sin cursed earth. "All of God's works are "one in truth." It is by truth alone that we are sanctified for the work. But if of life we must needs pray in this case, we would suggest that St. Paul has, by divine inspiration, furnished the formula. "Lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting." And then, in the name of sincerity, let us act toward each other as we pray. "Let love be without dissimulation" or not at all. We much prefer hatred straight to having it mixed with love. In all candor. R. S. CLARK.

Delayed Greeting Echoed.

It affords us great pleasure to know that we have the hearty good wishes of elder brethren of religious journalism. "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." Beginning the MONTANA METHODIST as we did, under some difficulties, from inexperience and lack of means, we are gratified to have secured the confidence of many who doubted the feasibility of the enterprise. Dr. Godbey, Editor Southwestern Methodist, in a private note sends us the following kind words which we echo, and add, long live the Southwestern Methodist and its courteous editor:

DEAR BROTHER COUEY:—I write to send a New Year's greeting and to express my great pleasure at the substantial appearance of the MONTANA METHODIST. It is a comely paper and greatly needed in its field. I wish you a happy and prosperous New Year.

Yours Fraternally,
J. E. GODBEY.

Dancing Into Hell—A True Story.

A young lady once asked Bishop McIlvaine of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Ohio, if it were harmful for a Ch istian to dance. His reply was, "No Christian ever wants to dance." This is strong and unequivocal language, but the Bible sustains the declaration, and the sad history of the unfortunate heroine of my story confirms the words of the good bishop.

More than twenty-five years ago there was a planter in north Alabama whose name was Warren. He lived distant from my father's home about ten miles. He was a man of large possessions, and was passionately fond of the world. He had taught his family to copy his example, one of their pastimes being the modern dance.

But God's ways are not as man's ways, and he sent a faithful Methodist preacher into the neighborhood of old Mr. Warren, who preached and prayed, and wrestled wih God for a mighty outpouring of his spirit. The Lord answered his prayer, and a great revival followed. During the progress of the meeting, the family of Mr. Warren was drawn thither, probably more from curiosity or a desire to make fun, than from any other cause. But while there the Holy Spirit awakened our heroine, Sallie Warren, and she was powerfully converted. Her conversion and the strange new life she at once began to lead were a puzzle and at the same time a great cross to her worldly minded father. Such a life, right before his eyes and in his own house, constantly reproved him of his sins, and reminded him of the judgment to come. But when his daughter wished to join the church it was too much for his proud heart. "What," said he, "my child raised in affluence and possessed of every facility for pleas ure and worldly enjoyment, join the despised Methodists? No, this shall never be, if I can prevent it. I would be ruined and my family disgraced. Sallie shall never join the church, and particularly the Methodist church." But how he was to accomplish his purpose he hardly knew. However, after much worrying, he hit upon a very ingenius plan—and he was successful. It shows the devil's mode of attack, and how well he knows the weak points in every human character. And let me say to every parent who may read this true story: "Beware how you stand in the way of your children's right-doing, and especially how you teach them to do what is positively wrong."

Mr. Warren's final appeal was to her former fondness for dancing, at the same time holding out new inducements to his child in this line of worldly pleasure. For a while still she hesitated, because the warm love of God was moving her tender, youthful heart, and she felt that she could not abandon her cherished purpose to join the church, she had learned to love so well. A grand ball was to come off in the vicinity of her father's home. Her father felt that now was his golden opportunity, and that if he failed now he need never attempt it again. Addressing her one day he said: "Sallie, my child, I love you, you know I do, and it would greatly grieve me for you to join the church just now, you are too young; wait until you are older. You know that in a few days our fashionable ball at Major Irwin's will bring together all the gay young people of the country, and all your old partners of the dance will be there, and will be much suprised not to find you. You won't disappoint your father; you'll go, won't you? You have many things to wear, but I would not think of allowing you to be present on so grand an occasion without two or three entirely new costumes. Your wardrobe must be entirely refurnised. Among other articles I will purchase for you in the city, shall be a rich and costly satin gown, made in the most artistic style, in which you can dance with your special friends. Oh, it will be so nice to be there, and to know that my daughter will be, perhaps the most charming and attractive young lady present." And thus he pleaded for a long time, and Sallie finally yielded to her father's importunity. Now, mark you the passions in his own child to which the father appealed, that he might divert her from her cherished purpose of joining the church. He appeals to her vanity—love of dress and popularity with her former associates, and to her love of pleasure—particularly of the dance, of which she had once been so fond.

The wardrobe was made ready and the toilet prepared. But alas! for human projects. Before the day appointed for the grand ball arrived, Sallie, the lovely daughrer, was taken seriously ill, and she retired to her room and lay down on her bed only to be taken therefrom to her sleep in the silence of the grave.

But before the final act in this solemn drama shuts out from view this lovely and interesting young lady, let us span the intervening quarter of a century and stand awhile in the chamber of death. Three miles from Moulton, the county town, where part of my boyhood days were spent, on the Tuscaloosa road, and about half a mile from the road, stands the palatial home of Mr. Warren, almost surrounded by a beautiful grove, and just back of a grassy lawn whose flowers, evergreens and rustic scenery were really enchanting. As we approach the mansion, however, and touch the ivory handle that communicates with the bell within, we are startled by the gloomy aspect before us. A servant softly and slowly opens to us the rosewood door that turns sadly upon its silver-washed hinges. Through the lengthened hall we pass up a flight of winding carpeted stairs, and then another door gently opens, and we are standing in the presence of death. The lovely, but ruined Sallie Warren is dying! On the opposite side from her is her mother. At the foot of her bed, and in other places in the room, stand her brothers and sisters in a state of great mental excitement. Her father stands near a window, his whole frame convulsed with sorrow and remorse. We stand a moment amid the unbroken silence.

Now turning our eyes to the bed on which lies the dying sufferer, we behold the bony hand of Sallie Warren pointing in the direction of her father, while a weak voice says: "Father, come, stand by my bed. Take my keys and give them to a servant and bid her bring my ballroom dress—my costly satin—the one you purchased for the ball I shall never attend. There, that will do; hang it beside me on this chair. Father, I am dying now, and I will be lost. I was once a Christian and wanted to join the church, but you would not let me. You promised me if I would not join the church, I should have a rich satin dress in which to dance at the grand ball. There is the dress—I have never worn it—I will not need it here. I will soon be dead and in Hell, and you have been the cause of it. Wrap me, dear father when I die, in my ballroom dress—fit emblem of my wretched condition forever. And now, kind Father, farewell, and may the memory of this dress and this scene ever be present with you, to remind you of the loss of your favorite child, because you kept her from joining the church she so much loved by persuading her to dance. Kiss me once more. Good bye." We look again upon the pale form before us. The tongue of the dying ruined child, ceased to move; the head had dropped upon the silent breast; the pulse was still, and the aching heart will never throb again.

With bated breath and a prayer for the living; sounding a note of warning to all parents who would follow the example of the mis guided Warren, we leave his child alone with God.

Montana Methodist Matrimonial Christening.

Mr. Editor:—I believe the lot of christening the Methodist matrimonially falls to the undersigned. I accept the honor with thanks, and also give notice to all parties wishing my services in the "marrying" line that I can be found at all times, unless "professionally" absent, at the Methodist parsonage in Anaconda, Montana. Parties at a distance can reach me either by telegraph or telephone; or a letter addressed to P. O. box 246 will meet with a prompt response.

The aroma of orange blossoms was first scented on the evening of January 5th, when Eugene Smith and Mary F. Sabe were harnessed for the journey of life. They make an auspicious beginning, and this celebrant prays for them an increase of joys as the years glide by. This was the initial marriage in the parsonage.

We were next called to the Palace hotel, in the parlor of which on the 15th, we were permitted to pronounce the words that made Edward Seldans and Birdie Elliott "husband and wife." The bridegroom is a railroad man of Anaconda, and the parson, after the ceremony, ground out the following lines in commemoration of the happy event;

Edward has pulled his engine through,
With dauntless nerve and sturdy;
And life he now begins anew,
With his gentle, loving Birdie.

May the "track of life be ever bright,
And his train he never "ditch,"
His "headlight,, ever shining bright,
And may he never use the "switch."

But here they are again at the parsonage, on the evening of the 17th,—Charles Bostrom and Mary Eunice, all the way from Sweden—and they too, are now happy in each other's love. We send after each of the matched pairs the traditional slipper, and may it bring good luck to all. S. W. Barbee.

In Corvallis, Oregon.

In a communication to the Pacific Methodist, by Rev. D, Atkins of the Columbia Conference, we find the following account of an almost riot:

"On the morning of December 26 the usually quiet and uneventful town of Corvallis was thrown into a state of suppressed excitement by the arrival of about three huudred ra lroad hands, mostly Italians with some Irish, and a few Americans. Other companies arrived at intervals until within twenty-four hours there were in all about five hundred. They had been in the employ of Messrs. Jacobs & Meyers, contractors on the Oregon Pacific railroad. The aforesaid contractors were residents of this place, and failed, leaving a few months wages not paid. This company of workmen, before leaving their camps, consulted a lawyer, took charge of the town and came with their motto, "Their wages or blood." They took possession of the town hall for an encampment. They gathered about the door of the bank and the entrance to the railroad office with an air of determination which made strong men fear the worst. They were offered 50c on the dollar, but replied "all or blood." Mr. Mugess offered them all he had received from the company. Then they directed their aim at the company, and after some telegraphing, etc., the company decided to pay them in full. Then there was rejoicing on all sides. The citizens treated them kindly, and they made no disturbance in the town otherwise. It was evident that they were determined. They were, doubtless, armed, and what they would have done if they had not received their pay it is difficult to surmise. It is sufficient to say that the entire population breathed easier when they had been paid. They mayor of the town found it necessary to declare a prohibitory mandate upon the saloons, which was wise and timely."

Every Man Might Judge Himself.

Every man knows whether he is good or bad. Every man must determine himself by majorities. We have amplified this thought in former Bible readings. Every man carries his own actions by a majority vote. Can a single man know the mystery of minority and majority? Certainly! Every man who reasons upon life says he will carry out such a policy for so many reasons; on the other hand, he says there are so many other reasons against that policy. If there be six reasons for it, and nine reasons against it, the action is taken upon the majority. You know whether you are a bad man or a good one. Do not whine and cant and analyze yourself so as to draw attention to the leanness of your virtue or the subtlety of piety. "Brethren, if our heart condemn us"—that is the standard. Ask no pastor whether you are good or bad. The answer is in yourself. But you are called drunkard by men? That is nothing; you may not be a drunkard, though you have reeled in the streets by reason of wine. The question is: Are you drunk in your soul?

You may be thought to be violent, but men do not know what violence is. Do you feel gentle in heart, and is it your daily struggle to be gentle in manner? Then the Lord will judge you, and set you among his gentle ones. Are you sober? You may be sober according to the flesh, and drunk in the soul every night. No drunkard shall enter the kingdom of heaven. A man is what he is in his soul. There are those who have been excommunicated from the altar which the Lord never sanctified, who have been better than the priests who condemned them to outer darkness. Let us inspire ourselves by this reflection—the Lord will judge. If we can say to him, after cursing, swearing, denial, blasphemy, cowardice: "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee," all the black night-work shall be forgotten, and on the shore in the morning we shall begin our new heaven. Be severe with yourselves; thrust the knife still farther in; hold the light nearer, nearer; the cross is the bar of judgment.—Joseph Parker, D. D.

HELENA, MONTANA, FEBRUARY 13, 1889

Vol. I, No. 13.
Subscription, $1.00 per Year.

Notes and Personals.

Nearly all of our church papers are offering liberal premiums for new subscribers. The Nashville Advocate offers any one of a number of good books. well bound, to each new subscriber. The St. Louis Advocate and the Southwestern Methodist each makes an offer of three books to every new subscriber. And now comes the Episcopal Methodist with the astonishing offer of forty books for each new subscriber. We give no premiums to our patrons, but, promise them a full return for their money in the way of a good religious newspaper.

Sam Jones has been stirring things in Los Angeles, Cal., during the last few weeks. A thousand or more conversions were reported in the last Los Angles Christian Advocate. Another indication of the good work is that the saloon-keepers are greatly enraged. Two of them have expressed their earnest desire to thrash the evangelist. He has doubtless been the means of rescuing some victims of their vile business.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church recently dedicated their new publishing house at Nashville, Tennessee. Referring to the problem in the enterprise, Dr. C. S. Smith, the secretary, expresses himself thus: "Thanks, many thanks, many heartfelt thanks, to the Southern Methodist Publishing House for helping us to solve it."

Our pioneer brethren, Revs. L, B, Stateler and E. J. Stanley, of the Montana Conference. are beginning to look back over the years of sowing and bless God for 'giving the increase.' They are now praising God with the harvest song, and realize that their labors have not been in vain. The revival spirit is spreading in our land, until that brother is "out of order" who does not make a strong effort for a revival in his pastorate. We "rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep."

We think there is much newspaper gush over Samoan affairs. Opinions are too often sensational. What is the use for the public press, the people's bulletin, to raise false alarms, so often called news? History is reliable, when facts accord. Let us commit little Samoa to safe hands and be quiet if we can.

Rev. Jno. Moore, our Deer Lodge pastor, favored us with a short visit last week, and expressed himself much pleased with the progress of the meeting now going on in the editor's pastorate at Butte. His presence and exhortations to the people Wednesday evening were refreshing.

An estimate made from the new directory of Helena, just compiled, places the population of the city at 20,000.

There has been a very fine revival of religion in the Mountain View M. E. Church in Butte City. Many souls have been converted, and a large number added to the church.

We wish the brethren may have an old fashioned revival at the district conference in Bozeman, which begins this week.

Bishop McTyeire improves very slowly.

The revival services conducted by the pastor at Butte have already attained good results, and promise to grow better. The Lord grant us a gracious season of grace among the members and the conversion of precious souls.

The MONTANA METHODIST hereby acknowledges the receipt of The Evangelist, edited by Rev. Dr. D. C. Kelly, and published at Nashville, Tenn·, by Rev. Rufus J. Clark. This is a weekly paper specially authorized to publish the sermons of the Rev. Sam Jones and the Rev. Sam Small. The price of it is $1.00 a year, and is well worth it. We find a good bit of Dr. Kelly's originality in it.

A Methodist preacher writing to the St. Louis Advocate says: "Please announce that Rev. —— and myself held a two weeks' meeting at ---- with one conversion and addition to the Baptist church. I am now holding a meeting in another place." We think it was time for that brother to go to another place.

That Debate.

Last week there was a debate in the Disciples or Campbellite Church in this city between Rev. G. K. Berry the pastor of that church and Rev. A. D. Raleigh, pastor of the M. E. Church. The proposition discussed was, "Resolved, That the baptism of a penitent believer in water is for the remission of his past sins."

Mr. Berry of course affirmed. He claimed that baptism was necessary to the remission of sins in the same sense and same degree as faith was necessary. On the other hand Mr. Raleigh ably defended the doctrine of justification by faith alone.

The absolute necessity of baptism in order to salvation was earnestly maintained by Mr. Berry and we believe he was sincere in this view. But we are forced to believe that he and all who hold this doctrine are ignorant of experimental spiritual religion. For every one who believes in Christ so as to receive the "witness of the Spirit" is distinctly conscious of two facts, First: That it is the grace of God alone which saves him; and Second: That the only condition of his receiving this grace is faith or trust. Thus verifying the Scripture, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life." Mr. Berry granted that a man might have faith without baptism but held that such were not saved. But Christ says: "Whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have eternal life."

As Methodists we believe that baptism is necessary, but not in the sense nor in the degree that faith is necessary.

It would be ludicrous if it were not so serious a matter, thus to see a sect, knowing little of experimental religion, yet calling itself The Christian Church, and classing three-fourths of the best people of the evangelical churches with the unsaved, because forsooth, they have not been immersed in water.

The Collections.

In the midst of our revivals it is a good time for the preachers to attend to the annual conference collections. A revival that can be killed by taking a collection for such worthy objects has much of the dross that must be burned away. Systematic giving among our people, must be brought about by the preachers. If you do not press this steadily upon the people, in weekly, monthly or quarterly divisions, the probabilities are that you will go up to the conference with an apology; with one that savors more of your own neglect than the people's stinginess or hard times.

Let us Try it.

Chaplain McCabe gives the following solution to the important inquiry, how to attract the masses to the church. He says: "There is nothing easier. Get your soul on fire with the love of God. Beat every unholy ambition, every feeling of envy or jealousy over the head with the flail of prayer. Get where God can bless you with great success without spoiling you, without making you think more highly of yourself than you ought to think. When your own soul gets blessed, then go to work to lead your flock. Get a Gideon's band that will stand by you in the public congregations, in the prayer meetings, in the revival that is sure to follow; then 'attempt great things for God.' 'Expect great things from God.' When success begins to crown your efforts, get lower down than ever at the foot of the Cross. 'The eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth to show himself strong in the behalf of him whose heart is perfect towards Him.'

"When victory comes, try to get your choir converted. Pray for your organist till he will stop all voluntaries which mean nothing, and all interludes which mean nothing. Get your whole force in hand, till from the blast of the organ at the beginning of the service to the doxology, everything shall mean assault, conquest, victory."

J. H. JOHNSON.

Sins of Omission.

It isn't the thing that you do, dear,
It's the thing you leave undone,
Which gives you a bit of a heartache
At the setting of the sun.
The tender word, forgotton,
The letter you did not write,
The flower you might have sent, dear,
Are your haunting ghosts to-night.

The stone you might have lifted
Out of a brother's way,
The bit of hearthstone counsel
You were hurried too much to say;
The loving touch of the hand, dear,
The gentle and winsome tone,
That you had no time nor thought for,
With troubles enough of your own.

The little acts of kindness,
So easily out of mind;
Those chances to be angels
Which every one may find—
They come in night and silence—
Each chill, reproachful wraith—
When hope is faint and flagging,
And a blight has dropped on faith.

For life is all too short, dear,
And sorrow is all too great,
To suffer our slow compassion
That tarries until too late.
And it's not the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you leave undone,
Which gives you the bit of heartache
At the setting of the sun.

Some Sunday Scenes on the Streets of Bozeman, M. T.

(1.) There goes a woodsawyer with his saw and frame as if in search of a job; yonder is another pushing his saw vigorously as if his bread for that day depended solely on the completion of that dollar job. (2.) There is a group of six men, muffled and handling guns, as if on the eve of starting on a hunting expedition. (3.) The street walkers, loungers and drivers are so common that they attract but little attention. Some are driving empty wagons to the mountains in search of wood. Yonder, a few miles in the country, may be seen the ascending smoke from an engine, where the ranchman with his hirelings, is baling hay on the Lord's day. But they say it is much improved now from the state of things ten years ago. It is a dodge with many church members that they must conform to the customs of the country. A few years ago in this valley some said the thresher would pass them if they refused to work on Sunday, but when a number of farmers said they would not have their grain threshed on Sunday the thresher men waited on them.

The Sabbath is made a convenience by the ungodly and many so-called Christians for making money. The Philistines are ploughing with Samson's heifer. The tobacco growers must cut their tobacco on Sunday(?) to save it from the frost. The railroad officials must run their trains on the Lord's day (?) to put through perishable freight and mails and they make it convenient to carry some passengers. Farmers on the Ohio river thought they must save their fencing during an overflow on Sunday; but one Joshua among them worked not on Sunday for fifteen years, and prospered more than they all. When will this brazen Sabbath desecration cease? When will the churches cease to connive at this national sin, by stopping writing and reading letters of business, pleasure and friendship, the reading of secular papers, traveling unnecessarily, in a word, all unnecessary and unmerciful works and all needless self-indulgences. Sunday sickness is prevalent and contagious with many church members, but the worldly-minded hardly ever get sick on Sunday, they take a fresh start for business or pleasure on that day. God help us to preserve and observe religiously, our Sabbath.

Yours truly,
JOHN H. JOHNSON.

EDITORS OF METHODIST:—It is gratifying to all Southern Methodists in Montana to know that all the assessments made against us by the General Board for the past few years have been promptly paid. This fact has raised us in the estimation of the church abroad more than anything else. I have a letter from an ex-member of the General Conference, a man of great influence, saying: "I have always been the friend of Montana, but more so now since your little conference has come up with all its claims." This fact is forcing the home church to appreciate her youngest sister. Our watch-word in the future must be "clear the decks, and raise all the assessments." To do this we must work early and late. We must begin to put to work every agency to raise all the claims. The preachers must fail in this work unless the laity, old and young, male and female, all help. Every member must do his part, and feel equally the responsibilities with the ministers. Dear brethren and sisters of the church, do your duty in this matter; not only give your part to the cause of missions, church extension, etc., but get others to give. I know a little girl who raised over ten dollars one year for missions. Everyone could do as well if they would try. Please try. Help the pastors, tell them you are willing to work, and you will thus lighten his heavy load and receive a blessing from the Master. Oh, that each of us may hear it said of us by our Lord, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Give the money expended for gaudy apparel and needless luxuries to Christ, and in that day Christ will say: "Inasmuch as ye gave it to the least of mine, ye gave unto me." Another sacred collection ordered by our conference at Butte last July is the Conference Claimants fund. This fund is to support worn out ministers when they become disabled, and their families when the workmen fall asleep. No fund ever called for is more sacred or just. God's ministers leave all and forsake all, to preach Christ to the needy. They live hard and generally die poor, though they may make others rich. The church and people who have received their labors are in duty bound to support them when they become disabled. Last year the preachers and brethren and sisters at conference raised several hundred dollars for this fund, and the conference was assessed a small amount to increase it. The whole amount will be placed on interest and thus grow till it is needed. As yet we have no claimants on this fund, but as the faithful husbandman prepares in summer for the winter, so we must lay by now that we may have in store when it is needed. Last year some poor preachers gave ten and twenty dollars to this fund. Widows gave ten dollars. Are there not others who did not give last year that will give to this fund now? Many could spare five and ten dollars and never miss it. Let every member and friend of our church give something to this fund this year. Truly it is more blessed to give than to receive, Give as a means of grace; give because it all belongs to Christ; give for it is "laying up treasures in heaven."

Yours in the bonds of Christian love. B. E. H. WARREN.

From Kansas.

It may be that a few lines from this lovely and thriving state of Kansas may be of some interest to those living among the mountains. We have much to be thankful for. Our oats and corn crop is good, and gathering corn is the order of the day. With the exception of one snow storm, the weather has been clear and pleasant. The people seem to be in good spirits since the election has past over. The democrats all went up Salt river as usual in this state. They will make a greater effort next time.

Our ministers, so far as I can learn, are all busy on their work, preaching, praying and trusting for a greater out-pouring of the Holy Spirit. Taking everything into consideration we have no room to complain.

I enjoyed my visit to Montana very much last winter. The mountain scenery, tall pines and lovely valleys are grand beyond description. The great objection that I have to Montana is that there is too much mountain and not enough valley. I would be glad to spend the spring and summer in those mountains. I will long remember the friends around Victor. Brother and Sister Fowler spared no pains in making the men comfortable that worked on the Victor church during the coldest weather last winter. No matter how many came in, they always had a place for them. I was very much drawn to the people around Victor and Stevensville.

The MONTANA METHODIST is a little gem. It is the first paper read and we read about everything in it. It is always full of interesting matter. I am glad to learn that Brother Flowers has gone into the regular work. He is one of those men who have a "gait." Things must move where he is. If more of those local brethren would go into the conference and take work it would be a good thing. I shall always feel under many obligations to the people of Montana for the good care they have taken of my son, E. J. He was only a boy when he went there, but he has grown to be quite a large man, So you must have kept him very well.

HENRY STANLEY.

We thank you Father Stanley, for your interesting letter. We fear you have not seen our largest valleys. Write again.—[EDITOR.]

Raise It.

After a whole day of earnest conference with others equally anxious with myself followed by an almost sleepless night, I said at our breakfast table a few mornings since, "How can we pay $20,000 of appropriations when we have but $10,000 of money. Our fifteen-year-old boy promptly answered: "Raise the other $10,000." And this must be done if the appropriations of last April are all paid soon.

We gave warning last summer and have been pressing our plea in every way we could ever since and yet we lack near the $10,000 of enough to meet these cases not one of which ought to be deferred. And it can be raised if with one heart and purpose our preachers everywhere, go at once to work and secure and send to their conference treasurer—not to me—every possible dollar on the present year's assessment.

A long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether, will bring us through. In the name of the Master, and for his cause, let it be done.

The Best Beauty.

I know a little fellow
Whose face is fair to see,
But still there's nothing pleasant
About that face to me;
For he's rude and cross and selfish
If he cannot have have his way;
And he's always making trouble,
I've heard his mother say.

I know a little fellow
Whose face is plain to see;
But that we never think of,
So kind and brave is he.
He carries sunshine with him,
And everybody's glad
To hear the cheery whistle
Of the pleasant little lad.

You see it's not the features
That others judge us by,
But what we do, I tell you—
And that you can't deny.
The plainest face has beauty
If its owner's kind and true;
And that's the kind of beauty,
My boys and girls, for you.

What They Agreed to Give Up.

A poor woman in the village had lost her husband, and had nothing left to live upon, and five children.

All the little Harper's were very sorry when they heard their mother's tale.

"How can we help?" said Janie, the eldest. "We've no money at all."

Mrs. Harper smiled and said, "No, you have no money, but if you would like to give up some of your pleasures you could earn some."

"How, motner?"

"You might give up having sugar in your tea, for one thing."

"But it is so nasty without, mother."

"Well, perhaps you can think of something else. All of you go into the garden for half an hour, and come and tell me what you fix upon."

Off ran Janie and Harry and Sybel and wee Johnnie, hand in hand, and walked solemnly round the garden for just half an hour. When the clock struck twelve, they ran in again, helter-skelter.

"Well," said the mother.

Janie spoke:

"We've thought of everything all round, mother, and, if you please, we should like to give up our lessons."

But that mother could not agree to.—Philadelphia Call.

The Smoke House.

A man who lives in Albany, and whose business is that of a clerk, said that he lately built a house that cost him $3,000. His friends expressed their wonder that he could afford to build so fine a dwelling. "Why," said he, "this is my smoke-house." "Your smoke-house. What do you mean?" "Why I mean that twenty years ago I left off smoking, and I computed that what I saved, with interest, would amount to $3,000, and I concluded to put the money saved from the smoke into my house; hence I call this my smoke house."—Christian Witness.

Adaptation.

Happy the man who can always adapt himself to his circumstances. Wise the man who has no occasion for sorrow over what "might have been."

To none is it more important to be expert upon this subject, than to the minister of the gospel. In an eminent degree is this necessary to the ministry of the west. "Be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmful as doves," is an injunction of great moment, and quite difficult to practice.

The Apostle Paul says, "To the Jews, became I as a Jew. To them that are without law, as without law. To the weak, I was weak. I am made all things to all men." With this teaching from God's word let us stop for a few reflections.

In adapting ourselves as ministers, to the ways of the west, isn't there to be a little more latitude—a little more liberty of conscience in the affairs of the church?

1. We ask the question first as to the matter of doctrine. We are providentially placed in the midst of progressive wide-awake, free-thinking people—people who bring into our congregations much diversity of thought and conduct. Those who love things new—dislike the teachings of fogyism, etc. Under such pressure, is it not better to dilute somewhat and give them milk and water gospel, until they can bear "strong meats?"

Are we to present them repentance, faith, justification, regeneration, sanctification, witness of the Spirit, and urge experimental religion as we did in the south and east?

Having accepted Paul as the example for our liberty, let us hold to him throughout. He has once for all time settled these questions, when he said, "Though we, or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel to you than that which we have preached to you, let him be accursed."

Just here, we wish to say to those at the helm, and to those in the strongholds of our beloved Methodism, that the "word which we preach" in the west is the same as that given us by our fathers. By this we live and by it we expect to die. We purpose to stand here in the forefront, a living rebuke for those who succumb to the popular cry for an adulterated gospel.

2. Now that we are still in the "old paths," as to doctrine, what about the conduct of our members and the administration of discipline? Are there difficulties confronting us here similar respecting the teachings from our pulpit? We feel thankful to God to have provoked this remark, which is said to be the general sentiment of those of different affiliations. "The M. E. Church, South is too strict. We think it would grow faster if it were more liberal in its requirements for membership." While our environments, in many places, are such as to make it difficult to prevent worldliness in the church, we are doing our best that our standard be not lowered; that we might "present it a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish."

We believe our efforts have not proven in vain. There is a caution just in this connection which we would make, and it is this: We should not think more of ourselves than we ought to think. "Pride goeth before a fall." We are now being blessed with the revival spirit almost throughout the entire Montana Conference. We are seeking to get upon a higher plain. Let onr prayer be to abide there.

Worldly Gospel.

Not many weeks ago one of our secular papers of Montana in reviewing the life and death of an "old-timer" used such expressions as we put in quotations below, which reveal the character of worldly theology: "He was be profession a gambler." "Left many friends here who yet remembered him as 'one of the boys.'" "Honesty and nerve had never been questioned." "At one time a prominent member of the Idaho legislature, where he rendered an excellent accout of himself." "In Montana for many years he was an express messenger and was ready to defend with his life the treasure committed to his care." "For the past ten or twelve years * * * he dealt the game of faro." "But 's game was a square one." "He lost and won with the equanimity of a thoroughbred sport." "His advice to his friends invariably was, 'Boys, don't gamble; its a bad busines. Let cards alone if you want to live happy and die easy.'" "Not an old man—but fifty-three at the time of his death—but a life of excitement, late hours and irregular habit, undermined a constitution never very strong." "Was a liberal contributor to any charity to which his attention was called." "Though * * he was a gambler he has a large balance in the Big Book above." "He has done more good and less harm than a good many ministers of the gospel." His friends need not be ashamed to drop a tear to his memory."

The facts set forth in the above lead us to the these reflections: Would a member of the church, who had lived such a life, have it said of him by the secular press that he had "a large credit balance in the Big Book above?"

Does the secular press of the land believe that such a gospel which accords with the above, preached from our pulpits, would hold society, even to where it is to-day? Have the "brethren of the quill" heard such gospel as this? Yea, indeed, have heard any gospel at all lately?

Notes.

We see it stated that the average wages per week, paid to working women, in twenty-two of our representative cities, is $5.42, or about ninety cents per day allowing six work days.

"As the wealth of the country increases, pauperism increases also. Not in the principles of our government, but in our mode of operation. Within thirty years our wealth has increased three fold. while the number of the poor has reached five fold."—Dr. McAnally.

The revival fires still burn in the Bitter Root valley. Presiding Elder Stanley, in a private note says. "the fight has been strong but victory has come, and souls are being converted."

Rev. S. W. Barbee, our pastor in the smelter city, smiled complacently upon us in the editorial sanctum a few days since. He is cheerful and happy. Give us the assurance that the members of the Helena District Conference will meet with warm hospitality among his people in Anaconda.

Brother W. F. Goulder made a flying visit in company with the veteran Major Brooke, of White Hall, Jefferson valley, the last days of January. The work on the White Hall and Silver Star circuit moves off finely. Our young preacher is very greatly encouraged with the outlook. He preaches to good congregations at four appointments. The people are highly spoken of by their pastor. We received a cordial invitation to assist him in protracted meetings. We shall certainly be glad to render him any service we can. We were sorry to learn that Brother Goulder had been quite sick, but rejoice that he is up and busy again.

An interesting number of the Sunday school scholars of the Butte charge have recently been organized into a society, known as "The Snow-Flake Missionary Society." The first monthly meeting was held at the pastor's residence Friday evening, February 1st. We recommend such an organization by all our pastors where it is practicable. Great good results from such work among the children and young people of our congregations when properly conducted. It is wholesome in a social sense, and affords a fine opportunity to educate them in the missionary work of the church. The collections were $2.50. It will increase the present month, by the introduction of mite boxes and numerical growth in the membership.

Rev. E. J. Stanley spent last Sabbath, February 10th, in Deer Lodge, holding the quarterly meeting. Brother Moore informed us he would begin revival services on Thursday evening before the presiding elder's coming. We hope for gracious results.

Presiding Elder's Notes.

Rev. R. S. Clark is on a preaching tour in the Flathead lake country. Those hardy frontier men well enjoy a treat in waiting upon his ministry. A man of experience in the ministry and also in the west, he knows how to deal with our mountain people in commending the truth to every man conscience in the sight of God.

The District Conference for Helena District will be held at Anaconda, commencing March 28th at 9:30 a. m. The time of meeting has been put off on account of giving the preachers an opportunity to improve the good weather that usually comes in the month of February for holding protracted meetings. It will be looked forward to as a time of refreshing by our preachers and people who are able to attend. Let fervent prayers be offered that it may result in a grand revival at that place.

A letter from Rev. Henry Stanley, a local preacher of our church at Circleville, Kansas, conveys Christian greetings to many friends about Stevensville and Victor, in Bitter Root valley, and expresses the great interest that he feels in the good people of Montona. Never a day passes but that they are remembered in his prayers, and he hopes to greet many of them again if life and health are spared.

The meeting at Victor continued for nearly three weeks and resulted in several bright conversions and the quickening of new life in the church. Congregations were large and attentive to the last. Good seed was sown that will be gathered in days yet to come.

The papers announce the recent decease of Mrs. Martha Owens at Kansas City, Kansas, and her burial at St, Joseph, Missouri. She was one of the purest Christians that this writer ever knew. Her house was his "circuit homes" the last year that he spent in Kansas. She was a true mother in Israel and her life a powerful argument for the truth of the Christian religion. She rejoiced and passed away in bright hopes of a glorious immortality, and has been gathered as a ripe shock of corn in the heavenly garner. She rests from her labor and great suffering and her works do follow her.

It was Miss Maggie R. Sanders who was married to William J. Whitmore at Three Mile on the 3rd of January. We greatly regret the ludicrous mistake that was made in the marriage notices of last issue, and make haste to correct it.

E. J. Stanley.

From Stevensville Circuit.

We closed our protracted effort at Victor last Monday night after continuing nearly three weeks, holding usually two meetings a day. It was a hard fight but a victorious one, although not so many trophies of the conflict were secured as we desired. Three precious souls were saved and a general stirring up of church members were sufficient evidence that the power of the Cross has not lessened and that Jesus is still "able to save."

We were greatly strengthened and encouraged to have present with and assisting us, a part of the time, our beloved P. E,, Rev. E, J. Stanley. Also to Rev. M. D. Hortonberry, our active and zealous local preacher, we are indebted for considerable assistance.

After resting a few days (and we find, Mr. Editor, that "rest" is as much a duty as work in this highly nervous climate) we expect (D. V.) to renew the conflict with sin and evil, this time at Stevensville. Will all who read this at once offer a prayer to God for victory to be on Israel's side in the meeting at Stevensvill. Fraternally yours,

Jas. B. Parnall.

Thoughts for the Thoughtful.

One more year has gone on its mission,
Another bright cycle of time
Has rolled on the wheels of fruition
And gone with its burden of crime.

To where the dead years are reposing
Deep hidden in Lethe's dark stream,
With the hand of Oblivion closing
'Till Eternity's day star shall beam.

We cannot forbear paying a tribute of praise to the Lord, who in majesty and power proclaims his kingdom one of peace and good will. Thy throne is in the heavens; the earth, thy footstool, and we thy subjects, and as such the recipients of thy tender and loving care.

Shall not the voice of praise go up from millions who have been mercifully preserved through the vicissitudes of the past year? "Thy tender mercies are over all thy works"

Surely on this Sabbath, born of the New Year in its pristine beauty and glory, we may bring an oblation and renew those vows of consecration to his cause which are binding to all who have enlisted under the banner of King Emanuel.

May we not with profit meditate on God's goodness and long suffering, and coming in faith to the fountain of infinite mercy and and grace, pray for a fresh supply to enable us to "run and not weary, to walk and not faint" in the straight and narrow way of true holiness, the end whereof is peace and joy; despising evil and wisely choosing a better and holier path—choosing the things which will exalt our conceptions of duty, purify our souls, ameliorate our own lives and by a reflex radiance illuminate the pathway of others who grope in blind ignorance of their duty.

"Come, let us reason together," are suggestive words of an inspired penman. Let us reason regarding the folly of indulging in sinful and debauching pleasures; let us reason regarding the sinfulness of card playing, drinking, dancing and kindred amusements. Right here permit me to say that the "ball masque" is becoming quite the rage among the devotees of "fashion and pleasure," and has even invaded this western country, calling many to participate in the new and alluring snare.

Let us reason in sound logical sequence of cause and effect, in regard to our duty, and ignoring the very specious and fallacious arguments adduced in favor of pleasure of this kind; let us continue to deal out condemnatory articles, else, shall Satan get so firmly entrenched as to render all arguments futile and sin's well equipped citadel will become difficult to invade.

There is a time to dance, say the young, a time to sing, a time to laugh. Ah! and a time to die say we, yet we opine that the card table or the floor of the ball room, is a very unsuitable place for an immortal spirit to plume its wings for eternity.

Now we see smiles on Beauty's brow,
Careless in fashion's full array;
To-morrow she may helpless be.
Her mute and pulseless clay
Speaks through the speech of sympathy,
A sermon sad.

MRS. ELIZABETH M. APPLEBURY.

A Statement and an Appeal.

To the preachers and members of the Montana Annual Conference:

The work I represent is connectional or it is nothing, It is not bounded by conference or state lines. It is coextensive in point of territory with the M. E. Church, South, and the Colored M. E. Church in America. It is purely a missionary work. It is an effort on the part of our church to carry forward the same work as we did for the Negro when he was a slave. It is the same gospel, but by new and adapted methods to his changed relations. We are succeeding slowly, it its true, but great movements, like great bodies, move slowly at first. We are building, not for a day or a year, but for all time, and therefore for eternity.

Paine Institute, stands as a sign-board pointing out the road that leads to the grand ultimatum of our labors. To push forward into other fields, we must have money. As strange as it may seem, our very success endangers our final triumph. To pause where we are is to doom the thing to a sickly, ephemeral existence. Recognizing this fact, as well as the imperative call of duty and interest, the board has determined to broaden its work. In response, therefore, to the request of the colored bishops, as also by the local board of trustees, they have agreed to take the Lane Institute, located at Jackson, Tenn., under its care. Besides, there is an imperative demand for a third school west of the Mississippi river.

Now, brethren, I appeal to you to help us. I cannot come to you with the prestige of an assessment. This is one missionary enterprise that does not restrain or inspire the church by levying an assessment. We put it upon your conscience and appeal to your loyalty to Christ and your church. We need and must have money or abandon the work. Shall it be published to the world that the great Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had to abandon a great missionary enterprise, involving the salvation of seven millions of our fellow beings right here at our doors. Will not each pastor and presiding elder read this appeal to each congregation and let them give what they will?

Whatever you may raise please remit direct to me through your president or secretary, and I will send receipt and acknowledge in your conference paper. Above all, pray for me and my work.

Your brother in Christ,

W. C. DUNLAP.

Parsonage Society.

The Stevensville Parsonage Society was re-organized during the last quarterly meeting at Stevensville, and begins the new year with brighter prospects than we had cherished before. Our membership is small—only nine ladies—but we are very much in earnest and besides contributing our mite to help others more needy perhaps than ourselves, we are planning some local work to reduce the debt on our parsonage here.

If an effort was made, the Montana Conference could raise a hundred dollars annually for this fund and hardly feel it then. Shall we not make the effort? Our church is stronger than it has ever been, and the secretary's report for 1887 shows that $123.06 were collected during that year and there were but three organized societies, one each at Boulder, Helena and Stevensville with a total membership of 42. Surely, with our 15 preachers we ought to do as well and better; at least we can try. Perhaps Brother Britt will occasionally save us a corner in the METHODIST where we can report progress and gain strength and encouragement.

MRS. L. B. STANLEY.

[Let all the societies report. Space in the METHODIST will be given them gladly.]—EDS.

The Twelve Apostles.

Some seem to think that there were thirteen or more of the apostles. In the New Testament the number is limited to twelve. So if the New Testament is a final authority with us the question is definitely settled. But who are they? Judas Iscariot was numbered with the twelve, but he "fell from his ministry and his apostleship." How? "By transgressions." Was his place ever filled?. Yes. By whom? The Apostle Paul. What then of Mathias as an apostle? Just nothing at all. His choosing was only a "freak of Peter's,"—nothing else. The Lord never had anything to do with it one way or another, either at the first or at the last. This is clearly and definitely manifest. As soon as Dr. Peter said that another, to fill the place of Judas, must be taken from a certain circle or number, that left the Lord out entirely and at once. And when they went on further to appoint two, and to call upon God to know "whether of these two hast thou chosen?" the Lord paid no attention to them whatever, but, in his own time and way, he called the great apostle to the Gentiles to take the place of one who had fallen, and to make the original number again complete. These facts have been recalled by noticing lately, in the writings of Dr. Pope, that he speaks of Mathias as one of the twelve apostles.

Where Anarchy Comes From.

1. Anarchy is born in foreign lands and bred in American saloons. 2. If it cannot be strangled at birth by reason of remoteness of its place of birth, it certainly can be rendered extinct by the removal of its breeding quarters on American soil. 3. The saloon has forced the erection of the almshouses that dot nearly every city in the United States. 4. The saloon has produced the rags that clothe every drunkard's child. 5. The saloon has placed the lines of care that are worn upon the face of every drunkard's broken-hearted wife. 6. The saloon created the bombs that gave Haymarket Square a place in history, and the subsequent horrors upon the scaffold. Not content with its conquests, the saloon sighs for more worlds to conquer, and turns its eye upon the National Capitol. Shall the thinking men submit to dishonor that the crime-abetting saloon may be saved?—American Magazine.

The brother who has lost the comfort and power of religion from his own heart is almost sure to fall into desponding views concerning the power of Christianity to save the world. But he who feels that comfort and power within is ready to believe that the "arms of love the compass him will all mankind embrace." Nashville Chris. Adv.

Died.

Lanius Banta, son of E. J. and M. F. Banta, was born at Willow Creek, Gallatin county Montana, Eebruary 15th, 1872, and died January --, 1889, at the residence of his parents in Elkhorn, Montana.

We sympathize with the beloved mother and father and kindred in other parts, in this sad affliction. We regret we cannot say he died in peace. We dare not judge harshly, but commit his soul to Him who gave it.

This is tne second son who has died within one month. Henry died at the Castle Mountains during the holidays. Another brother is sa d to have been an advocate of the doctrine of liberalism and died in that persuasion. How much better to have been believers in the atonement of Christ. Brother and Sister Banta's house was the home of preachers and many will remember their kindness at camp-meetings and conferences. We commend the sorrowing ones to God, hoping they may see behind the dark cloud the radiant bow of promise. (Nashville Advocate please copy.) E. C. Finley.

It is my very painful duty to record the death of Sister Arneltee Eastridge, who was converted at the revival Brothers Stanley, Currin and myself held in Boulder just before Christmas, and was received into the church by assuming its sacred vows; but owing to the delicate state of her health, was not baptized by water, but blessed by God, there is no doubt, with the baptism of the Holy Ghost. She was loved by all who knew her and leaves many warm, loving friends both here in Montana and in Missouri.

Brother Eastridge, her husband, has the deepest sympathy of all his friends in this hour of sad bereavement. We pray the God of all grace to help in rearing the seven little ones to the glory of God. "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." Our brother is looking forward to the time when he shall be reunited to his loving wife in the church triumphant as he was in the church militant.

E. C. Finley.

At Victor, Mont., January 24, 1889, after more than three weeks intense suffering. Pearl Buell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Buker, aged 3 years and 4 months. All that medical skill and careful nursing could do to restore or relieve the patient little sufferer was done until the messenger came to call her transformed spirit to a land where the inhabitants never say they are sick and pain is unknown. The funeral services were conducted the following day by the writer in the presence of a large and sympathetic audience. May God bless the dear sorrowing parents and direct their footsteps to the "home" to which already two of their little circle have preceded them. J. B. Parnall.

Fruit Growing in Montana.

As a fruit growing country, Montana is fast advancing, and columns might be written of the trials and adventures of the early beginners, if time permitted. Thomas W. Harris planted the first orchard at his present home near Stevensville, Missoula county, in 1857, I believe, and as he was fortunate in selecting a well-sheltered spot, the trees grew large, and he is being rewarded yearly in the pleasure of gathering the delicious fruits and the profits thereof. The success of his venture induced many farmers who first settled in Montana to undertake the growing of orchards, but the progress was so slow that the fifteen years after the immigration and settlement of the territory commenced there were less than a dozen orchards with trees bearing standard fruit. The progress the past ten years, however, has been very much better. In Missoula county, where fruit-growing had its beginning, the advance has been most flattering. There are now numerous orchards which produce a variety of crabs, plums, cherries, and a dozen or more kinds of the hardiest standard apples. Next to Missoula are the orchards of Meagher county, several of which contain 300 to 700 trees each, and are bearing fruit of as delicious and juicy flavor as is grown in any state in the union. In the counties of Gallatin, Fergus, Lewis and Clarke and Yellowstone there are a number of orchards bearing fruit, while in these and other counties there are hundreds of new orchards growing up which will in a few years be contributiug ten-fold to the crops now growing.

No part of the northwest excels Montana in growing small fruits. The mountains abound with wild berries, and in every valley there are gardens in which are grown strawberries, currants, gooseberries, blackberries, raspberries, and, in a few instances, grapes are among the products garnered by the progressive farmers.—Holiday Miner.

Bishop H. N. McTyeire.

Most of our readers have already heard of the death of Bishop McTyeire which occurred on the 15th inst. His long illness had not prepared the church for the shock of such news. The hope that he would recover was general and strong.

He was born in South Carolina in 1824, and at the time of his death had been a preacher for forty-five years, and a bishop for twenty-three years. Few if any greater men have been produced by the church. He was a master of assemblies, a leader by nature, a bishop who knew his power and one who had grace and wisdom to use it aright. He was the author of several valuable works, chief of which is his "History of Methodism." His administrative ability led Mr. Vanderbilt to entrust the funds which founded the great university at Nashville entirely in his hands. His death is felt and mourned by the entire church.

Notes and Personals.

Montana statehood is the source of great rejoicing to our citizens. We believe she will wear the honor gracefully.

Considerable anxiety wa recently felt by the citizens in the Flathead Lake country over a difficulty between an Indian and a merchant at Demersville, resulting in the Indian's death. But for the fact that the Flathead Indians are a very peaceable tribe, general trouble might have ensued. We hope nothing serious will follow.

Funds have been raised in Butte to make a survey of the Little Pipestone pass route for the Northern Pacific to build a road from Bozeman to Butte. Should this enterprise be put through, it will open up the Jefferson valleyof Madison countywhich is said to be one of the richest agricultural sections of the territory. Madison also has rich mines which give additional inducements for consummating the matter.

Dr. Haygood says in substance that the standard of liberality is not, "how much I have given," but "how much have I left." Here is food for thought. The truth of the statement is self-evident to him who holds God as the proprietor and himself as only the steward of his riches.

Bishop J. S. Key, it is said, has decided to make Fort Worth, Texas, his home for the future. We shall be glad for one of our bishops to come to the Pacific coast for Episcopal residence ere long.

We had intended to write at length of our trip to Bozeman and the District Conference there, but Brother Stanley has gone over the ground so thoroughly that little more need be said. We were impressed with the spirit of aggression manifested by all the brethren present, and every preacher in the district was present except Bro. Goulder; and from what we hear he is not a whit behind the others in zeal or labor. Revival everywhere seemed to be their watchword. Two protracted meetings were then under way with good prospects. Brother Jarvis writes us since that the meeting at Weaver's is progressing finely.

The good people of Denver, Colorado, are taking hold of the question of closing saloons on Sunday in earnest. A grand mass-meeting overflowing the opera house was held there a week ago last Sunday. They declare that the saloon rule of the city council must cease. We wish them complete victory in the contest.

Speak the Truth in Love.

Of course we should speak the truth and only the truth whenever we speak. But there are many ways of speaking the truth. It may be spoken in such a way that the very opposite of our words will be taken as the truth. It may be spoken in such a doubtful, hesitating way as to render our hearers very uncertain even as to sincerity of our own belief of the truth we utter. Then again we may speak the truth with manifest conviction of its reality, but in such a blunt harsh way as to make others reject it on account of its repulsive garb.

There are those who pride themselves on the virtue of plainness of their speech but overlook its vices of rudeness and unkindness. We are as much bound to speak the truth in love as we are to speak the truth at all. Thus spoken truth goes with double force. Truth with loving earnestness will sink deeper than harsh rebuke. It is not enough to be able to say, "I spoke only the truth," for the question is did I speak the truth in love?

Tobacco Using.

The state can never take hold of the tobacco evil as it can the liquor evil. For while the liquor habit is a public curse the tobacco habit is much more confined in its evil tendencies to the individual users. But among professing Christians we believe the time is not far distant when there will be a crusade against tobacco using that will drive it from the churches. That it is a "needless self-indulgence" is the mildest charge that can be laid against it. And that alone should drive it from the Methodist Church. But it is much worse than a "needless self-indulgence." It is very expensive, causing a great waste of the money talent put into the hands of God's servants; it is injurious to both mind and body in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred; it is offensive to others and thus lessens the influence for good one would otherwise have over his fellows. It certainly cannot be used for the glory of God.

A writer recently in the New Orleans Advocate, in anticipation of the approaching session of the Louisiana Annual Conference, entreats the preachers not to make themselves offensive to those who entertain them by using tobacco in their homes. He notes also the evil influence of the preachers' example on the boys; the instructions of an anxious mother being often neutralized by the example of a tobacco-using preacher.

It is a shame that a body of preachers should need such an exhortation.

Our Paper.

It goes without saying that our paper, the MONTANA METHODIST, is a success and is contributing largely to the success of our cause in this territory. Almost every one who sees and reads it has a kind word for it, and I do not see how they could speak otherwise. It is no light tax upon our brethren who have the principal management to prepare the matter, collect the funds, read the proof, mail the paper, etc. But they do their work cheerfully when they feel that they have the hearty co-operation of the church at large. They have made no complaint, and I hope there will be no ground for any.

I volunteer a few words to encourage all our friends to take hold and work for the paper. Show it to your friends and get them to subscribe for it. Our list is increasing, but we want to double it before conference, and we can do so if each one of our friends will get a new subscriber. Many of our prominent ministers east have written and spoken most complimentary of the paper. A Christian lady in a distant state writes that she cannot do without it and is a subscriber for life. She sends a list of new subscribers and promises to send more. I hope that many others will catch her spirit and do likewise. You may accomplish much by prompt and persevering effort. We are unable to offer premiums at present, and the only reward we promise is the sense you will have of helping in a commendable work. Write for sample copies and see who can send the largest list before the meeting of the District Conference the 28th of March.

E. J. S.

From Stevensville.

Our meeting was closed on Tuesday last after continuing two weeks. Two additions sum up the numerical result. Not much interest was manifest owing to a variety of circumstances. It is Sam Jones, I believe who says that, "given a certain conjunction of influences and you are sure of a cyclone—so with a revival." Well, we didn't get the "conjunction" somehow, but we did get the Lord's blessing upon us in a lesser degree as we met in His name and some good was accomplished.

Fraternally yours,

JAS. B. PARNALL.

Stevensville, M. T., Feb. 20.

"No," said Mr. Oldshell, "I ain't read none of the sermons of this Robert L. Smear folks is talkin' about: but I hear he's agin religion, and that's enough for me."

The Wind-Harp.

I set my wind-harp in the wind,
And a wind came out of the south,
Soft, soft, it blew with gentle coo,
Like words from a maiden's mouth.
Then like the stir of angels' wings
It gently touched the trembling strings,
And O! my harp gave back to me
A wondrous, heavenly melody.

I set my wind harp in the wind,
And a storm from the north blew loud,
From the icy north it hurried forth,
And dark grew sea and cloud;
It whistled down the mountain's height,
It smote the quivering chords with might.
But still my harp gave back to me
Its tender, heavenly melody.

Ah me! that such a heart were mine—
Responsive, tuned and true,
When all was glad when all was shine,
Or when storms of sorrow blew.
That so, 'mid all the fret and strife,
The jarring undertones of life,
My life might rise to God, and be
One long harmonious symphony.

A Trip to Bozeman.

After a pleasant night's rest in the parsonage at Butte, on Wednesday the 13th, I took the 8 a. m. train, on the Montana Central, and arrived in Helena about noon. "Just in time," remarked Brother Britt, as I stepped into the parsonage, "for it will keep both of us busy as bees to get the METHODIST mailed in time to take the seven o'clock train for Bozeman." By dint of hard work, with Sister Britt to help, the long and increasing list was gone over; the papers carried to the post office, and we reached the Northern Pacific depot just in time for the train. It was the first time I had ever traveled on this part of the road since it was built. As our train flew along, passing the old half way house, Beaver Creek, Bedford, near the old town of Springville, or more familiarly known as "Hogem," Townsend, Deep Creek, "Poverty Flat," etc., my mind was busy going back over the scenes enacted there seventeen years ago when I was a young "pilgrim" preacher, a stranger in a strange land, without money, without experience, and going out I scarcely knew where. How the past came vividly before me as we glided swiftly up the great Missouri valley. I fear that I taxed Brother Britt's patience talking to him about the adventures of those pioneer days. How many and how great the changes since then.

Arriving at Bozeman at 11 p. m., we found a snow storm prevailing, and were conveyed to the LaClede House in a "bus" on runners. The storm continued most of the time while we were there and interfered much with the meeting. Next day we were introduced to Brother J. H. Johnson and his pleasant wife and interesting family. We also met Brothers Cockrill and Jarvis who had come through the storm from Belgrade to attend the district conference. Brother Cockrill preached an excellent sermon at night on the witness of the spirit, and then conducted a very interesting alter exercise. The Bozeman District Conference convened on Friday morning at ten o'clock. Brother Stateler and wife and Bro. Warren had left their team, on account of the storm, and had come on the freight train the evening before.

It was pleasant to meet with the brethren and take counsel together. I could but think of the time when a number of us met there to hold a district conference in May, 1872. The brethren seemed to be in good spirits and all reported some success in their labors. The new recruits take to the work well. Those were delightful seasons that we enjoyed in conference, in worship and in the social circle together. Our hearts burned within us as we talked and communed one with another. Our visit seemed to be appreciated by the brethren. Bro. Britt preached an excellent sermon on Friday at 11 o'clock, on the subject: "We are workers together with God." It contained some fine thoughts and made a lasting impression.

On Saturday Brother Warren gave a splendid talk on Paul at Philippi, which was full of good points and delivered in demonstration of the spirit.

The ladies, with excellent taste, had decorated the wall in the rear of the pulpit with flowers and vines and some very appropriate scripture mottoes which added much to the attractiveness of the cozy little church. Brother Johnson had been continuing the services for several evenings preceeding, with good results. Several penitents were forward, the church was already being revived, and I do trust that the effort will culminate in a glorious work of grace. The new pastor is in favor with the people, and is hopeful of success. He is a deserving man, and I hope that our friends in Bozeman will show their appreciation of his services by rallying to his financial and moral support. There is a grand work to be accomplished in Bozeman if our friends will just persevere. I was glad to find also that Brother Jarvis has many friends both in the station where he did faithful work for awhile, and also on the circuit where he is now holding a protracted meeting with success. He will do us good in Montana. We hope he will press that church building enterprise to successful completion.

Brother Cockrill has a difficult field—I have never found any other kind—but he is energetic and hopeful; full of plans for advancing the cause of Christ and we shall expect a good report from him at conference.

I was greatly rejoiced to see Brother Stateler feeling and looking so much better, although he cannot yet lay aside his crutch with safety yet his step is quick, his mind active, his face bright and sunny, and his voice rings with much of the melody and power of the olden time. May he be spared to go in and out among us yet many years to come. Sister Stateler's health is also much improved. It was a genuine pleasure to grasp her hand and look into her cheerful face once more. In the history of Methodism in Montana she is one of the characters that cannot be left out. I thought what a time there will be when all this toil and care is over, and we shall meet where pain and sorrow are felt and feared no more.

Brother Warren has struggled with sickness and other obstacles since conference, but is still pressing the battle. He is fully identified with our work in Montana, is doing faithful service and is in for pushing on to the regions beyond.

It was a rare treat to be with these brethren, to catch the inspiration of their faith and zeal, and to be filled with their company. May God bless them abundantly in all their work and labor of love, and may scores be added to the Lord under their ministry.

Bozeman is one of the prettiest towns in Montana, and one of the most substantial, though not as large as Helena or Butte. It has made wonderful strides since I first saw it in May, 1872, and will continue to improve for many years to come. It was a pleasure to see the faces of a number of old time friends who still remain. I trust that we may live so as to meet some day in the beautiful city above.

Encouraged by the report that the west bound train was an hour late, we tarried at the church to hear Brother Warren's sermon and shake hands with the brethren and while so doing, the train which was only thirty minutes late, came and went and we were left to endure the torture of a ride in the caboose of a freight train to Helena where we arrived at the peep of day on Sunday morning, thankful after all that it was no worse, and taking comfort in the promise that all things work together for good to them that love God. There are many things that I desired to say, but must forbear and give Brother Britt an opportunity to express his mind.

In Memorium.

A meeting of the Mission Board, on call of the president, was held in the mission rooms, February 16th, 1889. The president stated that the board had been called together to render a suitable tribute to the memory and worth of our senior bishop, H. N. McTyeire, an honored member of this board, who on the morning of the 15th had been summoned from labor below to rest above. A committee consisting of Bishop Granbery, Dr. Fitzgerald and Dr. Cunnyngham, was appointed to prepare resolutions in memory of our venerated bishop, and in due time reported the following paper:

Resolved, That the members of this board are most profoundly impressed with the magnitude of the loss sustained by the church in the death of Bishop H. N. McTyeire, who had been so long officially connected with the administration of its missionary work, and whose pre-eminent ability has not been more conspicuous than his singleness of purpose and ardent zeal for the cause of missions.

Resolved, That while we shall miss his wise counsel, and feel the lack of the administrative genius with which he was so richly endowed, we are consoled with the reflection that the church will not lose the enduring results of his great life and abundant labors in all the spheres of service in which his energies were employed during a career of extraordinary energy and usefulnes; nor will his surviving co-laborers lose the inspiration of his example and the wisdom of his teaching.

Resolved, That we would assure the family of our departed bishop, of our sincere sympathy for them in this deep affiiction—a sympathy intensified by our sense of bereavement growing out of the intimacy of personal as well as official association.

J. C. GRANBERY,
O. P. FITZGERALD,
W. G. E. CUNNYNGHAM.

The resolutions were adopted by a rising vote, and the secretary was instructed to furnish a copy to the bereaved family and to our church papers.

I. G. JOHN, Sec.

The governor of Kansas says in his message to the legislature: "Fullly nine-tenths of the drinking and drunkenness prevalent in Kansas eight years ago have been abolished, and I affirm with earnestness and emphasis that this state is the most temperate, orderly, sober community of people in the civilized world. The abolition of saloons has not only promoted the personal happiness and general prosperity of our cities, but it has enormously reduced crime, filled thousands of homes where vice and want and wretchedness once prevailed with peace, plenty, and contentment, and has materially increased the trade and business of those engaged in the sale of useful and wholesome articles of merchancise."

My Bible.

My Bible is a precious book;
No book to me so dear
As t. is my little Bible
That cancels doubt and fear.
My little time-worn Bible,
The comfort of my life,
Companion in each pleasure,
Support in every strife.

My long-loved little Bible
That's been my daily guide
And taught me when in trouble,
In Jesus to confide;
It bade me go to Jesus
To whom all thoughts are known,
To trust my fate to Jesus
And wait before his throne.

This book to me was given
By my teacher Christmas day,
By an earnest Christian teacher,
For whom I'll ever pray.
He gave to all his pupils,
A Bible just like mine.
In each he wrote a passage
From the holy book divine.

Long years since we assembled
In the school house to be taught,
We knew naught of life's battle
We've learned since must be fought.
But the seeds of faith he scattered
Long many years ago
Fell not all by the "wayside,"
For some began to grow.

I will love my little Bible
As I've loved it in the past.
The lessons it has taught me
Through my life will ever last.
When angels watch our teacher
Through death's long and tranquil sleep,
May they whisper in his dreaming,
"He has sown for us to reap."

Denominationalism.

Rev. J. M. Clark, editor of a District Conference paper in Missouri, writes our sentiments in these words;

"We believe in denominationalism; that it is a heaven-ordained means of grace; and, disassociated from sectarianism, is fraught with great blessing to the church. Hence, we shall insist that it is the duty of the Methodist people to build Methodist church houses, organize Methodist Sunday schools, read Methodist books and periodicals, and patronize our own institutions of learning."

A Word From Bro. Tuttle.

EDITOR MONTANA METHODIST:—I have not seen anything in the paper from our part of the country and think it would not be amiss to write how our new preacher, Rev. W. T. Goulder, is received by the people in Jefferson valley. Judging from the congregations and attention given him at the different appointments, we must conclude that he is well liked. I had the pleasure of hearing him preach three times last Sabbath. At 11 a. m. he preached in the new hall of the I. O. G. T. at Fish Creek, to a good congregation. Arrangements have been made for holding our services in the hall hereafter, also at the Bruffey school house at 3 o'clock and at Silver Star at 7:30 p. m. He has good congregations at all these points. The people seem glad to have preaching again as there has not been any regular preaching among us since Brother Smithey was here, about three years ago. May the Lord bless Brother Goulder with good health that he may be able to meet the arduous labors. L. F. TUTTLE.

We are glad to hear these kind words from one of Brother Goulder's members. Write again Brother Tuttle.—[ED.]

Butte City Montana,

Butte City is the county seat of Silver Bow County, and with its surburban towns within a radius of about two miles, has a population of thirty thousand, making it the largest city in Montana. Three important rail roads run into this city, viz: The Utah and Northern, Northern Pacific and Montana Central. The branches from these roads to the mines are many. The traffic is almost incredible.

Butte's growth has been very rapid. In August, 1864, placers were discovered and a mining district formed. That fall the town site was laid out. But few were attracted by the mining interest as yet, for there were only five hundred inhabitants in 1867. From 1869 to 1874 there was but little mineral found in the placers, so the town went down and was almost deserted. In 1875 quartz mining was successfully begun, and from this time Butte began to grow. Our city is therefore about fifteen years old.

It is but reasonable for people to expect inferior residences in all our western cities, called "camps." Parties come, not knowing when the mines will give out, they can't risk too much in a home. For this reason the first buildings for business or residence are not for looks or anything but temporary comfort. Butte has, however, past the "prospective" period and is now being "developed." The log cabin and adobe house are giving place to neat cottages, brick-veneered residences and stone-trimmed mansions. You do not see an inferior house put up now in the city limits. The most expensive home in Butte cost about $75,000. The lack of vegetation makes our city unattractive. We are not wholly without flowers and grass in our yards, but they are rather the exception. We can and will have more domesticity after awhile.

One of our city editors writes thus on Butte: "The details need to be studied to be appreciated. Turn which way you will snow-covered mountains of the main range of the Rockies meet the vision, for they are but ten miles distant. * * * At this point they curve from east to south, and then west, making a basin surrounded by foot-hills. The Big Butte, located on the west of the city, from which it takes its name, stands guard over its foster child, and a gallant sentinel it is. In the roughest of weather it bears its burden of snow, but at the first approach of sunshine it sheds its frosty drapery and feeds Silver Bow creek, which meanders at its feet." Butte basks snugly on a southern slope. For its altitude, which is five thousand feet above the sea, it has many natural advantages for health and comfort.

BUTTE SOCIETY.

It has been said, and not without a measure of truth, that in our society, "much is required of each member, but in these requirements judgment is passed upon the individual and not upon his ancestry." Again "an honorable business is a necessary credential for social standing." These statements are in a measure true, but not without exception. People in the West are disdainers of caste, and yet there are classes of course, and from nececsity. An Englishman loves his countryman. The German likes his kind, and it is so with most every nationality. In business these things have less place, in social life more choice is exercised. The ball-room, the theatre, progressive euchre, and the wine party have a great place among us. Six or eight years ago, but little attention was given to church going and religious considerations. A wonderful change has been made within three years past. Most of the churches are having respectable congregations.

BUTTE SCHOOLS.

We quote from one of our daily papers with reference to our public schools: "The course of instruction in the grades below the High School corresponds, grade for grade with that of the public schools of St. Paul, Chicago and San Francisco. There is only one course in the High School. The student is taken in Latin through the usual High School course, in mathematics, through trigonometry and surveying; in the sciences, physiology, zoology, physics, chemistry, geology, botany, physical geography and astronomy; in literature, a study of the English classics and general history, composition and rhetoric." The value of public school property is $101,552.72. There are about eighteen hundred children enrolled. There are a number of private select schools also.

THE CHURCHES OF BUTTE.

There are eleven denominations represented here. We have to guess somewhat at the order in which these began operation. It is about as follows: Roman Catholic, Methodist Episcopal, Presbyterian, Congregational, Episcopalian, Baptist, M. E. Church South, Scandinavian, Christian Campbellite, Lutheran. All these denominations have church buildings except the three last named. Most of them are paid for. At present every church has a pastor. The churches of the Episcopal form of government have the most constant ministry.

BUTTE'S WEALTH.

From the county assessor's books it has been learned that there are one hundred and forty-eight companies or firms who pay tax on property valued at from $10,000 and upwards to as high as $567,379. There are many who fall under the ten thousand dollar line. Most of those above it are in Butte and vicinity. This is exclusive of the mines.

The business in the various branches of trade during 1888, aggregated $17,063,600. This does not include the banking business, which is enormous, nor wages to employes in these trades and mines, railroads, etc. The employes in all the industries receive monthly about $750,000. The lowest wages paid in Butte is $2 per day. The highest $7. The mineral output of Butte for 1888 was $22,987.265.

PUBLIC FACILITIES OF BUTTE.

Butte has most all the modern facilities for the convenience of her citizens. Although the natural drainage of the city is fine, we would be better off with a good sewerage system. We, as yet, have not the free delivery mail system, but have the promise of it in the spring.

The water works of our city have grown from a joint stock of $40 000 to $86,000. We now have a fair quantity and quality of water conveyed to us from the snow-capped mountains.

The fire department is purely voluntary, which consists of the city department proper, and an organization known as the Butte Fire Brigade The service rendered by these companies is the very best.

The electric light company supplies the city, perhaps as well as any on the Pacific coast. There is the Gas company also, which renders good service in public buildings, business houses and private residences.

The Cable and Motor street cars afford fine facilities for transit from the city limits to its centre.

The Public Library Association is a worthy enterprise and promises development. One man offers $10,000, when as much more can be raised to purchase a lot and build, a library and reading room worthy of our intel ligence.

The city is well supplied with a telephone system.

Nearly all the lodges and orders of modern times are to be found in Butte.

Butte has long suffered in not having first class hotels. At last we have one that meets the taste of the most fastidious. There will be more when there is demand for it, we suppose.

Butte is not behind the world in newspapers. We have two dailies, The Butte Miner and the Inter Mountain. Each of these issues a semi-weekly. There is also the Mining Journal, a semi-weekly, and a weekly German paper.

Butte will probably grow rapidly in population and enterprise for years to come.

The Cooke City and Rocky Fork railroad will soon be completed. Enterprise characterizes the men who have the work in hand. The reduction of fuel expenses in Montana is a consideration of great importance.

Notes From Brother Stanley.

Quarterly meeting services for the third quarter were held at Deer Lodge the 9th and 10th inst., and were well attended. The new church is now complete with the exception of some more seats which will have to be provided as the congregation increases, which Brother Moore reports it is now doing. Several persons have professed conversion during the last quarter and we confidently expect a number of valuable accessions to the church there at no distant day. By faithful, patient and persevering effort we are bound to succeed at Deer Lodge. It is amazing to see what has been accomplished already. A Sunday school has recently been organized which promises well. The ladies were just taking steps to organize a Ladies' Aid Society. Grandma Lightfoot already had several dollars worth of sewing engaged, which is a good beginning, and I have no doubt that they will meet with success. Our friends say we must hold the Annual Conference for 1890 at Deer Lodge. In order to secure it tney should have a strong delegation at Stevensville next summer.

Stopping over night at Butte, where I had the pleasure of attending the Tuesday evening prayer meeting. I found Brother Couey greatly interested and much encouraged in his work. He is holding prayer meetings from house to house every night preparatory to revival work at the church, and reports that the meetings have been quite profitable. For my part I confess I am quite partial to the private house prayer meetings. It was at one of them while kneeling at a bench in the middle of the floor in front of an old-fashioned fireplace that I was first led to make a public confession of faith in Christ. The first revival meeting that I ever held, where many were happily converted, was in a private house—a log cabin. I have known hundreds of people converted at such meetings. The early Christians worshiped God this way, and I always feel that we are in the succession—in the way our fathers trod—when we meet at each other's houses to talk and sing and pray and praise God together.

A few Sundays ago I worshiped at Burnt Fork, where the revival was recently held on Stevensville circuit. Though it was an ordinary prayer meeting appointment, the house was filled, the new converts, old and young, talked and prayed, and all sang with spirit and rejoiced in the hope of glory. It was good to be there. The revival fire still burns there. May it never die out.

There was nothing special in the quarterly meeting services at Helena, on the 17th. Brother Britt reports an increase in the congregation, which he attributes partly, at least, to the greatly improved appearance of our church. It is true that we now have one of the most attractive and comfortable audience rooms in the city. The work of managing the paper, mailing, etc., takes no small portion of the pastor's precious time, and entails a hardship on both the pastor and the congregation. But it is hoped that the visits of our excellent little METHODIST with its bright face and cheering words will help to supply this lack of service in pastoral visitation.

Brother Hunter is much encouraged in his Sunday school work, and the school is in a posperous condition. Brother Hunter is filling appointments in the Helena circuit during the absence of Brother R. S. Clark, who is on a preaching tour in the Flathead Lake country.

Rev. D. F. Bone, who is a subscriber to the METHODIST, writes a complimentary note and requests his paper changed to St. Joseph, Mo. Brother Bone joined the Missouri Conference just one year in advance of this writer, and is one of the popular and successful young men of that body. He cannot stay in one place long without a revival. A local paper gives a glowing account of a wonderful work of grace on his present charge near St. Joseph. We rejoice with him. E. J. S.

Each preacher is requested to prepare a written essay on the subject assigned him not exceeding twenty minutes in length. Each subject is of vital importance. If you cannot possibly be present, please prepare and send your paper. Fifteen minutes will be devoted to promiscuous discussion of each paper. The carrying out of this programme, together with the hearing of reports of preachers from the various charges, and the religious exercises morning and evening of each day will render the occasion one of great interest and, I trust, of great profit.

Rev. J. B. Parnall will preach the opening sermon on Wednesday evening the 27th of March. Rev. W. M. Britt is appointed as his alternate.

The brethren of the Bozeman District are cordially invited to attend. We expect all of the preachers to come prepared to remain over Sunday. Let us press the battle from now until that time that we may have grand victories to report.

Be it remembered that all who are members of a Quarterly Conference are membors the District Conference. It is quite desirable to have as many lay members present as possible, inasmuch as they are to elect four of their number as delegates to the Annual Conference and the lay members of that body will elect a delegate to the next General Conference.

Inasmuch as the Quarterly Conference records are to be inspected by the District Conference it would be well for recording stewards and preachers in charge to look to it that the journals of their respective charges are all in good shape and on hand at the time for examination.

Corvallis College Decision.

We give space this week to the decision of the Supreme Court of Oregon in the case of Corvallis College—the most important case, next to that of the church suit of 1846, which we have ever had before the courts. This college was endowed in 1869 by the state of Oregon with the agricultural appropriation made by the United States in 1862 to several states establishing colleges. It has had the benefit of this endowment, and has been doing good work, approved annually by the state legislature, for seventeen years. Lately certain quasi friends of religion and education conceived that the state could manage this matter better if the two interests were divided, and, upon an abstract theory, attempted to effect the separation. The legislature granted a charter to a second Corvallis Agricultural College, and it was located on the grounds belonging to us; hence the suit. The endowment is next to that of Vanderbilt in amount and security, and gives strength to our entire Pacific work, which has been unified by a railroad from Calfornia to Oregon. It is encouraging to know that after the severest persecution our brethren are so fully vindicated by the courts.—N. O. Adv.

Parsonage Extension.

I do hope that our preachers and people will take hold of the parsonage extension work with more enthusiasm. Send to the conference secretary, Mrs. Stanley, at Corvallis. and get tracts, blanks and all necessary instructions, and organize societies. Or, if you can do no better get the ladies in your charge, and all others who will, to subscribe ten or twenty-five cents a quarter, collect and send to Mrs. A. G. Clarke, Helena, Mont. We need several new parsonages now—one at Bozeman and one at Deer Lodge, and will need others as the work progresses. We will soon need one or more district parsonages. Presiding Elders must have homes for their families, the same as other mortals. Our excellent ladies by united effort, could raise enough to secure the building of at least one preacher's home each year. Think of the joy this would bring and of the money it would save to the church. Brother Moore, at Deer Lodge, pays $120 out of his salary for house rent. Surely there is every incentive for us to push this work. Brother, whether you are a married man or not, or whether you have a parsonage on your work or not, take hold and do what you can. A bachelor built the first parsonage in this conference. E. J. S.

Alhambra.

Alhambra in its picturesque surroundings, all clad in the emblem of innocence, the McLellan range of mountains along its eastern border, lifting itself in magesty with its peaks of varied dimensions, appearing in dazzling brightness; its dense forest of pine and fir heavy with the fallen snow, while the dark line of green not only relieves the scene of a sense of decrepitude, but inspires it with a most robust vigor, which adds to its beauty a splendor that is most pleasing. And then on the west lies the sloping spurs of the Red mountains, which is rich in minerals. Indeed, Alhambra is situated in a mineral belt that runs from northeast to southeast, which has among its gulches and streams placer diggings, while in its mountains quartz lodes of gold and silver abound, promising much in the future outcome of Montana. Its granite, its timber, its scenery, its mountain streams, its pure exhilarating air, its robust health, its warm mineral waters of healing qualities, its railroads connecting it with all the principal cities of the territory, and directly with Helena and Butte cities, while the "Little Prickley Pear canyon," the "Great Falls" with the scenery along the Missouri river, between these points, that tempers the ground with the richly varied and beautiful; the run along the Boulder creek and through Elk park, which stretches itself in its green sward ten or twelve miles along the very summit of the Rockies, bordered by a majestic swell of its converging spurs that shut out the view beyond, that the eye may feast itself upon its unique and beautiful features, which are touched up by the bolder type which they reflect upon the scene below, and then, the National Park, the Hell Gate canyon, in a word, with all of the scenery that invites the sight loving tourist, and last but by no means the least among its resources for future development is its religious element, its band of faithful followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, who came to our lost world to save sinners.

In this setting Alhambra presents an outline that promises large results in the future development of our queen of the Rockies.

The Argument of Facts.

Notwithstanding the proclamations of her enemies, that Christianity is about dead in this country, there seems to be a vigorous life about it somewhere. Just as the enemies of our Lord thought they had him safe in the tomb and strictly guarded by a soldiery that never slept on duty, he astonished them by rising from the dead. So in this land, Christianity is continually gaining adherents though the prophets are forever proclaiming it a dead system. Here are the figures for the last year;

The United States now has 94,457 ministers, 138,855 churches, 19,890,323 members, Last year's gain was 4,505 preachers, 6,434 churches, 764,861 communicants. The daily increase was twelve ministers, seventeen churches, 2,129 communicats.—N. O. Adv.

The well-defined spiritual life is not only the highest life, but the most easily lived. The whole cross is more easily carried than half. It is the man who tries to make the best of both worlds who makes nothing of either. And he who seeks to serve two masters misses the benediction of both.—Prof. Henry Drummond.

W. C. T. U.

The President of Dakota W. C. T. U. will be in Montana next month, (March), to address our people on temperance. Mrs, H. M. Barker is worthy of special attention. In a late private letter received from Bismarck is found the following statement:

"Last Sunday Mrs. Barker spoke to a Union meeti g of all churches, legislators all out ex- and incoming governors, territorial officers and college presidents—a grand representative audience, scores going away who could not get in. One legislator pronounced it 'a grand nineteenth century speech.' A president of a college present said: 'I thought everything had been said on the temperance question, but this was the freshest, strongest and most logical argument I have ever heard.' It is hoped that the Unions will arrange for one if not two nights with this most excellent and able woman. The wife of a Baptist missionary formeriy from New York state, and an earnest consecrated life hers has always been. Those wishing her help please address Mrs. Helen Barker, Bismarck, Dakota.

Death of Alexander Kemp.

Without entering into any extended notice of the character and career of Mr. Alexander Kemp, who was formerly a resident of Montana, and who was well known to many of the citizens of Helena and throughout the territory, and who died at St. Joseph, Missouri, on the 2nd of February, we give several extracts of a letter written to his brother, C. E. Kemp of Helena in relation to his religious testimony during his last days, which will no doubt be of much interest to many of his old friends in Montana.

Mr. James O. Starks writes: "You and your sister will be very happy to know that he has made a public confession of his faith in Christ. I have been much with him and I can assure you that he is perfectly happy and entirely resigned to God's will, his mind has been perfectly clear all through his sickness and he talked very beautifully of his prospects of heaven. After prayer by Rev. Mr. Good, he talked quite a while. He said his mind had undergone a great change and that where all was doubt and uncertainty, confidence now reigned. He gave his hand to Mr. Good and said: 'I believe that Jesus is the son of God; I believe he is my Saviour and trust in him for salvation; I believe the Christian religion is true.' He looked like an angel as he pronounced these words in a clear and distinct voice. I can never forget the impression of that night. To Mrs. Pater he said all was well, peace, peace, and he expected soon to meet loved ones in heaven.

Rev. C. I. VanDeventer wrote as follows: "The first opportunity after learning of his illness I went to see him. Though sad, it was a real pleasure to both of us to meet. He had been earnestly seeking to find the Saviour of sinners, and he had not sought him in vain. Sister Kemp's pastor, Rev. Mr. Good, had frequently visited him and read the scriptures to him, and prayed with and for him. He came in the simplicity of a little child to Jesus, and was consciously accepted of him and while he regretted that he had not earlier given his heart and life to God, yet he rejoiced in the goodness and long-suffering of God, and in a sense of sins forgiven and in the precious hope of everlasting life.

"For a week or two, or longer, before he died, most of his waking hours were spent in prayer and praise. While he had strength he delighted to speak of the goodness of God to him, and to hear others sing and talk of Christ and of heaven. I visited him twice and talked and prayed with him, and assisted in his funeral services. He was patient, unmurmuring and happy, as he greatly desired his mind was unimpaired to the last. H spoke lovingly of you and his sister. I believe that through the mercy of God in Christ Jesus, he has entered paradise"

Died.

Near Stevensville, February 20, 1880, after a sickness of several days, Cora L. the infant daughter of W. H. and S. J. Copp, aged 8 months and 18 days. The bitter pain of parting with their darling treasure is somewhat softened to the sorrowing parents, we rejoice to say, with the comfort of religion and the hope that one day they will meet again their sweet little Cora "on that beautiful shore." To the many kind friends who have shown them so much practical sympathy in their hour of trial and bereavement the grateful parents return sincere thanks. J. B. Parnall.

The tardiness of our paper this week is caused by the breakage of some part of the gas engine which runs our publishers' press. We hope no delay will occur hereafter. Some new machinery is being put in which promises better and prompter work.

HELENA, MONTANA, MARCH 13, 1889

Vol. 1, No. 15.
Subscription, $1.00 per Year.

Attention Brethren!

For good reasons the presiding elder of the Helena District, after consultation with the brethren concerned, has changed the place of holding the District Conference from Anaconda to Butte. Montana. The revival fires have begun to burn at the Butte station. The pastor held a series of meetings in February, and resumed again Sabbath, March 10, to continue through the conference session. We shall look forward to your coming, dear brethren, with great pleasure. We wish you to come with the unction of the spirit, praying for a great baptism of the Holy Ghost upon our meeting. We do believe we are going to have a gracious time. What an impetus a grand old revival will give us for the remainder of the Annual Conference year. Any of the brethren who can come to our assistance before the session, will be gladly welcomed. Come to work.

Notes.

We have heard indirectly that a number of our subscribers fail to get their papers regularly. We will be glad if such will notify us by card of the fact. We do all we can to deliver each issue of the paper to every subscriber. That is, we mail the paper plainly addressed to each one. It must be remembered that our mail service is very unsatisfactory in this territory.

The pastor at Helena began a series of revival services in his church last Sunday. Brother Cockrill from Townsend circuit is helping in the meeting. Already there are tokens of success. A number have indicated a desire for salvation and some penitents have been at the altar for prayer. We ask the earnest prayers of God's people that a great work of grace may crown our efforts in this meeting.

Revivals are a favored means of God for the promotion of his cause. A great majority of all converted people were converted in revivals. Let us have more of them.

Brother R. S. Clark has returned from his prospecting tour in the Flathead Lake country. He reports it a country rich in natural resources, and an inviting field for our church. He held a meeting for two weeks which produced an unprecedented interest in religious matters in that country. The people want a preacher and will be liberal in the way of supporting him. Brother Lee is a good local preacher of our church in that valley, but a local preacher doesn't answer the demand.

With all the difficulties in the way at Bozeman station, Brother Johnson is making good progress there. The meeting of the District conference was quite profitable. Two members were received and others are to be received as fruits of the meeting. We have the promise of Brother Johnson's help in our meeting at Helena next week.

Two Methodisms.

There is no question in the mind of anyone who has worked for the Master in the west that our progress is impeded by the fact that we bear the name of Southern Methodists. This is true in spite of the zeal of our preachers and the faithfulness of our members. We are succeeding in a limited degree, but it is under the pressure of crosses and hardships that, in our judgment, might be avoided.

It seems to us that the General Conferences of the two churches ought to find some means to avoid the sacrifice of so many men and so much money. The man who is not pained at the hinderance that each church is to the other in most placeswhere they exist side by side, is either ignonorant of the facts or has a sad lack of love for the cause we are mutually laboring to promote.

The burdens being borne by many demand adjustment. Adjustment involves concessions on both sides. When the burdens are felt sufficiently by those in authority, then the concessions will be made.

We do not believe that the solution of the problem is in organic union, nor in any change of name that our church might make. We rather favor some such plan as that proposed by Dr. Nathan Scarritt and endorsed by Dr. McAnally and other wise men of the church. That was to divide the whole church—north and south—into several general conferences, with one still higher conference or council which should serve as a bond of union for all.

Prayer.

Is prayer useless? Will God never produce effects contrary to the laws of nature? Then man is above God. Man is continually producing good effects contrary to the laws of nature. Man makes water run up hill; man makes it rain; man turns winter into summer and summer into winter. True, he works in a very small sphere, and his means for accomplishing these things are rude and bunglesome. If he knew more, doubtless, he could produce these results much more easily.

And should not God then who knows all things, and who has all power, be expected sometimes to do such things when occasion requires? And is it not sufficient occasion, when by so doing he can bless his creatures and show his fatherly nature?

Such an argument is for the prayerless and unbelieving. The child of God who knows his father hears his prayer needs no further argument.

Poor Show for Pessimism.

WORLD STATISTICS.

The missionary work of the world now includes, 100 societies—fifty American and fifty European—which report an income of $9,723,850, of which $4,420,613 came from America, and $5,303,237 from Europe. The American societies reported 675 ordained missionaries, 129 lay missionaries, 1,133 female missionaries, 1,102 ordained native preachers, 10,636 other native helpers, 248,070 communicants in the churches. In connection with the European societies there are 1,780 ordained missionaries, 248 lay missionaries, 1,030 women missionaries, 1,241 ordained native preachers, 15,120 other native helpers, 276,715 communicants in the church. The total Protestant missionary work has therefore, 2,755 ordained missionaries, 2,162 women, 2,243 ordained native helpers, and 524,785 communicants in the churches. These totals show a gain over the preceding year of $659,350 income, 25 ordained missionaries, 70 lay missionaries, 140 women, 133 ordained natives, 8,537 native heipers, and 26,135 communicants.—Ex.

The Sunday Newspaper.

We quote a paragraph below from the Nashville Chistian Advocate on the Sunday newspaper. It is interesting reading, good logic and sound doctrine. Of course some of our secular contemporaries will say we are behind the times. But no, we are only a little ahead of the times. We believe the day of the Sunday newspaper will have an end.

"Indeed, there are two noted reasons why newspapers which print a Sunday edition are to be regarded as the worst foes of the Sabbath, namely. 1. Being themselves desecrators of the Sabbath, they inevitably defend every sort of Sabbath desecration. 2. And being filled with all manner of sensationalism, their perusal utterly unfits the people for a proper use of the Sabbath. How easily we might spare them is shown by the fact that the great city of London, the metropolis of the world has done without them, and as well as we have done with them. We can spare our papers much better than we can spare our Sabbath—that is too clear for argument. If the Christian people of the United States will for one month decline to patronize any paper issuing a Sunday edition, it will become impossible to induce a publisher in America to print such a sheet. And one day they will do so."

For the sake of those who may follow the foolish fashions of the day it is well that an old English law was repealed nearly one hundred years ago. Until the year 1790 the following law was in force in England: "Whoever shall entice into bonds of matrimony any male subject of her Majesty by means of rouge, white paint, Spanish cotton, steel corsets, crinoline, high-heeled shoes or false hips, shall be prosecuted for witchcraft, and the marriage declared null and void."—Episcopal Methodist.

The Modern Dude.

As described by Charles Wesley in 1784.

What is a modern man of fashion?
A man of taste and dissipation;
A busy man, without employment;
A happy man, without enjoyment,
Who squanders all his time and treasurers
On empty joys and tasteless pleasures;
Visits, attendance and attention,
And courtly arts too low to mention.

In sleep and dress and sport and play
He throws his worthless life away;
Has no opinion of his own,
But takes from leading beaux the tone;
With a disdainful smile or frown
He on the riffraff crowd looks down;
The world polite his friends and he,
And all the rest are—nobody.

Taught by the great his smiles to sell,
And how to write and how to spell,
The great his oracles he makes,
Copies their vices and mistakes.
Custom pursues, his only rule,
And lives an ape and dies a fool.

—Christian Standard.

One of the officials in Butte a few days since asked us this question: "How is it that I, who have been reared by enemies to southern peple, and now a republican, have so many warm friends among southern men?" Being, as we had reason to suppose, among the number referred to, we were just trying to make a becoming reply, when he relieved us by saying: "I have found among them so many warm-hearted Christians, is the reason." Upon reflecction we drew this lesson from the query: The religion of the Lord Jesus Christ, when properly exemplified in his servants, can and will break down the intensest sectional prejudice, and it is about the only thing in this world that will do it. To be one in Christ is the mark toward which we are to press.

Bozeman Circuit.

I have just closed a meeting at Weaver's school house, in which Brothers Warren and Cockrill assisted, and which resulted in three conversions and two accessions to the church and several professions of sanctification.

We labored under many disadvantages. Twice the house was obtained and occupied—once by a denomination for the purpose of holding a church entertainment, and that without consulting those who were holding the meeting; again by the Good Templars, who represent a grand and good cause, but not so vital as the cause of Christ.

Again three dances and one party were held in the neighborhood, and whether in direct opposition or not detracted greatly from the interest of the services. The most deplorable fact of the case is that members of other churches attended them and to make matters worse one party was held at the house of a professed Christian. Their excuse for giving and going to dances, is that they want to influence sinners for the right. A grand place, indeed, to teach transgressors the path of life! Again we were accused of not preaching the gospel. The fact of which is, we held up a Christian standard to which they have not as yet attained, therefore, to justify themselves, say it is not the gospel. A religion that doesn't drop parties, dances, liquor-drinking and card-playing, will not fit a man for the kingdom of heaven.

Our church enterprise is fairly on foot. We hope to complete it by conference.

R. F. Jarvis.

A Mother's Influence.

A good Christian mother has more influence over her child than the father. She can make impressions on the heart and mind that are never forgotten, though the child may grow up to manhood or womanhood, and become very wicked, but at times the thought of that good mother, her kind words, her good advice and those earnest prayers will come up in the mind and melt the stubborn heart.

I heard Dr. Wm. McRush speak of a man who tried to be an infidel. He was a man of good sense and the Doctor thought he would soon reason him out of that infidel notion, and brought up the strongest argument to convince him of his error, but they did not have any effect. The man remarked, "there is but one thing that keeps me from being an infidel, and that is my mother. When I was a little boy she would take me into her private room every day and pray with me. When I grew up to be a man, I came west, and when my mother got to be an old lady I went to pay her my last visit. I enjoyed myself very well for a few days, but the time came for me to return home, and when everything was readyfor mydeparture my mother came, took me by the hand and led me into the same private room and said, 'now John, get on your knees for the last time with your mother,' and I will never forget that earnest prayer. This keeps me from being an infidel."

Oh! the power there is in the mother's prayer to save her child from infidelity. I knew a good Christian lady who had a little son. Every evening, before retiring to bed, she would take him to herself and pray. The father was not religious, but fully made up his mind to become religious, but could not get his consent to make the start, which is a hard point to get over. Sometimes he would hear those earnest prayers and the tears would steal down the father's cheeks, but after a few years he was powerfully converted and assisted the mother in training the little boy. When between ten and twelve years old at a protracted meeting he went forward for prayers, the father and mother did not go to him for fear it would be said he was over persuaded. He went the second time. His parents watched him close, to see the result. All at once, he rose up and saw his father, threw his arms around him and said, "Father, I love you better than ever before." He then ran to his mother and threw his arms around her and said, "Mother, I love you better than I ever did. I love you in a way that I never did before." This was all the evidence necessary to fully satisfy anyone that he was truly converted. He grew up a good, industrious, obedient and studious boy. He was a great boy for books was called a bookworm. When about seventeen years old he was licensed to exhort and soon after was licensed to preach and after a year or two joined the Missouri Conference, and traveled two or three years, then was sent to Montana. His mother was very sick at the time of his departure. She was asked about his going west, she said: "My dear boy, if you feel that it is your field of work, go and preach to the people among those mountains; point sinners to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." She continued to grow worse for some months and just before the angelic band came to waft her spirit home, she was asked what we should tell her boy. She seemed to rouse up with a smile on her face and spoke in a full clear voice: "Tell Edwin to preach the gospel in its purity, in all of its light, life and power to the people among those mountains." These were her last words. O what a power there is in a good mother's influence! We do not wonder at the minister being so earnestly engaged in doing his Master's work when he has such a power behind him.

A Great Religious Awakening.

A copy of the London Methodist Times has been sent me. In it there was an article of intense interest to me, and I am sure that I can glean a few facts that will interest your readers. The great religious awakening in the great Russian Empire, is the subject discussed in the article referred to. I had no thought of such pure and great light in that country.

The work was begun by an Englishman about fifteen years ago. Its vitality and strength is demonstrated by its life and triumphs amid the terrible persecutions of the Russian government. The Greek church, has, in some measure, prepared the way for this revival of pure scriptural Christianity. However fragmentarily Christ is preached, yet it seems that some light will fall and some good abide. The Russian peasant is constantly trained to say: "God be merciful to me a sinner."

This confession prepares the way for the full gospel. The writer emphasizes one fact: "There are no self-righteous people in Russia." The sense of sin is well nigh universal. The whole nation is religious after its way. "If a cavalry regiment is entering the barracks, every man among them will make the sign of the cross as he enters. If the gospel is being read to the peasantry, they will all stand with heads uncovered to listen to it."

Though begun by a foreigner, this great movement is now everywhere, Russian in character. One of the leaders says:

"Our desire is that all the glory should be given to Christ, and that all who are working with us should depend on him alone for help. The movement is spreading. Already the Russian Empire is honey-combed by the revival."

Take an illustration of the character of some of the converts: "One was wrongfully accused of blasphemy for breaking his images. He was sentenced to transportation to Siberia. This involved trudging on foot one thousand miles through the snow. A fellow convert went to see him depart, and to cheer him as he left his friends and home behind. To his astonishment he found the prisoner full of peace and joy. 'Thank God, said the exiled one, for the privilege of preaching Christ in chains to my fellow prisoners. Wherever the spirit of the Lord is, there is light, liberty and power that will burn on in the soul forever. Behold what God hath wrought.' L. Pulliam.

The Book for Preachers.

If we loved the Bible more, studied it more, we would be powerful preachers. It is the sword of the spirit. If we would be skillful in it we must practice the use of it more. We do not hesitate to say that if preachers were cut off from all other books and studied the Bible with great avidity and singleness of heart, the effect of preaching would be augmented a thousand fold. To many preachers the Bible is the strangest book in their library. William Jones, the great Welch preacher, when asked by Dr. Bunting what books he had read, replied, "I have read the Bible." "But, said Dr. Bunting, "have you read nothing else?" "Oh, yes," he said, "the Bible dictionary," meaning the concordance, and I presume he knew them from cover to cover. But what a preacher this man was! His sermons glowed with poetic imagery, kindled at the altar of prayer, and the learned and ignorant crowded to hear him by thousands.—St. Louis Ad.

Be a Hero.

Be a hero, my boy! but not in war's strife,
But in every day actions, in every day life;
Remember the injunction to honor the truth,
And heed well the maxims of wisdom in youth,
Which shall guard thee from evil and lead thee aright,
And make of thy duty, a perfect delight.
Be not slothful, but rise each day with the sun,
For a day is well ended if rightly begun.
Be true to thyself, thy country and God
And proud of a home on America's sod.
Serve well thy country by obeying her laws,
Aud heed not the world's sycophantic applause.
Be sober and earnest aud do with thy might
What God and thy conscience shall tell thee is right.
Be courteous to all, with reverence for age
That has acted its part on life's busy stage.
Be kind to thy conrades who share in thy pleasure,
Thy own heart shall thrill with joy without measure.
Thy feet will grow weary full soon, if you stray,
But walking uprightly, with Christ for your way
Will lead you to pastures of peace and of joy.
With Christ for a pattern, be a hero, my boy!

MRS. F. M. APPLEBURY.

A Bright Bird.

He was an English starling, and owned by a barber. A starling can be taught to speak, and to speak very well, too. This one had been taught to answer certain questions, so that a dialogue like this could be carried on:

"Who are you?"
"I'm Joe."
"Where are your from!"
"From Pimlico."
"Who is your master?"
"The barber."
"What brought you here?"
"Bad company."

Now it came to pass one day that the starling escaped from his cage and flew away to enjoy his liberty. The barber was in despair. Joe was the life of the shop; many a customer came attracted by the fame of the bird, and the ba ber saw his receipts falling off. Then, too, he loved the bird, which had proved so apt a pupil.

But all efforts to find the stray bird were in vain.

Meantime Joe had been enjoying life on his own account. A few days passed very pleasantly, and then, alas, he fell into the snare of the fowler, literally.

A man lived a few miles from the barber's home, who made the snaring of birds his business. Some of the birds he stuffed and sold. Others again he sold to hotels near by, to be served up in delicate titbits to fastidious guests.

Much to his surprise, Joe found himself one day in the fowler's net, in company with a large number of birds as frightened as himself. The fowler began drawing out the birds, one after another, and wringing their necks. Joe saw that his turn was coming, and something must be done. It was clear that the fowler would not ask questions, so Joe piped out:

"I'm Joe!"

"Hey! what's that?" cried the fowler.

"I'm Joe," repeated the bird.

"The duce your are!" said the astonished fowler.

"What brings you here?"

"Bad company."

It is neadless to say Joe's neck was not wrung, and he was soon restored to his rejoicing master,the barber.—Sunday-School Advocate.

Childhood Religion.

A little girl of nine summers came to ask her pastor about joining the church. She had been living a Christian for nine months, had been properly taught, and answered the usual questions promptly and properly. At last the pastor said:

"Nellie, does your father think you are a Christian?"

"Yes, sir."

"Have you told him?

"No, sir."

"How then does he know?

"He sees."

"How does he see that?"

"Sees I am a better girl."

"What else does he see?"

"Sees I love to read my Bible and to pray."

"Then you think he sees you are a Christian?"

"I know he does; he can't help it;" and with a modest, happy boldness she was sure her father knew she was a Christian because he could not help seeing it in her life. Is not such the privilege or all God's people, to be sure that others see they are following Christ?

We cannot hide a good life. It shines. It may make no more noise than a candle, but like a candle it may be seen. Thus even a little boy or girl may be a light-bearer. — Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

Some Thoughts on the President's Message.

After the formal introduction in President Harrison's inaugural address we find these words: "Entering thus solemnly into covenant with each other, we may reverently invoke the aid and confidently expect the favor and help of Almighty God, that He will give to me wisdom, strength and fidelity and to our people a spirit of fraternity and love of righteousness and peace."

It is not in our sphere from the pulpit or press to pass upon his political views but upon the subject involved in the above paragraph we have no restriction. It gladdens our heart to read such from our chief executive. We indorse it and thank God to believe such will be his faith for the next four years. It reminds us of the spirit of Solomon's prayer in becoming King of Israel.

Furthermore he says: "I have already rejected the suggestion of a special executive policy for any section of our country." We presume this stand suits both of the great parties of our country, for he reasonably adds: "Those who would use law as a defense, must not deny the use of it to others."

This strikes us also as sound: "Our naturalization laws should be so amended as to make an inquiry into the character and good disposition of persons applying."

"Persistent importunity," says Mr. Harrison, "will not be the best support of an application for office," and, "honorable party service will certainly not be esteemed by me a disqualification for office."

He purposes the enforcement of the civil service law, and expresses himself as intending to "advance a reform of the civil service." Most everything else stated in the message savors more or less of the party who placed him in power and about which we have nothing to say. Irrespective of party lines, there is much in the message that will strike the fair-minded people of our country as just and good, and which we believe, if carried out, will result in prosperity to the land. So may it be.

Secretary of State—James G. Blaine of Maine.

Secretary of the Treasury—William Windom of Minnesota.

Secretary of War—Redfield Proctor of Vermont.

Secretary of the Navy—Benjamin F. Tracy of New York.

Secretary of the Interior—John W. Noble of Missouri.

Post-Master General—John Wanamaker of Pennsylvania.

Attorney General—W. H. H. Miller of Indiana.

Secretary of Agriculture—Jeremiah Rusk of Wisconsin.

A Church That Will Hold.

From some experience in the difficulty in maintaining good Sunday congregations here in the west, our eyes readily catch anything written on the subject. We therefore write but little to introduce our readers to a consideration of this important matter as found in one of our exchanges:

* * "The need is not a minister that will draw the people, but a church that will hold them for God. The following hits the matter: "A man came up to my study the other day from one of the churches near Murray Hill that is vacant, and he said: 'I wish you could recommend us a minister for our church.' I said, 'I can recommend a dozen!' He seemed rather bluffed at that; thought that was a large number, and said, 'Won't you suggest a name?' And I went on suggesting one name after another. I suggested one man, and he said, 'I understand that man has not a very strong voice.' I suggested another. 'Well, I understand that man wears a black cravat in the pulpit.' Another man. 'Well, I understand that man is not a very good reader.' A another. 'Well, I understand that man has a very stiff and formal delivery.' Finally he said, 'Well, what we want is a minister that will draw.' 'Oh, no, my Christian friend, what you want is a church that will hold. You havn't got it. Twenty congregations have passed through your church in the last twenty years, and they have passed through because you have not had a church that will hold. You want a church that will hold the people when they get into it. The minister cannot hold. Success depends not half so much upon the minister as upon you, the church.' "

We doubt not that most every pastor in Montana has suffered more or less from the rotating character of his congregations. Our people can do much to hold the people who come and go if they would do it. In the course of one month a splendid congregation passes through one of our city churches. Let us have more zeal on the part of the brethren and sisters, and the result will gratify us all.

Notes and Personals.

Bishop Galloway's address is now Jackson, Miss. He has recently begun his residence there in his Episcopal home.

Light of the Valley, vol. 1 No. 2, has reached the editor's sanctum. The paper bearing this title is published in Stevensville, Montana, and is edited by Edwin M. Ellis, of the Presbyterian Church. This is a neat little monthly journal, and the latest born in the religious family of Montana. We wish it great success and welcome it to our table every month.

The National Educational Association of America is to be held in Nashville, Tenn., next July.

Does not the M. E. Church, South, make a very clear cut prohibition upon its members when in the General Rules it forbids, "Drunkenness or drinking spirituous liquors, unless in case of necessity?"

Can we discipline our members for parlor dancing under "the taking of such diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus?"

"A Reply to Senator Eustis' late paper on Race Antagonism," by Rev. A. G. Haygood, D. D., published by the Open Letter Club, has reached us. We have not yet had the opportunity to read it, but we know it is good, because, whatever the doctor says or writes is good—at least so far as we have found.

This is the kind of brotherhood we like: "General Sherman made an earnest request of the president that General Joseph E. Johnson be retained in the office of Railroad Commissioner, and promised to ask nothing more of the administration."

During our made moments we have recently read with great profit and much delight, "Bishop Geo. F. Pierce," by G. G. Smith, and "John B. McFerrin, D. D.," by O. P. Fitzgerald. All good Methodist literature.

Rev. Rufus J. Clark, in the Evangelist, of February 23, says: "With this issue I take entire control of the Evangelist in all its departments." Dr. D. C. Kelly retires from the editorship.

So far, in reading Dr. Boland's "Problem of Methodism," we find "nothing worthy of death." Some of his critics are doubtless consistent with themselves when they so vehemently advocate the Second Blessing theory.

To date, March in Montana has been spring indeed. The weather has been good as we wish.

Among other blessings in the revival meeting in the Butte station was the happy conversion of a man seventy years old.

Let everyone read carefully the directions about business letters and contributions to the MONTANA METHODIST on page 4. Please send your money to Helena direct.

Two good sisters in the Butte charge, with a half a day's work, secured $32 in cash in getting sixteen subscribers to the Southwestern Methodist, whereby they secure the "Communion set, premium," offered in that paper. Good work for the paper and the church.

Dear brethren, we again urge you to let us have brief reports from your circuits and stations.

Restitution, then Pardon.

A few months ago, a poor drunkard in this city bet his only cow on the result of the election, and lost her. A short time after the election, the gambler who won the bet, called for his cow. The drunkard's wife followed the man as he led the animal away, and crying bitterly, begged him not to rob her children of their only support. The gambler would not listen to her plea, but coolly drove the animal away, and was soon supplying his own table with milk and butter.

This man attended the Sam Jones' meetings here at the Pavilion, and became deeply convicted. Three times he went forward for pardon, but each time that cow stood directly between him and the Cross. Determined to defeat the devil and secure his own salvation, he at last led the cow back to the drunkard's home. Calling the poor woman to the door, he gave up the cow, and as he put the rope in her hand, the peace of God came into his heart. O, ye poor, restless, unforgiven souls, drive home the cows that are standing between you and the Cross!—H. in Los Angeles Advocate.

Shall Methodism Have Them.

Whether Dr. Fitzgerald means to be prophetic or monitory in the two paragraphs appended we are not sure. Let us pray that Methodism may share in the church catholic having such a missionary laity, and such an intelligent consecrated ministry:

"These two ideas embody the church of the near future:

First. That the Christian Church is a missionary organization. It is this, or it is nothing. Its spirit, its agencies, its prescribed purpose and methods, its promised destiny—all characterize it as an aggressive, conquering force that will never rest for one moment until it has subjugated the world. It can make no compromise with false religions, nor make any armistice with hostile forces. Weakness, stagnation, corruption have seized upon it whenever it has lost sight of this, its true mission. Its lost purity and its lost unity will be recovered when its heart shall again be fired and its energies aroused by the recognition of its divinely-ordained purpose, and it shall re-enter upon its work of bringing the world to Christ with undoubting conviction of its feasibility and uncalculating enthusiasm in its prosecution. The exigencies and opportunities of the mission-fields of the heathen world will shame Christendom out of its bigotry and its parsimony. Already signs of this happier day are dawning in the east. Sunrise will soon flood the earth with its glory.

Second. The church of the near future will be served by a ministry whose breadth of vision, thoroughness of consecration, and self-denying heroism will accredit them as worthy exponents and propagandists of a religion whose author is God, which promises salvation to all the world, and whose resources are adequate to the accomplishment of the sublime achievement. The inception and organization of the Vanderbilt Missionary Brotherhood and of similar organizations in other Christian schools reveal the fact that our young men, called of God to the work of the ministry, are interpreting that call according to the letter and spirit of the Great Commission, and mark the first swell in the waters of a rising tide on which the church of Christ will be borne onward to its final victory."

Debtors to Relgion.

Was there ever a government which was not founded on religion? What differentiates governments in Christian lands from those in pagan countries? What gives to an American or an Englishman greater advantages for making money, getting position or education, over the Mexicans, the Chinese or the Hindoos? In Mexico farming has been carried on largely with rude wooden plows, and nearly every man carries a revolver; in America, see the improved labor-saving machinery used in agriculture, and the immunities guaranteed by an open Bible. Yet there are worshipers of mammon from proud America and Christian England, who, going to Calcutta and Shanghai, to "continue a few years to buy, sell and get gain" without any proviso for the divine will, have so completely sold their souls for a mess of pottage—diregarded the Sabbath or loved the intoxicating bowl—that they cause Christianity to be depreciated in the heathen mind; they themselves become caricatures of Christian civilization and obstruct the way of the missionary. There are thousands of ingrates all over Christian lands who have grown fat on the blessings of a Christian civilization; who are indebted to Christian institutions for the peace, safety and prosperity of their homes, yet are they too proud to acknowledge God in their ways, lean to their own understauding ridicule of the Bible, and kick against the providences of God. "The one knoweth his owner," but these blatant infidels neither recognize or appreciate the source of all their blessings and being. What have they which they have not received directly or indirectly from God? There never was a civilization worthy the name without true religion. Rome, with her military genius and world-wide regal supremacy; Greece, with her sculptors, orators, statesmen and philosophers, had what the world calls civilization, but they were the victims of great moral corruption and wickedness, and it has been well said, "that they went down to hell for the want of a Christian religion." Many men say that they do not believe the Bible, when they have been nutured under its benign influences. "The only argument against the book is a bad life." Many men do not want to believe in Jesus Christ. They know their duty, but they do it not. "Honor to whom honor —."

J. H. Johnson.

Notes from the Seat of War.

The war is being waged in earnest. The ecclesiastical guns are cannonading the strongholds of Satan, and dealing out unmeasured terms of invective. Woe to all who differ from them in their established modes of belief. They carefully and sedulously guard the entrance to the ante-chamber of heaven, lest any among the invited guests seek to enter and partake of its blessings not clothed in the wedding garment. They close up the ranks and admit no soldier into the army of the King Eternal who is not equipped with a full armor, and lest any belated traveler, footsore and weary, should seek admittance at the outer courts of the temple, not having washed the dust of travel from their feet, they cry, "away with him till he be cleansed. Woe is he that goeth not down into the water, and cometh not up out of the water. He hath no part nor lot with the heirs of heaven."

For eighteen consecutive nights Elder Hollis, a representative of the Christian Church, has been lecturing to crowded houses and attentive audiences, and has succeeded in the task of demolishing, at least in the opinion of some, the most sacred and invincible strongholds of Methodist faith and practice; scattered to the winds our hopes of heaven and immortal bliss and mercilessly consigned to a merited perdition and denounces all who differ with him in the modes of baptism, and emphatically declares that no one not inducted into the church militant by immersion, will enter the church triumphant. Though our hearts be pure as driven snow, the blood of Christ which was shed for all cannot save us. Though our lives were a perfect and exact type of Christ, and lacked baptism, though our faith could remove mountains, our love to God and man fill the full measure of God's requirement, yet, unless we submit to be immersed, our souls are eternally lost. Still we shall not enter into the holiest of holies, behind which and in which God dwells, and which Christ in his beatitudes promised as a legacy to those who meet the requirements of of this inimitable discourse; "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." How shall they see him unless they enter into his presence in the heavenl mansion he has prepared for their reception?

Courtesy.

"Honesty is the best policy." A boy or man who is honest because it pays, is at heart dishonest. Yet God has so ordained matters in this world that honesty is as much a matter of interest as duty. Courtesy is a duty. But it pays to be courteous. It is duty and our interest to entertain kindly feelings toward all, and to express them in a kindly way. That is the best definition of courtesy.

The president of the New York Shoe and Leather Bank, Mr. Stout, is known for uniting business ability with unfailing courtesy. He has a pleasant word for every one, even when driven by business. "One day," says a correspondent, "a man came into the bank and opened an account. 'I came here,' he said, 'not simply because I knew my money would be safe with you, but because you are always civil. I have been a depositor in ——'s Bank for many years. I knew him when he had no society to boast of, and hardly enough money to buy a dinner at a cheap restaurant. I laid my hat on the desk, which I suppose I had no business to do. He waved his hand with an imperious air, and said, 'take that hat off!' I removed my hat, when he said, 'Now I'll hear what you say.' 'I've nothing to say to you.' I went to the bookkeeper, ordered my account made up, took the bank's check for $42,000, and this I wish to deposit.'"

Lundy Foot, a tobacconist, began his business in Dublin in a very small shop. To every little girl who bought a half-penny worth of snuff, he was as courteous as if she were the first lady in the city. "Thank you, my dear," he would say, neatly putting up the snuff. "Call again if you please." His courtesy made him popular, his business increased, and he died worth several millions of pounds. It pays to be courteous, and it don't pay to be a boor.—Youth's Companion.

The Evangelical Alliance of this city, last Monday discussed the oft discussed question, "How shall the church reach the masses?" The general conclusion was that the church is reaching the masses, and can hardly find any better way than she is now using. The leader of the discussion, a Presbyterian brother, said that the trouble was not that the church refused to preach to the poor, but that the people who accepted the gospel would not stay poor. There were the Methodists, he said, who make it their special work in the beginning to preach to the poor, and they gathered into their societies immense numbers of the poor, but when the people were rescued from vice and made honest and industrious, and religious, they wouldn't stay poor; and now the Methodists had more colleges and universities, finer churches and bigger organs, and more money than any church in the land. There is much truth in these statements. What we most need is not new methods, but increased zeal and faith in working by the old methods.—Southwestern Methodist, Kansas City, Mo.

These Bear Witness.

Dear reader study the following closely to see if there is not witness against you in some of the particulars mentioned:

Having more interest in money matters than in soul-saving.

A growing appetite for ease and pleasure.

Feeling no condemnation for fellowship with the world.

A disposition to use five dollars for self and five cents for God's cause.

Inclination to find fault with others rather than to help them.

Engaging in levity, and terming it Christian cheerfulness.

Reading secular newspapers in preference to the Bible.

Preferring meetings where there is nothing to do rather than those which afford opportunities for personal work.

Avoiding the society of those noted for piety and godliness.

These signs give unmistakable evidence of the near approach of the grim monster; yea, already with one hand his icy fingers clutch the victim's throat, and with the other he aims a dagger at the heart. Help! help! An hour hence may be too late.—Anonymous.

Letter from Rev. Sam P. Jones.

Mr. Editor: I will give the readers of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, among whom, I trust, I have many friend, some record of my trip and work, etc., since I left home, January 8.

We came to California—wife, four children, nurse and myself—via the "Sunset" route. We were charmed with many things along the way, and were pleasantly disappointed when we arrived at Los Angeles with so little fatigue after so long, but pleasant a trip. We thought that the journey would be monotonous and tiresome, but such was not the case. We saw many things of interest en route, some sights beautiful, some sublime, and after the trip is over one feels like repeating the journey and would love to see the same things again.

We arrived in Los Angeles the evening of January 12. Our meetings began in the Hazard Pavilion Hall which has a seating capacity of about 4,200. We began with full houses and held fifty-two meetings in the building, two each day. At many of the services hundreds were turned away for want of room, and sometimes even thousands. It was not a union meeting, some of the pastors of all denominations were with us; the Methodists of course were all into it. There were perhaps something near 2,000 conversions and about 1,500 of them gave their names to the pastors of the churches. It was in many respects a marvelous work of grace. The last service, on Wednesday night, February 6, was a marvel of power and interest We had reserved more than a thousand seats especially for the converts and it was an interesting sight to see so many stand up and testify of God's power to save.

Los Angeles is the most beautiful city on this continent; they must have near 80,000 inhabitants. Its climate, its fruit and its flowers are without parallel. Twenty-two of the twenty-six days we spent there was not a cloud in the heavens, the thermometer ranging from 70 degree at noon to 50 or 60 at night. Wife and children were charmed with the city.

Of course these far western cities differ in their moral and social life from those South and East, the heterogeneous population with a strong admixture of the adventurous and speculative and the Mexican and Chinese element, but Los Angeles and San Diego have been populated largely by the best class of our Eastern, Southern and Middle States, in the last few years. I found those among whom I met persons from almst every state in the union. Old Georgia was largely represented.

I bade Los Angeles good-bye with regrets, with the cordial invitation to come again from the 6,000 people gathered in the hall the night of the closing service.

We arrived at Sacramento the morning of the 9th inst. and began the meeting here in the Armory Hall, Sunday evening the 10th. The hall was crowded, only seating about 2,200. We held services there also Monday and Tuesday night, but to-night we go to the Exposition building, which will seat about 8,000. I have scarcely in my life seen so much religious interest on the fourth day of a meeting. Many have been converted and a profound religious interest is already awakened which promises to reap a harvest of souls. I shall remain here, D. V., until the 28th inst, then I go immediately to San Francisco. Our meetings there will be held in the Pavilion where Moody has just closed his successful meetings of four weeks. At the close of our meetings there I shall go immediately home, I think, and come back to Denver the last of April, and perhaps to Salt Lake City.

Notes and Personals.

Helena is growing marvelously. New residences, single and in groups, are going up all over the city, while the foundation of a number of large business blocks are being prepared on Main and other streets. The fine weather has started the building work earlier than usual this season.

We trust the improved morals of our territory will be manifest in a better Sabbath observance this year than last. A great deal of Sunday work was done on Helena's new buildings last summer.

The revival meeting at Helena has been very profitable. The church has been much revived, some have professed conversion and two have united with the church. The meeting continues and we trust God's blessing will continue with us. We have had good help from Brothers Cockrill and Johnson.

Our church in Helena has ordered through Brother Johnson five dozen of the new Hymn Books. We hope they will soon come and help us in the revival of song service so greatly needed.

Bishop A. W. Wilson returns from the China Mission Conference prostrated from a severe attack of his old malady—inflammatory rheumatism. We regret to learn this.

We hope to have some of the brethren of the Bozeman district to attend the Helena District Conference in Butte.

We have learned that Bro. Jarvis is quite hopeful of building a church on the Bozeman Circuit before the annual Conference convenes. He is pushing the subscription list. We hope he may get the cash in hand before hard times seize the people.

During the revival meeting there came a stormy evening and the wife said to her husband, "I don't reckon there will be many out to church, I believe I will not go." "That is just why you should go," said the husband. That wife went and did not regret it, for all who braved the weather and bad streets were people who meet with God in the church.

The revival in the Butte charge up to last Sabbath had resulted in a good work of grace and ten accessions to the church. This work is getting in fine condition. The outlook for a self-sustaining station there is very promising. The pastor hopes for showers of blessing upon his people during the District Conference session.

Is there any doubt as to human depravity when it is known that men will break into a peacher's house and steal his clothes while he presents the gospel to sinners twenty feet away? Doubt is not reasonable here.

We note that some of the good brethren in the strong conferences are waging war against "Statistical Bishops"—holding that the reading long reports in annual conferences under the question, "Are all the teachers blameless in their life and administration," is a "bore, a perfect nuisance." Divide those great bodies, brethren, and it will relieve you some.

Good old Boston, the home of the Puritan fathers, has unquestionably back-slidden, since it is said of her, that she recently shipped "a large cargo for the west coast of Africa—including 1,120 packages of N. E. rum, 700 hogsheads already having been loaded, some tobacco, and a few barrels of flour."

Dr. Dorchester states further: "I have directly learned, from the very best authority, that a distillery firm within three miles of the State House has a contract to furnish 3,000 gallons of rum daily to the African trade for the next seven years." If it be in order, we do now move that a few good missionaries be sent to Boston.

"Come, children, you and your father must get up early this morning, for the preacher is coming to our house for dinner today, and I want to get everything cleaned up and straightened out before he gets here." There is two fold respect in this, viz.: Self-respect and respect for God's servants. One of our exchanges made use of a historical fact when it said: "Solomon's temple was cleansed and everything placed in its proper order. This was the work of man, and then God filled the house with his glory." Let us set our house in order and look for the blessing, brothers and sisters.

Wasted Energy.

A great deal of energy is lost for want of a little more energy. A power of nine hundred pounds exerted to move a thousand pound weight is a clear loss without the additional one hundred pounds of power. This fact finds illustration in much of our church work. There is a measure of zeal and energy and even spiritual power, but that measure falls below the requisite amount to accomplish the end in view. The world is slightly impressed with our religion, sinners are half convicted of their sins, but the full work of salvation is not accomplished, and hence the energy of the church is largely wasted.

A church fully consecrated to God, marching in the strength of spiritual endowment, astonishes the world by its conquests. It is manifest that the visible means are not sufficient to account for the great results. On the other hand a church with a limp faith and a lukewarm love, though it may do much work of a kind, yet will surprise the world by effecting so little. It is seen that the church has lost its power and its presence is an argument for infidelity.

Our farmers who irrigate their fields find that it takes less water to flood their ground when they can have a full ditch and a strong stream that will flow over it in a few moments, than when the ditch is half full and the stream feeble. In the latter case the water trickles along the low places, soaks in the ground and wastes away for the want of more water to make it flow on. So in many places our churches need an increase of energy to make effective the efforts already put forth. They need to have the tide of divine power raised a little higher that the labors already put forth may bear fruit. Let the tide rise.

Wanted Now.

The church has long since found that strength does not consist in numbers. In fact there may be such a reliance just here, as to prove a great snare. The lesson of Gideon's band is worthy our study. That preacher who attempts a revival meeting genallly has cause to consider this matter. In usual Sunday services he may have a fair house—a full choir—and to all appearances many Aarons and Hurs, but let him announce, "We will begin revival services in this church tomorrow evening, and I want every one of you to be present to help in the good work." When Monday evening comes, there will be a great thinning out. the brethren and sisters find it exceedingly inconvenient, and the majority of that choir has become very hoarse or wholly unable to sing at all. It is the few who can stand the fire of close conflict with the enemy. God is certainly good, to spare the many for the sake of the few faithful followers. Below we give an extract which refers chiefly to ministers, but whatever consecration and true manhood qualify the ministry are good for the laity also. The Worker says:

"It has been truly said that the great want of the age is men. Men of thought; men of action. Men who are not for sale. Men who are honest to the heart's core. Men who will condemn wrong in friend or foe—in themselves as well as in others. Men whose consciences are as steady as is the needle to the pole. Men who will stand for right, even if the heavens totter and the earth reels. Men who can tell the truth and look the world and the devil right in the eye. Men who neither swagger nor flinch. Men who can have courage without whistling for it, and joy without shouting to bring it. Men through whom the current of everlasting life runs still, and deep and strong. Men who know their message and tell it. Men who know their duty and do it. Men who know their place and fill it. Men who will not lie. Men who are not too lazy to work, nor too proud to be poor. When, in office, in the workshop, in the counting room, in the bank, in every place of trust and responsibility, we can have such men as these, we shall haxe a Christian civilization—the highest and best the world ever saw."

Bozeman.

Bozeman, the county seat of Gallatin county, nestling against the foothills at the eastern extremity of the rich agricultural valley of the Gallatin, is the third largest town in Montana. It is distant from St. Paul by rail 1,055 miles. It is twenty years old, and has 3,000 inhabitants. The streets are broad, and nearly all quite level. The residences are nearly all frame buildings, and in quality they average very high. There is one one-hundred-thousand dollar residence of brick and stone, the costly furnishings and heavy taxes of which are said to be burdensome to the owner. Mr. Story—the only millionaire of the town—owns a large flouring mill, and for many years has had a monopoly of the bread business; he is also interested in one of the two banks of the city.

New, large, elegant brick structures are taking the places of the old, inferior frame buildings on Main street, where all the mercantile business is done. The dry goods emporiums of Willson & Co. and D. D. Smith and the elaborately furnished grocery establishments of Tilton and of Lamme & Co. are perhaps unsurpassed by any retail houses in the west. These, together with drug, fruit, hardware and jewelry stores, butcher shops, laundries, saddleries, etc., furnish as great a variety of cheap, useful and elegant goods as are to be found in most of the larger cities east.

There are said to be fifty Africans (mostly mulattoes) and as many Chinese in town. The latter are engaged in gardening and laundrying. There are half a dozen other nationalities, with almost every Eastern and Middle state represented in our population. Vreeland, Vantassel, Foerschler, Monforten, Basinski are among the strange names of our townsmen difficult of spelling and pronunciation.

A newly organized company, outfitted with expensive machinery, is boring a well in the south suburb, have gone over one hundred feet, prospecting for coal, oil or anything very valuable. It is proposed to put in water works this year. The city has recently purchased a five-thousand-dollar fire engine. The fire department is well equipped. Brick-making is increasing and is doubtless profitable. Some of the principal business houses and one church are lighted with electricity, and the four tall electric lights on Main street may be seen fifteen miles down the valley. In this land of the skies and of so much twilight electricity does not seem so brilliant as it is in the greater darkness of the Middle states.

Bozeman can boast of a splendid court house and efficient court officers; of Temperance and Masonic organizations; of a large library, and of intelligent, affable, enterprising, law-abiding citizens.

EDUCATIONAL.

The graded public school, of 350 pupils, under the prudent supervision of Prof. Harmon and seven or eight excellent lady teachers, is conducted in two large, splendid brick buildings, in different parts of the town. The discipline is firm, the teaching thorough, the curriculum well extended. The Presbyterian Academy, with several endowed scholarships, is well patronized, and, with a new and larger building, which they may soon have, will take front rank in denominational schools in the west. Music is extensively and thoroughly taught by private tutors.

PAPERS.

There are three weekly papers published in the city with good mechanical execution, plenty of news in them, and a living patronage.

CHURCHES.

There are six Protestant churches with as many resident pastors, and the same number of Sunday schools. These churches have 425 members: Presbyterian 125, M. E. church about 100, Campbellite 75, Episcopalian 50, Baptist 53, M. E. Church, South, 25. The Campbellites have a new, comfortable brick church. The Baptist church is a strange, gothic structure, unfinished. The M. E. Church house is a large brick, shows age, but solidity. The Presbyterians have a neat, convenient frame building, costing five or six thousand dollars. The Episcopal church contemplates building a costly church soon. The M. E. Church, South, has a neat little brick church costing $2,700, accessible to a large population, in the eastern part of the city. The Roman Catholics have a small following, a church building but no resident priest. One visits here occasionally.

The Northern Pacific railroad shipped sixty-three and a half million pounds of grain from Bozeman in one year. Forty million pounds of this amount came from this (Gallatin) valley, which is yet only thinly populated, and only about half the acreage cultivated. There are seven or eight hundred square miles in this valley, well watered (some of it does not need irrigation), as rich and productive as any part of the world.

The health of Bozeman is generally good. However, the people die here, as elsewhere. The cemetery is a growing city up on the hill.

J. H. JOHNSON.

Change of Time.

The conferences on the Pacific coast have been appointed by the College of Bishops, as follows:

Los Angeles (San Bernardino), May 22d.

Columbia (Dallas), June 12th.

Pacific (Fresno), June 26th.

R. K. HARGROVE,
Secretary College of Bishops.

Caught on the Fly.

"He ought to pay me for it; I worked all day Sunday to have it ready by to-day," were the words of a lady overheard by your correspondent in a store at Anaconda last Monday morning. She ought to be paid for her work, surely — every laborer should be paid for service rendered. But what put me to thinking was, that the work had been done on Sunday, that the whole day had been spent on the job—and that a woman, perhaps a mother, was the thoughtless author of the Sabbath desecration. If children see their mother thus make the holy Sabbath a common day, may we not expect thom to use it likewise? The mother's impress, for evil or good, is upon the child throughout its entire life. That garment, made it may have been by finger-sore hands, may become the winding sheet of despair to the innocent children who watch their mother convert the hours of sacred Sabbath rest into hours of selfish toil for pecuniary gain. We all need to call a halt along this line, and by example more than precept "remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

Mrs. Applebury's "notes from the seat of war" indicate that Corvallis, the home of the Presiding Elder of the Helena District, "has went wet." Suffer a suggestion: Get a few of Nichols' "The Pump", and pump your section dry. And then get the "Grub-ax" of truth, and dig up every root of error in Campbellism and burn them all in the gospel "Furnace."

"Sam" Jones has recently been preaching in California. He says of Sacramanto, that "the devil has salted it down and gone on other worlds to conquer." He says that "if hell is due west from St. Louis, I suppose you might say Sacramento is 2,000 miles nearer than St. Louis." Before "Sam" came out west he was just like the rest of us—he thought hades was "south."

What legacy richer than the one left a preacher of the Montana Conference: "Tell Edwin to preach the gospel in its purity." This is a fadeless treasure, and will last

"When victors' wreaths and monarchs' gems Shall blend in common dust."

Instead of so much disputation about "sin in the regenerate," would it not be better to try to vlie without sin. A question of theory does not concern us half so much as a question of practice that so vitally affects us for time and eternity. "And this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

Though earth and hell the word gainsay,
The word of God can never fail;
The Lamb shall take my sins away
'Tis certain, though impossible:
The things impossible shall be;
All things are possible to me.

ANACONDA, M. T.

A Prospective Book.

To the Preachers and Members of the M. E. C. S.—Dear Brethren: I contemplated having prepared in the interest of my work a book, to be entitled "The Gospel Among the Slaves." I desire to embody in this volume sketches of the lives of those who were in anywise connected with giving the gospel to the slaves of the South before the war, as well as such incidents, historical points and data as will properly fall under the head designated.

Brethren, especially elderly brethren, who were missionaries to the slaves before the war, who can furnish reminiscences of the character desired—whether personal or otherwise—as well as any other matter of interest, will confer a favor by forwarding same. All such contributions will be duly acknowledged, and given the proper credit in the volume.

I desire particularly points touching upon the work of our church among the slaves before the war; also sketches of some of the more prominent of these slaves themselves, such as Sandy Kendall, in Georgia; Harry Merrick, in North Carolina; Father Castile Selby, in South Carolina, etc., etc.

I have turned the compilation of this work over to Miss Annie Maria Barnes, of Duluth, Ga., now one of the most competent and painstaking of our younger church writers, and whose last work, "The Life of David Livingstone," bids fair to give her a national reputation. Work hitherto done by Miss Barnes affords ample evidence that this commission will be well and faithfully carried out.

Brethren who are able to furnish any of the material desired will please forward same, either to the undersigned at Covington, Ga., or direct to the compiler, Miss Annie Barnes, Duluth, Ga.

Your Brother in Christ,
W. C. DUNLAP.
COVINGTON, Ga., March 12, '89.

Dear, unconverted friend, if you have locked your heart against the messages of God, will you read this extract given by one of our exchanges some time ago: "The man who locks his door against all strangers will never entertain an angel unawares; the man who shuts his mind and heart by entire engrossment in daily toil, by unfaithfulness to duty, by neglect of principle, by any kind of unrighteous action, will never be visited by divine visions of higher things."

Bishop Galloway's Residence.

We are so glad to know when a preacher of the gospel gets a house of his own to live in, that we can't help congratulating him. The following description of Bishop Galloway's new home at Jackson, Miss., we clip from the New Mississippian:

The style of architecture is modern, and the plan is the duplicate of the residence of a friend of the bishop, in Nashville, Tenn.

The site chosen was directly in front of the handsome new Methodist Church, and the residence fronts it, facing eastward. The building is two stories and a half in height, surmounted by a gracefully tapering spire, which reaches to an altitude of 55 feet. The paint is of a dove color, with trimmings of a darker hue, which produce an exceedingly pretty and effective contrast.

The plastered walls of the interior are of snowy whiteness, and the first floor comprises hallways, with library and bedrooms to the left; to the right, parlor and dining room, with bay windows, pantry, kitchen and wash-room. The upper floor, which is reached by central and rear stair-cases, of walnut finish, embraces five bedrooms, with numorous closets and bath-room, which, in common with several other rooms, is provided with both hot and cold water.

The mantels throughout are of native oak or walnut, finished in oil, and those in the hall, parlor, library and dining-room are surmounted by elegant French plate mirrors, the mantel in the last named combining the features of a side-board. The hearths and fire jambs are of tile, of bright and variable colors, while the windows and doors are of native cypress, highly polished.

A rarer combination of beauty of architecture, or substantiality of structure and utility of arrangement, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to find in this state; and almost incredible to believe it was turned over, complete, for the small sum of $6,500.—N. O. Ad.

The Sun of Methodism.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate says: "At the funeral Jabez Bunting, an enthusiastic admirer of the great Wesleyan preacher, dolefully exclaimed, 'When Dr. Bunting died the sun of Methodism set in his grave.' A eccentric old Methodist layman cried out from the 'amen corner:' 'That's a lie, glory to God.' The sun of Methodism is too big and bright to set in any man's grave.—'Glory to God,' it will shine on and on for centuries to come, illuminating and warming the world into widespread fruitfulness. The sun of Methodism is just now in its morning glory. Many ages will pass away before it reaches its noontide glory.—Though Methodism is over a hundred years old and has millions of followers, it is, compared with other denominations a beardless youth. The life of a denomination counts centuries for years. Methodism is only a year and a half old, centennially speaking. If it is true to God a grand future stretches out before it."

A Lesson on Punctuality.

It is related of Napoleon that one time he invited his marshals to lunch with him at twelve o'clock. The time came, but not the marshals. Napoleon at once proceeded to lunch, and had completed the meal before his marshals arrived. He then retired to the drawing room, and when the marshals came, no mention of lunch was made. They had to plan a campaign on an empty stomach. The habit of promptness is a positive virtue. How many of our pastors are annoyed by the tardiness of those who are always late at church or prayer-meeting. How the minister enjoys the reading of the scriptures while a procession of his flock is marching up the centre aisle! How inspiring it is for a good brother to drop in just as the prayer-meeting is about to close and give a long talk to the church about its duties. Of course some will be late from circumstances over which they have no control, and we are not writing of such, but of the good people who have the wretched habit of always being late. Good as they may be, their influence is a great damage to the cause of Christ, and tends to keep souls out of the kingdom of heaven. Think about this and you will see its truth.—Christian Secreatry.

The Need of More Laborers, and How to Obtain Them.

The above is one of the subjects chosen by the Presiding Elder of the Helena district for discussion at the District Conference, which convenes at Butte, March 28th, the day following the present issue of our paper,

Just at this stage of our work in Montana, this question will likely be one of the most interesting on the program arranged for that occasion. It has been in our mind some while to notice this matter editorially. This is no doubt as fit a time as we shall have. We do not know what the brethren will present upon the subject, but we shall look for something good, and it may be possible some views which we will not endorse, also.

What we hold, we write, and let the future take care of itself.

1. There must be qualifications to the clause, "The Need of More Laborers." If there are fields in Montana where no evangelical church is giving the gospel to the people, and the material in such places is composed of people whom the M. E. Church South is best suited to serve, let us go there if possible; but if the people have the gospel by other churches, our view is to "Keep hands off." There are fields in Montana where we have no call, and it is not to the interest of our church, nor to the cause of God in general, to go. Our methods should have no madness. We believe some of our good brethren in the ministry get Macedonian wails from individuals, but we must use more judgment in heeding every such cry. One family, or two, and even three may by no means represent such communities. We had as well learn the lesson to-day as later, that we can't afford to spend the lives of good men and much missionary money in communities where there is no hope of establishing our church to stay. To begin and then die, has the effect of forestalling other churches, bringing denominational friction, and, like Paul, when neither sun nor stars in many days appear, all hope that we should be saved is taken away. We should know just what we are doing when we send men to new fields. People can promise some "mighty" nice things, and then "go back" on them.

2. "How to Obtain Them." That is, how to obtain laborers. This certainly requires more skill than anything in connection with our missionary operations in the West. We are slow to learn lessons from our mistakes just in this matter. Within fifteen years there has been a sufficient number of men sent to Montana in behalf of the M. E. Church South to give the gospel twice every Sabbath to every community in it; at least, we think so. What is the matter? Well, the answer is just this, we are not wise in providing men. How are we to remedy it? It is just as easy as can be. Have we no plan by which to send missionaries to foreign lands? Certainly, Let us adopt some such plan. In supplying our foreign fields every missionary has to pass the favorable judgment of a board, and then the indorsement of one of our Bishops. We cannot afford to be less rigid in supplying this field. There is another feature intimately connected with this—the support of the missionaries. They are not sent to Brazil or China or Mexico on uncertainty. It should be none the less so in the support of men coming to Montana, or elsewhere in the West. The slip-shod methods of the past must be substituted by wiser ones. Some men either fall or are thrown overboard every conference year. It is time to stop such.

3. In the third and last place, let us not only get the right kind of men, in the right way, but let them be sustained when we get them. There are many men who will die by the hand of their enemies for Christ, who are not willing to die by degrees, and in a way reproachful to the church they represent. We may talk very Pauline like, but, after all that, preachers are human beings and they are not adapted to angels' food. We are not compelled to have a preacher in every valley, city, town and village in Montana. It is absolute nonsense to talk and write so. It is, in our humble judgment, better to plant and build solidly in the few places than to occupy every nook and corner, when we are not able. We need more money now worse than we need more men. We have enough ground already occupied to spend $5,000 in place of $3,000; so if the Board in May allows us double the amount we now receive we shall not be able to go to regions beyond. "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn." These are our views, plainly and candidly stated, after a close observation of facts in Montana for three years past.

What Will the Board Do?

This is the question of deepest interest to all our mission fields as they look toward Nashville and anticipate the May meeting of the Board of Missions. The cry for help has been going up from every quarter, and from now till the time above mentioned much anxiety will be felt. Every field should, and doubtless will receive careful consideration. The church has been more responsive to the call for funds than ever, and we trust better things will be done for all. More consideration was given the West last May than at any time previous. What will be the policy of this wise body of men, we know not. It will doubtless wish for dollars, where it has cents to meet the demands made upon it. To have given the West a number of recruits by increased appropriations a year ago, and to withhold now will result in great embarrassment. Not to increase those appropriations, will forbid advance. To stand still is not wise. Brazil cries, Japan cries, China cries, Mexico cries, the West cries. May the Lord help the Board in wisdom to provide. Every member of the church should realize that the Board cannot go beyond what the church has given for this cause. The Board is not a manufactory. It cannot coin and send out at will. Perhaps every Conference receiving help will try to have a representative to plead its cause. If some poor weakling can't afford representation, it may think itself slighted when the appropriations are published. We are willing to abide the result when the facts govern. We therefore wait patiently and pray God's blessing upon this all-important cause.

Here and There.

From a correspondent in the Richmond Christian Advocate we read concerning Norfolk and Portsmouth, Va., that "interesting and extensive revivals have blessed the churches." "At the Preachers' Meeting, on a recent Monday morning, more than one hundred additions were reported for the day before." At one of the churches one hundred and fifty members had been received since the annual Conference.

We see in the reports from the Presiding Elder of Ashley District, in the Illinois Conference, that gracious revivals in nearly every charge had brought a large increase of membership.

The old mother church at Nashville, Tenn., and all the offspring have been engaged in revival work, with success.

It has been a most fruitful season throughout our western work. So, we might say, from all parts of our beloved Zion, the glad tidings of new-born souls come up. There have been vigorous efforts by every preacher in the Montana Conference. The good old days are come again, and better times await us. Thank God! To Him all praise! From its beginning, Methodism has never been dead, is not now, and what is better, will not be as long as God has need for her to live. Let us go forward from victory to victory, for the Lord of hosts is with us.

Pounding Preachers.

As to whether this is just the thing that some people think, it depends. For one, we are not so much taken with this prevailing custom as many who write and talk about it. Where the Church has paid the salary of the preacher, and then the members for the sake of spending a pleasant evening with each other at the home of the pastor, and to demonstrate their unqualified concern for his temporal comfort as well as social, we say pound the preacher all you wish. The more the better. But, on the other hand, if you are away behind on the pastor's salary and take this method to scare the wolf, we hold that pounding is not without some faults. We dare the assertion, that some of the parties, members of the church, take advantage in pounding, put in a mite of which they would be ashamed if the pastor should find it out, and never pay a cash cent. If this is done from lack of ability it is well and indeed commendable, but if to evade the regular monthly or quarterly payment of money the pounding is a farce. The church that indulges in it, but does not pay the preacher his salary, when able to do so, needs pounding itself with strong gospel blows. Brother if you have paid your monthly dues, you may pound ad libitum. We would not be misunderstood by any brother or sister, and hence add, if the preacher is in absolute need, and you cannot pay the cash yourself, nor secure from others, this being the only way to render help, of course we say pound away. Pounding should not substitute the regular salary. The church gets the credit for it as extra, and it should be extra to the preacher as well, otherwise he might suffer and you would not know it. You might carry something to a preacher's house perfectly useless to him and his family. He might want knick-knacks on the order of the child that cried for such till he got his special favorite—"gravy and 'lasses mixed."

Motives for Giving.

This item occurs in the Montana Christian Advocate of March 6th: "The brethren will remember that all sums of 50 cents and upwards given for the support of missions are to be reported to the conferand the names of the donors printed in the minutes."

Why report the amounts and names we ask. Though Brother Raleigh may be able give some good reasons why this should be done, it seems to us to be in antogonism at least to the spirit of Christ's words: "Take heed that ye do not your alms before men to be seen of them. Therefore, when thou doest thine alms do not sound a trumpet before thee as the hypocrites do." Is not the main reason for the publication of names of donors and the amounts they give to induce them to give largely that their names may appear well up in the published minutes? That seems to me to be a very unfair method of proceedure anyway even if it did not break the commandment, for the man who is able to give only a mite, though it be all his living, must have his name put alongside the man's who gives a large sum, though of his abundance, the public not knowing the condition of either, praise the rich man for his magnificent gift while the poor man may be condemned for his stinginess. Though he has really in the sight of God, made the most acceptable gift. Then I am sure it would be doing violence to the modesty of a true Christian to have his name thus published abroad, for though he may have given much he feels that it does not merit such notoriety.

Suppose again, that a man is reputed to be wealthy and because of certain circumstances can only give a small sum to missions. There is his name and there the amount he has given published to the world. So they say, "that man is very stingy. He is able to give $100 and he has only given $10. It is our judgment that this plan is a bad one.

H. B. Cockrill.

The bishops have arranged to to hold the annual conferences on the Pacific coast in May and June. This does not include the Montana and Denver Conferences. The brethren will have to bestir themselves to meet the change.

Helena District Notes.

The time for holding quarterly meeting on Helena Circuit, found Brother Clark still away pressing the battle in the Flathead country. But the meeting could not be postponed. After visiting with Bro. Britt for a few days in Helena and assisting in the prayer meeting on Wednesday night, Thursday found me at Alhambra, sixteen miles southward in the midst of a snowstorm. "We are so glad you have come," remarked two of the "elect ladies" of the place, "for this is prayer meeting night, and we have to lead it when there is no minister present. We'll have you to preach for us, Oh, that will be so nice." It was no use to refuse. A goodly number of young people came through the storm and listened attentively to the preached word. An appointment was made for the next night, and the meeting continued over Sunday. We had a profitable sacramental service on Sunday. The house was crowded on Sunday night, and there seemed to be great seriousness in the congregation. There were a number of young men present who were employed on the railroad who manifested quite an interest in the services. A number of families were visited, old acquaintances revived and new ones formed, and altogether my stay was very pleasant indeed. The Sunday school and the weekly prayer meeting under the leadership of Miss Eva Williams and Sister Lyons are doing a good work. I greatly enjoyed the hospitably of Mr. Redding and family and Brother Lyons and family. These preachers' homes scattered here and there throughout our country will not soon be forgotten by those who are endeavoring to advance the redeemer's kingdom in Montana.

On board the Montana Central train en route to Butte next day I had the pleasure of meeting Col. McCutcheon and Col. W. F. Sanders. After rehearsing various incidents in connection with our trip to the National Park in 1873, and other incidents and anecdotes, I finally got Col. Sanders engaged in his experience in prosecuting the Road Agents in '63 and '64. It was a most graphic account that he gave. The entire company were delighted and thrilled at his recital of those daring deeds enacted in establishing law and order and opening the way for the prosperity and civilization that we enjoy in Montana to-day.

A few hours were spent with Brother Couey talking about the work and making some very pleasant visits, after which I took an evening train and arrived at the parsonage at Anaconda, just after the preacher and family had retired for the night. It seems cruel to wake a preacher and family out of a sound sleep, but it is sometimes necessary when lodging places are scarce and when the sum of one dollar is charged, as in Anaconda, for a couch on which to repose your weary limbs for a few short hours.

Two nights and a day and a half spent with Brother Barbee talking about the work and visiting the people, another run of one hundred and twenty miles, partly in the night, and I am at the Rodgers House, the popular hotel in Missoula, waiting impatiently for the nine o'clock a. m. train on the M. & B. R. road, to take me to Corvallis. Change of time in starting caused me to get left, which was a bitter disappointment. But making the most of matters in hand, I commenced canvassing and secured several new subscribers and made some collections for the Methodist. The next day my wife and baby met me at the depot opposite Corvallis, which was the third trip they had made. Something was said about "the third time being the charm," and I hardly know the result if I had not arrived that day. It seemed strange, after leaving the ground covered with snow at Alhambra and Boulder to find it dry and dusty here, and to learn that the weather had been perfectly beautiful on this side of the mountains ever since I had been gone.

Quarterly meeting was held at Corvallis on the following Saturday and Sunday, with congregations as good as could be expected. Brother Flowers is still hopeful of building a church at one point on his charge, and otherwise increasing the interest on his work. The people must awake to the importance of doing something for the support of their preacher, or surely the candlestick will be removed from them.

The following Friday night the quarterly meeting for Stevensville circuit commenced at Victor with a talk by the P. E. on the Christian's Triumph.

On Saturday, at 11 o'clock a. m. we had a delightful service which was followed by one of the most interesting quarterly conferences that I have attended for many a day. There were ten persons present that took part, besides a number of visitors. It was like the olden times. A committee was appointed to examine the Church Register and Church Conference Records, which were reported all correctly kept. A long list of names were reported as having been added to the Church. The work is evidently looking up in this charge. I was sorry to see the finances somewhat in arrears. Hope the stewards and brethren will bestir themselves during the next quarter. Brother Parnall shows the result of the winter campaign, though he is still pressing the battle with all his might.

It was a great pleasure to have a few days, though only a few, to spend at home. "A little rest," you say, no, there is no rest for presiding elders. The few days off regular duty is spent in devising "ways and means," and preparing for another "round."

Thursday, the 14th inst., at 2:30 p. m., found me at the siding just west of Corvallis, to which place Mrs. S. and baby had accompanied me. The train had to stop at so many mills to get lumber that we did not arrive at Missoula till after six o'clock. The lumber business seems to be reviving, much to the joy of our mill men. It is amazing to see the immense stacks of lumber along the railroad track. At one place there are several acres covered with saw-logs piled up from four to eight feet deep, waiting for a sawmill to "set" there and saw them into lumber. How rapidly our once lovely forests are disappearing! Most of those who have timber claims have sold their timber to the mill men, who agree to take it away by a certain time. The timber on 160 acres of land brings from $500 to $1,000, and sometimes even more. There is strong talk of the railroad being extended twenty-five miles farther up the valley this summer. Its present terminus is fifty miles from Missoula.

Left Missoula at 7 a. m. and landed at Helena at noon. Walked to Bro. Collet's, where, to my surprise, I found Bro. Cockrill, of Townsend circuit, who had been "left" by a train that morning. Was pained to find Bro. Britt sick in bed, which had caused the discontinuance of a promising meeting in his church. After a few hours was off for Boulder, where I arrived at 7 p.m. and was pleasantly entertained at the home of Bro. and Sister Morris. They are all staunch Tennessee Southern Methodists, and their home is the usual headquarters for our preachers in Boulder.

Intense excitement prevailed in town, caused by the trial of a murder case in the court, which was in session. The man was convicted and sentenced to be hung, and also another man was convicted for horse-stealing and sentenced for ten years. Both sentences were considered just. Thank the Lord that we live in a land where the authority of the law is maintained.

Next day at 2 o'clock p. m. Bro. Finley and I were off on the stage for Elkhorn, where the quarterly meeting was to be held. Arrived at six, took supper with Brother and Sister Dunlap at the "preachers' home," and preached to a small congregation at 7:30 p. . We had a small attendance the next day at 11 o'clock, but a pleasant service, and at night the commodious school house was crowded with people, who gave their undivided attention to the preached word, and showed their appreciation by a liberal contribution at the close.

Elkhorn is a prosperous and promising mining town of several hundred people. The people are intelligent, orderly and enterprising, turn out well to church, and expressed a willingness to do their part in taking care of their minister, though they are not able to provide for more than one at present. Arrangements were made for starting a Sunday school, with our excellent Bro. John Andrews as superintendent. Great success to the enterprise.

We returned to Boulder on Monday and held the quarterly conference after preaching at night. Bro. Finley reported good congregations, a prosperous Sunday school at Boulder under the superintendency of Bro. Currin and a number of persons received into the church during the last quarter. The brethren are somewhat behind with the pastor's support. Hope they will bestir themselves and bring up arrears before conference. I wish that every charge in the district would make an earnest effort to come up to the annual conference with the assessments paid in full.

The friends are preparing to give the church at Boulder a general overhauling in the way of a new roof, repainting, papering, etc., and have over one hundred dollars already collected for the purpose. Our house has been used by all denominations, when it was the only church there, and I hope the people generally will assist in this good work.

We were greatly shocked on our return from Elkhorn on learning of the sad misfortune that had happened to two of our boy friends--Adams Morris and Walter Eastridge. Finding a little rusty box in the back yard, and not knowing what it was, Adams proceeded to open it by a blow with a hatchet. It proved to be a box of giant powder caps such as are used in blasting, and it exploded, breaking the hatchet into three pieces, and blowing the two boys in opposite directions, leaving them mangled and bleeding and unconscious. It was thought at first that both were killed, but when I left there were strong hopes that both would recover. Our young Brother Adams, however, who is a good Christian boy, had a narrow escape. His face was literally filled with the debris. He bore his sufferings with Christian fortitude. The afflicted parents have our heartfelt sympathy in this sore affliction.

Next day I was off for Helena, where I was met by Bro. Clark and conveyed in a buggy to his hospitable home in Prickly Pear valley. What a pleasure to meet with Sister Clark and the boys once more. How many changes have taken place since we were all together. What memories were called up as we talked and sang and prayed together.

Bro. Clark was engaged in a meeting at Hardgrove's school house. I preached for him two nights, and the spirit of the Lord was with us. At least two young persons promised to seek the Lord. The quarterly conference was held at the house of Brother William Hardgrove.

Bro. Clark expects to come up with all his collections. He is still enthusiastic and hopeful about the college enterprise. The meeting continued with good indications.

Returning to Helena, where I heard good reports of the meeting in progress there, I took the 5:10 p. m. train on the Montana Central and landed at our church in Butte City about 9 p. m., just as the congregation was dispersing.

Next day was off for Anaconda, where the quarterly meeting commenced with a refreshing service in our church on Friday night, after which I entered into a certain man's house (the parsonage) named Barbee, "one that worshiped God, whose house joins hard to the synagogue." and where these lines were hastily written. E. J. S.

The Rev. Dr. Dowling, the Baptist minister who follows the example of Spurgeon rather than the practice of the less liberal American Baptists, puts the matter of pulpit courtesy in exactly the right light when he says, as he did recently, "The man that can preach in my pulpit can commune in my pews." Years ago we reached the same position by another path: We will not preach in the pulpit where we are not permitted to join in the communion. It is the only honorable rule.—Wesleyan Advocnte.

For Sickly Preachers.

I want to tell about a discovery I made in the depths of winter in the country, when it was impossible to walk or ride, or get regular exercise. One week the man who sawed and split wood for me was ill, and I had to saw my own wood. I tried it for a week, and it seemed hard work. Then the second week it seemed easier. The third week I felt as fine as a fiddler. The fourth week I discharged my man, and took his wages for my charity fund. So I used to stand in front of my woodpile in the cellar and say: "Oh, my blessed woodpile! What good you have done me!"

Then I felt like declining it, though not like declining its work, after the fashion of a Latin noun.

Nominative—Woodpile.
Genitive--Of a woodpile.
Dative—To or for a woodpile.
Accusative--Woodpile.
Vocative—O Woodpile.
Ablative--With, from, in or by woodpile.

Now I have got to the plural number, and can say:

Nominative—Woodpiles.
Genitive—Of woodpiles.
Dative—To or for woodpiles.
Accusative—Woodpiles.
Vocative—O woodpiles.
Ablative—With, from, in or by woodpiles.

Let me suggest this practical declension of the noun "woodpile." Get your exercise in the ablative case of this noun, "with, from, in or by a woodpile." Let the hired man go. Put your muscle upon a cord of wood. Earn your own spending money. Keep some of it for a charity bank account, and don't complain that you cannot get exercise when all the while down in the cellar, waiting to form your acquaintance, is the "blessed woodpile."—Rev. W. W. Newton, in Illustrated Christian Weekly.

On one occasion a minister found it necessary to punish his little daughter; but Mary climbed into his lap, and, throwing her arms around his neck, said, "Papa, I do love you." Why do you love me?" the father asked. "Because you try to make me good, papa." It is in this spirit that God's people should accept the chastisements He sends, remembering it is in love He rebukes and chastens—not for His pleasure, but for their profit, that they may be partakers of His holiness.—Rich. Ad.

Notes.

It is stated that during twenty-one years there have been one hundred and thirty-five divorces in the Dominion of Canada, while in the United States for the same time three hundred and seventy-five thousand marriages have been set aside. If this be true, no wonder comparison sometimes becomes odious.

A good brother in a note says, "Your editorial on 'Supplying Montana with more laborers has met with some criticism.'' We are glad to have this suggestion, and hope our brethren will be free to express their sentiments on this important subject through the columns of the MONTANA METHODIST. Let us hear from you, brethren. Editors are not infallible, remember.

We hope the secretary of the annual conference will furnish the paper with the names of the brethren on our various Conference committees and boards, viz: Board of Missions, Board of Church Extension, Board of Education, Board of Finance, Committees of Examination in the classes of all years among the undergraduates, &c.

Fielding Marvin, the only son of the late Bishop Marvin, so well and favorably known in Montana, has been recently licensed to preach the gospel. He was by profession a lawyer.

Bishop Keener says these are the signs of a church's spirituality: Attendance upon preaching and the social meetings of the church; home religion, such as reading the Scriptures and family worship; reading religious literature and giving to the Lord's cause, constitute the principal evidences of a church's spirituality. Where these are all well attended to the growth of a church in holy things becomes an assured fact.

Dr. Joseph Parker says: Thank God for the great Methodist pulpit! When I am worn.out and helpless, I take down a volume of the lives of early Methodist preachers, and I am soon inspirited and encouraged. When Methodism loses its evangelical unction, it will sink into the decrepitude and heartlessness of a ghastly respectability.

The first prayer meeting in the Butte charge, after the close of the recent District Conference, was an inspiring occasion. The attendence was good, the songs, prayers, and talks by the members were spiritual. There were seekers of religion present who declared their determination to live a better life. The prospects are good for the revival fires to continue burning. Let the brethren pray for the good work to go on.

The revival meeting in Helena lasted nearly four weeks. The four additions to the church indicate but a small part of the good accomplished. The church was revived and encouraged, and it seems to us the revival caught in places all over the city.

Bro. J. A. Barber, a young preacher of the Adventist church, lately come from Massachusetts, gave us most efficient help during the meeting. He found our church so congenial that he united with us by letter. He accepts our doctrines and dicipline and is making a very active worker in the church.

We are glad to learn by the report of the Treasurer, that $1,142.50 have been paid on the Superannuated Preacher's Fund, of the Montana Conference. In the absence of action by the executive committee of this Association the Treasurer holds the funds at 6 per cent. interest.

Presiding Elder Stanley did not lose his equilibrium at any time during his presidency in the District Conference. In the spirit of the master he possessed his soul in patience. The preachers all have reason to love him greatly.

An old Methodist, who had heard much good preaching in his day, said of the preaching by our brethern at the recent District Conference, at Butte, that it was of a very high standard. With him we fully agree. Such will win souls to Christ.

The Eeitor has received a short article on Sanctification, post marked, Deer Lodge, but the writer signs no name. Let us hear from you kind friend, as it is our custom to require the name of our contributors before publishing.

Some Exchanges.

We enjoy our exchanges very much, though we are sometimes so surfeited with the good things they contain that we wish we might not see one for a month. How they interest us in all the fields of work from which they come. A good man must have an interest in every good work he is acquainted with. If we could get our people to read our papers as they ought, and acquaint themselves with the work of the church, their interest would be increased and as a consequence they would increase their efforts and double their contributions.

The Nashville Christian Advocate, with its twenty pages, is like a table loaded with good things each week. Its able editorials and suggestive notes have a deserved reputation through the church. Its various departments, "The Methodist Press," "The Christian Life," "Some Natural History," etc, gather the best things from a wide field. It ought to have the 50,000 circulation at once.

The St. Louis Advocate holds its own. More than this would be hard to say. With such editors, such a business manager and a corps of the ablest correspondents in the country it is hard to beat. Being a very oracle to so many, we particularly rejoice at the high spiritual tone of its editorials.

The Southwestern Methodist, flourishes in its new home in Kansas City. In mechanism it is the most attractive paper in the church. You can't keep from reading it, and you are not disappointed in its matter. It says right things in the right way.

Our Brother In Red, is the unique name of the paper published at Muskogee, Indian Territory, in the interest of our mission among the Indians. It is a foreign missionary in our home land and does good work. It has lately gone to house-keeping in its own printing office and comes out in a new dress.

The Rocky Mountain Methodist, comes every two weeks from Pueblo, Col., like a letter from home. We do not lose our interest in that field. Editor Keeton, like those of this paper, labors under the disadvantage of having a pastoral charge on top of his editorial work. With all that he makes a good paper.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate comes from Chicago and is an able paper. The editor is up with the times on most topics. But on one he it sadly behind. He seems not yet to have heard that the war is over. The unkind and unjust things he says about the Southern people show both a lack of knowledge and a lack of charity.

The River Press, published at Fort Benton, is one of our much appreciated secular exchanges. It is a good newspaper. Its moral tone is above the average. We were glad to read in it this morning an editorial condemning that lottery scheme called the Montana Investment Company. But on turning to another page we saw an advertisement of the Louisiana State Lottery. Consistency is indeed a jewell. Perhaps the editorial and business managements are two different things with the River Press.

Of our many other worthy exchanges we must defer speaking till another time.

Prof. Jameson Becomes a Preacher.

Mr. Editor: I have just received a letter from Dr. J. Ditzler, in which he says, "Did you know that the infidel I debated with in Butte, has renounced his infidelity since and become a preacher? It is really so, I told him he would become a preacher yet.'"

The Butte debate was the second that Dr. Ditzler had held with Prof. Jameson. The first, if I am not mistaken, was held in Kirksville, Mo., several years ago. It is highly probable that these discussions helped this learded "Freethinker" to light and enabled him to so freely, liberally and broadly think upon the subject of Christianity as to receive it and to rely on Christ as his only hope of salvation, and to fully realize the great fact that "All other ground is sinking sand." The procuring cause of infidelity is Satan. The moving cause is sin and unbelief. "They love darkness rather than light." The end of it is the second death in Gehenna. The only cure of infidelity is to freely receive and take the prescription of the "Great Physician" as laid down in the Gospel. "It is the power of God unto Salvation to every one that believeth."

Conscience And Future Judgement.

BY CHARLES W. STUBBS.

I sat alone with my conscience.
In a place where time had ceased,
And we talked of our former living
In the land where the years increased.

And I felt I should have to answer
The qvestion it put to me,
And to face the answer and question
Throughout an eternity.

The ghosts of forgotten actions
Came floating before my sight,
And things which I thought were dead things
Were alive with a terrible might.

And the vision of all my past life
Was an awful thing to face—
Alone with my conscience sitting
In that solemnly silent place.

And I thought of a far away warning,
Of a sorrow that was to be mine,
In a land that then was the future,
But now was the present time.

And I thought of my former thinking,
Of the judgement day to be;
But sitting alone with my conscience
Seemed judgement enough for me.

And I wondered if there was a future
To this land beyond the grave;
But no one gave me an answer,
And no one came to save.

Then I felt that the future was present,
And the present would never go by,
For it was but the thought of my past life
Grown into eternity.

Then I awoke from my timely dreaming,
And the vission passed away,
And I knew that the far away warning
Was a warning of yesterday.

And I pray that I may not forget it,
In this land before the grave,
That I may not cry in the future,
And no one come to save.

And so I had learned a lesson
Which I ought to have learned before,
And which, though I learnsd it dreaming,
I hope to forget no more.

So I sit alone with my conscience,
In the place where the years increase,
And I try to remember the future
In the land where time will cease.

And I know of the future judgement,
So dreadful so e'er it be,
That to sit alone with my conscience
Will be judgement enough for me.

The Helena District Conference.

The seventh session ot the Helena District Conference of the M. E. Church, South, which met at Butte, Mont., March 28th 1889, under the presidency of Rev. E. J. Stanley, P. E., will long be remembered and commented on with kindly affections by those who were present and took part in the same.

Not only was it the first time that some of us had seen each other in the flesh and on that account to be remembered, but the perfect harmony that prevailed. The unanimity of spirit that characterized the assembly and the deep religious feeling that was manifest increasingly at each of the public services and culminated in a genuine penticostal shower at the lovefeast, preaching and sacramental services on Sunday morning when all hearts were touched, melted, renewed and strengthened under the divine spirit, rendered the occasion one not soon to be forgotten. We all felt like saying with the departing John Wesley, "The best of all is, God is with us."

The opening sermon was preached by the writer, on Wednesday night, to a good and attentive audience.

On Thursday morning the Conference was tormally called to order by the Presiding Elder, after a most impresive introductory religious service.

J. B. Parnall was elected Secretary. All the traveling preachers of the district were present during the session, also three visiting brethern from the Bozeman district, Revs. J. H. Johnson, W. T. Goulder and H. B. Cockrill. The laymen with the exception of two or three local brethren were conspicuous for their absence. We were disappointed also in not meeting on the occassion our esteemed and valuable brother Rev. L. B. Stateler, the P. E. of the Bozeman District, who, on account of his wife's sickness, was detained at home. A resolution of sympathy with Sister Stateler in her afflictions was unanimously passed by the Conference.

The reports from the different charges show an advanced movement all along the line. All have been blessed to a greater or less degree with revival influences, and over seventy persons, (if our account be correct), have united with the church during the present conference year, with "more to follow."

A new brick church at Deer Lodge, costing nearly $3,000; a new parsonage at Butte; improvements to the church property at Helena and Boulder to the extent several hundred dollars, show some of the material advancements that have recently been made. Other items of similar import might be mentioned. Rev. R. S. Clark, the College agent appointed at the last Annual Conference, reported the outlook for a high-class school at Alhambra exceedingly favorable.

Financial affairs seemed to be somewhat in arrears although most of the brethren are receiving a fair support from their respective charges, and they are hopeful of bringing up their conference collections in full by the end of the year.

Where denominational Sunday Schools exist they seem to prosper, but some of the Sunday School work done in some of the rural districts is "union" and consequently of a less satisfactory and stable character.

The papers read at the Conference were of a high order, showing ability and familiarity with the subjects treated of by their respective writers, and the lively discussions that followed, whilst showing diversity of opinions on non-essentials, at the same time manifested the oneness of purpose and heart of all to preach and maintain a pure gospel in these "ends of the earth."

The following preachers occupied the pulpit on various occasions during the conference: Revs. W. M. Britt, J. Moore, J. H. Johnson, T. W. Flowers, H. B. Cockrill and R. S. Clark.

The hospitality extended to the Conference was most hearty and liberal, the pastor Rev. A. C. Couey, and his members vieing with each other in endeavor to make our visit a pleasant and enjoyable one—in which they succeeded admirably. To your correspondent the social intercourse of the occasion was most interesting; as being entertained at the hospitable home of Brother and Sister Benj. Mitchels, formerly of Tanistock, England, it afforded me an opportunity of becoming acquainted with a wide circle of their friends, fellow-Cornishmen with myself, some from within a few miles of the old homestead on which I was born and reared. After an absence of nearly seven years to converse with them on the "old country" topics revived as you may suppose many pleasant memories.

The following layman were elected as delegates to the ensuing Annual Conference to be held at Stevensville: H. B. Bell, A. G. Clarke, J. W. Kemper and J. S. Robertson. Alternates: J. B. Taylor, H. W. Currin, I. Patty and J. L. Morris.

Boulder was the place selected for holding the next Disttrict Conference. JAS. B. PARNALL.

APRIL'S NATIONAL CENTENNIAL.

A Proclamation by the President of the Inaugural of Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The following proclamation was issued this afternoon:

By the President of the United States of America: One hundred years have passed since the government which our forefathers founded was formally organized. At noon on the 30th day of April, 1779, in the city of New York, and in the presence of an assemblage of heroic men, whose patriotic devotion had led the colonies to victory and independence, George Washington took the oath of office as chief magistrate of the new-born republic. This impressive act was preceded at 9 o'clock in the morning in all the churches in the city by prayer for God's blessing on the government and its first president.

The centennial of the illustrious event in our history has been declared a holidayby an act of congress, to the end that the people of the whole country may join in commemorative exercises appropriate to the day, in order that the joy of the day may be associated with a deep thankfulness in the minds of the people for all our blessings in the past and devout supplication to God for their gracious continuance in the future.

Representatives of religious creeds, both Christian and Hebrew, have memoralized the government to designate an hour for prayer and thanksgiving on that day. Now therefore I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States of America, in response to this pious and reasonable request, do recommend that Tuesday, April 30th, at the hour of 9 o'clock in the morning, the people of the entire country repair to their respective places of divine worship to implore the favor of God that the blessings of liberty, prosperity and peace may abide with us as a people, and that his hand may lead us in the paths of righteousness and good deeds.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my name and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed. Done in the year of our Lord, 1889, and of the independence of the states, the 113th.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.
President.
JAMES G. BLAINE,
Secretary of State.

Died.

At Boulder, Montana, March 27th, 1889, Clyde Ray Banta, the eighteen months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Banta, of Boulder, baptised by me on the morning of the above date, and buried by Rev. H. W. Currin, on the 28th. The parents who mourn their darling's loss, have our warmest sympathy. We say, weep not dear friends, the same Christ who said "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not." has taken little Clyde.

At Corbin, Mont., March 27th, 1889, Charlie Heiber, son of Wm. J., and Ida Heiber, died after a brief illness of scarlet rash. Charlie was born at Corbin, December 13, 1885. He lived just three years, three months and twelve days. The dear little boy was the pet of all who knew him, and he was very much loved. God bless the bereaved parents.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

Joe's Way.

The boys were waiting in the road
For Joe to come and play;
"We'd like to know what keeps you so,"
Impatiently cried they.
"We've waited nearly half an hour;
Do hurry, Joe," they cried.
"I'll be there—when my work is done;
Not till then," he replied.

"Come on, come on; the work can wait,"
They urged, till "by and by."
"It might, of course, but I don't think
It will," was his reply.
"When I've a task to do, I like
To do it right away;
Work first, my father says, then fun;
And what he says, I say."

Hurrah for Joe! Such talk as that
Is what I like to hear;
But many boys will not agree
With Joe and me, I fear.
Play first, and last, and all the time,
Would suit most boys, I know;
But that, I'm very glad to say,
Is not the way with Joe.

When you've a task to do, my boys;
Don't put it off, and say
You'll do it when you've had your fun,
But do it right away.
This "putting off" soon forms, my lads,
A habit to deplore;
Who promptly does his work enjoys
His pleasure all the more!

Chinese Children.

Most of the little folks get no benefit from going to school. When they go they scarcely learn anything that is useful, and they get but little mental discipline. everything is committed to memory and the child is not taught to think. When in school all study aloud, and when a boy or girl has the lesson he goes up alone, and turning his back to the teacher, begins to repeat his lessson. All the time he is swinging from one foot to the other, keeping both arms going all the time and singing his lesson at the top of his voice. Thus they learn and recite whole books, and will often not miss a word. But there is no history or arithmetic, or anything of that kind taught. It is all some lessons about the duties children owe their parents, and some rules of politeness. Much of this even is very foolish, and of no value to any body. But in Christian schools that have been established, and in the Sunday Schools, the children are taught the great truths of the Bible, as well as many other useful things. I have heard boys and girls in some of these schools repeat Scripture and recite geography and other useful studies in a way that would do credit to the schools at home. They seem to take great pride and pleasure in this, and are anxious to have the privilege of good schools.

But it is particularly sad to see how ignorant these people are in regard to religious things. They have "lords many and gods many," but have no idea of the one true God. They worship the dragon, believing him to be god of the rivers and water generally. A few years ago, near a large city, a small snake was found. At once they said it was the dragon. So they put it on a velvet cloth and carried it all over the city. Then they started to take it to Pekin, the capital of the country. But the poor little fellow starved to death, and they buried him with great honors, and built a monument over him.—Juvenile Missionary Magazine.

A Word to the Boys.

If we are to have drunkards in the future, some of them are to come from the boys to whom I am writing; and I ask you again if you want to be one of them. No! of course you don't.

Well, I have a plan for you that is just as sure to save you from such a fate as the sun is to rise tomorrow morning. It never failed; it never will fail; and I think it worth knowing: Never touch liquor in any form.

That is the plan and is not only worth knowing but worth putting in practice.

I know you don't drink now and it seems to you as if you never would. But your temptation will come, and it probably will come in this way: You will find yourself, sometime, with a number of companions, and they will have a bottle of wine on the table. They will drink, and offer it to you. They will regard it as a manly practice, and very likely they will look upon you as a milksop if you don't indulge with them. Then what will you do? Eh, what will you do? Will you say, "No, no! none of that stuff for me! I know a trick worth half a dozen of that!" Or will you take the glass, with your own common sense protesting and your conscience making the whole draught bitter, and a feeling that you have damaged yourself, and then go on with a hot head and a skulking soul that at once begins to make apologies for itself, and will keep doing so during all its life? Boys, don't become drunkards.—Dr. Holland.

True Economy.

We have yet to hear of the first actual sufferer who has habitually, liberally and systematically devised of his means to the cause of God. It is a dreary thought that the means of support in time of old age are safer in a bank of deposit than if loaned on the promise of God, and yet men repeat, and will to the end of time, the sad mistake. —Central Protestant.

There could hardly be a greater mistake than that of supposing that a Christian gains influence over those who are not Christians by laxity rather than hy strictness in any matter of questionable or debatable propriety. The world's standard for Christians is higher than Christians' standard for Christians.—Sunday-School Times.

The Church That Will Succeed in the West

Is the church whose ministry reaches the hearts of the people. If men wish stage-play performances they go to the theater. If they simply desire to hear an essay or discourse on some merely moral, philosophical or literary question they wait for a coming lecturer restricted to such subjects. When they go to church, as a rule, they are disappointed if they find nothing for the soul.

Many preachers have unnecessary concern as to how to reach the crowds, or to get and hold congregations. When they have foolishly tried many questionable clap-trap plans, they by and by learn that the pure, unadulterated gospel, from hearts that burn with the indwelling of the Holy Ghost, is the most effectual.

Methodism has the church polity best suited to supply the masses with the word. Since coming to Montana we have witnessed in Butte City, the uncertain incumbency in the pulpits where the people call the preacher. In most of the churches of this polity, during our less than three years' pastorate, there have been from three to five changes.

He who preaches to the people in the west with real success has to be known in his personal character. The counterfeit is soon detected. Ungodly men prefer gospel preaching by godly men. The Star may come, raise a sensation, stay for a time, but his days are soon numbered and he retires in defeat.

If the Methodist Church holds to the good old ways, and keeps true, consecrated men, "men who neither swagger nor flinch;" men of character; men of unction; men of power with God to feed the crowds with the bread of life, she is the church that is to predominate among the heroic sons and daughters of the west. The revival church after all, is the church that will succeed. She will draw the masses, hold the masses, save the masses.

The Way in Part, Perhaps.

Below we give an extract from the Holston Methodist as the modus operandi of the two leading bodies of Methodism. We do not know precisely what is meant by the expression, "where circumstances are reversed."

We do not attempt to say what theory of adjustment is best in so grave a matter, but we do say that a plan which might now work well in the north and south proper, cannot meet the case in the west, where neither church can claim precedence. The subject is worthy consideration. We thank God that the friction is not so great that He is not blessing both churches in the furtherance of his kingdom. We find that there is much depending upon the preachers representing the two churches. Where they harmonize, their constituents do more or less, and vice versa. Read the following:

"When intelligent northern Methodists come south they find the M. E. Church an exotic, with its roots barely beneath the surface of the soil. They find, as a rule, that it is leading a forlorn hope, and that the people are not in sympathy with it, or its purposes and methods. That it is trying to engraft on the minds of the people, for conscience' sake some impracticable ideas on sociology that are repugnant to ninety-nine out of every hundred of the population. On the other hand, they find the M. E. Church, South, securely planted and sending its roots deeply into the soil. Th y find that its doctrines and government are just as good as those of the M. E. Church. That its preachers aud members are just as pious and consecrated and its ministers fully as able. Instead of the "dominating and domineering spirit," which is born of the imagination of pious cranks, they find the Southern Methodists gentle, courteous and kind. They go to church and hear the gospel preached in its simplicity, purity and power, and the Wesleyan hymns sung with the spirit and the understanding. They find that neither preachers nor people make a particle difference between one born and brought up in the north and the native southerner. No wonder they join the southern church. They do right. Northern Methodists coming south ought to join the M. E. Church, South, and southern Methodists going north, where circumstances are reveresd, ought to join the M. E. Church. So it will be done more and more as the years go by."

Notes and Personals.

The young preacher who kept his conscience, lived his religion in the presence of the family with whom he stopped, left an impression for God, and for himself as profound as the gospel itself, for indeed, it was the gospel incarnate.

A brother preacher writes us a card of sympathy in the extra work entailed upon two pastors in getting up the Conference paper and says: "I feel sure the church in Montana appreciates your services, and I know you are accomplishing much good by it. So go ahead and we will try to 'scotch' for you on the outside. We will appreciate the 'scotching.'"

Rev. J. H. Johnson knows how to sell good books, and preach good gospel sermons at a District Conference. He has greatly accommodated the pastor at Butte in ordering a supply of the new Hymn Books.

College building, college endowment and college education, each has a large place at present in the hearts of our people in the south.

Bishop Galloway will preach the Baccalunreate sermon for Vanderbilt University June 16th.

A resolution was passed at the Helena Disfrict Conference the purport of which was to secure the services of Sam P. Jones in Helena, Butte and other places in Montana in the spring.

A presiding elder in the Columbia conference reports a net increase of 20 per cent. in all the charges except two since the Annual Conference.

A district school has been started by our church at Weston, Oregon.

Rev. Jno. Moore is holding revival services in his church at Deer Lodge.

The pastor at Butte is now preaching to the largest number of men in his Sabbath evening congregations that he has had during his pastorate in Montana.

Revs. J. H. Johnson, H B. Cockrill and W. T. Goulder from the Bozeman District attended the Helena District Conference.

The editor has an engagement to help Rev. W. T. Goulder in a protracted meeting on the White Hall and Silver Star circuit embracing the second Sunday in April.

Does a man have to surrender his private views on moral questions, in becoming a candidate for public office? We may answer this question by asking, "can a man safely be vested with a public trust, who would make such surrender."

Municipal elections have made our young cities of Montana boil the political pot of late. Some men should think less of themselves than they did before the votes were counted.

The communion set secured by the ladies of the Idaho St., Methodist Episcopal Church, South Butte, Mont., as premium for the sixteen cash subscribers to the South Western Methodist has been received and gives entire satisfaction.

The members of the Church in Butte gave the members of the Helena District Conference a reception at the parsonage, Thursday, March 28th. It was a pleasant surprise to the pastor and his wife as well as to the visiting brethren.

What have you done, dear brother, about the annual conference collection? Are you waiting for the "home stretch" quarter? If so, you have it—and now is your golden opportunity.

Letter From "Sam" Jones.

DEAR DR. FITZGERALD:— At the conclusion of the second week of our meetings here there is much to encourage our faith, and a rich promise of results. It has been raining almost constantly for thirteen days, but in spite of drenching rains our audiences have run from 1,000 to 6,000. Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, I preached to six or seven thousand men, and thousands were on the outside, with the doors closed, and standing room all taken inside. It was a wonderful service. Perhaps not one hundred in the vast audience failed to arise, at the conclusion of the sermon, when I asked those who would promise God a better life in the future to stand up. The pastors who are with me in the movement are hopeful and full of faith as to the result.

I find the longer I work in California that the great trouble in this country in bringing about a moral reformation in this country is that the thorougly religious people are in such a minority; nor have they the strength or weight to stand successfully against the surging tides of evil. There is no Sabbath here. Last Sabbath one of the great attractions at the City Park was a competitive beef killing, with valuable prizes to those who were most expert in the killing and skinning of the beeves; and to-day the butchers' shops hang the beeves out in front of the stores placarded "prize beef." Base ball is another wonderfully attractive Sabbath game—in fact, whatever will draw men together, without much regard to the laws of God or man, is adopted. I suppose if you were to multiply the godless element of Nashville a hundred fold, and minify the godly element there a hundred fold, and abolish all Sunday laws, you would have some conception of a San Francisco Sabbath. I give you some statistics handed me by the Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. here. On Sunday August 19th 1888, there were 3,600 saloons wide open; all theaters, concert and billiard halls and places of amusement had 17,933 young men in them; a base-ball match was witnessed by 5,000 young men, and the 3,000 places of unhallowed influence which could not be visited by committees on that day had at least 15,000 young men in them between sixteen and thirty-five years of age; the theaters had over 1,000 young men in each, and one had 1,200. The largest number in any one church was 411; the smallest was 6. Not 50,000 of a population 350,000 ever enter a church and those who do not go have very little sympathy with the church; and to preach the Ten Commandments in San Francisco means that you are a narrow minded bigot, unworthy the attention of intelligent people. The Daily Call is really the only paper here kindly disposed toward me and my work.

The meetings are increasing in interest each day. At the meeting for women only, Tuesday afternoon, there were about 4,000 present, and an interesting service. Something like 1,000 so far have manifested a desire to be saved. A large number of these, no doubt have been converted. With kindest wishes, I am yours fraternally,

SAM P. JONES.

San Francisco, Cal., March 19, 1889.

Great prominence was given to religious services as part of the District Conference at Butte. The Lord honored this part of the work greatly. Every preacher was blessed.

All But Memory Faded.

I sit to-night in meditating frame,
And dwell in silence on the past;
And many a loved one I call by name,
But echo answers: "Earthly joys do not last."

I am thinking of mother, sister, brother,
Who always greeted my childhood's coming;
But they are gone—their places left to another,
And I only hear their far off humming.

The unbroken happy family circle then,
Has often since been rudely rent;
And quite alone, I'm dreaming when
W'ell again be at home—life's almost spent.

Was it mother's voice I heard?
Speaking to me from out the skies;
"Dear child, patiently obey God's word,
For almost in sight, your heaven lies."

Cheered by the happy, hopeful sound,
I start afresh in duty's path;
And take the new cross that I have found,
Since now no sorrow for me it hath.

Ah! friends, I'm dreaming to-night,
Of childhood's home—a happy heart;
Memory awakes to cheering sight,
And love whispers: "In heaven we ne'er shall part."

Resolutions of the Helena District Conference on the Montana Methodist.

Resolved, That we, the members of the Helena District Conference of the M. E. Church South, have heard with joy from Rev. W. M. Britt, business manager of the MONTANA METHODIST, of the healthful financial condition of the paper.

That we appreciate the arduous labors of Rev. A. C. Couey, editor, and Rev. W. M. Britt, associate editor and also business manager, performed in addition to their duties ae pastors of their respective charges, and are in hearty sympathy with them in their efforts to furnish our Church in Montana with a paper that we rejoice to believe is second to none of its kind, and an important auxiliary to our success in this great Northwest.

That we pledge ourselves to the hearty support of the MONTANA METHODIST, to do all we can to secure additional subscribers, to collect subscriptions, procure patronage for the paper, and otherwise contribute to its support.

That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the MONTANA METHODIST for publication.

Signed:

A Saviour From Sin.

One day I was preaching in my chapel, in Hankow, China, and dwelling more especially on the great truth that Jesus Christ is the Savior from sin. Having spoken for some time, one of my hearers asked me if it was true. I told him that it was perfectly true. "Well," said he, "if it be true, it is a very remarkable truth." Thinking that he was impressed by what he had heard, I did what I was in the habit of doing in those days. I handed the congregation over to a native preacher, and took this man to the vestry to expound the truth more fully to him, and pray with him. Another followed us, whose presence in the congregation I had not observed. As soon as the first man was dismissed, the second came forward, and addressed me in a language similar to the following: "Mr. John. did I hear you say just now that Jesus can save men from their sins?" I replied that I had said so. "Well, then," said he, "can He save me?" I asked him what sins he had to be saved from. "I have," said he, "every sin you can think of. I am an opium smoker, a gambler, a drunkard, a fornicator and every thing that is bad. Can Jesus Christ save me?" I looked at the man, and had no difficulty in seeing that his appearance testified to the fact that he was all he declared himself to be. For a moment I hesitated to say yes; but God gave me strength to do so. Looking him steadily in the face, I said, "Yes, Christ can save you." "When?" inquired he. "Now," was the reply. "How?" asked the man again. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ for this salvation, and thou shalt be saved," was the simple answer. "Let us pray," said I. We knelt down together; and that man, I sincerely believe, was converted there and then. In his outward life he became a changed man. For many years his shadow had not once darkened the door of his home. Though a husband, he was not a husband, and though a father, he was not a father. No sooner was he converted than he began to think of his wife and children, and to look to their interests. He began also to work for Christ, and was the means of bringing a number of the vilest characters in Hankow under the influence of the gospel. On one occasion I received a note from him informing me that the people of his village were casting away their idols, and requesting me to come and instruct them. I went, and found the thing just as he had described it. But I found, also, that they were very ignorant of the truths of Christianity. I asked them why they cast away their idols, seeing that their knowledge of the truth was so meagre. The reply was very satisfactory. "We know very little about Christianity," said they, "but we see this man, and we believe the gospel that could change this man must be the truth."—Rev. Griffeth John.

Help for Needy Sunday Schools, and How to Get It.

Rev. J. A. Lyons, from our publishing house, Nashville, sends out directions.

The General Conference Sunday school committee at Nashville, have at their disposal for the benefit of needy schools the interest accruing from the "Centenial Sunday School Aid Fund," and 10 per cent. of amounts collected annually on "Children's Day," throughout our church. As will be observed, 90 per cent. of all "Children's Day" collections made in each annual conference goes into the treasury of the Sunday School Board of that conference, for distribution among its needy schools, under such rules and regulations as the Conference may adopt.

This provision being considered fully adequate to the wants of all self-supporting Conferences, the fund at the disposal of the General Conference Sundy School committee is devoted wholly to Mission Conferences, by which is meant Conferences, whether home or foreign, that are sustained by appropriations from the Board of Missions of our church.

As to the proper method to be pursued on the part of those seeking aid for needy schools.

1. Application should in every instance, be made first to the Snday School Board of the Conference in which the school is located. This is of course to be done through the officers of said board.

But in Mission Conferences, as explained above, if the application to the Conference board fails, then—

2. Send to Mr. D. M. Smith, Treasurer, Nashville, Tenn., for a blank "application for aid." Fill it out and return it to him, and, if on examination it is approved by the disbursing committee of the General Conference aid fund, the grant will be cheerfully made, and supplies will be promptly forwarded.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

Did You Ever Meet Him.

"There is a man," said his neighbor, speaking of a village carpenter, "who has done more good, I really believe, in this community, than any other person who ever lived in it. He can not talk very well in prayer-meeting, and he doesn't often try. He isn't worth two thousand dollars and it's very little that he can put down on subscription papers for any worthy object. But a new family never moves into the village that he does not find them out, to give them a neighborly welcome, and offer any little service he can render. He is usually on the lookout to give strangers a seat in his pew at church. He is always ready to watch with a sick neighbor, and look after his affairs for him; and I've sometimes thought he and his wife keep house-plants in winter just for the sake of being able to send little bouquets to invalids. He finds time for a pleasant word for every child he meets, and you'll always see them climbing into his one-horse wagon when he has no other load. He really seems to have a genius for helping folks in all sorts of common ways, and it does me good every day just to meet him on the streets."—Christian Observer.

Is It You?

How often a bitter speech, which has caused keen pain to the hearer, has been followed by such words as these, as if in justification of the unkindness shown:

"I'm a plain, blunt person, and I have to speak out just what I think. People must take me as the Lord made me."

Any thing meaner than such an attempt to throw the responsibility of one's ugliness of temper off upon the Lord it would be hard to imagine. Frankness of speech is one thing, but harshness is a very different thing. The Lord never endowed any man with such a disposition, or put him in such circumstances that he was obliged to make stinging, cruel remarks. Some people have more difficulty than others in being sweet-tempered and kindly spoken, but when one fails it is his own fault.—The Work at Home.

The ladies of Helena and surrounding towns and country are cordially invited to call and see our new Spring Stock which is replete and full in all departments. We have paid special attention to the collecting together a very attractive stock in ladies' and children's suits and wraps. We can show you all the novelties in this way and at extremely low prices; ladies living out of the city will be furnished with samples and prices of anything in our line by writing us and indicating their wants.

Social Hand Shaking.

"The greatest human power in the Church in hearty hand-shaking. We could better spare a little Hebrew or Greek, or some of the mysteries of mental philosophy if we could only recover the lost are of hand-shaking. Elocution is useful; the management of the voice counts for much, but the action of the hands is quite as important. Can we find a professor of this lost art who can visit our colleges? No church is so dependent upon its sociability as Methodism. Happily we have no prestige and fashion to hold us together—for which let us thank God. We can not make any great boast of intellectualism in itself not much to boast of, since St. Paul feared that it would kill the gospel. We have no distinct creed which separates us from all other churches. Our life is in our sociability. Hearty hand-shaking is our strength."—Clark Guy Pearce.

One of Many.

A minister relates: "A friend of mine spoke to a lady about her soul. 'Are you a Christian?' he asked. 'Oh, yes; we are all Christians. We were born Christians in a Christian land,' was the reply. 'But you are a sinner,' my friend continued. 'Yes, we are all sinners, every one of us,' she said. Determined to corner her he asked, 'Do you believe in Christ?' 'Of course I do. What do you think I am? Why do you ask such a foolish question? We all believe in Christ,' replied the lady, becoming slightly annoyed at the questions put to her. How hard it was to make anything of a person like that. Careless and flippant, full of head knowledge, yet destitute of any particle of saving belief. The Spirit of God had last pierced the polished surface of contented self-sufficiency and found belief in safety, and showed the lady that she stood on the brink of a precipice, over which, if she had fallen, she would have met with eternal death. She came to Christ."—Ex.

He Receiveth Sinners.

But he receiveth them as sinners. In God's market there is no cheating; in seeking his help the whole story must be told. God will receive any man, but he will be imposed upon by none. He will take a hypocrite, but he will not take him with a certificate from the church that he is in good and regular standing—a highly esteemed and exemplary member! But let him come on his knees, crying, "God have mercy upon me, a poor hypocrite, with an empty heart, a hollow life, and a name to live while I am dead!" and God will receive him, and heal him, and save him.

God will receive a Pharisee, but he need not come tooting his trumpet, nor flaunting pnylacteries, nor making his long prayers, nor jingling his money in the Lord's treasury, for does not the Lord know about the mortgage he foreclosed—the coward—upon that widow's house, when her husband was just cold in the grave? No, let him come as the publican comes, smiting on his breast, confessing his sins, and owning up his crookedness, hypocrisy, and wrong, and the Lord will save him as soon as any one.

God will have honest dealing. We cannot sell brass for gold, nor pewter for silver, in market. We must come down to the actual facts in every case. No shams are accepted, no deceptions are countenanced, no hypocrisies tolerated. He desires the truth in the inward parts. If God cannot make a man honest, he has no place for him.—The Christian

The True Gentleman.

Christianity is one of the most gentlemanly things in the world. It will make a polite gentleman or lady of one who knows but little of the forms of politeness. The Bible does not pretend to teach manners in detail, nor does it profess to be a manual of politeness; but nevertheless it is book best suited to produce in any community true gentility. We have nothing in the Testaments, Old or New, of how low to bow on entering a room, or how we must deport ourselves in the ball-room, or any such thing; but we have what is far better. We are taught to be kind to all, to love all, to respect age, to be merciful, pitiful, courteous; "not to behave ourselves unseemly," "not to think of ourselves more highly than we ought," and to esteem others better than ourselves. With these things properly engraven on our heart, Christians will intuitively be the most agreeable, polite people in the world.—Baptist Record.

The Orign of The Cable.

The origin of the cable is said to have been as follows: While visiting the house of a friend Mr. Field being left alone for a few minutes, sat abstractedly turning around a globe which happened to be in the room. It was while doing this that the grand idea occured to him of a world girdled with electric wire, and of the benefits which would accrue especially from a line under the Atlantic ocean. His next step was to consult such men as Professor Morse and Lieutenant Maury. When completed, the first message flashed through the cable was, "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, good will toward men."

Notes and Personals.

Paul says in one of his epistles that he had learned "both how to abound and to suffer need." Some of our preachers have had the experience of suffering need and would now very much enjoy a little abounding. Stewards take notice.

Since our revival meeting in Helena, we have had meetings for children on Saturday afternoon. They are fairly well attended and are enjoyable and profitable.

We have just had a pleasant visit from Brother Jarvis of the Bozeman circuit. He preached a good sermon for us last Sunday evening. He reports that work is progressing well on our new church at Belgrade, and hopes to have it completed before Conference.

Brother Barber who gave us such excellent assistance at our meeting at Helena is holding a meeting at East Helena with very gracious results. The Lord has owned and blessed the work from the start. About twenty have professed conversion and the interest is unabated. We have given what little assistance we could and are sure that the work is of God and cannot come to naught. They are planning to build a church there immediately. We expect to have at least three new churches in the Montana Conference for the Bishop to dedicate next summer.

Brother Vaughan, a former colleague with us in the Denver Conference, writes us a cheering note from Palmyra, Mo., his present charge. The brethren who labor a few years in the West and then return to the older Conferences are usually our best friends. They help to arouse the interest of the church in the work on the frontier.

Brother Warren sends us the sad intelligence of Sister Stateler's death, which occurred on the 13th inst. It was an unexpected shock and will be keenly felt throughout the Conference. As a pioneer heroine of the church she was in many points without a peer in the Territory. It is needless to say her end was peace. She rests from her labors and her works follow her. An extended obituary will appear either in this or the next issue of this paper. Brother Stateler is in feeble health and sorely feels this sad bereavement. May he have special grace in this hour of special need.

The site of the Wesleyan University of the M. E. Church, has finally been decided upon. It is a tract of two hundred acres in the Prickly Pear Valley, several miles from the city limits of Helena. There is a wide difference of opinion as to the wisdom of putting it so far from the city. But as several locations were offered in and around the city, and as those who had the matter in hand were practical business men, it may be taken for granted that they have made a good selection.

The churches of Butte will have union services in the Presbyterian Church in answer to the Presidential proclamation on the 30th of April, beginning at 9 a. m.

Rev. John Hannon, D. D., pastor of Centenary Church, San Francisco, will preach the commencement sermon of the Pacific Methodist College, May 12th.

Miss Florence Peyton Barret, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Barret, died at the home of the family in Butte, Montana, April 22d. Though only a little past thirteen years old she had been for some time a consistent member of the church, and now rests in blessed peace. We extend to the fond indulgent parents and to little Marie, her sister; our sincere sympathy. We can all go to her. A suitable memorial will be prepared.

The New Hymn Book.

We have before us a copy of the new Hymn Book. It has been the best advertised volume ever printed. For a couple of years scarcely a week has passed without allusions in the church press to the coming songs of Zion. Our readers will welcome a description of the work of our gifted Asaphs.

ITS HISTORY.

The last hymn Book was prepared by order of the General Conference of 1886. The Conference of 1846, sitting in this city, "resolved that the bishops "as soon as practicable" name nine revisers. These revisers were not to exclude any hymn in the old collection or put in a new one without a two-thirds vote. The bishops were to approve the work, and then "place it in the hands of the book agent" for publication.

It was recommended by the General Conference that the hymns "rarely or never used in public or social worship" be exculded; that long hymns be shortened and that none exceed twenty-four line; that the whole number of hymns not to exceed eight hundred.

THE REVISERS.

The Committe were Wilson, of North Carolina (who did not live to see the work finished); Dr. Cox, of Baltimore; Dr. Carlisle (layman), of South Carolina; Dr. Fitzgerald, of Nashville; Dr. Tillett, of Nashville; Dr. Carter, of Louisiana; Dr. Mahon, of Tennessee; with McLean, of Texas, and Hunnicutt, of the Mississippi country.

WHY THE DELAY ?

The cause of delay is hinted at. "It was also thought best to prepare an authorized tune edition." There has been the hitch. The Philadelphia Baptist tune maker got hold of our "words," and held them till he could get round or square notes to fit.

Nevertheless, the College of Bishops and the committee say in the preface that "the collection is not surpassed by any other in the Christian church." That's a pretty strong send-off. It ought to sell these sacred lays, and they should be "said or sung" by a multitude.

The hymns are numbered in bold type, and the pages are in faint figures at the bottom of the pages. The index refers only to the hymns—an improvement.

Four hundred and fifteen of the hymns in the old book have been left out. Two hundred and eighty-one new ones have been put in. The old book had 1,063; the new book 929. A supplement has been added which contains eighty-six "popular" hymns —the "Old Ship of Zion," for instance; these are included in the 929.—Richmond Advocate.

Good Out of Evil.

While helping Brother Cockrill in a protracted meeting a few weeks ago, we had an experience, which, though it resulted in good, we are thankful does not often come in our way. We were visiting a number of families one day when we came to the house of Mr. P., an infidel. He did not give us time to invite him to church, but began at once to ridicule the preachers and to abuse the church and everything sacred. We of course defended ourselves and our cause as best we could. At this he, and his son also, became very angry. They stood up and drew their knives in a most threatening manner.

Finding that our kindest words would not pacify them, we withdrew, wondering if any good could come out of such a visit as that. We are glad to learn now that the Lord did use it for good. Several persons hearing of it said: "If infidelity leads men to make such fools of themselves as that, we want no more of it." Three have joined the church through this incident. Truly, the wrath of man is made to praise God.

R. F. JARVIS.

What is True Life.

BY MRS. E. M. APPLEBURY.

What is Life? Go ask the sage,
Who, burdened with the cares of age,
Perhaps, will from a knowledge give
This answer: 'Tis to labor, think and live.

Life is the growing, verdant leaf,
Life is the golden ripened sheaf,
Life is the tiny plant which springs
From earth, and grows with hidden wings.

Life is the happy bird which soars,
Life is the little brook which pours
Its waters in a ceaseless song,
Enriching as it flows along.

Life is the infant's prattling speech,
Untaught as yet the heights to reach,
Which to the mind's expanding power,
Is heaven's enriching priceless dower.

All earth is full of life, but death,
With cruel treachery hides beneath
The finest scenes, and hurls his darts
To sever friends and sadden hearts.

But there is life beyond our ken.
The grave may claim the body when
Our earthly life is past, and we
Are dwellers in eternity.

For there is higher life than this,
Its source, divine, its ending bliss,
The Christian's life, whose trust is God,
Who treads the way his Master trod.

'Tis true life to know his will,
And knowing all his laws fulfill,
Trusting his wisdom and his power
From day to day, from hour to hour.

True life expands the narrow mind,
Which to earth's grosser aims confined
Knows not the power of heavenly aim,
Till kindled by the spirit's flame,

Discerns its true intent and grasps
The prize of heaven, and eager clasps
The jewel of the Saviour's love.
To point him to true life above.

Then sinner, catch this heavenly prize
Prepare thy heart and turn thine eyes
To Christ, the life, the living way,
Accept his terms, his will obey.

Anaconda News.

The Methodist parsonage at this place has just been painted. The pastor did the work. It was his first job, but he has been somewhat encouraged by the comment: "The house looks a 'heap' better since it was painted." Another "coat" will be added after while. If any of the readers of the METHODIST have houses to paint, they will know where to apply.

Sixty new song books have been placed in the Methodist Church, which greatly facilitates the service. A Hymn Book for every member of the congregation and then everybody sing, is a good motto.

The parlor of the Methodist parsonage, while not a Gretna Green, has become popularized as a resort for local marriages. The last to take place was on the 10th, the parties being John H. Bawlb and Mary Miers. As your correspondent claims to be the only machine poet among his brethren, you will please suffer a couplet or two just to start the happy pair on the journey of life.

Now, John, since you have Mary wed,
A word of counsel here is given;
Let neither drive, but each be led,
And the nuptial bond will ne'er be riven.

And, John, the parson says also this,
As you have married Mary Miers,
You get up first, and never miss,
And always think to make the fires.

The house-to-house prayer meeting has been started by our preacher at Anaconda. It is held on Friday night of each week, and does not interfere with the regular Wednesday night prayer-meeting at the church. Our next will be held by request at the home of a saloon-keeper, whose wife is a regular attendant at church. We feel glad to have the privilege, and are hopeful that both the saloon-keeper and his wife may be led to Christ, and to join the church. The preacher is sent out to hunt up the lost sheep, and wherever he finds an open door he should enter and leave there the savor of a good example and a holy life. May the good Lord bless every home that opens its door to the prayer-meeting.

The Presbytery of Montana met in this place last week. The attendance was not large. We heard only one discourse, that of the pastor of the Presbyterian congregation at Bozeman. His was not a sermon, but a lecture on prohibition. He hewed to the line, making, as I thought, an unanswerable argument in favor of prohibition. The license system was dissected, and shown to be not only a failure but likewise a vice of gigantic powers.

If Editor Couey don't mind he'll lose one of his official members by transfer to Anaconda. We would be glad, for his loss would be our great gain. The transfer would likely result in two additions to our society, for while William is good, his better half is "gooder," and will go where he goes—"his people will be her people." But tell it not in Gath (Butte). SIM.

White Hall, Montana.

A series of meetings has just closed at White Hall, in which the "Gospel plow" was sunk deep into the soil by Revs. Johnson, Cockrill and Finley. "The seed of the kingdom was sown broadcast with power and demonstration," but "some fell by the wayside," and "some fell upon stony ground," and thanks be to God who giveth the increase, some fell into the furrows of good soil. The Lord grant an abundant yield. W. T. GOULDER.

White Hall, April 10, 1889.

MR. EDITOR:—Transfers to this Conference should not be made at all, or only with the greatest caution, until those who are here fail to meet the demands and are better supported. To put a preacher of any ability into a new field simply because we have a few members there, and that on a small appropriation, to work several years for a dozen members, is often to sacrifice the man and the money, especially if it is setting up one Methodist altar against another. It is high time to stop such "playing at missions." And we are too near the millenium to build one Methodist church in the shadow of another which is stronger and is meeting the demands. This policy is a stumbling block to both churches. It is in plain violation of the Cape May plan of 1876. Yours Truly,

J. H. JOHNSON.

The Age of Paper.

The world has seen its iron age, its stone age, its golden age, and its brazen age. This is the age of paper. We are making so many things of paper that it will soon be true that without paper there is nothing made that is made. We live in paper houses, wear paper clothing, and sit on paper cushions in paper cars, rolling on paper wheels. We do a paper business over paper counters, buying paper goods, paying for them with paper money, or charging them up in paper books, and deal in paper stocks on paper margins. We row races in paper boats for paper prizes. We go to paper theatres where paper actors play to paper audiences. We elect paper men with paper votes on a paper issue to represent a paper constituency in a paper Congress and making paper laws. As the age develops, the coming man will be more deeply enmeshed in the paper net. He will awake in the morning and creep from under the paper clothing on his paper bed, and put on his paper dressing-gown and paper slippers. He will walk over paper carpets down paper stairs, and seating himself in a paper-chair, will read the paper news in the morning paper. A paper bell will call him to his breakfast, cooked in a paper oven, served on paper dishes, laid on a paper cloth on a paper table. He will wipe his lips with a paper napkin, and having put on his paper shoes, paper hat and paper coat and taken his paper cane, he will walk on a paper pavement or ride in a paper carriage to his paper office. He will organize paper enterprises and make paper profits. He will go to Europe on paper steamships and navigate the air in paper balloons. He will smoke paper tobacco in a paper pipe, lighted with a paper match. He will write with a paper pencil, whittle paper sticks with a paper knife, go fishing with a paper fishing-rod, a paper line and a paper hook, and put his catch in a paper basket. He will go shooting with a paper gun, loaded with paper cartridges, and will defend his country in paper forts with paper cannon and paper bombs. Having lived his paper life and achieved a paper fame and paper wealth, he will retire to paper leisure and die in paper peace, There will be a paper funeral, at which the mourners dressed in paper crape, will wipe their eyes with paper handkerchiefs, and a paper preacher will preach a paper sermon in a paper pulpit from a paper text. He will lie in a paper coffin wrapped in a paper shroud, his name will be engraved on a paper plate, and a paper hearse, adorned with paper flumes, will carry him to a paper lined grave, over which will be raised a paper monument. The papers will record his paper virtues, while paper angels with paper wings will clothe him in paper robes and waft his paper spirit from this paper world to the paper gates of a paper paradise, where all is paper and fire-proof at that.—The Paper World.

En Voyage.

Whichever way the wind doth blow,
Some heart is glad to have it so;
Then, blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.

My little craft sails not alone;
A thousand fleets from every zone
Are out upon a thousand seas;
What blows for one a favorite breeze
Might dash another with a shock
Of doom upon a hidden rock.

And so I do not dare to pray
For winds to waft me on my way,
But leave it to a higher will
To stay or speed me, trusting still

That all is well, and sure that He
Who launched my bark will sail with me
Through storm and calm, and will not fail,
Whatever breezes may prevail,
To land me, every peril past,
Within the sheltered haven at last.

Then, whatsoever wind doth blow,
My heart is glad to have it so;
And, blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.

Sunday School Visitor.

Bearing the Cross.

Dear Children: Will you get your Bibles and read Matthew v: 11,12? They will show you what God thinks of a boy in our city of Chicago. I want to tell you about him. He is about thirteen years old, and goes to a Bohemian mission which our church is helping along a good deal. A lady missionary has charge of this mission and she goes about visiting the people and telling them of Jesus. And do you know many of them never heard of Jesus, and think there is no God? But this boy did know a little about Jesus, for his parents were Catholics. He came to the mission to see what it was like and because some of his friends went there too. After a while when he learned more about Jesus, he gave him his whole heart and resolved to follow him as the Bible tells us to do and not as the priest says. He was truly converted.

Well, he told the man he worked for how happy he was and that he was going to the mission after this and try and serve God in the right way. His employer said that if he did this he could not work for him any longer. But the boy would not give up Jesus, so he had to give up his work and as his parents were quite poor it made his mother very angry at him, so that she too tried to get him to give up his Saviour and the mission.

He would not do it and then his mother said she would not give him anything to eat. But finally she did give him one slice of bread a day. When I heard about him he was still getting only one slice of bread a day, but he would not give up. He said he would stand it till he could get some more work. It was the beginning of winter and not so easy to get work. Just about that time the mission scholars were making articles to sell, so they could earn something toward a new church which they hope to build sometime in the near future. This boy had nothing to give and he wanted to help so much that his mission teacher showed him how to put together pieces of plush to make a pincushion and tidy for it. The cushion is in the shape of an hour glass and stands in the center of the tidy. The pieces of plush are of different colors but arranged so nicely and sewed so well that you would never think a boy had made it.

It was sold for one dollar and fifty cents, and if any of you ever come to visit me you will find it on the table in my best bedroom where I shall let you sleep.

This boy made another article which sold for two dollars, so you see he could give something to the Lord, poor as he was. The materials to make the things were all donated, so there was $3.50 which a poor boy gave.

I believe our Heavenly Father thinks as much of that $3.50 as he did of the widow's mite that we read of in the Gospels.

Now children, do you think it will pay this boy to serve God better than to serve Satan?

If you have read the verses I spoke of at the beginning of this letter you will find that Jesus pays twice, gives us joy of heart here, and a happy life forever in the world to come.

This boy thinks he gets the most pay with Jesus. I know I do. Try it yourselves and see. Yours affectionately, AUNT ANNA.

Among the Ranchers.

By invitation from Rev. W. T. Goulder, we boarded "the jerker" which runs from Butte to Silver Star, Montana, Friday morning, April 12, for the purpose of helping in a revival meeting to be held at Fish Creek, an appointment on the White Hall and Silver Star circuit. Our ride on the mail-coach above mentioned across the main range of the Rockies was surprisingly pleasant, the weather being fine, the roads splendid and the driver very clever. There were three passengers beside myself—one, a citizen of Butte, who came out to some of his mining interests in the mountains: the other two, young men of strong physique, bound for the timbers to wield the woodman's ax, for "$4 per thousand." At the half-way house our company was reduced to the driver and myself. After lunching we mounted our stage, and pulled out for Bruffey's, where I was to meet the young pastor. We arrived about 4 o'clock. Brother Goulder was not to be seen, but good quarters prevented any dismay. On asking if any word had been left, the proprietor of the country store said, "Yes, Mr. Tuttle passed up a few minutes since, saying he would call for you on his return." I employed my time in reading some of our good church papers, till I heard the swift feet of a span of greys to a carriage, and looking out saw Brother Tuttle and Revs. Goulder and Cockrill. We were all soon on our way down to the home of our host, with a style quite unlike that of the early preachers of Montana. The first impression made by the kind address of welcome by Sister Tuttle, was favorable and so abides.

Three preachers, kind hospitable people of the plain, unaffected kind, good ranch fare, three times a day, good water and pure air gave us restful surroundings that made the very bones of the city pastor feel good.

But I had come to work while I was resting, and at 8 o'clock preached to a fair rural congregation. The meeting was pleasant and profitable Friday night and Saturday at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. But Sunday morning the wagons, carriages, buggies, horse-back riders, etc., brought us a house-full. I enjoyed preaching to the appreciative crowd at 11 a. m., after which we had the sacrament of the Lord's supper —the first time in this vicinity for about two years.

At the evening service Brother Cockrill gave us a stirring sermon, after which we had a warm altar service and received two members into the church. The meeting continued until Wednesday night following—with some penitents at the altar, and strength to the little flock under the care of Brother Goulder.

The ranchers are all hard at work sowing their seed for another year's harvest. Thursday morning we turned our faces toward Butte, anxious again to see wife, children and our own flock which we have reason to love most dearly.

Easter.

This is a day specially observed by some churches in our land. It is not obligatory upon any pastor or congregation in the M. E. Church, South, to "keep this day," but it is left optional. Some of our bishops, if not all, with many other leading men of our church, hold that it is an opportune time to preach on the resurrection. It is also left to individual taste as to the extent to which we shall have our churches decorated. Extravagance is thought to detract from the chief design.

As to our own views upon this subject, we rather deplore the use of the term "Easter day," since it is paying at least a partial tribute to Paganism, and is also patronizing Romanism. We prefer the simple, unadulterated use of the occasion as a commemoration of the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ. We believe every pastor should preach upon the resurrection—have songs and anthems suitable thereto—and have modest decorations in the churches.

The day was a pleasant one in our city, many of the churches giving it due observance. One of the most pleasing features connected with this pastor's work on that occasion was, that at the close of the evening service, application was made by two worthy persons, a gentleman and his wife, to unite with our church in Butte by letter.

How We Got a Dinnner.

There was a pleasant incident in the experience of the writer in crossing the main range of the Rocky Mountains on his return from the Jefferson Valley, a few days since illustrating the generous character of many of our mountaineers. About six miles from the summit, on the eastern slope, is what is known as the "Half-Way House," where travellers take their dinner in passing over this route to and from Butte. Here we met a Baptist minister and one of his former parishioners, both of whom we had known. A gentleman and member of the Christian (Campbellite) church, had brought us thus far to intersect the stage line. Dinner was announced, and so this company of four with others, went in and enjoyed a good repast, The meal finished we all returned to the office of the establishment to pay our bills.

Being our turn we pulled out one dollar, and offering it to the proprietor, he said; "Your bill was paid by that gentleman;" (pointing to our Christian brother.) After a while in came our good Baptist brother, who was traveling with the preacher of that denomination, and addressing the proprietor with a five dollar bill in his hand, said: "Take out the fare for these two preachers, myself and horse." With some fitting remarks and a hearty laugh at the good fortune of the preachers, by those who witnessed the little episode, we parted with our friends with a fond relish for this the best dessert of the dinner by the wayside. Three hours later we arrived in Butte with happy recollections of our week among the ranchers.

We are glad to acknowledge the receipt of "The India Watchman," published in Bombay, India. It is full of interesting missionary matter.

Notes.

Dr. McAnally. by request, will publish his recent articles on "The Unemployed" in pamphlet form. We are glad to learn that this will be done and would recommend the pamphlet to all our readers. It is a very instructive history of the past quarter of a century.

While out in the Jefferson Valley we had the privilege of being in the homes of three Tuttle families — Jordan, Courtney, New Kirk, Winslow, Col. E. G. Brooke, and William Beall.

Our stay in their midst was very pleasant indeed. We shall be delighted to repeat the visit.

We got some cash subscribers to the MONTANA METHODIST during our rural ramblings.

Was there not something akin to the semi-prophetic in Lafayette, when he said: "If the liberties of the American people are ever destroyed they will fall by the hands of the Roman clergy?"

What proportion of the clergy (?) agree with the Rev. M. J. Savage, who in the North American Review says: "All the orthodox churches of the last eighteen hundred years have come into existence for this one sole, specific purpose—the supposed salvation of man from the supposed effects of the supposed fall?"

This is a fair sample of the free-thinking, liberalistic, progressive-theology spirit of the present age, that is to vanish before the warm sunlight of the gospel truth as the morning dew. It will destroy a few souls and then die itself. The suggestion that "the battle between Christianity and unbelief is to be fought out in fiction" reminds us of the way some silly wives do in winning their husbands to the church, by staying at home with them on Sunday and petting them, that they might go to church with them in the evening. Both methods are false to the core, if an ex-college president does hold to the contrary. Robert Elsmere and many other such books have a coiled serpent under the leaf.

Let all our Sunday school workers and pastors remember that the third Sabbath in May is Children's Day for our church. We should all make use of the occasion as designed in its being set apart by the General Conference. Programs should be gotten and used.

The following is Article XXVIII in the new constitution of Japan. It is all there is on the subject of religion. "Japanese subjects shall, within limits not prejudicial to peace and order, and not antagonistic to their duties as subjects, enjoy freedom of religious belief."

Rev. S. H. Wainright in his correspondence from Oita, Japan, says: "I believe that one missionary, in any town with more than 1,000 inhabitants, could build up a church within two years."

Brother J. E. Squires of the Denver Conference, writing to the St. Louis Advocate from Walsenburg, Colorado, states; "We spent about sixteen days at La Veta in a meeting with Brother Jester, and had a most pleasant and profitable time. About 112 conversions and a great revival in the church. It was here that the noble Brooks fell at his post about two years ago."

Whatever may be the conjectures of the Samoan storm, it certainly affords a fine opportunity to the doubters to inquire as once before: "What manner of man is this that even the wind and sea obey him?"

We are sorry to hear that Brother Warren's health is very poor. He doubtless has overworked himself. His last note to us was written by a friend—he being confined to his bed. Let prayer be made for his speedy recovery.

We have received an article on Prohibition, from one of our regular contributors, which we shall have to hold over for another issue. It is good and will not spoil.

Several of our missionaries in Brazil have been attacked recently with yellow fever. We are glad to learn that it was of mild form, none having died therefrom.

We are sad to learn of Sister L. B. Stateler's death, which occurred at the home of the venerable couple Saturday, April 13th. We extend our sincere sympathy to our beloved Father Stateler, who is thus strangely left alone in his infirmity. Sister Stateler died in peace saying to those around her: "We will meet beyond the shore." A suitable memorlal we hope will be prepared in the near future.

A Rare Book.

The New York Tribune makes some notes from a discourse from A. P. Cobb, an evangelist, concerning the bible.

"The Bible is a rare book. First, in its age. The oldest part of it, Job, was written 1,800 years before Christ. Here is a book older than David or Solomon. Again, it is rare because of its authors. This book was not written for the exaltation of the man, nor the defence of a theory, "but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holly Spirit." It is rare also because of its mission. No other book has been written the object of which has been the conversion of mankind. And it is rare too, because of its subject and influence. Webster drew copiously from it. John Quincy Adams read every morning a chapter from his Hebrew Bible. Sir Walter Scott, in his dying hour, said, 'Read to me from the book,' and when asked what book, replied, 'Can you ask a dying man what book? To such a man there can be but one book—the Bible.' Milton died with the music of the Psalms falling upon his ears. Finally, it is rare because of its durability. 'All flesh is as grass."

Why Not One.

Episcopal Methodism was originally one body and so continued through many years of great success and wonderful spiritual power, but the golden age of unity has long since passed away. As early as 1816 the colored Methodists of Philadelphia separated, and not long after that those of New York did likewise, and thus two African Methodist Episcopal denominations came into existence, which are now large and prosperous Christian churches. Another separation took place in 1828, when the churches in Canada were allowed to become an independent body. Thus three divisions had occurred before the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized in 1845. Instead of being the first, that was the fourth separation which took the Episcopal form. and now there are six distinct denominations of Episcopal Methodism, the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church having been organized in 1870.

Is it not strange, therefore, that the unification of Methodism is seldom thought of except in connection with the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South? There are six denominations which are almost exactly alike in name and doctrine and government, and yet no controversy arises about the separate existence of four of them. Canadian Methodism is in another country, and colored Methodism is allowed to manage its own affairs; but the case of the two white Episcopal Methodisms is like that of two families trying to live in the same house while each claims it as its own property. Why was the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, organized at first? Because the majority in the Methodist Episcopal Church resorted to such extreme measures that the Southern ministers could not submit and continue their pastoral work, especially their missionary work among the slaves. Great excitement arose in the South and separation was necessary to secure peace. Therefore, the Southern representatives asked the General Conference to provide for a peaceful separation as a necessity, and by a vote of one hundred and thirty-nine to seventeen it was resolved that "the Methodist Episcopal Church shall in no wise attempt to organize churches or societies within the limits of the Church, South, nor shall they attempt to exercise pastoral oversight therein"—a resolution providing for separation, giving exclusive right to territory, and designating the body separated as "the Church, South."

From the last mentioned fact, it is evident that the term "South" in the name of Southern Methodism is not political but historical, and is retained as a monument to show that the Church and the name it bears were provided for by the General Conference of 1844 and it was thereby made the rightful Methodist occupant of Southern territory. How unreasonable then the opposition to the name given by the General Conference before the child was born!

But after the war swept away the old issues, out of which came excitement and differences, and because of which two churches had been necessary, why should their still be two? Interpreting necessity by the abstract principles of our holy religion, this writer thought in 1870 that the two ought to become one; but he soon became convinced that a state of feeling had grown out of the facts of fifty years ago, and was intensified by daily occurrences, that made organic union with the Methodist Episcopal Church under one General Conference utterly impossible. There is a profound and fixed conviction that neither section is prepared to rule the other; and Southern Methodists would no sooner trust themselves under a majority of Northern Methodists than Northern Methodists would trust themselves under a majority of Southern Methodists. No argument can remove the impression that it would be unsafe, and against the cause of true religion, to put Southern Methodism in the control of the Northern majority that would rule the General Conference of the united Methodism, especially as the Northern majority regards the Methodists of the South as inferior, disloyal and unjust to the colored population—the leading spirits in disaffection to the government and oppression of the negro.

It is then a fact, that neither of the two great Methodist Episcopal Churches, would, or ought to put itself under a majority of the other. The Northern Church would not think of placing itself under Southern majority for a moment, and why should the Southern majority consent to go under a Northern majority. It is useless to discuss it. But this very fact suggests the way out of difficulties; for, if union under one General Conference, where a sectional majority is certain to rule, is the objectionable feature, the remedy is union under two or more General Conferences, each independent of the other within its territory, and all uniting in a Supreme Conference, that has equal representation and equal number of votes and has in charge certain specified interests, such as foreign missions and the publications of books. By this plan there would be an independent Southern General Conference, an independent Northern General Conference, and an independent Pacific General Conference, and as many others as need might require; and each General Conference would manage its affairs in its own way. This was long ago advocated by Drs. McAnally, Summers and Abbey, and also by the writer of this article; and a union of this character would find few if any, to oppose it in the South, because it would guard against what is most feared, the placing of Southern Methodism under a Northern majority.

Here is the real point of opposition to re-union in the South; and it would be so in the Northern Church if its members knew that the South would have the majority in the united body. Assure Northern Methodists that Southern Methodists would outvote them in the General Conference after re-union, and forty oxen could not pull them into re-union; and under the circumstances it is natural and right for it to be so. But our Northern Brethren know that re-union under one General Conference would give them the majority, and hence they are in favor of re-union, while Southern Methodists know that they would be hopelessly in the minority, and therefore oppose re-union. Southern Methodists do not oppose the coming of the Northern people into their midst, nor the admission of Northern Methodists into their church, nor the entrance of Northern men into their ministry, nor the appointment of Northern men to be their pastors. On the contrary, they want Northern people and welcome them with genuine good feeling; and my observation and experience ever since the close of the war has proved to my entire satisfaction, that the greatest obstacle to cordial fellowship between Northern and Southern people in the South is the fact, that Northern people hold back under an uncalled for apprehension that Southern people don't want them. The disposition to distrust Southern friendship, to keep out of Southern churches, and to promote sectionalism by isolation and the establishment of Northern churches on Southern soil, is the fruitful mother of many and great evils. There ought to be no South in the North and no North in the South and no politics in religion.

Last night, (February 28,) my house was invaded by a multitude of happy hearts and joy beaming faces, all there to show their love and appreciation, and as I looked upon the charming spectacle of youth and age in gladness, one fact stood out in precious prominence, and that was the perfect ease and freedom and pleasure with which Northern and Southern people, Republicans and Democrrts, passed in and out; and evidently were conscious of nothing to check the flow of good feeling! And praise be unto God for many such scenes in different places.

Alas! the people of the North have heard and read that the Southern people hate them and are disloyal and are unjust to the negro; and think missionaries ought to be sent to the South, and Northern churches erected and Northern people kept to themselves. Away with suspicion and distrust! We be brethren with the same God and the same Bible and the same experience and the same doctrines and the same heaven; and when Southern Methodists get a chance at a willing Yankee Methodist they prove that they love him; and if they can have their own General Conference without fear of being overridden by a Northern majority, they wil go for re-union.—Rev. Josephus Anderson, D. D., in Methodist Magazine.

Family Religion.

Ten years ago, says a student, I boarded in the family of a pious woman whose husband was not a Christian. There was a daughter of nineteen, another of fourteen and a son of ten. Every morning after breakfast, I heard that humble woman gather her family in the kitchen, and read with them a chapter—"verse about"—in the Bible. Then, as I could not help listening, there was a peculiarity of service which quite mystified me. At last one day I asked if I might remain. She hesitated, her daughter blushed, but said I could do so if I really desired. So I sat down with the rest. They gave me a testament, and we each read a verse in turn. Then kneeling on the floor, that mother began her prayer audibly for her dear ones there, her husband, and herself; and then pausing a moment as if to gather her energies or wing her faith, uttered a tender affectionate supplication for me. She closed and her daughter began to pray. Poor girl, she was afraid of me; I was from cellege, I was her teacher; but she tremulously asked for a blessing as usual. Then came the other daughter, and at last the son--the youngest of the circle, who only repeated the Lord's prayer, with one petition of his own. His amen was said but no one arose. I knew they were waiting for me. And I--poor, prayerless--had no word to say. It almost broke my heart. I hurried from the room, desolate and guilty A few weeks only passed when I asked their permission to come in once more; and then I prayed, too, and thanked my ever-patient Saviour for the new hope in my heart, and the new song on my lips.—Christian Guardian.

"Tell it Out."

"Brother R———, just stand up and tell the friends how and when you found the Saviour," said the preacher at the close of of a special service in an out-of-the-way little chapel, to the friend who had brought him to the meeting. Surprised, beyond measure he stood up, and said: "My friends, what I'm going to tell you, I'm sorry to say, I never told before in all my life; and I am fifty years old. When I was only two I lost my father, and when I was twelve I lost my mother. Then I had to get my own living, and started off to a place with all my little belongings tied up in a red handkerchief. As I went along the road my heart was very heavy, and I did so wish my mother could come and pray with me once more, as she used to do. Oh, didn't she used to pour out her heart before God on behalf of us children! Then I thought, 'I wish I could pour out my heart in prayer like she did.' So, jumping over the wall just below that public house along the road, I went behind some beech trees, and kneeling down, I prayed as I never prayed before. What I said I couldn't tell you, but I e ptied my heart before God; and when I came back over the wall, no one, not even you sir," addressihg the preacher "ever had a lighter heart than I had, and from that day to this I have been secretly following Jesus;" and, with tears in his eyes, he said; "And God forgive me for never telling it out before."—Wesleyan.

Bishop Keener has had Exrience.

He says in the New Orleans Advocate: "Now, what I wish to remark is: Almost every body imagines that he can teach a school, run a country store or publish a paper. I thought so once, but after thirty years of observation in this line, and some experience, it now distresses me to see one attempting to start a new paper. If to live by the skin of ones teeth; if to have nightly sweats; if to see all things in the light of an editorial paragraph; if to make all correspondents, sooner or later, cool friends or active opponents; if to grow empty, year by year and day by day, until you feel—in fact, know—that you are to everybody, except to your own immediate family, "as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal;" if this is a thing to be sought after, then turn editor or publisher of an Advocate, either or both as you have an opportunity."

New Publishers.

Those who have been readers of our paper from the first have noticed within the last few months a serious degeneration in the appearance of the paper. It had gotten to have such a cheap, sickly look that doubtless to many it suggested bankruptcy and suspension. The fault was with the publishers. We bargained and paid for first class mechanical work all along such as we had on the first issue. Our complaints and expostulations were without avail. And now that forbearance has ceased to be a virtue, we have contracted with other publishers, who, we believe, will act more honorably.

The change, of course, makes us incur some additional expense. All this can be made up by a little extra effort on the part of our friends in securtng new subscribers. We hope the improved appearance of the paper will prompt them to make that extra effort.

W. M. BRITT,
Business Manager.

"I Haven't Time."

This oft repeated phrase may be a good reason for not engaging in a proposed work, or it may be a mere excuse. We always have time for what we deem the most important employment. Hence to say, "I haven't time" for any given work is to confess thnt we consider it of less importance than some other work that is to engage us at that time. "I haven't time" is certainly a good and sufficient reason for not reading a trashy book, or for not participating in frivolities that serve only to dissipate the mind. It is often also a good reason for not doing a thing which is really profitable from the fact that it is not the thing most profitable. But this excuse on the lips of Christian professors frequently betrays an alarming worldward tendency in the heart. When a sister in the church "hasn't time" for church work but takes time for the trifling niceties of dress and household ornamentation, or when a brother in the church "hasn't time" to attend the prayer-meeting or to see after the finances of the church but busies himself from morning till night to add to his bank account, it is time for them to inquire if the true treasure of their hearts is not exposed to moth and rust and thieves.

When Prof. Agassiz was urged to spend a season in lecturing with the assurance that he could make a large amount of money by so doing, he replied "I haven't time to make money." To him the scientific work he was engaged in was of more importance than the accumulation of dollars and cents. It was a noble utterance, yet to that vast multitude who regard the accumulation of wealth as the great end of existence, it is almost incomprehensible.

Would that many of our church members could realize that there is work for God, and work that they can do for God, far more important and profitable than money making.

Notes.

The collection for Foreign Missions in our church in Helena a week ago last Sunday amounted to nearly $50. The response to the call for this fund was cheerful and general. No one gave over five dollars.

Our new church in East Helena is now an assured thing. The deed to the lot has been secured, and more than half the money promised for the building. A church is badly needed at that place, there being seven hundred people with no place for public worship except a small school house.

Helena is not to be behind her other enterprises in the point of church building this year. Not less than five new churches will be completed in the city this season.

Bro. Barbee is holding meetings at Wickes this week; and at the same time not forgetting to take subscriptions for his new chnrch at East Helena. We pray good success may be given him at Wickes as elsewhere.

The time for holding the Los Angeles conference has been changed again, this time to October 2nd. We opine the brethren down there wish the Bishops would mature their counsels before publishing them.

Helena celebrated the centennial of Washington's inaugural, but with less enthusiasm than the occasion demanded. If the subject had not grown a little stale by this time we would like to say a little more about it.

The M. E. Church, South purposes to raise $85,500 for church extension, during the next twelve months. Of this amount the Montana Conference is assessed the small sum of $100.

Notes from Stevensville Circuit.

Easter Sunday April 21st was observed by us at this place in an appropriate manner we think. After a discourse on the "Resurrection" to a large congregation, the pastor received into the church by baptism, four of the remaining candidates for church membership held over for different reasons from the winter; two of whom were immersed with due solemnity in the Bitter Root River.

May each of these dear friends who now are numbered among us, show by their future lives and conduct that they have as true Christians "risen wifh Christ" and that their "affections are set on things above."

Ranchers are all busy putting in their crops and irrigating. There is great scarcity of water for the latter purpose on the east side of the valley.

Many of our Burnt Fork friends are not a little excited over the recent discovery of a rich copper and silver lode in their vicinity—an "El Dorado" they think. We trust they will not cease to dig in the other mine from whence so much precious gospel ore has been already dug, to the enrichment of so many hearts, without in the least diminishing the supply.

We are now eagerly on the lookout for two things. 1. To see a copy of our new Hymn Book just published. 2. To learn the date of our next annual conference to be held at Stevensville.

An interesting union service commemorative of the inauguration of the first President of the United States was held in our church on April 30th in which all the resident ministers participated. Would that more "Washingtons" might arise to-day to fill the various high offices in both state and nation in the same devout, patriotic and self-sacrificing spirit!

Our esteemed P. E., Bro. Stanley is neither dead, sick, nor lost, notwithstanding any fears that might have troubled you on account of his long silence.

We were privileged to catch a glimpse of his genial face yesterday. He will drop the shovel for the pen again soon. Verily an "all round man" is our beloved Stanley!

Many are the sympathetic regrets expressed on this side of the conference at the death of dear Sister Stateler who, with her venerable, time-honored husband has been so long and widely known among us. May "strength sufficient for the day" be afforded our bereaved and afflicted Father in Israel.

JAS. B. PARNALL.
STEVENSVILLE, M. T. May 1.

A good brother would like to have us double the size of our paper and says he will pay $2.50 a year's subscription.

It is gratifying to know that it is so readable a sheet to him. We would be pleased to enlarge, and we certainly will at the earliest day that we can afford it.

The unusually dry spring in Montana is giving our mining and agricultural industries rather an apprehensive outlook. The snow is about all melted except in the timbers of the mountains, and our streams promise but a limited supply for irrigation. We still hope for rain. Later: The rain has come in abundance, for which we are devoutly thankful. The face of nature is enlivened, and the faces of the miners and ranchers likewise.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the new advertisements, in this issue, of W. Pinkham and M. P. Sipple.

It is said that a Protestant pastor recently received an invitation to preach in a Roman Catholic town in France of 4,000 inhabitants. He went, and preached in a hall well filled with a very attentive audience. A Protestant congregation was soon organized. And all this resulted from the sale of a Bible, several years ago, by a traveling colporteur.—Epis. M.

It is good for a man to be checked, crossed, disappointed, made to feel his own ignorance, weakness, folly; made to feel his need of God; to feel that, in spite of all his cunning and self-confidence, he is no better off in this world than in a dark forest, unless he has a Father in heaven who loves him with an eternal love, and a holy spirit in heaven who will give him a right judgment in all things, and a Saviour in heaven who can be touched with the feeling of his infirmities.—Charles Kingsley.

"I wish I had the power to reach every Methodist on the round earth. I would say, cease living on the heroism of your fathers, quit glorying in numbers, sacrificing to statistics, and burning incense to the general minutes; down upon your knees and seek and find for yourself the secret of the power of the fathers, a clean heart and the endowment of power from on high, then arise and unfurl the banner of salvation free and full and a common-sense theology."—Rev. Daniel Steele.

Prayer.

Prayer is the uprising and outgoing of intensest desires for things most needed. It is directed to the object of faith, the being who possesses in the highest degree the blessings needed by the suppliant. It is such a concentrating and absorption of desires, purposes and will upon the thing most needed as renders everything else for the time oblivious. Prayer argues that the subject is not in despair; he possesses a degree of faith and hope; he expects something. An intelligent faith directs him to the proper source. Prayer is the spontaneous language of conscious want. The moral state of man naturally is that of dependence, unworthiness, sinfulness, darkness, death. He is a beggar. He needs what God alone can supply. Failing to find happiness in earthly sources, conscious of deep-felt want, man only properly prays when he comes to the true source, with intelligent faith.

God's highest purpose in our existence here, is his glory in our salvation. Nature is laid under contribution to this end. We are authorized to pray for material blessings only as a means to accomplish this end. To pray for temporal prosperity as an end not means, simply to gratify the flesh, is not to exercise intelligent faith, according to the Bible; it is not to pray according to the will of God. And often when we fully purpose in praying for material comforts, to use them only as means, "Our Father," who "sees the end from the beginning," knowing that we would be overcome by worldly influences should our desires be literally fulfilled, withholds the temporal blessings, for the good of our souls. If his glory and our salvation can be best accomplished by poverty, sickness, persecution, death; then God permits these things to fall in our lot. If riches, health, popular favor and long life can best secure this end; then the Lord gives us these blessings. If our petitions, in our greatest exigencies, are "not my will, but thine be done;" if we are most deeply concerned to have the great plan of God executed, then we may submit to the disappointment of our earthly hopes, frustrating our most cherished plans, with the comforting assurance, that all things work together for good to them that love God."

The answer to our prayers may come in an opposite direction from what we expect or desire. The country prayed for the recovery of President Garfield. His sickness and death contributed to the consummation of the divine plan, in bringing the two great parties and sections somewhat estranged nearer together, and more under sanctified influencies. This should have been accepted (perhaps it was by many Christians) as the best answer to their prayers. God was seeking to fulfill his promises, to answer the prayers, and meet the hopes of the faithful, when he led Israel through a long, tedious pilgrimage in the wildrness, to reach Canaan, although many of them failed to trust him, fell through unbelief, and became warning examples to us. J. H. Johnson.

Prohibition.

As applied to the liquor traffic that is the word and the remedy, and nothing else is. There is only one question to be determined in this whole matter, and that is, is the liquor traffic wrong? If so, nothing can make it right. To determine whether it be wrong, we have but to look at its operations and their results. A blind man can see these; if, therefore, he be not without prejudice in the matter he will admit and publicly avow that the work and the results of the work of the liquor traffic are evil, and only evil, and that continually. I believe I am willing to make this agreement: That if the whisky men of the country can produce a single instance of unselfish benevolence done by the liquor league, as such, then we will cease to oppose the business of the drunkard maker. The liquor business starts out on an immoral basis, in that in the exchange of its products for the money or other valuables of its customers it does not give value received. On the contrary, it furnishes a poison that takes away reason, decency, moral sense and health, and fills graves by the premature death of all its subjects. "Am I my brother's keeper," the first interrogatory ever pronounced by man, was a flimsy subterfuge transparent to the eye of God, behind which conscience-accused Cain vainly sought to conceal his crime and likewise avoid the responsibility of fraternal care. In a high and scriptural sense every man is my brother—he is the whisky dealer's brother—and I am therefore held and firmly bound by the first law of human interdependency imposed by the great lawgiver at the beginning, which requires me not only not to harm my brother, but likewise to do for him anything and everything by which his happiness and his usefulness may be promoted. But the liquor traffic does the opposite of this in every case, and all the time, hence the liquor business is wrong. And bear this in mind, that whatever is morally wrong cannot be made right by statutory enactment or legal sanction. Hence, the license system is wrong, and instead of being a remedy against the evil complained of, it actually authorizes and promotes it. And this is true alike of high license and low license.

We conclude, therefore—and both logically and scripturally—that there is no way to rid ourselves of the monster evil and curse of strong drink, but by an absolute prohibition of both the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. But we are met by the objection: "It is unconstitutional." To this we would reply, that the highest judicial authority of the country has declared a contrary sentiment, holding that any state has the right to pass prohibitory laws, or that in the exercise of their inalienable rights of suffrage the people, in whom reside all power, may add a constitutional amendment forever prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. Are not our statute books moreover, laden with prohibitory laws, enacted in the interest of the people? The people are the commonwealth, the legislature is the creature of the people, whenever therefore the people demand by a popular expression of their choice that any law be passed, whether prohibitory or positive, their representatives are compelled both by the constitution and articles of confederation governing them to pass it. There is no option—the people are supreme.

But some little fellow, who has never smelt the smoke of battle, pops up and squeaks out: "Prohibition doesn't prohibit," and by this simple ipse dixit challenges the born rights and boasted independence of the American people. And right here I make another proposition: I will give a year's subscription to the Montana Methodist to any citizen of this territory, or of any territory or state in the Union, who says "prohibition doesn't prohibit," and will prove his assertion by the facts of history in those counties and states where prohibitory laws are in force. Isn't that fair? Or, I will give a year's subscription to the Montana Methodist to any man who says "prohibition doesn't prohibit," who himself is not either a drinker of whisky, or a friend to the seller and manufacturer of whisky.

Any one wishing to contend for the prizes offered above, please address S. W. Barbee.

LEND A HELPING HAND.

Chihuahua needs a Library and Reading Room for our American as well as our Spanish speaking people.

Who will send us a good book, a good periodical, religious or secular in Spanish or English?

Many hours have I spent in prayer and thought as to what I should do and how I should go about reaching and saving our Americans who come to this country and our young Mexicans whom we fail to reach by regular church services. How can we encourage them to spend their leisure hours profitably?

A year ago I endeavored to enlist some of the Y. M. C. A's of Texas in establishing a reading room, but failed to secure the desired help. So the young men, Americans and Mexicans, have only the theater, casino, saloon, bull pen, cock pit, etc., as places of public diversion to while away the time.

March 25th the Lord answered my prayers. Bro. W. B. Palmore, of Independence, Missouri, had been sent by the Lord to visit Mexico. Homeward bound he spent two days with us. Taking in the situation he gave me a liberal sum to start a small plant at Chihuahua, Mexico, a public library and reading room for Americans and Mexican to be called "Palmore Institute."

Who will help to enlarge the plant? All who may read this are earnestly requested to send a good religious or secular book or periodical in Spanish or English to S. G. Kilgore for "Palmore Institute," Chihuahua, Mexico. No more postage is required to send us a book or paper than to send the same to any part of the United States of America. There is no duty on books in ordinary binding. They come through the Mexican mail safely. The friends wishing to send us a good book or map in Spanish can secure catalogue and price list of religious Spanish publications by writing to American Tract Society, 150 Nassau street, New York, and for good and useful secular books in Spanish to D. Appleton & Co., 1, 3 and 5 Bond street, New York, and to John W. Butler, Mexico City.

THE YEARS PASS ON.

When I'm a woman you'll see what I'll do—
I'll be great and good, and noble and true;
I'll visit the sick and relieve the poor—
No one shall ever be turned from my door;
But I'm only a little girl now."
And so the years passed on.

"When I'm a woman," a gay maiden said,
"I'll try to do right, and not be afraid;
I'll be a Christian, and give up the joys
Of the world, with all its dazzling toys;
But I'm only a young girl now,"
And so the years passed on.

"Ah me!" sighed a woman gray with years,
Her heart full of cares and doubts and fears;
"I've been putting off the time to be good,
Instead of beginning to do as I should;
And I'm an old woman now."
And so the years passed on.

Now is the time to begin to do right;
To-day, whether skies be dark or bright,
Make others happy by good deeds of love,
Looking to Jesus for help from above;
And then you'll be happy now,
And as the years pass on.—ANON

Power of Little Things.

A Cunarder put out from England for New York. It was well equipped, but in putting up a stove in the pilot-box, a nail was driven too near the compass. The ship's officers deceived by that distracted compass, put the ship two hundred miles off her course, and suddenly the man on the look out cried, "Land, ho!" and the ship was halted within a few yards of her demolition on Nantucket shoals. A six-penny nail came near wrecking a great Cunarder. Small ropes hold mighty destinies. A minister, seated in Boston at his table, lacking a word, puts his hand before his head, and tilts back his chair to think, and the ceiling falls and crushes the table, and would have crushed him. A minister in Jamaica, at night, by the light of an insect called the candle-fly, is kept from sweeping over a precipice of a hundred feet. F. W. Robertson, the celebrated Englishman, said that he entered the ministry from a train of circumstances started by the barking of a dog. Had the wind blown one way on a certain day, the Spanish Inquisition would have been established in England; but it blew the other way, and that dropped the accursed institution, with 75,000 tons of shipping, to the bottom of the sea, or flung the broken and splintered logs on the rocks.—Selected.

From Elkhorn.

DEAR EDITOR METHODIST:—As you do not receive much news from this part of the work we have taken the liberty to send a few notes which may prove interesting to some of the readers of your excellent paper.

We get preaching service twice each month from Rev. E. C. Finley, pastor of the Boulder circuit, and occasionally ministers from other denominations visit us. The attendance at the service is good, and there seems to be much interest manifested on the part of the people.

On the return of the Rev. Finley from District conference the people presented him with a purse of $75 which had been raised by means of a paper circulated among the miners and mill men. Though some of these men seem to have a rough exterior, yet they are always willing to contribute liberally for the support of the gospel.

On Sunday April the 14th a Sabbath school was organized with a very good attendance. The following officers were elected: Supt., John Andrews; Assistant Supt., James Dunlap. Yesterday, the 21st was the first regular work of the school, and the prospects for an interesting Sabbath school are very flattering. A good supply of first-class literature had been secured before the organization of the school, and the superintendent has ordered a supply of singing books, so that our school will soon be thoroughly equipped for work.

The amount of money due the P. E. Bro Stanley for this year's work at this place will be fully met.

The visits of Bro. Stanley are very valuable and are highly appreciated by every charge in the conference; yet, notwithstanding this there are some places where we have been, where the assessment to defray the expenses of the P. E. has been totally neglected. We hope that each charge will, in the future, see that this is strictly attended to, and not allow the P. E. to go to conference without something to its credit.

We are grieved to learn of the death of Sister Stateler. An old-time friend, has been called to her reward in Heaven. Our deepest sympathies are extended to Bro. Stateler in his great bereavement.

Two Standards.

So far as we have been able to learn, the moral law in the decalogue was given once for all time and for all men. The ceremonial law was for a period—that past, and it was of no significance. Our civil enactments, are made by the times and for the times. What is necessary for this nation may be quite inapplicable to another. What might suit this generation will not meet the demands of the next. In the moral there was perfection at first—in the civil there is progression.

As we understand it, whatever virtue attaches to integrity was intended by "Thou shalt not bear false witness." Whatever good accrues from honesty to-day was embraced in the command against stealth. Since then, we get a moral standard from God, and from him alone, (for man is incapable of making one,) a standard for all moral agents, for every period of history, we inquire, upon what authority we have two moral standards? one for men, and another for women? Such distinction is not made in God's word, nor is such allowed in any moral philosophy, we have read. It is a conventionality—a custom—and that too without justice and without sound reason.

We hold women to the true standard and make a flimsy, pliable rule for men—and the result is fatal to the latter. All places that register the character, such as court trials, prisons, etc., show two males to one female, if not more, who fall below the true.

We see a woman drunk on the street, we exclaim, "what a shame" and indeed it is to her sex—we suffer men to do so without much surprise or alarm.

We advocate one standard, as a matter of justice and as a means of saving the men. Make it as low and disgusting for men to trifle with character as for women.

Again, we think there is a phase of error, in the church's estimate of the religious character of the ministry and the laity. We do not say that it is a dogma of the church, but it is a prevalent idea in the church, a custom, to hold up one standard of piety for the ministry, and another, and lower standard, for the laity.

It may be from dullness, but as yet we have discovered no such distinction as the majority make. That a minister must have qualifications different from the laity we admit, but the question is, wherein the should the difference consist. Negatively considered, we do not think it lies in piety or true holiness. That a minister of the gospel should be exemplary, we admit—can a layman be less so?

Paul says: "I beseech you therefore brethren by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God which is your reasonable service." To whom is this written? To the ministry, and not to the laity?. It is evident that the epistle was chiefly for the laity. Let the church be more exacting in the standard of piety for our good brethren and sisters who make the great body of the church. In the language of the Apostle: "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." We need a consecrated ministry—we need a consecrated laity none the less.

On a New Roll.

A few weeks since we were out in one of the valleys of Montana in which there is a very respectable Good Templars' Lodge. It was our pleasure one evening in the week to address the people of the community on Temperance. Every thing passed off pleasantly and the next day we came home highly pleased with the opportunity we had to talk to a good house of appreciative hearers.

To-day we went to the office and found in our box a letter post-marked Fish Creek, Montana. We opened, expecting that it would begin in the formal way, Mr. Editor, as a communication to the MONTANA METHODIST. But instead it reads as follows:

HALL OF FISH CREEK LODGE No. 5, I. O. G. T., April 27, 1889.
Rev. A. C. Couey, Butte, M. T.

Dear Bro.:—At a regular meeting of Fish Creek Lodge it was ordered that the sum of five dollars be voted from the funds of the lodge and the secretary be instructed to forward the same to you, in appreciation of your services and kindness in lecturing for us at the time of your recent visit among us. In the name of our lodge I extend to you our thanks and wish it were in our power to make it greater. Yours in "Faith Hope and Charity."

OSCAR H. DAVEY, Sec.

We are very thankful to our friends for this token of appreciation, nnd here state that it puts us on a new roll, that of a paid lecturer. It was never so before.

The Editor of the Rocky Mountain Methodist in a recent issue of that paper passes upon the views of the MONTANA METHODIST with reference to ministerial supply in the west in a way to remind us of the good preacher who failed to stick to his text.

1. He commends us for saying that there are places in Montana where we have no call as a church, and with the unwarranted deduction that we have no business here at all says, Arizona and New Mexico are open for us. We would remind our brother that Montana is a "mighty big country, and still a growin."

2. About the method of supply. We are exhorted to remember that methods will not work by themselves. Certainly our brother should have credited us with a knowledge of this fact. We simply add that there is a wrong way and there is a right way to do things, and if we possibly can adopt the right one it is our duty to do it. We certainly should grow wiser by our mistakes of the past.

3. As to sustaining our preachers when we get them, like Artemus Ward said to the Woman's Rights women, "I have a few remarks to remark."—Instead of our good brother, showing us that we were wrong in our position as to the support of our Missionaries he exhorts against secularity in our ministry, and lets the "cat out of the bag" about questionable discriminations made down in the Denver conference in the distributionof the money among the laborers. About that matter this deponent saith not, being an outside issue. We hoped, as he did not indorse our views altogether he would show us a "more excellent way," but——

Por anything you wish in housefurnishings from kitchen to parlor, go to W. Pinkham's, 67-71 West Park St., Butte, Mont.

When you come to Butte, call on M. P. Sipple West Park St. for clothing. You can do well, for we know by personal test. This is a new firm. Successor to Brownsville Woolen Mills.

We see it stated in an exchange that a son of Gen. Sherman is to be ordained a priest in the Roman Catholic Church in Philadelphia next July. By this we presume the old soldier's attachment for Romanism will be stronger still.

Notes.

Bishop McTyeire's successor as president of Vanderbilt university, was elected yesterday, May the 7th. We shall know very soon who fills this important office.

By this time orders have been sent in to the Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South for 50,000 copies of the New Hymn Book—and this is but the beginning.

Our Pacific Conference brethren are very warm in the discussion of the change of time for holding the conference, on the Pacific slope. It seems that there are more cons than pros.

In this issue we have a good article from Brother Barbee on Prohibition. There is no question at all as to the rightness of the principle in prohibition but it becomes effectual only to the extent that public sentiment is able to carry it into practice.

We received a contribution by Brother Andrew from Elkhorn, just a little too late for the last issue, and take pleasure in publishing it this time. It is very encouraging and we hope all will read it. We congratulate our brother in his pleasant surroundings.

Before this issue of the paper is out all our May Meetings will have been held. These consist of the general boards and committees having charge of the connectional interests of our church. We learn that the college of Bishops and Book Committee met Wednesday, May 1. The Sunday School Committee, May 2, and the Board of Missions, Friday May 3.

Tne new West End Church in Nashville, Tennessee, with its furnishings will cost about $50,000. This means a handsome building since mechanics and material are cheap. This amount of money would cover the total expense of the Montana Mission to the M. E. Church South, during its whole history of twenty odd years, so far as dollars and cents are concerned, and we venture to say, far more.

Mrs. E. M. Applebury, a regular contributor to the MONTANA METHODIST has the MS. for her first volume of poetical works, entitled "Gems from the Mountains and Pearls from the Ocean." We give below the subjects of a few of these poems. "We will Climb Life's Rocky Steeps." "Apostrophe to the Eagle and the Flag." Rest Cometh, and then a Victor's Crown." "Praise to Deity." "Eulogy on Longfellow," etc.

Sister Applebury writes us that she purposes the publication of the first vol. as early as arrangements can be made for it. In this we wish her abundant success as a reward for her labors.

The Anaconda Budget.

Our preacher at this place is in luck. He has not gone on a prospecting tour, nor turned aside to mining, but a large-hearted a nd liberal gentleman hereabouts has made him a gift of five hundred shares of mining stock, valued at one dollar per share, in a promising mine a few miles from Anaconda. Some of the output was tested both here and in Butte, and assayed high. May the generous donor have large prosperity in this life, and in the world to come be crowned with life everlasting, in the words of assurance by the Father: "Well done, good and faithful servant; inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me."

Having been pressed for room, we gave the builders of the new hotel, the "Montana," at this place permission to use a considerable part of our grounds to facilitate their work. As the hotel is nearing completion, all the rubbish is being removed, and new fresh dirt will be hauled and the yard leveled, thus leaving our property in a better condition than before. And now the stockholders are looking to the purchase of our entire property, as it is almost indispensable to them. We have grand property here, right on one of the most prominent thoroughfares of the city, and we can name the price and be in no hurry to sell. An "outsider" told me recently that our church property would in a short time be worth from $8,000 to $10,000.

Our house-to-house prayer meeting is quite popular. We have invitations ahead to go to certain places. At our last we had to improvise seats to accommodate the people, and then some had to adopt the primitive style of sitting—not on the grass, but on the floor.

The contract for building that part of the smelting works at this place, which was recently burned, has already been let, and work I presume will begin at once. The structure will be of iron. A new silver mill will also be built. These and their collaterals will cause to be put into circulation a few million within the next twelve months and hundreds of men now out of employment will find work and women and children will be fed and clothed. An impetus will thus be imparted to all lines of business and to the various trades aud professions.

It is now understood that Anaconda is to have a daily paper, to be published in the building of the First National Bank now being constructed at the corner of Main and Third streets. I do not know what the political complexion of the paper will be, but would indulge the hope that it may be a conservator of the best moral and social interests of the community, as well as a leading and safe exponent and advocate of the most correct political principles. The daily press is a potent agency fo either good or evil, just as its management elects. It may feed the people on angel's food, or give them only the garbage of earth. May the "Smelter City" new enterprise mark an advanced era in daily journalism.

S. W. Barbee.

Postal Reformation.

From an Exchange: Postmaster-General Wanamaker has determined to effect one greatly needed reform. There is a provision in the United States revised statutes which forbids that any postoffice should be established in any room in which liquor is sold, or in any room from which there is an entrance into a room in which liquor is sold; but for some time this very salutary regulation has been overlooked, and in a great many country places postoffices have been established in taverns, bar-rooms and groceries which really are groggeries. When it is remembered that the average country postoffice is a place of universal and necessary resort—frequented by ladies and children and by pliable youths as well as by grown men—it is easy to see how disagreeable to some and injurious to others must be the reception and delivery of letters in a saloon atmosphere. If the enforcement of a law terminating this practice in thousands of rural hamlets is a specimen of "Sunday school politics," by all means let us have more of it.

CARPET BONANZA.

During the month of May only (dont ask for it June 1st) we make a special price on the following number of all wool carpets: Nos. 1928-1871-100-1863, at 65c per yard. These are our regular 85c carpets, and none have ever been sold for less before this month.

We do this to largely increase our carpet sales in May. They are going fast so if you want a carpet let us have your order at once.

No matter in what part of Montana you live send your order to us and save money.

MEMORIAL.

The readers of your paper were greatly shocked at the sad intelligence of the decease of our dear sister, Mrs. Melinda Stateler, wife of Rev. L. B. Stateler, which occurred at her home in Jefferson Valley, Montana, on the 13th of April, 1889, at 7 o'clock a. m. The closing of a career so eventful, and the departure from earth of a character so notable deserves more than a passing notice. As many will wish to know the particulars concerning her last illness I can do no better than to give the following extract from a letter written by Brother Stateler with his own hand the day after her decease:

"DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER STANLEY—Yesterday morning at seven o'clock my dear wife, and whom you loved to call "mother" departed this mortal life and entered into rest. But thank God she is not dead, but gone over before, and we shall overtake her after awhile—not very long. I watched by her bedside for more than twenty days and nights. At times we thought the disease was broken, and entertained hope of her recovery, but it would take hold again and continued until it wore her out, and feeble nature gave up and the spirit fled.

O! that you could have been with us even for a short time and bade the trusting one good bye. She often spoke of her trust in the Lord Jesus. She used this language when I asked, "I am trusting, trusting." Getting near the end I inquired, when with great emphasis she said, "yes, yes," and added, "I am getting anxious to go." She has now been gone thirty hours and I have no doubt she feels amply compensated for all her labor and sacrifice in the blessed Master's cause. And then, that joy is eternal. That reward everlasting. May we meet her there.

She had been a member of the church fifty-five years. I saw her when God for Christ's sake spoke peace to her soul, and with what rapturous shouts she praised God for his mercies. Since that time I never knew her to falter in his service. She walked at my side in the toils of the itinerancy for fifty-three long years. She never said stop, never said it was too hard, though we were often very poor. She had gone beyond her three score and ten, yet was vigorous until smitten by disease within a year or two past. Oh, how I shall miss her! Only the grace of God can sustain me. As you have known her long I would thank you if you would write a suitable notice of her departure for the St. Louis Advocate. She received the kind resolutions of sympathy passed by your District Conference and expressed gratitude.

My heart is very sad. I beg you and all my friends to pray for me that I may not sink under the fearful distress that is upon me. Your Brother in deep affliction.

My heart is too full for utterance, as I try to write a few words in memory of our deceased sister. I have known her personally for eighteen years, and have known of her much longer than that, and yet, the longer my acqaintance continued the more I saw and appreciated her sterling qualities, and the stronger grew my attachment for her as a faithful Christian and a heroic and devoted servant of the church of her choice. She was one of the first persons to welcome me to her home in Montana, when I was a boy preacher, a stranger in a strange land, without purse or scrip with which to procure the things needful for my comfort. She took me as one of the family, and her kind words and cheerful, hopeful spirit did much to sustain me in my work during the first years of my ministry in this territory. Her house has been a home for for preachers from time immemorial and scores of itinerants scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, as they read this notice will recall the Lydia-like hospitality that they have enjoyed at her house in the days and years that are gone.

She possessed more than ordinary intelligence, and in early life acquired a fair education and accomplishments that enabled her to make her home happy and attractive. Her life extending through three score and ten years and upwards, and fiftg-three years walking by the side of an itinerant whose life has been spent on the frontier, whose labors have extended from Eastern Iowa and Missouri through Kansas and Indian Territory to Colorado, Montana and Oregon—was an eventful one indeed. It meant something to be a pioneer preacher's wife in the times when she lived and labored. It was before the day of railroads and palace cars and parsonages already furnished. Long journeys were made on horseback or in "dead ex" wagons, and the preacher's family was happy, often, after a long trip to get into a log cabin with a clapboard roof and a dirt floor. Several years of her life were spent among the Indians, where she assisted her husband as teacher. I have heard her speak of her strong affection for the little urchins under her care, some of whom have since become men of prominence in their tribes, and several of them ministers of the gospel.

Mrs. Stateler was a lady of strong convictions and of undaunted courage, though not by any means to be classed with what are known as "strong-minded" women. She was refined and tender in her feelings though ardent in her attachment to persons and principles.

When her house, an elegant and comfortable home, was burned in Kansas by incendiaries she narrowly escaping with her life, being awakened by a friend who saw the flames and ran with all haste to give the alarm—she gathered what little substance remained, hired a man to drive the team, and with her little Eliza, an adopted daughter, started at the commencement of winter, across the bleak snow covered plains to Colorado where her husband had gone to labor. Meeting him at Fort Kearney, they made the remainder of the trip up the Platte River in mid winter camping out in the snow and hauling their fuel with them. From Colorado they traveled with the first train that went into Montana by what is known as the Bridger road. The train was led by the famous Jim Bridger in person, through a trackless wilderness infested by savage foes. It makes one's ears tingle to hear the story of what those brave pioneers endured, while seeking a country where they could worship God with none to molest or make afraid. I have heard Mrs. Stateler tell of cooking and making bread by the campfire when they were hourly expecting the train to be attacked by Indians. They milked the few cows that were driven along. The milk was churned by the jolting of the wagon, and they supplied themselves and sold milk and butter to their fellow travelers which helped to meet the expenses of the trip. After their arrival in Montana, they lived first in a tent and then were rejoiced at getting into a rudely constructed cabin and lived on the proceeds of the few cows that they had brought along. She "tarried by the stuff" while he girded himself and went forth to the battle. She "never said stop," nor murmured that her lot was too hard. She remarked pleasantly to Bishop Marvin when he visited their home in 1872 that "she had kept one man in the field." The Bishop had a good laugh afterward in the conference at Brother Stateler's expense, when he reported having received nothing from the Helena District, ignoring what his wife had contributed. In their struggles with poverty she had acquired habits of industry and economy and the disposition to manage and look after things at home, and some who had but a superficial knowledge of her character regarded her as worldly minded. But when, later in life they saw her lay all her substance upon God's altar and express her wish that it be used only for his glory, witnessed her meek and patient spirit when under sore affliction, and heard her words of trust in Jesus, and her notes of triumph as she passed to the other shore, it was evident that they were mistaken.

I have spoken of her devotion to principle. She felt that it was on this account that her beautiful home in Kansas was laid in ashes. It was interesting to hear her tell of the sense of freedom that she experienced upon reaching the Rocky mountains and of the satisfaction it gave her to get out in the wild canyons all alone and give vent to her pent up feelings and voice forth her cherished sentiments where there was no one to make afraid. She had a warm affection for Montana, and could never speak too highly in its praise.

The cause of the master lay near her heart. She planned and prayed and wrought for it, and in our last conversation she was elated at the prospects for the success of our beloved Methodism in Montana. At our last annual conference she was the first to respond to a call for subscriptions to a fund for the support of worn out preachers and their families, and her response (with five hundred dollars) electrified the audience and made the movement a grand success. She expressed her wish that all she might leave in the world should go to the church.

It was affecting to witness her devotion to her husband. The strength of the last years of her life was devoted almost exclusively to nursing and caring for him when he was left so helpless from that paralytic stroke two years ago. She was with him by day and by night, and doubtless her tender nursing did much to prolong his life, while possibly the heavy tax upon her strength, together with the great anxiety experienced shortened her own. She leaves several sisters, an adopted daughter and three grandchildren and other relatives in Missouri, Kansas, Montana and Oregon to mourn her loss. It is a sore affliction to our venerable brother to be left alone in his old age. But God was merciful in sparing her to work with him so long. He has the sympathy of hosts of friends throughout the country and of the church he has served so long and so well. We are all mourners. It is hard to think we shall see the familiar face of our dear sister no more in the flesh. We will miss her when we visit the old home, we will miss her at our annual conferences. Already a sense of loneliness steals over me when I think she is no longer in the church militant. But whither she has gone we know and the way we know. We shall strive to meet on the other shore. She rests from her labors and her works follow her. Let us all be faithful unto death and ere long we shall receive the crown of life.

"In hope of that immortal crown,
I now the cross sustain,
Aud gladly wander up and down
And smile at joy and pain:
I suffer out my three score years
Till my deliverer come
And wipe away his servant's tears
And take his exile home."

E. J. STANLEY.

The Lottery.

We insert one of Dr. B. Caradine's objections to the Louisiana State Lottery, which is an extract from a series of sermons recently delivered in the Carondelet street church New Orleans:

Our first is in regard to its incorrect and even false representation of itself to the world and before the world.

In the public prints it declares that it is founded for educational and charitable purposes. We all know why this is done. That this is upon their part a peculiar recognition of the prevalence of Christian sentiment. The stockholders of the lottery know, as many of you know, that open open oppression and systems of robbery cannot exist, much less flourish, in these days unless they take a name from the Christian vocabulary and counterfeit a Christian virtue. Satan can no longer go about as a roaring lion, but appears as an angel of light, or stands among the worshipers of God. The wolf is still among the people, and will ever be; but he appears not as a wolf; in order to succeed in his destructive work he has to wear the wool of a sheep and manipulate a sheep's voice. You will notice that Mormonism never confesses to bigamy, but, in strict conscientiousness and in the name of religion, takes to itself many wives. The saloon, with the fangs and fierceness of a wolf, bleats mildly about personal and private rights, and about every man being entitled to a living, and thas he forces no one into his den. The church sets up its raffles that are nothing but the wolfish spirit of gambling: but it pulls the wool of a Christian phrase over the gaming practice, and then the wool over the eyes of the people, and baas away to its heart's content about Christian benevolence.

And so, in like manner, the lottery—that is generally acknowledged to be, and is, the most stupendous gambling scheme upon the earth—will never admit the imputation, will not allow the name, but sanctimoniously draws down the corners of its mouth, rolls up its eyes until you can see nothing but the whites, folds its hands in its woolly cloak, and baas away about being run for educational and charitable purposes.

That it was not incorporated for that intent you and I know as well as the stockholders themselves; that it was a gaming institution from its incipiency; that it was founded to make money for its incorporators in a free, and immoral way, and that the sum paid the Charity Hospital was simply the toll exacted at the legislative gate.

And so we protest against this false representation of itself to the world. The protest is founded on justice, and is in strict harmony with the practice of men. When a man out in the world tries to appear other than he is, the laugh and jeer and advice of the multitude to him is, to come out and show your true self!

Why Not Speak to Them?

A young lady called to see a friend who was ill, and on leaving, one of the children, a sweet, intelligent little girl took her down stairs. She was her own especial favorite and pet, and yet, being naturally of an extremely reserved disposition, she had never spoken one word to her on the subject of religion. Looking down into the thoughtful, loving eyes, under a sudden impulse she asked the question: "Maude, my darling, do you love Jesus?"

To her astonishment the child stopped abruptly, and drawing her into a room which they were passing, she shut the door, and clinging closely to her, burst into a flood of tears. Looking up at last with a glad, happy face, she said, "Miss Alice, I have been praying for six months that you would speak to me of Jesus, and now you have! Every time I have been to your house I hoped you would say something, and I was beginning to think you never would."

It was a keen reproach to her friend, and one that she never forgot.

Little Maude is now an earnest young soldier in Christs army. No one who knows her doubts the reality of her religion, and it certainly gives her character an attractive grace which nothing else could give.

How many poor, sad, seeking souls, like little Maude, wonder why Christians never speak to them of the things nearest their hearts! O Christian, why do you neglect to let your light shine, and guide these weary wanderers home to God?—Ex.

Notes.

It will be three weeks before the second Wednesday in June, which will be the date of the next issue of our paper.

It has been suggested that Charles Wesley's poetical works should be compiled, published and put in the course of study for our young preachers.

For educational purposes in behalf of the Colored M. E. Church in America, the Board having the matter in charge has apportioned the several annual conferences of M. E. Church South amounts which aggregate $8,000 for 1889–90.

A Nashville correspondent says of the new Hymn Book that, "the old 'Zion's Harp' and 'Songs of Zion' come back to renew their youth and repeat their joyous choruses for the oncoming millions of the singing shouting hosts of our Methodism."

We learn that Brother Stateler is in the city at this writing. We have not seen him, but hear his health is feeble. Still he was able to preach at Boulder last Sunday.

The children had the full benefit of their day with us last Sunday. They had a sermon from the pastor in the morning, and in the evening gave their own well prepared exercises to a large audience.

As was generally expected, Bishop Hargrove has been elected to succeed Bishop McTyeire as President of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University. That great institution grows greater year by year. The new building for the Law and Dental departments is nearly completed.

Bro. R. F. Jarvis of the Bozeman circuit is expecting to go east to attend school at the close of this conference year. We hope some other faithful preacher will be on hand to take his place in our ranks. Bro. Jarvis is not discouraged nor dissatisfied with the work in Montana; on the contrary he is well pleased and promises to return as soon as he finishes his course at school.

We see it stated that Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt has ordered that the Sabbath shall be strictly observed along the line of his railroads east of Chicago. Freight trains shall not be moved on that day except in cases of necessity, and passenger trains shall be reduced to the minimum required by travellers.

If the statistics on the subject be correct, Methodism leads the denominations in the number of religious papers.

Some Observations on Christian Science.

Lately a good many people of this city have become interested in Christian Science. About a year ago a lady, teacher and professor of that new doctrine, came here and opened a school of "Christian Science Mental Healing." From positions she had held in the east it was evident that she fairly represented the theory. She taught several classes in the art of mental healing, and got no little practice herself among those who had bodily ailments. We had personal knowledge of some rather remarkable cures wrought under her care.

When a friend invited us to join a class, kindly offering to pay the cost, we gladly accepted the invitation, and went, we believe, with prejudice in favor rather than against the doctrine. We do not propose to give any outline of the teaching, but simply to make some observations.

1. We were told that as a rule those who were not professors of religion were the quickest to understand and the readiest to accept the doctrine of Christian Science. And we personally know a number of infidels who have accepted Christian Science and also the Bible as taught by them. They claim that the prejudice of Church people keep them from accepting Christian Science, as readily as do the unbelievers. To our mind the difference is in the credulity of the infidels. For, as a class, no people are so ready to believe that which they desire to believe, as are the opposers of the orthodox faith. And anything against the Bible, or against the orthodox interpretation of the Bible, is accepted by them upon the slightest evidence.

2. Their interpretation of the scriptures is for the most part very fanciful. It is evident the theory was not gotten from the scriptures, but first formed, and afterwards the effort made to bring the scriptures to the theory. The plain meaning of God's word is not that of Christian Science. They acknowledge as much, and say that the Lord's injunction to "search the scriptures" teaches that the true meaning is not on the surface but must be sought for in some mystical sense. According to which they can, of course, get most any meaning out of it they choose.

3. We were advised not to discuss the subject out of the class, but to dwell in our thoughts on certain expressions that were given us, such as, "There is no life, substance or intelligence in matter," "Spirit is everything," "Matter is mortal error." In the class our honest questions were not always received kindly. Constant draft was made on our credulity.

4. They say they pray, but not as other Christians pray. We do not know how it is; certainly not as Christ and the Apostles prayed. At their meetings for the promotion of their ideas held here every Sunday afternoon, they have times for silent prayer, but there is nothing audible.

5. We do not believe, with some, that their works are of the devil. We believe they hold some valuable truths along with a great deal of error. Many of those who receive benefit from their treatment lose it after a short time, but some are permanently helped. Many are better morally after they accept the doctrine than they were before. We would say with Christ "forbid them not" in their good work, but avoid their errors and absurdities. The truth will abide, the errors will be discovered in the course of time and be abandoned.

Our Departed Bishops.

At the close of the introduction to the memorial sermon on Bishop McTyeire which Bishop Keener preached at Vanderbilt University, May 5th, he speaks of the host of worthies and noble ones in the church triumphant, and adds:

Among them it is not difficult to imagine those noble persons who have been our leaders, and have entered into glory. What a galaxy! "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever."

That grand military spirit at the head of the column, who in the hour of disruption chose the fortunes of the weaker party, upon whose shoulders rested the mantle of an Asbury—Joshua Soule.

And William Capers, the Chrysostom of our Church, he now knows the meaning of "the voice of the bird that cries, Eternity, eternity, eternity, eternity!"

And Henry B. Bascom—great in council, and in the pulpit sublime as the trump of God. There were left none like him.

And John Early—courteous, patriotic, the soul of Virginia Methodism, who at the time of his death knew more persons in heaven from Virginia than any one in the state.

And James O. Andrew, upon whom in 1844 there centered as a pivot the very existence of Southern Methodism. I heard, I only, the last whisper of his great spirit—my ear was close to his lips—"Victory! victory!"

And Robert Paine, whose manhood, mind, and heart were for thirty-six years the joy and strength of the Episcopacy; who brought down to us intact the broad statesmanship of the wise and venerable McKendree.

And Enoch M. Marvin, whose ministry and personal friendship were as a benediction from heaven. His memory fills the church as the precious ointment filled the house at Bethany.

And William M. Wightman. full of Wesleyan doctrine and scholarship, in speech fervid, chaste, spiritual—for fourteen years continuously he held the defenses of our Zion by the strength and polish of his pen.

And David S. Doggett, whose classic oratory was perfected by the unction of the Holy One. He is now on the Areopagus of glory talking with St. Paul.

And the dear old man of Kentucky, Hubbard H. Kavanaugh, full of rhythmic speech and heavenly rapture: "My brother, when I get to heaven, I don't expect to get down to any serious work for a thousand years."

And Geo. F. Pierce, who was all nobility, generosity, transparency, heroism and harmony. "I am so happy!" said he, when dying, and holding his brother's hand. The peerless son of a peerless preacher, and greater than his father.

And the beloved Linus Parker. I knew him from his conversion, who to the ripeness of his intellect added the ingenuousnesss and gentleness of a Melancthon. In the pulpit he had the finish of Atterbury, and with his pen the charm of an Addison. He too has struggled into the immortal Sonship.

And my dear brother and fellow-laborer, Holland N. McTyeire, whose whole life was as the bow of a strong man; strength in his pen, strength in his tongue, strength in his will; and he was strong in the integrity of his character. We had run in our lives for years in lines parallel to each other, and to this day have never been far apart. He too has passed over, a little in advance.

All these have I known intimately. Delightful fellowship—only less than heaven.

"My company before is gone,
And I am left alone with Thee."

JACKSON, MISS., May 14, 1889.
DEAR BRO. BRITT:—Returning home from an absence of several weeks I find the Montana Methodist of April 24th. I see many things to encourage, but am very sad to read the notice of Sister Stateler's death. How vividly I recall her presence at the conference session in Butte last July! So prompt and constant in attendance on all the meetings and so interested in all our work, she was a benediction to us all. The matriarch of our Montana Methodism has passed to the better land. Throughout her long and checkered life she was firm and loyal in her devotion to Christ and unvarying in her attachment to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. For her church she made sacrifices and suffered hardships during the dark days of war worthy of mention among the canonized saints of God in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. Her escape from her burning dwelling and flight to the far west and her heroic toils there for half a jubilee of years are written in the chronicles of the skies. To her venerable husband I offer a brother's sympathy. For him many prayers will be offered. May his eventide be light.

Before this you have learned of the date of your conference and that Bishop Granberry will visit you again. May the Stevensville session be the best in all your history. I shall look for good reports from the brethren.

Truly and fraternally,
CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

"I like music, and a piano sets my husband crazy. I am fond of social life and my companion is a recluse. I am trying to be good and my life-long associate is very bad. What shall I do?" My answer is, there are certain good reasons for divorcement. The Bible recognizes them. Good society recognizes them. But it must be the very last resort, and only after all resonable attempts at reclamation and adjustment have proved a dead failure."—Talmage.

Anaconda Tid-bits.

Last Friday evening I closed a meeting which had continued six days. There was good interest from without, and the life of the church was quickened. One was received by certificate from the M. E. Church, who went immediately to work praying publicly and exhorting sinners. On Sunday evening the church was well filled, and a deep solemnity rested upon the people while the preacher spoke on "The Dark Corners of Sin."

On opening my box at the post-office Monday morning, I was surprised at the changed appearance of "THE MONTANA METHODIST." The paper before the recent change always seemed to me to have the "big head"—that is, its head was out of proportion with its body. There is now much more harmony, the body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in tone. We would modestly suggest to the printer, however when he makes up the next "form," to put the date line in "caps" entire—it will make a better appearance, thinks a brother typo. The Business Manager and Editor will please be congratulated on the improved mechanical make-up of the paper.

St. Mark's Episcopal church at this place gave a "guild entertainment" at the opera house a few nights since, for the purpose I believe of raising funds with which to erect a church building. Dancing was announced as part of the programme, and which was to continue, if I mistake not, from nine to twelve, midnight. That good man, Bishop McIlvaine of the diocese of Ohio, replied to a young lady who asked him, "Is it any harm for a Christian to dance?" "No Christian ever wants to dance." Look on this picture, and then on that. No wonder when professed Christians indulge in public and promiscuous dancing, the "german" among the rest, that sinners are encouraged to do the same thing, and even on the solemn Sabbath, as was the case here on the Sabbath following the above "entertainment," when a brass band of the city furnished a part of the music. Modern dancing is wrong in its inception, and in its practice, and has no justification or warrant in the scriptures. We endorse all that the good Protestant Episcopal Bishop McIlvaine said on the subject. Byron, who "touched his harp, and nations stood entranced," because of his immoral character, was the last man to bring any charge against worldly pleasures or sinful indulgencies. It may be news to some, therefore, to learn that he wrote down dancing among the ugliest things which men and women might practice. He died before the introduction of the "german"—hence his poetic genius was displayed in a description of the "waltz," a kind of dance in his day. Listen, ye lovers of the Terpsichorean art, while Byron sings:

"Endearing waltz—to thy more melting tune
Bon Irish jig and ancient rigadoon.
Scotch reels, avaunt! and country dances, forego
Your future claims to each fantastic toe!
Waltz—waltz alone—both legs and arms demands,
Liberal of her feet, and lavish of her hands;
Hands which may freely range in public sight
Where ne'er before—but—'pray put out the light.'
Methinks the glare of yonder chandelier
Shines much too far, or I am much too near;
And true, though strange, waltz whiskers this remark,
'My slippery paths are safest in the dark.'
But here the muse with due decorum halts,
And lends her longest petticoat to waltz!"

I was delighted the other night at a Salvation army meeting to hear the testimony of a converted Jew, who hails I believe from Helena. His words seemed to be the expression of a heart changed by the blood of Jesus Christ, and he rejoiced in the fact that the Son of God rejected by his fellow-countrymen was his personal Savior. His exhortation to sinners was very much like that of Peter to Cornelius. He alluded to the fact that recently in Deer Lodge a Chinaman had renounced his paganism and embraced Christianity, and said, "If the Lord Jesus Christ can save a Jew and a Chinaman, he will save you—come to Jesus to-night." He further added, "I believe the Jews are coming to Christ every day." How my heart thrilled at hearing a Christian experience from a converted Jew, and the prophecy of God's words that His ancient people should eventually return to Him seemed to me to be budding into fulfillment. Let Christians everywhere pray for the speedy ushering in of the joyful day.

Tell the readers of THE METHODIST that, sympathizing with their anxiety to learn of his whereabouts, as there has been no echo from Corvallis in a long time, I have just learned where Stanley (?) is. At last accounts he was with Emin Pasha, and en route with a very large following of natives to Zanzibar. He will return however, in time to hold each preacher's quarterly meeting before conference.

S. W. BARBEE.

Men Who Make Methodism.

Dr. Wm. A. Smith, in the conference, said at the announcement of the death of Lewis Skidmore that "the greatest man we had is dead." Skidmore was a giant as debater, preacher and in counsel. Great as were his powers, he did not think he could do it all himself." Under his sulky he had a big box, and carried bushels of books on his rounds. They worked for good. Well did Dr. John E. Edwards say there were mighty men in those days. Every one was diligent to put a Methodist treatise and periodical in the homes of the people. Bishop Marvin said he carried Methodist books to his preaching places when a Bishop; and Bishop Key told some North Carolina ministers that he used to load up with our literature to sell when he started on his district. A philosophic historian says that Mr. Wesley did more by his press than by his preaching.—Richmond Ad.

They have, according to a report, a strange preacher in Georgia—a twelve year old boy, untaught, unlearned, very poor in this world's goods and yet a wonderful preacher, quoting largely and correctly from the New Testment and explaining passages with remarkable accuracy. Lately at the earnest request of many people he preached in the opera house at Atlanta to a crowd of people representing all classes and became the talk of the town. He is said to be modest, unassuming and yet did not seem to be embarrassed. He won all hearts and provision is being made for his edncation. Such is the report.—St. Louis Ad.

Dr. McAnally says: "Why commencement sermons should ignore religion we can not conceive."

Possibly, if his editorial of May 8th is read by our commencement preachers they may tone up during the approaching season.

Philip E. Evans.

EDITOR MONTANA METHODIST: It becomes my painful duty to inform you of the death of our dear friend and brother, Mr. Philip E. Evans, which sad event took place at his home near Deer Lodge at at 1:15 o'clock, Saturday, May 11, 1889, after a short illness. Bro. Evans was born in Cooper county, Mo., in 1833, came to Montana in 1864, and has lived near Deer Lodge since 1870. He was not a member of the church, but she had no truer friend. Our new church, which he worked so hard to build the last year of his mortal life will stand for many years as a testimonial to the noble and generous impulses that inspired the heart now still, to lay so fitting a tribute at the Masters feet. He was the first to subscribe to the building fund of the new church, and the first to be buried from its altar. His funeral service was conducted by the writer on Sunday, May 12, 1889, in the presence of the largest congregation ever seen in Deer Lodge at a funeral. After which he was laid to rest, with the beautiful and impressive rites of the Masonic fraternity, of which he was an honored member. May the Lord comfort the bereaved family.

JNO. MOORE, Pastor,

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

THE FLY.

Baby bye, here's a fly;
Let us watch him, you and I,
How he crawls up the walls
Yet he never falls!
I believe with six such legs
You and I could walk on eggs.
There he goes on his toes,
Tickling baby's nose.

Spots of red dot his head;
Rainbows on his back are spread;
That small speck is his neck;
See him nod and beck.
I can show you, if you choose,
Where to look to find his shoes—
Three small pairs, made of hairs;
These he always wears.

Black and brown is his gown.
He can wear it upside down;
It is laced round his waist;
I admire his taste.
Yet though tight his clothes are made,
He will lose them, I'm afraid,
If to-night he gets sight
Of the candle light.

In the sun webs are spun;
What if he gets into one?
When it rains he complains
On the window-panes.
Tongue to talk have you and I;
God has given the little fly
No such things, so he sings
With his buzzing wings.

He can eat bread and meat;
There's his mouth between his feet,
On his back is a pack
Like a peddler's sack.
Does the baby understand?
Then the fly shall kiss her hand;
Put a crumb on her thumb
Maybe he will come.

Catch him? No, let him go,
Never hurt an insect so;
But no doubt he flies out
Just to gad about.
Now you see his wings of silk
Drabbled in the baby's milk;
Fie, O fie, foolish fly!
How will he get dry?

All wet flies twist their thighs,
Thus they wipe their heads and eyes;
Cats, you know, wash just so,
Then their whiskers grow.
Flies have hairs too short to comb,
So they fly bareheaded home;
But the gnat wears a hat.
Do you believe that?

Flies can see more than we,
So how bright their eyes must be;
Little fly, ope your eye;
Spiders are near by.
For a secret I can tell—
Spiders never use flies well.
Then away, do not stay.
Little fly, good-day.

—THEODORE TILTON.

Too Forward.

Walter Harvey was a boy who stood very much in need of information, for the reason that he thought he already knew more than a great many persons much older than he. "Where did you spend the summer?" asked a lady, calling upon Walter's mother.

"At Chester Falls, a very pretty place about a hundred miles north from here," replied Mrs. Harvey.

"O ma! it isn't a hundred miles, it's only ninety-two," volunteered Walter.

"I said about a hundred, Walter," replied Mrs. Harvey, in a tone of annoyance.

"What did you find to do there?" asked the caller.

"Oh! many things. There is a large lake, and"—

"Pshaw! that wasn't a large lake. I wouldn't call it anything but a pond," said Walter.

His mother reproved him with a sharp look, and proceeded. "There are pretty drives in all directions"—

"Yes, and you can fish in the lake, and go out rowing, and there's bushels of berries in the woods, and you can"—

"Walter, I am talking" said Mrs. Harvey, sharply. "I shall have to ask you to go out of the room;" and he went, with a sullen look on his face, leaving his mortified mother to enjoy the rest of her friend's call as best she could.

Such boys are not uncommon. They are an annoyance to their friends, and a source of mortification to their parents, who are not altogether blameless for this defective trait in the boy's character. It probably had its origin in a way the parents had of "showing him off" when he was a child, and of praising certain smart forwardness that should have been checked instead of encouraged. — Youth's Companion.

An eminent minister, while delivering a lecture to some theological students on oratory, said: "Young gentleman, don't stand before a looking-glass and make your gestures. Pump yourself brim full of your subject till you can't hold another drop, and then knock out the bung and let nature caper," That's it. When a man is full of his subject then he will be effective. Enthusiasm moves men. Burning zeal wakes up men. A hot iron, though it be blunt, will burn its way. The old Methodist preacher's were effective men, because they were men full of living religion. Hence Dr. Chalmers remarked: "Methodism is Christianity in earnest." Wm. Wirt said that eloquence was found in one word—"Sympathy." Spiritual pathos effects a congregation to tears. There is too much of this dry thunder preaching—noise without power. —Raleigh Christian Advocate.

The Pulpit and the Altar.

It does not seem debatable that there may be legitimate distinctions in the service of God. We may rightfully hold that there is the important and the more important parts to keep prominent in His worship. But while this is so, it is not right to conclude that there is place for indifference. In song, in prayer, in scripture reading, in the sermon, in the administration and the reception of the ordinances, in a word, from the time we enter God's house till we retire we should be in devout frame. It is held by some that certain churches magnify the altar—by others that certain other churches magnify the pulpit, and we cannot deny but that there is at least the semblance of truth in such opinions. Roman Catholics and High church Episcopalians are ranked among the former, Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians among the latter class.

In past ages, "Among the Romans altars were of two kinds, the higher and the lower: the higher were intended for the Celestial gods, and the lower for the terrestrial." We are disposed to say, that history repeats itself, and Christian Rome, under the direction of his highness, the infalllible vicar of heaven, even the universal pope, pays a deference, yea, more, a real homage to the terrestrial god, in the form of a transubstantiated host.

With less palpable idolatry, but with scarcely less pride do the right reverend bishops with ducal mitre, and silken gown (assisted by the chants of surpliced choristers) lead the admiring throng in ritualistic holiness, or with a sense of exclusiveism, and with a claim of divine right to the holy, unbroken succession, confirm the young worldian, and ordain the clerical fledgling to the first grade of high church pretension. All this, along with a little sermonette, we hold is to minify the pulpit, and to magnify the altar and ordinances. On the other hand to "examine ourselves whether we be in the faith" let us visit the Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians, to see if there be no "spot or wrinkle or any such thing" to blur their holiness. Is there not a measure of prayerlessness in the assembling crowd? In the singing, is there no note of discord, if measured by the moral harmonies of heaven? In the prayer, who follows every word, who holds communion with the preacher and with God?

In the scripture reading, who is faultless in appropriating God's oracles?

Then the preacher with the silence of an admiring audience, has he not the opportunity to prove himself worthy the praise of men, with fifty minutes to an hour of eloquent speech? Here is the danger, that we magnify the pulpit and possibly minify the altar.

Max Muller has rightly said: "If we would but confess, friend to friend; if we would be but honest, man to man, we should not want confessors or confessionals. If Christianity is to retain its hold on Europe and America, if it is to conquer in the Holy War of the future, it must throw off its heavy armor, the helmet of brass and the coat of mail, and face the world like David, with his staff, his shoes and his sling· We want less of creeds, but more of trust; less of ceremony but more of work; less of doctrine, but more of love."

For Another Year.

Now that our May meetings, having in charge our connectional interests are over and the results of the deliberations have been given the church at large through our general organ, we have before us the basis for calculation as we forecast another year, in our fields of labor.

The policy of the Mission Board, so far as we are able to judge from the figures in the appropriations, is to direct the heart of the church chiefly to our foreign work—China, Japan, Brazil, Mexico and Cuba. These fields with our Indian and German work get the chief support—having appropriated to them something near $190,000. Our field denominated the Western Work of the church from Texas to the extreme northwest, gets about $45,000. These sums added to the amount allowed for travelling expenses approximate, $250,000.

As we have said before, no doubt the board wished for dollars where it had cents to enter the open doors.

The Denver conference appears to have fallen among the favored few, in that she has by far the largest appropriation ever made to that field. The Columbia conference has a slight increase of funds, but nothing comparable to the needs. Western work cannot expect very great advance, unless there is something like the "cruse of oil" in her shekels. The extreme Northwest, including, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon will just have to be cheerful in the midst of adversity, and hope for better things in the future.

Montana has just the same amount given her as last year—which means "hope deferred." Surely we have as much right as our U. S. mints to say, "In God we trust." We will do what we can, and leave it in our Master's hands.

We will not be so thoughtless as to assume the roll of the censor, but accept the results as the very best that could be done. "Wisdom is justified of her children." Nous verrons. In the Nashville Advocate we learn, as we expected: "All the business of the board was done prayerfully, carefully, and patiently. Nothing was done hastily. In planning for the work in the different fields, and in the appropriation of the sacred funds contributed by our people for the evangelization of the world, the minutest details were canvassed closely."

Notes.

The time for holding the Montana conference is August 14. Bishop J. C. Granbery is to preside.

It is said that Homer Ossian and Milton the three greatest poets of the world were totally blind.

The total membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church South as found in Dr. Harrison's latest statistics, is 1,140,095.

Mr. Gladstone has said: The old, old story, told of in an old, old book, and taught with an old, old teaching, is the greatest and best gift ever given to mankind.

The Book Committee in their late meeting in Nashville set apart $17,000 to be distributed among the annual conferences for the benefit of the superannuated preachers.

The Missionary appropriation for the support of laborers in Montana is three thousand dollars. We are almost self-supporting. We have to be.

Dr. Carradine on the Louisiana State Lottery says: "Only a few days ago a gentleman informed me of a young lady residing in a certain city who invested all her little possessions in the great abomination, and reduced to poverty and despair, deliberately took her life." There is a branch of this iniquitous business in Butte, Montana.

The Board of Missions requested the bishops to preach on the subject of Missions on Sunday morning at all the annual conferences in their next round of Episcopal visitations.

Butte City again entertains the lively hope that she is soon to have free delivery mail system. Promises from Washington have thus inspired the Silver City of the West.

The Southern Baptist Convention recently held in Memphis, Tennessee, passed a resolution of sympathy with the American Sabbath Union in its labor to secure one day of rest in seven, and also a resolution favoring the entire prohibition of the liquor traffic. Well done, brethren.

A note from Rev. W. T. Goulder says: "I am in the midst of my meeting at Silver Star, Mont. Interest good, prospects good. Bro. J. H. Johnson is with me, doing some fine work in the way of preaching able sermons and gaining the hearts of the people."

Rev. Jno. Moore, our pastor at Deer Lodge, Montana, sends us an account of the death and funeral service of Mr. Philip E. Evans, saying that an obituary will be furnished at some future time. We extend to the bereaved family our sympathy in this sad affliction.

The election for delegates to the Constitutional Convention, to prepare a constitution for the young state of Montana, resulted in a democratic majority. These gentlemen elect, now have a fine opportunity to show their constituents what genius they possess for statesmanship.

Would not our Western Work with a voice as of one man, rise up and call him blessed, who from an appreciation of our needs should add $10,000, $15,000, $25,000 or $50,000 more to the small appropriations the Board has been able to make. We entertain a faint hope that some good man will do this before the year is past.

Rev. John H. Nichols of the Tennessee Conference has given us the Grub Ax, the Pump, the Furnace, etc., and has the Curry Comb on the way. Our members would do well to get these books from Nashville and read them.

In addition to appropriations reported in the Nashville Christian Advocate as made by the Board of Missions, we learn later that from the Branch Bequest, $2,500 have been appropriated to the China Mission, and $12,500 more to the Japan Mission—giving China and Japan, respectively, $32,607 and $40,285 for another year.

A Hard Yoke.

An intelligent young man recently said in substance to a servant of the Lord who spoke to him about his soul, "I was a member of the church for several years, and sincerely tried to lead a Christian life. I listened to sermons, attended the prayer meetings, taught in the Sunday school, and can honestly say I did my best; but to be candid, although Christians are all the time declaring it is an easy yoke and a light burden, I did not find it so; for I must confess it was a hard yoke and a heavy burden, and at last I threw it off."

"There is no doubt at all," replied the minister, "that it was a hard yoke, and there are thousands of professing Christians who would say the same thing, if they were as frank as you are. But permit me to ask, were you not trying to be saved?" "Of course I was," said the young man. "That is, you put your neck under the yoke with the hope that by wearing it you would finally gain eternal life?" "Just so," he answered. "Your mistake, my friend, consisted in this, that you did not notice what Jesus says in the verse immediately preceding the one which presents to us the believer bearing the yoke. In that former verse He says, 'Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest,'(Matt. xi. 28), before telling us to take His yoke. Did you ever have the rest He gives, the assurance of salvation through simple faith in His name, without the slightest reference to your own doings?" "Never," he said. "No wonder you found the yoke hard; but observe, it is not only the Christian who, having first gone to Him for the rest He gives, declares it is an easy yoke, but Christ Himself declares it, and Christ tells no lies."

The experience of this young man aptly describes the condition of multitudes in all the churches of the land. Owing to the abominable legalism that prevails, there is no certainty of salvation, but at best a vague idea that by joining the church, and keeping from doing anything very bad, and living as nearly right as possible, it may be that heaven will be won in the end. Of course this kind of a service is a hard yoke. Such is the natural selfishness of the human heart; that if a man undertakes to work for his salvation, he will drive as close a bargain with God as he can. If you tell a slave to pick 150 pounds of cotton during the day, or at its close you will lay 150 lashes on his back, it will be a hard yoke, and he will be sure and not do any more than the allotted task. But if you pay a great sum for his freedom, and suffer in his behalf nigh unto death, and adopt him as a son into your family, and succeed in implanting within him something of your own generous love, and then tell him that your interests and your honor are involved in securing a large crop of colton, you have put upon him an easy yoke, and he will strain every muscle, and your kindness will be his song in all the hours of toil.

So if a soul is put upon a course of doing in order to be saved, instead of believing, it is pursuing an unfinished work, and therefore can never have rest. Meanwhile eternity, because hidden, seems far off, and earth with its attractions is near; and the weary one necessarily turns to that which is seen and temporal for the rest he seeks; and the hungry one, receiving no satisfaction from a Christ not yet found, turns to the very husks the swine do eat for the food he craves. This is the secret of much of the wretchedness and worldliness that are in the church.

But if Legalism is bad, Antinomianism is worse, for it is meaner. When a man or woman can say, "I am saved by grace," and then take advantage of the salvation which costs us nothing, but which cost Christ everything, to live according to the ways, the maxims, the principles, the aims, and the amusements of those who despise Him, the lowest depth of human degration is reached. "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest:" this cuts up legalism by the roots. "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart;" this cuts up Antinomianism by the roots.—Gospel Tract.

"Six thousand years ago God flung this world out of his right hand; but he did not throw it out in a straight line, but curvilinear, with a lease of love holding it, so as to bring it back again. The world started from his hand pure and Edenic. It has been rolling on through regions of moral ice and distemper. How long it will roll, God only knows; but it will in due time make a complete circuit and come back to the place where it started—the hand of God—pure and Edenic."—Talmage.

The Power of a Father's Love.

There was a family in Manchester, England, composed of two sons, a daughter and their father. The poor mother had died, happily in the Lord. One of the lads, however, was addicted to many vices. His character was blasted, and all hope of doing better blighted; his home was deserted by him; but his father, who had a loving heart, never turned the key against him, but the door was always open for him whenever he would return.

The brother and sister professed religion and considered their dissolute brother a disgrace to them, and their father's house. They tried, therefore, to induce their father to turn him out of doors. The father told them, however, that he would do no such thing, because he was his father, while they were only his brother and sister. Finding that they could not prevail upon him, they induced a friend to go to the father and persuade him to shut the door against the prodigal; but the old man's only reply was: "You pretend to be his friend, but I am his father, and can never do it; but," said the father, "we will meet on a given day and try and bring this unpleasant business to a conclusion. We will meet here with his brother and sister and himself, and see whether we are to shut the door against him or not."

The day came, and they met at the father's house and had tea together. All sat around the table except the poor prodigal, whose tea was handed to him as he sat in a corner, as the brother and sister could not allow him to sit with them. After tea the father said:

"Now we must all have a conference as to what is to be done with this poor renegrade." Looking at him with tears in his eyes, he turned to the brother and said:

"You are his brother and I am his father, can you sit by and see me turn your brother out of doors?"

"Oh yes," said the Pharisaical brother.

Then turning to his daughter, the old man said:

"You are his sister and I am his father; can you sit by and see me turn your brother adrift?"

Oh, yes, father," said the unnatural sister, "or he'll bring disgrace upon us all."

Then he turned to their heartless friend, saying:

"You profess to be his friend, do you not? and can you sit by and see me turn my son out?"

"Yes, I could," replied the cruel man.

Amazed at their disdainful and haughty responses, the father turned to them all and said:

"You are his brother and you are his sister, and you are his friend, but I am his father," and he went and fell upon the neck of his despised end deserted son, and said:

"God bless thee, my lad; though all should shut up their hearts against thee, thy poor father will never disown thee, nor turn thee out of doors."

The poor lad put his arms around his father's neck, and said:

"Oh, father, will you forgive me?"

His father forgave nim; and he found peace and pardon upon his bended knee, and is now a preacher of Christ and him crucified.—Parish Visitor.

Proof Readers

Are a much abused class. If our correspondents knew how almost impossible it is to read some articles, and how nearly some letters or words are to other words or letters, they would have much more charity for the most difficult and thankless job of proof-reading. Misery loves company: "A solemn circus in church" was the striking head to the Buffalo Express dispatch from Indianapolis giving a report of the remarks made by Rev. Dr. Haines, General Harrison's pastor on a recent Sunday. The Express explains that "A solemn service in church" was written.

In the New York Herald office proof-readers have been suspended for weeks because of passing serious mistakes. And yet the Herald recently made the astonishing announcement that "a long line of scorpions' feathers filed into church," instead of "surpliced fathers."

It was in the New York World's report of a political meeting that the word "shouts" was so ludicrously misprinted as to make the blunder famous: "The snouts of ten thousand democrats rent the air."

The Episcopal Bishop Clarkson was announced in a Nebraska paper, "to preach and administer the apostate rights of conformation."—St. Louis Advocate.

This reminds us of a mistake made lately by one of our compositors. He made the type say that $17,000 was to be distributed among the annual conferences for the benefit of the "superanimated" preachers. It suggested the thought that possibly a little pecuniary reward for animation might awaken some sleepy preachers.

Selections.

The heathen sacrifice more than money. Miss Grace Wilder asked at a woman's meeting in India how many had given up friends for Christ. Many arose, and the story of their sacrifices were pathetic. This one's mother had not recognized her since her conversion; another ones sister had refused to speak to her; while still another had been cast off by her whole family as a "despised Christian." Miss Wilder says: "How hard it is to preach sacrifice to people who live in it."—S. W. Meth.

What the gospel can do in the way of civilizing savages is thus told by The Church: "Twelve years ago the Modoc Indians were uncivilized heathens. Now they are a community of industrious farmers, with half their number professing Christians." It cost the United States government $1,848,000 to care for 2,200 Dakota Indians seven years, while they were savages. After they were Christianized it cost for seven years $120,000—a saving of $1,728,000."

The financiers of Paris estimate the loss sustained in the Panama canal enterprise and the copper syndicate to amount to $300,000,000. That which was lost in the Panama affair may be regretted, as the enterprise was commendable, though injudiciously undertaken; but that lost by the syndicate is just what was deserved, and it would be well if many other syndicates would take the same course. It might not suppress the spirit of monopolizing and oppression but it might make men afraid to attempt carrying it out.—St. Louis Advocate.

The "Laws of Nature."

The Rev. Charles Kingsley, a man of very broad and "liberal" views, wrote to a friend:

"You are a sanguine man, my dear sir, who asked me to solve for you the riddle of existence, since the days of Jacob and Solomon, since the days of Socrates and Buddha; the especial riddle, too, of our time, with its increased knowledge of physical science. But what I seem to know I will tell you. Knowing and believing a great deal of the advanced physical science of Darwin's school, I still can say I do not believe in the existence of law. 'Laws of nature.' 'laws impressed,' or 'properties impressed on matter,' are to me, after careful analysis of their meaning, mere jargon. Nothing exists but will. All physical laws and phenomena are but the manifestations of that will—one, orderly, utterly wise, utterly benevolent. In Him, 'the Father,' I can trust, in spite of all the horrible things I see, in spite of the fact that my own prayers are not answered. I believe that He makes all things work together for the good of the human race, and of me, as long as I obey his will. I believe that he will answer my prayer, not according to the letter, but according to the spirit of it; that if I desire good, I shall find good, though not the good which I longed for. And 'law' and 'necessity' I look upon as phantoms of my own imagination, always ready to appear, but always certain, likewise, to vanish again, before one sound blow of careful logic or of practical life."

Wait and See.

"I never let bairns or fools see my pictures until they are done," said a Scotch artist to me once, quoting a familiar proverb of his countrymen. We are all but bairns in God sight, and we sadly play the fool in regard to his providential dealings. As no artist is willing to have judgment pronounced upon painting or statue until the work is completed, so our heavenly teacher bids us possess our souls in patience. "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." We must wait and see. This world is but the preparatory school, in which character is on the easel or under the chisel; exhibition-day will come in another world. God's hand lays on dark colors very often; his chisel cuts deep. No trial of our faith is joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward, it may work out the eternal weight of glory.—Ex.

Wonders of Diet.

The Roman soldiers, who built such wonderful roads, and carried a weight of armor and luggage that would crush the average farmhand, lived on coarse brown bread. They were temperate in diet, regular and constant in exercise. The Spanish peasant works every day, and dances half the night, yet eats only his black bread, onion and watermelon. The Smyrna porter eats only a little fruit and some olives; he eats no beef, pork or mutton; yet he walks off with his eight hundred pounds. The coolie, fed on rice, is more active, and can endure more than the negro fed on fat meat. The heavy work of the world is not done by men who eat the greatest quantity. The fattest and longest-winded horse is not the biggest eater. Moderation in diet seems to be the prerequisite for endurance.—Medical Advocate.

"The most powerful agents in giving shape to the bony "framework, and accelerating its growth and development, are the muscles that are attached to it. Muscles grow large and vigorous from use, and from disuse become weak, flabby, and relaxed. If the muscles are inactive, the nutrtion of the bones to which they are connected will be impaired."—Dr. Sargent.

Newspapers.

Below we give some extracts from the St. Louis Christian Advocate on newspapers:

We venture to express the opinion that if the true history of newspapers were written, it would present one of the most remarkable specimens of literature the world has seen. So far as any record that may at all be regarded as authentic is concerned, the first we hear of any such papers was the "Acta Diurna" of Rome during the Republic and Empire. It appeared daily—of course not printed but written hand-bills, containing notices of births and deaths in Rome with general accounts of public affairs—news and gossip from the city and provinces, and posted in the Forum. In the fifteenth century modern newspapers appeared in Germany and Venice. They contained general news of the war, the gossip of courts and matters pertaining to the state generally—not printed, but might be read where they were kept by paying a gazetta, which is said to have been a Venetian coin of small value, hence came the word Gazette as the name of a newspaper, as that was the price for reading one.

At present newspapers appear in all the countries of the world, that have any just claim to civilization. In India there were in 1875, 135 papers published in English, 270 in the languages of that country, and 55 in the mixed languages. Even Turkey has papers, both weeklies and dailies, of very fair ability. But in these United States the newspaper is in its glory. Perhaps no people on earth equal those of these states in newspaper reading, and there are thousands among us who read little or nothing else. The latest statistics we have at hand, and some of them, the last census for instance, are nearly ten years old —give the following: Number of papers in the United States, morning papers, 438; evening, 533; weekly, 8,633; semi-weekly, 133; tri-weekly, 73; monthly, 1,167; semi-monthly, 160. These with bi-monthlies, quarterlies, etc., make a grand total of 11,314.

Once more, and "finally" as the preachers say when they approach "thirdly." We give a classification of the religious papers by denominations: Of the 533 religious papers, the Baptists have 63; Christians, 4; Congregational, 14; Disciples, 11; Dunkards, 4; Episcopal, 33; Evangelical, 27; Friends, 5; Jewish, 16; Lutheran, 22; Mennonite, 9; Methodist, 75; Moravian, 2; Mormon, 4; Presbyterian, 42; Primitive, 2; Reformed, 11; Catholic, 70; Second Advent, 12; Spiritualists, 7; Swedenborgian, 3; Unitarian, 4, United Brethren, 7; Universalists, 9; Non-sectarian, 96.

Too "Touchy,"

The average Christian is too "touchy." He manages to get get himself insulted too many times in a year—about the seventy times seven. The gospel plies the figures on the other side of the count. Christians must bear patiently the offenses of the world. Even a brother's offense must be forgiven, once, twice, thrice, again and again into indefinite hundreds of forgotten pardons. But how painfully true is the remark that Christians show temper about as quickly as quick-tempered sinners! Let there be mastery of this rebel self. The lips that pray and sing praise should not so easily quiver and turn white in rage. The true disciple is sweet-spirited and loving and gentle and calm.—Methodist Recorder.

Silent Men.

Washington never made a speech. In the zenith of his fame he once attempted it, failed, and gave it up, confused and abashed. In framing the Constitution of the United States the labor was almost wholly performed in committee of the whole, of which George Washington was the chairman. He spoke twice during the convention; but his words were so few that they could not fitly be termed speeches. The convention, however, acknowledged the master spirit, and historians affirm that, had it not been for his personal popularity and the sincerity with which he spoke, the constitution would have been rejected by the people. Thomas Jefferson never made a speech. He couldn't do it. Napoleon whose executive ability was almost without a parallel, said that his greatest trouble was in finding men of deeds rather than words. When asked how he maintained his influence over his superiors in age and experience, when commander-in-chief of the army of Italy, he said: "By reserve." The greatness of a man is not to be measured by the length of his speeches or their number.—Wesleyan Ad.

Notes and Personals.

Bro. Warren spent a few days with us two weeks ago. He was recovering from a long spell of sickness. He returned hoping to be able to resume his work at once.

On the sixth page of this issue we publish the Bishops' recent address on the subject of Missions. Let no one fail to read it. To many it will be full of news, and will no doubt arouse the interest of all.

Bro. Stateler's talk at our prayer meeting in Helena a few weeks ago was a means of grace to all present. He spoke with a vigor of mind and body that surprised us.

The new Broadway M. E. church in this city will be completed in time to accommodate the next session of the Montana Annual Conference of that church, which convenes the 4th of July. Bishop Goodsell is to preside.

The contract for our church in East Helena has been let to Mr. G. E. Tiffany. Work has already begun on the building, which is to be finished by the first of August.

Bro. Barber was suddenly taken very sick during the service at East Helena a week ago last Sunday evening. He was taken to Bro. Shaw's in East Helena, and when able to stand the trip was brought to St. Peter's Hospital in this city. We are glad to announce him so far recovered as to be able to walk around a little. He wishes to acknowledge the very kind treatment he received both at Bro. Shaw's and at the hospital. He thinks it would be difficult for one to die at St. Peter's Hospital under the care of Dr. Rawson.

A private letter from Bro. Finley tells us how he and Bro. Goulder have been helping each other on their circuits like true yoke-fellows. He reports some success in their work, and makes mention also of a new roof on our church at Boulder and a new coat of pain on the parsonage.

We received a contribution of poetry for this issue, which for poetry was above the average, but it had to be rejected on account of its bad theology.

The Superintendent of Census, Robert G. Porter, makes the reasonable request of all farmers that they keep account of their farm products during the census year which began the first of this month. By doing so they can make something like accurate reports to the census taker next June. As it is these reports are in most cases mere guess work.

Brother S. W. Barbee has been doing some good work for the paper financially, which is in keeping with his signature to a resolution passed by the Helena District Conference. It is a good thing for one to have a conscience on resolutions.

A note from Rev. W. T. Goulder says his Sunday school work is doing well and his congregations are good, but his health is not good. We hope for health of body to our brother as well as in his work.

The council for the defence in the recent Roberts–Crawford murder case in Silver Bow county, made the plea of insanity and cited the medical author, who defined insanity, "The loss of moral liberty." We suspected that this would be rather unfavorable to the poor client who sat before an intelligent jury.

Our deepest sympathies for the suffering of our common humanity are aroused by the Johnstown disaster, but every true member of our church will feel a personal loss in the death of Miss Clara Chrisman. She had started from Mississippi to Brazil as a missionary for our church to that field, and was on one of the ill-fated trains swept away by the flood. Report to-day says her body has been recovered.

Denver Conference.

DEAR MONTANA METHODIST—We catch up with you once in a while as we run up and down through the land. We still maintain our interest in you, and the work you represent. We feel there is room for the Montana conference and a need for it. Press right on. The strong can always put the weak to inconvenience, but they cannot always put them out. I do not know whether the M. E. Church crowds you. It seems to me if it has followed that policy, you have a fast hold, and a wonderful degree of vitality, or you had long since gone to the wall in a struggle with such a strong combination, with a money backing of $5 to your $1. Even this year they have $10,000 to your $3,000. But let us hope that each keeps to its work without un-brotherly pushing, and if so you can each do great good.

"Yes, your work in the bounds of the Montana Conference has cost the Board of Missions only $27,040, but little more than half the cost of West End. But West End is our closest neighbor to Vanderbilt, and who can tell the influence it may have on our future Methodism? And beside it is at our Denominational headquarters where the tribes go up. We ought to make our impress there. But after all when they are warming themselves at the Conference they ought to remember the extremities, and let us hope they will.

You say our Editor "let the 'cat out of the bag' about questionable discriminations made down in the Denver Conference in the distribution of the money among the laborers." This is of course a delicate thing, where people are liable to see at different angles, but there are many of us who think there is no very large sized cat to escape, and consequently nothing to create commotion. Our appropriations ran down for years, and yet it seemed some new fields must be occupied. Of course this meant pinching—but the brethren pulled bravely through it. When a larger appropriation came, the increase was divided between increasing the appropriation to insufficiently supported charges, and the occupation of new places. There is chance for difference of opinion in this it is true, but I think the result will demonstrate the wisdom of the administration of the funds. To divide $11,000 by about 40 must bring out some small results, and is liable to end in some complaints. But don't think of us as rent by complaints and contentions.

The Denver conference is progressing finely. We will help you to hold the Rockies. The Trinidad District Conference has just been held, and the progress reported was delightful. We have more than doubled the gains of last year already. We had no dry service, not even a dry session, thank the good Lord. You can depend on us, we are working away at the wall "over next our house" and we send the word of cheer along the lines. Yours,

GEORGE NEEDHAM.

Denver, Colo., May 17, 1889.

Centennial Service.

MR. EDITOR: I was asked if I would be here to celebrate the next centennial of Washington's inauguration. As it will not be expedient for me to be here on that day, and will be denied the privilege of knowing how the people celebrate that day, and with what soul-stirring animation they enter into such services, I may tell the people at large how, at White Hall, our people did come to our place of worship April 30, 1889, to celebrate the hundredth anniversary of Washington's inauguration. The people, led by Mrs. Welch, threw their lives into the song and sung "Come let us anew our journey pursue." Col. E. G. Brooke read Washington's valedictory address from a book given his father by George Washington. It delighted and animated the hearers. After which a sermon by the pastor from "The Lord is my Shepherd. We parted feeling that we had contributed our "mite" to the honor of this great man.

A Short Vacation.

The second week in May I pent pleasantly and profitably on Rev. W. T. Goulder's work, preaching on Sunday at Fish Creek, and five succeeding evenings at Silver Star, to attentive congregations. One joined by letter at Fish Creek. The last meeting at Silver Star closed with tears and regrets that we could not stay longer. No greater hospitality have we enjoyed anywhere. Blessings on the hearts and homes of those friends. May they have more than Silver Stars in the world to come, white garments and the pure gold of Christian character. The pastor is in favor with the people. He studies to show himself a workman, that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word.

Wedding bells were in the air about White Hall Tuesday, the 14th of May. That round trip of forty-four miles made in six hours in Mr. McCall's carriage, the "feast of reason and flow of soul," followed by a splendid dinner, constituted an episode not soon to be forgotten. The young pastor did well in making his debut in weaving the Gordian knot. I amened at the right place. May the wedded pair have religion enough to see the sunlight of God's promises in the darkest hours of life's emergencies. "What God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

Yours truly,

JOHN H. JOHNSON.

It is said that of 1,800,000 negro children of school age, only 800,000 attend school, and that illiteracy among them is on the increase. From many angles it may be seen that the negro question is one of the greatest now before the American people. The sword has not solved the problem and never will.

Repentance.

Repentance is characteristic of man. It can be predicated only of an intelligent, free moral agent, who has sinned, but still has an opportunity of being saved.

Devils, or fallen angels, having sinned so egregiously and fallen to such depths of enmity to God, have no chance of repentance. One has well said that "hell will consist in the utter absence of the possibility of repentance."

The unfallen angels need no repentance.

God, being absolutely perfect and holy, cannot repent in the sense in which man is required to change.

"God is not a man, that he should lie: neither the son of man, that he should repent"—Numbers, xxiii, 19. Lying is a characteristic of man; consequently repentance. All sin is deception. Repentance presupposes sin.

Sin presupposes incoming light, or knowledge, which reveals its true character. A man is not expected to repent until he sees his wrong, his error, his danger. Children are not required to avoid certain paths of evil until their parents show them something of the nature and danger of the evil. Citizens are not expected to abstain from crimes until the laws prohibiting those things are published.

Peter, at Pentecost, tells the Jews that through ignorance they had killed the Prince of Life; but, receiving additional light, they were exhorted to repent.

Paul, at Athens, preaching the true God, says: "The times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." When Christ had spoken to the Jews on a certain occasion he said they had no more cloak for their sin. Conviction, preceding repentance, is in proportion to the knowledge of sin and of our relations to a sin-hating, holy God. A sense of sin is a sense of condemnation. The conscious presence of sin means death. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die; the wages of sin is death." "Light is come into the world, and men love darkness better than light, because their deeds are evil." Hence the condemnation: "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." One has appropriately said, "it is turn or burn." There is no other alternative. "He that knoweth his duty and doeth it not shall be beaten with many stripes."

Repentance was an essential theme with the prophets in addressing sinners.

With the introduction of the kingdom, under the New Testament, repentance was a prominent term in the ministry of John the Baptist, of Christ and the Apostles. It is an essential step and the first step the sinner takes in coming to God.

Repentance precedes justifying faith.

"Repent and believe the gospel," is the divine order. How can a sinner come to God, in loving trust, expecting pardon, without laying aside the sins which he knows God hates and cannot allow. A subject, expecting a royal favor, will approach the king divested of what is especially displeasing to the king. Sin separates from God, and must be abandoned before we can get near him in favor.

Repentance is as deep as the consciousness of sin and of its effects upon the soul. If it is exceedingly sinful, offensive to God, and damning to our souls, then we may sorrow deeply on account of it, hate and forsake it, with all the powers of will and affection, determining never to live in it again. But without a deep consciousness of God's hatred for sin, of the impossibitity of reconciliation to him without repentance, this step is not permanent.

College Education a Failure.

I hope no one who reads the above caption will hastily write me down either as an ignoramus or as one opposed to true education in whatever degree it may be found nor from whatever source derived. This article is not directed against any of the institutions of learning in this country, for I cherish each of them and place a high value upon the good they may accomplish, and other things being equal it is of most importance to a young man to be the successful contestant for a college diploma.

I have two thoughts in my mind in the discussion of this subject: First, that so much of the education, so called, of the present day is mere clap-trap; and second, that far too many—may I not say most of them?—of those who attend the higher institutions of learning with a view to professional life strive more eagerly for a diploma than they do for the qualification which merits a diploma, and this because they consider the diploma an unchallenged passport to social and financial elevation and success. It is an open secret that very much of the so-styled education of the present day is farcical, a mere play at a practical exhibition of that higher and only true definition of the term that makes it to mean self-development and personal application of head, heart and hand to any and every work that may lie in the pathway of a busy life. Thousands of boys and young men are at school every year with no definite purpose in view whatever, forgetting that youth and early manhood are the seed-time of life. These, for the most part, fail to acquire knowledge; while those who have a measure of success in the studies pursued obtain only a mechanical education, and in after life are mere automatons. And because of a misapprehension of the term, and a consequent lack of a sense of its obligation, very much of the teaching in our school rooms is the merest stuffing of the mind, leaving its faculties and almost infinite latent resources undeveloped, yea, untouched by that more than diviner's rod supposed to be in the possession of him who assumes the role of instructor. Any education, therefore, that falls short of directing the pupil to a life work, and in a measure preparing him for it, is a failure. And the college that grants a diploma without accomplishing the above results does an irreparable injury to every one thus discredited.

A college diploma is merely a sign, it may be of proficiency and qualification, or it may be only a false signal to lure others to their hurt, while to the possessor of it himself it becomes an ignis fatuus, leading him finally to bankruptcy of intellect and insolvency of the merely animal instincts and purposes of his life. The etymological definition of the term education should always be kept prominently before the mind of the teacher and the taught, and thus as the result of conjoint effort meet the full requirements of the infinite mind in every case.

Professional life so dazzles most of our college-bred young men, by which I mean they have so great a desire to enter some one of the professions, that they are utterly unfit for any other business, and because of the over-crowded walks of professional life they become egregious failures in this line, and thus pass through the world as mere ciphers—too proud to do manual labor, for which no doubt in the providence of God they were designed, and being ashamed to beg they fall infinitely below mediocrity in that sphere for which they are not fitted. Poor creatures! In the language of another: "So between the great things they can not do and the little things they will not do, time passes, and nothing is done."

College education and a college diploma are not necessary to success in this life. Most of the men who made the history of this country had no diploma, and very many of them never saw the inside of a college. The education of every man ought to be fitness or qualification for some particular work in life. The world, particularly now, is not asking for college diplomas, but the question pnt to every man—whether in professional life or in any one of the trades—is, "What can you do?" The world wants working men, men of physical stamina and those whose intellectual culture is of that sort and degree of proficiency that gives to their possessors a mastery of the work undertaken. It may not be known to all your readers that ten of the twenty-three presidents of the United States—Washington, Monroe, Jackson, Van Buren, Taylor, Fillmore, Lincoln, Johnson, Grant and Cleveland—two justice of the United States—John Marshall and John Routledge — Benjamin Franklin, Patrick Henry, Henry Clay, Washington Irving, J. G. Whittier, Horace Greely, Thurlow Weed, J. G. Bennett, John Sherman, Allen G. Thurman and hundreds of others whose names are interwoven with the history of this country as its wisest and most potent factors of richest and truest development were not college-bred men. But these men all knew how to work—they had a purpose in life, and accomplished it. And when the scroll of the world's mightiest men shall at last be unrolled and we are permitted to read their names, we will find that most of them had their tuition in the school of experience, and gained life's battle in a hand-to-hand fight with the difficulties and duties they met.

The Drink Traffic Defined.

It is a business which is opposed by every clergyman in the country. It is a business which every business man hates and detests. It is a business which is the standing dread of every mother. It is a business that makes 90 per cent of the pauperism for which the taxpayer has to pay. It makes 90 per cent of the business of the criminal courts. It keeps employed an army of policemen in the cities. It puts out the fire on the hearth, and condemns wives and children to hunger, cold and rags. It fosters vice for profit and educates in wickedness for gain. Drunkenness comprises all other vices. It is the dictionary for vice, for it includes every vice. Drunkenness means peculation, theft, robbery, arson, forgery, murder, for it leads to all these crimes—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

A SILLY LASS.

There sat a silly little lass
  Upon a bed of posies,
Her tears bedewed the summer grass
  And twinkled on the roses.
"Now, why is all this grief," I said,
  "And all this doleful crying?"
The maiden sadly shook her head,
  And answered, softly sighing,
"All yesterday I wept," said she,
"And then this morning I could see
  'Twas quite without a reason;
So now I mourn the stupid way
In which I spent that lovely day—
  The fairest of the season!
    Oh dear—O dear—O dear—O dear—
  The fairest of the season!"

So there she sat, the silly lass,
  And nothing could content her;
The roses and the summer grass
  No grain of comfort lent her;
Nor any word that I could say
  Would ease her doleful crying.
"I can but weep for yesterday,"
  She answered, sadly sighing;
"'Twas all so foolish—that I see—
And that is not the worst," said she:
  "'Tis not my greatest sorrow;
I cannot eat—I cannot sleep—
And all the day I weep, and weep—
  For fear I'll weep to-morrow!
    O dear—O dear—O dear—O dear—
  I fear I'll weep to-morrow!"

Who Wins.

Listen to this, dears. I heard a story the other day about an old Indian who had borrowed some tobacco from a white man. After he had got to his wigwam he found some money wrapped up in the tobacco, and at first was quite delighted to get it, thinking only of how many pounds of tobacco it could be exchanged for. But during the night the Indian got restless and could not sleep; the thought of the money began to trouble him, and he could not make up his mind that it belonged to him. So the next morning he rose bright and early and came and asked for the "white man." Upon his appearance the Indian said: "I found some money in the tobacco you gave me."

"Why didn't you keep it?" asked the white man.

"Because," said the Indian, pointing to his breast, "I've got two men here. One man says: 'It is not mine; give it back to the owner.' The other man says: 'Keep it; it is yours.' Then the one man says: 'No, no; give it back; it is not yours;' and the other says: 'Yes, yes; it is yours; keep it.' So I don't know what to do, and the two men inside kept talking all night, and they so trouble me, I bring the money back, and now I feel good."

Dear children, these "two men inside" are temptation and conscience, and they are talking together all the time for and against your duty, and prompting you to right or wrong. Who wins?—Selected.

"Children's Day" a Success.

MR. EDITOR—Sunday, the 19th, was one of the happiest days that I have spent in Montana. Our Sunday school people came early to our place of worship, according to announcements and arrangements, to observe "Children's Day." Bright, smiling happy faces greeted the preacher. An interesting programme had been arranged, to which we adhered, to the delight of all present. After we had gone over the Sunday school lesson and a few minutes' recess had been enjoyed "Lochinvar" was recited by Master Eddie Thibodeaux; "Sister and I," Miss Rosa Blake; "God's Dominion and Decree," Miss Lona Wolverton; "At School," Miss Annie Houghton; an extempore speech by the preacher. These speeches being interspersed with choice music, led by Mrs. Chapin, made it doubly interesting. Indeed it was the sweetest Sunday school service of my life. Our collection ($6.60) shows the interest our people are taking in the Sunday school work.

Bill Arp Among the Churches.

The Methodists and Baptists have been the pioneers for a century, and carried their religion into the wilderness and established civilization. They rode mules and drove ox-wagons and cleared the land, built log churches and when everything was sorter comfortable the Presbyterians came riding up in their buggies and rockaways and settled among them, and planted out shade trees and rose bushes and built a church with a steeple, and set up the Shorter Catechism and predestination and moved around as though they were the elect.

By and by, when two or three railroads were built, and the shade trees had all grown up and the green grass was growing all around and around, and the streets were macadamized, and an opera-house built, the Episcopalians came along in apostolic succession, with stately steps and prayer-books and Lent and Mardi Gras all mixed up together, and they bobbed up serenely into a fine church with stained glass windows and assumed to be the saints for whom the world was made in six days, and all very good.—Atlanta Constitution.

A Different View of It.

In this issue we publish an article from one of our regular contributors, on "College Education a failure."

No intelligent reader supposes, of course, that an editor indorses the opinions of all who write for his columns. It so happens that the views set forth in the article referred to are so radically different from our own upon the subject, that we feel constrained to say a word or so just now. It has been our most happy privilege during the year to read much in our religious papers of this important adjunct to the pulpit in the evangelization of our people. It is not our purpose to make a close review of every point taken, but simply to notice the ones we consider most objectionable.

We would state first that it is a serious charge upon our colleges to say that "much of the education, so called, of to-day is mere clap-trap," "farcical," "mere play at a practical exhibition of that higher and only true definition of the term," "mechanical stuffing the mind." The diploma becoming an "ignis fatuus" and such education "leading to bankruptcy of intellect," our young men made "mere ciphers." etc.

Does our brother truly mean to say that the colleges of our denomination use artifices to ensnare. "Far too many—may I not say that most of them?—who attend the higher institutions of learning * * strive more for a diploma than for the qualification which merits a diploma." Suppose this were the case—which thing is very doubtful—we would ask, is it the fault of our higher institutions or of the young men who are candidates for parchments bearing their seal?

Here is our brother's definition of true education: "Self development and personal application of head, heart and hand to any and every work that may lie in the pathway of a busy life."

Now, with this definition before us, the assertion is made: "Any education, therefore, that falls short of directing the pupil to a lifework, and in a measure preparing him for it, is a failure." This would seem strong enough along the utilitarian theory, but he adds: "The college that grants a diploma without accomplishing the above result does an irrepairable injury." We ask can one not be educated in a high and proper sense without specific preparation for some trade or profession? Surely there are scholars who can neither plead a case at law, prescribe for the sick or preach a sermon. How strangely inconsistent is the article further when we read: "Professional life so dazzles most of our college-trained young men that they are utterly unfit for any other business"—and then "The education of every man ought to be fitness or qualification for some particular work in life." The brother's logic from the "school of experience" deserts him when he charges the abuses of "professional life" to the colleges that develop our youth.

Crowding the professions for which young men have no gift is not chargeable to our institutions. A man may with deserving honor bear the degree M. D. and fail as a physician, simply because he has no natural fitness for the profession. In such a case is the college at fault which conferred the degree? An array of non-college-bred men is made at the close to prove our colleges a failure. "Most of the men whose names are interwoven with the history of this country as its wisest and most potent factors were not college-bred men." Does it follow that because they succeeded without colleges they would have failed with them? Dr. Tigert would doubtless show this a non sequitur. The chief difficulty with us in the article as a whole, is to get the real opinion of the author as to whether he believes in technical education or not. From the deliverance about "dazzling professions" we should think one thing; from the question "What can you do?" we pass to another. Without further comments we simply record our astonishment at Brother Barbee's deliverance on our colleges.

Dr. Talmage in a recent sermon undertakes to refute some statements made against Calvanism: "These enemies of evangelism say that the Presbyterian Church believes that God is a Savage Sovereign, and that he made some men just to damn them, and that there are infants in hell not a span long. These old slanders come down from generation to generation. The Presbyterian church believes no such thing. As to the Presbyterian Church believing there are infants in perdition, if you will bring me a Presbyterian of good morals and sound mind who will say that he believes there ever was a baby in the lost world or ever will be I will make him a deed to the house I live in and he can take possession tomorrow." In the third chapter of the "Confession of Faith" are these words: "Elect infants dying in infancy are regenerated and saved by Christ through the Spirit * * * others not elected cannot be saved." Who doubts the integrity of the young Presbyterian minister who recently wished a revision of the Confession of Faith? It is about time for the Calvinistic plank to come out when men consider themselves "slandered" for holding to it, and specially so, when they do not believe it. Revise that Confession. It would be better than organic union.

NOTES.

It is claimed that about one-third of the organized churches in Japan are now self-sustaining. This indicates rapid growth.

One of the great effects of God's grace upon a human life is to make it responsive in all its possibilities for good.

Never in the history of our country have we had such loss of life and property from flood as from the recent catastrophe at Johnstown, Pa.

Montana votes yea for a Bishop to reside somewhere in our Western work. We hope the next General Conference may furnish one who will take to the suggestion.

The Church of the United Brethren has recently split into two bodies. The Secret Society question was the occasion. "It must needs be that offenses come."

Methodist orators make a point for Methodist culture when they state that Methodism was born in a university. But what of the point, truer still, that the university disowned, repudiated, and disinherited Methodism?—St. Louis Ad.

Wyoming will make an appeal to Congress for statehood, and to this end Governor Warren has issued a proclamarion for an election July 8th, of delegates to a constitutional convention.

Dr. Knox, writing from Tokio to the Missionary Review for June, says in regard to the missionary work in Japan: "Were our mission forces combined, we should not need another man; indeed we could dispense with a third of those already here." * * There is reason to believe that Dr. Knox writes especially in the interest of the union of all the churches in Japan. Already the various branches of the Presbyterian and Congregational churches have united.—S. W. Methodist.

To what extent the above theory is true we know not. As to that matter we are not called upon to determine. Granting, however, that by some method of co-operative effort the evangelical churches could make an economic use of forces to save the heathen, it certainly is a subject worthy serious consideration. May wisdom characterize all our councils.

The Butte charge has ordered the new Hymn Book through the agency of Rev. J. H. Johnson, of Bozeman. A note from Brother Johnson says: "I ordered the Hymn Books two months ago. Have not heard a word from them—only the orders would be filled as they got to Nashville."

Is it possible that another Conference year will pass before we see that wonder in the M. E. Church, South? We have been promising our people this marvelous production for two long years. Shall we ever, ever be relieved of the inquiry, when will the new Hymn Books be here?

It is said that in Honolulu, a seaport in one of the Sandwich Islands, are to be found consuls from the United States, Chili, Denmark, France, Great Britain, Germany, Russia, Sweden, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Austria and Peru, and is visited annually by about 300 vessels of various sizes.

A minister of the gospel, in the preachers' meeting in Butte City a few days ago, said he had never been conscious of the direct witness of God's spirit in his heart. We have reasons to believe this was a good man, but one having a peculiar view on this subject.

We would suggest to the Butte Daily Miner that there is some impropriety in denominating the announcements for service in the churches of our city "The Sinners Column." We think we have as many saints as Sodom or Gomorrah.

Albert Spicer, Treasurer of the London Misssionary Society says, "I would guarantee to take the first twenty men women and children that I should meet with in Samoa, and I would back them in Bible knowledge against any twenty I should meet with in this country."

The minister who had preached the funeral sermon of Crawford, who was killed by Roberts was present during the trial and heard, with some embarrassment we should think, the deliverance: "Harry Roberts was condemned unheard, in one of the churches in this city." Preachers can scarcely be too careful as to what they say on such occasion, either about the dead or the living.

Free delivery in Butte mail commences July 1st. We are glad.

The preachers of the Montana Conference are singularly reticent as to communications to the METHODIST. Why so?

The citizens of Butte, Montana have given $4,000 toward the relief of the Johnstown Pennsylvania sufferers. This city is always liberally responsive to such exigencies.

We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation from the "Faculty and Graduating Class" of the College of Montana, to attend the commencement exercises, Thursday, June 13th, at Deer Lodge, Montana.

The first opportunity for the season was used a few days since for the editor to catch speckled trout enough for breakfast. The angling and the eating were enjoyed, especially the eating.

Death by accident, foul play and suicide, have for some time, in certain sections of Montana, nearly equaled those from natural causes. This is a sad commentary, and we hope will not continue.

About the best that the two Presbyterian General assemblies could do in their recent meetings respectively at New York City, and Chattanooga, Tenn., toward organic union, was some advance in cooperative missionary work at home and abroad.

"Children's Day" was properly observed in the Butte charge. The occasion drew a full house, and proved interesting and profitable. The programme, gotten up by the Sunday School department this year, was the best we have ever had and was followed literally.

The Northern Pacific branch extending from Gallatin through the Homestake Pass to Butte, is but another expression of confidence by the railroad capitalists of New York in the resources of our vast territory. Work on this branch is progressing, and it is said it will be completed by the end of the year '89.

We have incidentally learned that Rev. John Moore's congregation at Deer Lodge has bought a new organ for the new church at that place. Two young ladies raised the money by personal solicitation in two days and had a small purse left, which they handed over to the pastor. The organ is ordered from Orton Brothers of Butte—a firm advertised in the MONTANA METHODIST.

Sunday desecration, in the way of R. R. Excursions to places of resort on their lines, spectacular shows in the neighboring gardens, and so called parks, baseball games for purses, in the fair grounds, by the citizens of Butte, are enough at this season, to alarm every Christian in all churches. Let us see to it, that no Christian compromises with the devil and follows the multitude to do evil.

A young man said Monday morning, "I am so sore to-day; I pleyed baseball yesterday, but it is my last game on the Sabbath." Another standing by, said with an oath, "I'll play as much as I please on Sunday, I have no other time." Our heart was sad at the latter speech, and we felt within, there is a future for both these young men. "What shall the harvest be?"

Belgrade, Mont.

The beautiful showers of rain we have had recently in the Gallatin valley have brought the oats and wheat out of the ground which were thought to be dead. Our ranchmen had been looking gloomy over the prospect of short crops, but now they are all smiles, as it is said prospects for an abundant crop never were better.

Grain has advanced in price and Belgrade has been crowded this week with teamsters who are anxious to have the benefit of the rise. The merchant and produce man of this place, Mr. Inow, is compelled to enlarge his store in order to accommodate the growing trade. He is a business man and doing much to build up the town.

Brother Stateler was with us and held our third quarterly meeting the fourth Sunday in last month. Notwithstanding his recent severe affliction he preached powerful sermons. The meeting was refreshing and profitable.

Our work generally is encouraging. The church enterprise at this place is not a failure, as some have seemed to think it would be. The contractors are working energetically and say it will be ready for occupancy within three weeks.

The Bishop's Address.

To the Preachers and Members of the M. E. Church, South—Dear Brethren:—We address you on the subject of missions. The important department of domestic missions we shall no further present than to remark, with pleasure, that it shares the general advance in missionary interest, the collections of 1888, $104,473, exceeding those of 1887 by $12,046. The work at home has nothing to fear from the work abroad; having as their common impulse the love of Christ, and as their common foe covetousness and indifference to the Kingdom of God, they quicken and support each other. Annual conferenccs that look with Pauline zeal to the regions beyond, that long with Christ-like love to save the world, will not neglect the scattered sheep within their own territory. We speak now, as requested by the General Board, of "the foreign missions, and of all others not provided for by the Annual Conferences."

CHEERING SIGNS.

Prejudice against missions, though not dead, is dying, and insensibility to their claims is gradually changing to intelligent interest. There is a steady growth in liberality; and, however impatience, contrasting need, and receipts may dispute the statement, the growth is not slow. The collections of last year aggregated $244,176—if we add those of the Woman's Society, they exceed $300,000. Our preachers preach more, our press publishes more, our people think more on this subject than ever before. What gives us most joy is the growing number of men and women who take this cause to heart, ponder it day and night, keep it before God in continual supplication, and count it dearer than life. We are blessed with faithful and zealous missionaries, but the most devoted and heroic laborers in foreign fields do not surpass those saints at home in fervent desire, wrestling prayer, and ready self-sacrifice for the progress of the work. Few in number, some of them poor, frail in body, or aged, and therefore incapable of much giving and labor, they have power with God, and with men; they keep not silence before the Lord, and give him no rest; their flame kindles duller souls, and they are educating another generation to a higher appreciation of the grand mission of the church to evangelize all nations.

Abroad, obstacles to success, though still tremendous, and except to faith invincible, have wonderfully lessened. Violent persecution has nearly ceased; our missionaries dwell and move in safety under the eye of our sympathetic government, and the protection of the native authorities. Swift steamers, regular mails, elegraphic communication, and the increase of commercial and general travel diminish the feeling of distance and isolation. Everywhere the door is open, and in some places there is welcome. Papal nations begin to claim freedom and responsibility of private judgment, and pagan nations to admire the high culture of Christendom.

ACTUAL RESULTS.

We take the figures from the Annual Report of the Board. In Mexico, Cuba, Brazil, China, and Japan, our membership is 4,014—a gain of over 10 per cent during the year. The Indian Mission has 8,730 members; the German Missions in Louisiana and Texas, 1,160; those charges in Florida and our western work which are helped by the General Board, 15,-227. The fruit is in worth far more than the money and effort expended, but in abundance is far less than our longings and hopes. The question is often asked, Why have we not made greater progress? Prominent among the causes are the failure of the church to supply these fields, year after year, with a competent force of labores, and the lack of earnest prayer to the Lord of the harvest to give the increase.

What has become of the funds contributed? In part they sent out and supported the laborers: last year in our foreign work there were employed 34 missionaries, 85 native preachers, and 12 other native helpers. In part, they are invested in a permanent plant, consisting of churches, schools, parsonages, and other means of work; the mission property abroad is valued at $379,176; the total value, abroad and within the United States, is $932,986.

APPROPRIATIONS AND ASSESSMENTS

The assessments are unchanged, aggregating $300,000. The appropriations amount to $249,977, exclusive of $15,000 provided for by the bequest of Thomas Branch. At the last General Conference our debt was $100,000. It has been greatly reduced; the Committee on Estimates reported actual liabilities, $33,242. The Board earnestly desired to wipe out the debt before next May. They were unwilling to burden the church. But consider the situation. Japan stretches forth her hands, and begs for the bread of life; our missionaries are overjoyed and overworked, enlarged in hope and straitened in means because so many are eager to be instructed; we cannot delay to reenforce the little band. In China the present missions must be maintained, nobody would think of a backward step. Alas, that we cannot yet make the forward movement which is so much needed, not only to enlarge the work, but in doing so to occupy healthy places where our brethren and their families broken down by a very trying climate, may, while remaining in the field, recruit their strength. Brazil, that vast empire of the new world, had only five missionaries, and not one boy's school, no institution where native preachers may be trained. Cuba, almost within sight of our shores, asked for $20,000, and in our poverty we could grant only $2,-000. Mexico, bordering our happier Republic, and bound to us by ever-multiplying and tightening ties, should be cherished, not neglected. In the Indian Territory the wild tribes invite our preachers, and among the civilized tribes we are building up our own schools, instead of schools which belong to the natives, and from which we could be ejected by their caprice. The rapid expansion of population in Florida, Texas, and the whole West, demands an expansion of our work. The rush into Oklahoma, which in one day converted a wilderness into a peopled territory, with cities, banks, and other features of civilization, does not allow us to hesitate or delay in sending thither preachers to proclaim the gospel, pastors to care for the sheep. These demands could not be resisted. Caution whispered, Beware! But faith and hope spoke out, Dare!

OUR ABILITY.

The net increase of our membership within three years is 150,-000. The amount of capital flowing into the South, the development of her resources, and multiplication of her industries, is the daily wonder of the press. Though improving, we are far behind the Methodists of England and Canada in collecting for missions from all classes of our members according to their several ability. The many littles which more thorough system might gather from those who have hitherto given nothing would make a large sum. Our men of wealth, with few exceptions, do not contribute to this cause in any measure approaching its just claims. The cases are rare in which individuals have given a few thousands. We are glad to report two bequests during the past year—one of $5,000 and one of $15,000. Southern Methodists, worth from $50,000 to a round million, with yearly incomes ranging from $10,000 to ten times that amount, give to the world's conversion paltry sums, from twenty-five to five hundred dollars. We rejoice to acknowledge that some of them give liberally to churches, colleges, orphan asylums, and other Christian enterprises at home. But their thought has not yet turned, their conscience is not yet touched, their heart has not yet warmed on this greatest movement of the church. They give in response to the pastor, they give toward meeting the assessment, a trifle which they would not begrudge to buy a piece of furniture, or a diamond ring, or to entertain a party of friends of an evening—they do not give to Christ for the extension of his kingdom. We look for the time, God speed it! when, as they subscribe, they will say, "For the love of Christ constraineth us." They need—we all need, both rich and poor, pulpit and pew—a mighty baptism of the missionary spirit.

Without hurt to any other cause, without strain on our people, we can raise this year $300,000, and thus cancel the debt and pay all the appropriations. But this will not be accomplished if strong churches are content with paying their assessments; if pastors of rich congregations that should give thousands (a few do), but give only hundreds, report at conference with an easy conscience, "Collections all full."

A WORD TO OUR PREACHERS.

Brethren of the ministry, we congratulate you on the good service you have done in the cause of misssions. Your efforts in private and in public, to instruct and inspire the people on this great subject, have borne fruit. Some of you who reported only tens when your brethren reported hundreds, have not fallen behind the most successful in fidelity, zeal, and self-denial. We call upon presiding elders, preachers in charge, editors, and professors in our schools, to continue and to abound in this good work. Leaders of Israel, captains of hundreds and of thousands, speak unto the people that they go forward.

THE CLOSET, THE HOME ALTAR, AND THE CHURCH.

We need more prayer. We need in prayer more faith and fervor. Let us cry aloud unto the Lord that his word may have free course and be glorifled in all our missions, in all the earth, as it has been glorified before our eyes and in our experience. Nothing but the outpouring of the Spirit who subdueth all things unto himself can give us success in this great undertaking. We have a right to claim power from on high as the endowment of the ministry and of the church. It will descend when we seek it with all our heart; it will be sent in the measure of our faith—not an idle, listless, self-indulgent faith, but of a living, working, struggling, giving faith. Plead with God in the secret place for a rich blessing on our missionaries and missions; plead with him, searching and purifying your hearts and ways; plead importunately until the suit is gained. Unite your household in prayer, praise, and giving; let there be a family altar for supplication and thank-offerings; grateful for happy Christian homes, intercede for heathen lands. During the week of prayer assemble daily in your churches to study our mission fields, and to wrestle with God in the power that prevails. "Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

General Conference, 1890,

ITS ENTERTAINMENT.

The committee on the entertainment of the next General Conference met in the office of the Book Agent, Nashville, Tenn., May 7, 1889. Present; Col. E. W. Cole, chairman; C. G. Andrews, secretary; and Dr. J. J. Lafferty. Absent: R. M. Scruggs, Esq., and D. H. Snyder, Esq.

By request, the Book Agent, Dr. J. D. Barbee, and Dr. T. M. Finney, of St. Louis, met with the committee. Dr. Barbee reported that but few of the boards of finance of the annual conferences had furnished estimates of the expenses of their delegates, according to the instructions of the General Conference; but that he had nevertheless estimated the expenses for each conference as best he could, and had forwarded the same to the chairman of the joint boards of finance in the various conferences. He further reported that he had notice that many of the conferences had made assessments and ordered collections, but of others he had no report.

The committee requested the Book Agent to call attention again to the matter, urging the brethren to take this collection promptly, and forward the amounts collected, according to the instructions of the General Conference.

Col. E. W. Cole was appointed to make the best terms for transportation with the management of railroads. R. M. Scruggs, Esq., was appointed to make negotiations for the entertainment of the members of the General Conference at St. Louis upon the basis of the plan submitted by the last General Conference.

E. W. Cole, Ch'n.

C. G. Andrews, Sec.

All the papers in the Connection will please publish the above.

In compliance with the request above made, I respectfully urge the preachers generally to collect the amounts assessed to their respective charges at such times as it may suit their convenience and pleasure to do so. The whole amount required for the purpose is not large, and it is hoped that all of it will have been forwarded to the Book Agent before the meeting of the General Conferference, May, 1890.

J. D. Barbee, Book Agent.

Notes.

A local edition of "The Worker" published monthly in Deer Lodge Montana, and edited by Rev. R. E. Dunlap, in behalf of the Christian church, has reached our table. We shall welcome the Worker again.

We regret not being able to attend the Vanderbilt commencement, and specially the "Twelfth Annual meeting of the Alumni association, June 17th. It was a pleasure even to be remembered with an invitation containing the programme of Alumni Day, at the old alma mater.

A number of most atrocious crimes have been committed in our territory lately, but almost without exception the perpetrators have been brought to speedy justice. That vicious class who are looking for a place where they can do as they please and violate laws with impunity may well beware of Montana.

The great fire at Seattle, Washington was sad enough and destructive enough as it was, but the report of it grew rapidly as it traveled. The most reliable estimate places the loss at $5,000,000, and there was no loss of life. A Chicago paper states the loss to be $10,000,000, a Nashville paper says from 15 to 20 million dollars. And now one of our exchanges from Georgia says the loss in property was $30,000,000.

Gov. S. T. Hauser remarked as he gave us a liberal donation for our church in East Helena, that if we would close up all those rum shops there they could afford to build us a church. This remark was from a purely business point of view. How much stronger the argument for closing saloons is from a moral and religious standpoint.

A brother recently sent us an advertsement of a tobacco and cigar store which we rejected on the ground that it would be inconsistent to encourage a practice in that way which in all our writing we must condemn. We know many Christians and even preachers who use tobacco but we do not know of any who plead for it and openly encourage its use. It seems to us they ought to do both or neither. Let them either quit its use or else advocate and encourage it.

Last Thursday we had a most enjoyable excursion to Alhambra. It was intended chiefly as a picnic for our Sunday school at Helena, but many of the members and friends of the church joined in to enjoy the holiday. At East Helena Bro. Barber and about twenty of his people got on the train, so we had about two cars full of excursionists. The day was beautiful, the wild roses and other flowers were in full bloom, the scenery around the springs was inspiring, and everybody seemed in love and fellowship with his neighbor.

When dinner time came, like the early Christians, they had all things in common; and after satisfying nearly a hundred will sharpened appetites there were more than twelve (small) baskets full of fragments remaining.

At 3 o'clock a good portion of the company gathered in the school house and spent an hour in prayer and praise and listening to short speeches from five of the half dozen preachers present. At 6 o'clock we returned very tired, but all feeling that the day had been most pleasantly and not unprofitably spent.

Notes from Bro. Stanley.

Many thanks to Brother Needham for his sensible letter, breathing such a fraternal, cheerful and hopeful spirit. If he had been in Montana and knew all about us he could not better have stated our case. He says: "Our appropriations ran down for years and yet it seemed some new fields must be occupied. Of course, this meant pinching, but the brethren pulled bravely through it. When the larger appropriation came the increase was divided between increasing the appropriations to insufficiently supported charges and the occupation of new places." As Brother Needham says, there is room for difference of opinion here, but I think time and results will demonstrate the wisdom of this policy. We are looking to the future and hoping for better things. We do not expect always to be on half rations. The country is new. Now is the time to lay foundations and secure titles. If we hold this country we must have enough men and secure enough territory to make ourselves felt among the people. It seems discouraging to go out into small villages and isolated communities where we have but few or perhaps no members. But the small and out-of-the-way places of to-day may be the centers of population and influence to-morrow. Then, if we can secure the men and set them to work holding revivals, organizing Sunday schools and building churches, the board is more likely to increase our appropriation than if we draw in our lines and divide funds and distribute the labor between four or five points. (Of coorse, we must guard against extremes in either case.) This was Bishop Galloway's plan and it was the correct one. We must be aggressive or else die. True, some of the brethren have been "pinched," and none have gotten rich very fast. But my observation is that this is nothing new for Methodist preachers, even in old conferences where the church is well organized. Thank the Lord that, as a rule, they have "grit and grace" to endure it in the hope that it will be better further on. As Bishop Keener once remarked, if the Bishops sent men only to places where they were assured beforehand of a support, half the preachers would stay at home and Methodism would be robbed of the glory of her wonderful conquests. Every Methodist preacher is supposed, under the blessing of the Master, to awaken an interest that will react in the way of a partial support, at least,—just how far cannot be known until the test is made. The uncertainty is greater in new countries, where the work is unorganized, churches and parsonages are being erected and when other disturbing forces enter in that were unforeseen.

As this is a country of much promise the various religious organizations are seeking a foothold. If we abandon the field because they are here or are likely to come we might just as well give up our commission. This is a day of activity and aggression in everything. Satan is hastening men to ruin by means unknown in former days. We must hasten to "rescue the perishing" and show that we are worthy to stand side by side with others in the noble work. If we wait to know whether we are wanted or not we never will be wanted. A general that would wait to enter the field of conquest until he knew whether he is wanted would never gain a victory. If Jonah had waited till Ninevah had called him the people had perished in their sins.

Brother Needham wonders whether the M. E. church crowds us or not. It is too true that she does. But what of that. If we abandon the field in Montana because of this we will have to abandon it in Colorado, California, Missouri, Texas and everywhere else. For she boasts through her agents that she has the money and the men ane is going to occupy the whole land, north and south. She has no regard for our claims and seems bent upon disintegration and absorption, regardless of the means. We have abandoned places to prevent friction, but it was only to be followed to some other point where we were trying to do the Master's work. And this state of things is not confined to Montana alone. The onlo way is for us to go forward in the way of duty, peacably if possible; if not possible, then we are to contend earnestly for the faith, and leave results with Him who doeth all things well.

Expository.

Please explain 1 Timothy v. 8: "But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel."

This passage cannot be understood apart from its context. St. Paul is speaking here of aged widows whom he recognized it to be the duty of the church to support, provided they had no children or descendants (this is the meaning of the word translated "nephews") able to do so. In case, however, there were such children or desendants, Paul insisted that the church should not be burdened with this extraordinary charge. He even goes so far as to say that if any man fails to discharge so natural and obvious a duty, he has practically made a denial of the faith, and is worse than unbelievers, many of whom are by no means so remiss.

To make this passage an excuse for not supporting the institutions of the church, and a justification for the greedy accumulation of riches, is, therefore, to pervert its meaning.—Ex.

Jewish Colonies in Western China.

The very interesting discovery of many years ago of Jewish colonies in Western China is now well supplemented by the discovery of Christian clans or sects in Africa, south of Abyssinia. These wholly isolated people have retained some forms of Christian belief and worship since the early centuries when Egypt and the lands to the south were in the hands of the followers of Jesus. Mohammedanism arising in the seventh century cut off this section, and has obliterated Christianity to the north ot them. What is left, however, of the better faith, is now so thoroughly degenerate that it is not worth the preserving. Africa is full of wonders. Stanley will have another story of the marvelous sort to tell.—Ex.

On Supplying the Work.

It has been thought strange that we have such a hard time getting the right kind of men and in keeping them after they are here, and not a few have used it as an argument against our occupancy of this field. The question arises, why is it, and what is the remedy?" Either is difficult of solution. But "misery loves company," as the old adage has it, and we may find a grain of comfort in the fact that it is not confined to our Church in Montana alone, but extends to California, Oregon, Colorado, and all frontier fields, as Simmons' History of Southern Methodism in California, and the minutes of all our frontier conferences will show. Besides, other denominations have the same trouble in supplying their fields with efficient men. There is not a preacher here in the M. E. Church, the Presbyterian, Episcopal, or any other Protestant denomination, (and but one or two Catholic priests that I know of) that was in Montana when this writer came. Most of the churches have changed pastors—half a dozen or more times.

The Bishops and other clergy have used their utmost endeavors to get the proper men, but only to fail in not a few instances. As good Bishop McTyeire remarked to the writer at Nashville five years ago, you can't tell anything about what men will do, or how they will succeed in the west, until they are tried. Those who have been eminently successful at home utterly fail, and some who never amounted to much in the home conferences advance rapidly to the front and soon distinguish themselves by valiant and efficient service when they go "out west." All the Bishops and all the examining boards cannot entirely remove the difficulty. We have just got to persevere in the good work, use the best judgment we possess, have some system so as to prevent confusion and clashing of plans, receive and treat those who come to us as brethren beloved so long as they prove themselves worthy and efficient, but above all things let us "pray the Lord of the harvest that He would send forth more laborers into the harvest." I fear that we are much at fault here. Let the Church be much in prayer that men may be raised up right among us—even of our own children and household to carry forward our banner. Then pray that our brethren in the home-church may be wonderfully imbued with the spirit, and may come in the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ, ready to endure hardships as good soldiers for the Master. Then shall we go forth conquering and to conquer. E. J. S.

Sparks from the Smelter City.

I believe it is definitely settled now that the new machine shops of the Montana Union Railway company are to be located at Anaconda. This will add a large number of workingmen and many families to our magic city on the pebbly and pellucid Warm Springs. Ground and water Anaconda company, which is have been tendered by the but another instance of the progressive spirit and indominable pluck of our chief business men. The fingerboard of destiny points directly to Anaconda as one of the first cities in the great Northwest, and we have reason to believe that our future capital will be here.

Our new hotel will have been about completed when the reader's eye falls on this. In all of its appointments its surpasses anything of its kind, I presume, between St. Paul and San Francisco. The Fourth will witness the first grand "spread," when, to say nothing of others, it is given out that 200 Californians, J. B. Haggin and Senator Hearst among the number, will sample the menu. It is not yet known whether your Anaconda correspondent will have a place among the "distinguished."

As we were about to commence the exercises of our house-to-house prayer meeting last Friday evening, a gentleman broke in upon us and asked if this scribe would be at leisure after 9 o'clock. On being answered to the affirmative, he retired, agreeing to call for us after the hour mentioned above. On Third street we were ushered into an elegant parlor, where soon the aroma of orange blossoms filled the house. Leaning on the strong arm of Charles Crossin was Miss Esther Perry, a few words from the preacher sealed their happy future.

At the "Lower Works" Charles did reside,
And every day did Warm Springs ferry,
But growing tired, to the parson hied,
And carried home his lovely Perry.
He's happy now, and ne'er will pester
His bonny bride, beautiful Esther;
And she, true wife, will do no bossin (g),
But live content with Charlie Crossin.

Mr. D. L. Harbaugh is the landlord of the new hotel. His wife and son are in the East. When he parted from his little son he gave him $10, and told him that his receiving more would depend on how he expended that. Some days afterwards he received a letter from his little son telling him that his diary contained the following entry:

"To horse car fare.....$ 05
"To charity fund..... 9 95

"Total.....$10 00

"P.S.—Charity hides a multitude of sins."

The father told me that the conduct of his little boy made him feel proud, and that he would send him $5. What a lesson young Harbaugh has thus taught other boys!

At the conclusion of our prayer meeting last wednesday evening a pleasant gentleman approached and asked us to accompany him. We were soon seated in an elegant parlor at the Eureka house, on First street. Not long after a beautiful lady supported by a noble gentleman and retinue filed into the parlor. The gentleman, Hiram McNeil, is an engineer on the Montana Union railroad, and the winsome maiden, Miss May Price. A ceremony and a prayer perfected the happiness of these two anxious hearts, and the occasion so filled the celebrant with the spirit of the muses that the "machine was put to work again, and here's the result:

Hiram has made his final "run,"
His engine's now at rest;
"On time" he was when he begun,
And always tried to do his best.
His "iron horse" he groomed quite nice,
The "headlight bright and shining;
And he ever hoped for a better Price—
He had no time for sad repining.
June nineteenth was the happy day
That witnessed the consummation;
But Hiram's June is turned to May,
And the parson smiles his approbation.
May the "train" of wedded life
Bear richest fruits of joy and love;
And the "track" of duty shining bright
Conduct them both to heaven above.

Horse racing, gambling and drinking at Silver Lake, fourteen miles west from Anaconda, last Sunday resulted in the killing of one man, a saloonkeeper of Georgetown, and the wounding of another. The remains of the dead were brought to Anaconda and buried on Tuesday. The sad office of laying the unfortunate victim away in his grave to sleep was performed by your correspondent. A young man in the prime of life murdered in cold blood while attempting to make peace between two men who were fighting, so I was told. But the victim, unfortunately, was in bad company on the Lord's day. Moral: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

A Home for Homeless Children.

Dear Brethren and Sisters: Sitting here to-day meditating upon the great work before us, the words of the Master, "go ye into all the world and preach the gospel," came to me then forcibly than ever before. Why was this to be done? The answer comes that men and women might be saved. What a noble work! And yet as I look into the faces of the orphan waifs of this city who know not a mother's care and love, alone in the world, surrounded on every hand by vice and crime, my heart goes out in sympathy to them. And I reason thus with myself. How much easier it would be to provide a suitable home for these waifs of our cities, who are God's own children, where they might be cared for and taught to love their Maker in the days of their youth, than it will be to wait till they have grown up to manhood and womanhood, all scarred with sin, and then convert them.

Let us not forget that among this very class of children, we may find those who with proper training, might move the world even as a Wesley or a Moody has moved it. And if our effort in this line were blessed with the saving of but one soul, would we not feel doubly repaid even though we had made great sacrifice in starting and supporting such a work?

Again the scripture says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me."

Dear reader, as you gather your bright, laughing, well fed and well clothed jewels around your board to-night, let the pinched and sallow face of the waif who receives no word of kindness nor, when sick, the kind ministries of a mother, come up before you. And think what if my own bright boy should come to this!

My friends we need just such a home here in Montana. And I hope the readers of this paper and all interested in such an institution will write their views concerning it. Yours in the faith,

J. A. Barber.

East Helena, Mont.

We take to the suggestion in the above article for several reasons. First, such an institution would help to nip a crop of criminals in the bud. It would help to a virtuous and Christian life those who have the greatest claims on our beneficence. For neither those who grow up in vice in spite of good instruction nor the heathen of foreign lands have the claims on our charity that the heathen of our own cities have.

Second, A home for homeless children would command the interest and appeal for the support of all classes and all denominations. A man without any religious convictions whatever, could see the benefits of it from a purely ecomic view.

Third, Other churches are building schools, colleges, and hospitals and are largely supplying the need in their lines, but here is a needy field and so far, entirely unoccupied by any one. Asso. Ed.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

THE BLIND BOY.

Oh say, what is that thing called Light,
Which I must ne'er enjoy?
What are the blessings of the sight,
Oh, tell your poor blind boy!

You talk of wondrous things you see,
You say the sun shines bright;
I feel him warm, but how can he
Or make it day or night?

My day or night myself I make,
Whene're I sleep or play;
And could I always keep awake
With me 'twere always day.

With heavy sighs I often hear
You mourn my hapless woe;
But sure with patience I can bear
A loss I ne'er can know.

Then let not what I cannot have
My cheer of mind destroy;
Whilst thus I sing I am a king,
Although a poor blind boy.

Try Them.

Many Sunday schools have a very pernicious practice of sending their little girls to hawk their festival and picnic tickets. A gentleman besieged by the children said:

"I will buy tickets of all who can say the Ten Commandments." Out of the twelve not one could make the required recitation, and all belonged to the same Sunday school, and to the same class. Another made her appearance. "How many commandments should you say there were?" she was asked.

"Sixteen."

"You place the figure rather high, but let's hear what you know."

"Well, she said slowly, "I don't know but four."

"Say the four for me, then."

A moments pause. "I don't believe I know but two."

"We will hear the two, then, if you please."

"I've forgot them," said the vendor of tickets.

"Well, then, I cannot deal with you," and she was dismissed. As many as fifty children applied, and yet none could say the commandments, except one little girl, of which tickets were bought. If our Sunday school scholars were put upon the stand, how many could repeat the Ten commandments?—St. Louis Adv.

A Story with a Moral.

A little girl, aged three, informed her mother that she knew a beautiful story about a giant. "Would you like to hear it, mamma?" asked she.

"Well, then, she continued, "once there was a great big ugly giant, and he was very fond of eating little girls. One day as he was walking along through the woods, he met two little girls—one very good little girl, and one very naughty one.

"First he took a bite of the good little girl, and he made up a horrid face, and said she tasted awful nasty; then he took a taste of the bad little girl, and he smacked his lips and said she tasted dreadful nice, 'cause, you see mamma, she had eaten nuts, and raisins, and candy, when her mother told her not to, and that made her taste sweet. Then the old giant said, "I'll never again eat a good little girl. I'll always eat the bad ones.—Wide Awake.

How Much do You Pay?

Brother, some people think if you start out to be religious you have to give up everything, and you can't make any money—you can't do anything; you just have to give the whole business right up. I was talking to a feller some time ago, and he said:

"Jones, the church is putting my assessment a little too high."

I said, "How much do you pay?"

He said, "Five dollars a year."

"Well," I said, "how long have you been converted?"

He said, "I have been converted now about four years."

"Well, what did you do before you was converted?"

"I was a drunkard."

"How much money did you spend for whiskey?"

"I spent about $250 a year."

"How much was you worth?"

"I rented land and was plowing with a steer."

"What have you got now?"

"I have got me a good plantation and a pair of horses."

"Well," said I, "you paid the devil $250 a year for the privilege of plowing with a steer, and now you don't want to give God $5 a year for plowing with horses. You are a rascal from the crown of your head to the sole of your foot."

There are a great many people that way. I have never known the Lord to bankrupt a man yet; have never known a man that couldn't do better, everything being equal, as a Christian than a sinner.—Sam Jones.

Within twenty-four hours after the confirmation of President Harrison's cabinet, a cablegram was made public to the effect that the Pope was satisfied with the cabinet, and that information had been given the Vatican that under Harrison's administration the relations between the United States and the Holy See would be of the most cordial character. We fail to see what a change of the national administration in America has to do with any opinion, favorably or otherwise, with the Pope, except it be that that functionary, true to his canon law, considers the Catholic church a political organization.—Rev. Scott Hershey, Ph. D.

For Montana State.

An eminent retired barrister has recently given some advice to the territories soon to become states in the matter of constitutions. From an exchange we learn that he says: "The constitution itself should be a model of perspicuity, so as to prevent the framing of laws that a court will pronounce to be in violation of its provisions."

The Australian system of voting is recommended. This provides for an official ticket, which prevents the tricks of private enterprises. All are to be alike.

The arrangement for the individual to be unaccompanied at the polls—he is to bring no tickets with him, placed in his hands by a partisan—but selects in the presence of the commissioners conducting the elections etc.

He also advises the "establishment of friendly tribunals," saying "differences between citizens of a state should be settled like those between members of a family."

If this could be done and would work when provided, how it would abridge litigation, but the Chicago Herald knows a thing or two in saying:

A constitutional convention is ordinarily composed almost entirely of professional politician, the majority of whom are lawyers. They have little knowlege about the science of government, and are not desirous of obtaining new information. They are personally interested in having a large number of offices, and in making litigation as tiresome and expensive as possible.

If the Herald be correct, and our delegates be lawyers, we shall have shadows on our hopes, in the July meeting at the capital city. As to this however it will simply be, shall the delegates in convention assembled provide for the people or the legal fraternity. We shall concede clearer heads, and cleaner consciences among our latter-day patriots. So mote it be.

What We Think of It.

It is neither our province nor wish to be a public censor, especially in regard to our sister churches. We generally have enough to do to keep our own vineyard pruned. We believe we are not now forgetful of the scripture about the beam and the mote. So questionable are the methods of church entertainments for social and financial purposes in our midst to-day that we believe it is high time to rebuke such.

One of our churches in Butte City has not only drifted into this public tide, but has used the secular press, and published itself abroad. The following is from one of the city dailies:

"Grand picnic, under the management of the Baptist Sunday school, to be given at the Columbia Gardens, Tuesday, June 18, 1889. An invitation is extended to all respectable persons to attend and bring their little ones. All who intend to go will be expected to prepare themselves with lunches etc., before starting. The motor will leave Butte every hour during the day; also leave the picnic grounds every hour for Butte, thereby giving an opportunity to come and go at will. Garden will be open from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. No one will regret going, as you can boat ride on the lake, swing, ride the "Flying Dutchman," rest in the shade of the trees, see all the wild animals, take in the museum and be treated to two or more performances during the day in the theatorium. No liquor sold on the grounds upon this occasion. No extra charge after entering the gardens. Fare for the round trip—adults, 50 cents; children, 25 cents. Admission to all the liberty of the grounds—adults, 50 cents, children, 25 cents. Enjoy yourselves, help the little ones and a worthy cause."

Let us examine. We omit comment upon the propriety of the various inducements offered to public patronage, under the auspices of a "Sunday school," confining ourselves exclusively to that about "two or more performances during the day in the theatorium."

The Columbia Gardens is a place of public resort, under the management of a firm in the city, which runs the "Comique," a well known low grade variety theater, which peddles bad wares in decidedly bad style. The advertisement under the control of the aforesaid Sunday school, forbids liquor selling, and the patronage of disreputable characters for the one day "from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m." We will not use many words—there is no use—but we quietly predict a woe betide the church that continues such a compromise with tho devil. We believe the "worthy cause" was hurt by this unworthy means.

From Within.

The developments are being rapidly made, and the bad faith of the Clan-na-gael successfully exposed to the public as the facts are given from within.

Dr. Cronin's misfortune, this Irish-American's clandestine machinations, and the false pretension in behalf of poor Ireland are now before the people of this country. Will the perpetrators of crime—black, midnight crime never learn the value of their necks? Our detective system, and sentiments of justice surely guarantee the lifting of the veil from the ugly records of these secret organizations so full of agitation for home rule in Ireland.

We hope that the cause thus secularized and debased may not sadly suffer, but grow warmer in the hearts of the sons of liberty and honor.

The Itinerating Altar.

A few thoughts were suggested by the Associate Editor of the MONTANA METHODIST about Altar against altar—The Richmond Advocate caught at it like a speckled trout after a grasshopper. Another paper quoted the Richmond and then the Pacific Methodist copied and passed it on to her readers, and by and by, the Columbia Conference brethren rise up and speak in meetin. We trust after all it may turn out as well as the altar built by the "Children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh" in the land of Gilead, which was satisfactorily proven afterwards, not to be against the altar in Shiloh. Do ye sabe? ED.]

Butte High School Commencement.

We had the pleasure of attending the Commencement exercises of the Butte High school, June 14th, which merited the highest satisfaction from the patrons and friends of the school. It was, without exception the best exhibit for the grade of school we have witnessed. There were seven graduates, four young ladies and three young men.

The subjects of the essays were well chosen and decidedly well treated. The motto of the class for '89 was not fanciful, or pretentious, but characteristically Western—"Non Quis sed Quid."

Not who you are but what you are.

We should not have been ashamed of these exercises in the academies and junior classes of the majority of our colleges back home. The moral tone of the addresses and essays, was very gratifying. We have the most sanguine hopes of the future success of these young graduates, and bid them God-speed.

The Constitutional Convention for the state of Montana convenes in the capitol city July 4th.

NOTES.

There are about twenty-five newspapers published in Montana, six or seven being religious journals and two of these are by THE METHODISTS.

We would have enjoyed being with our Associate and his Sunday School from Helena picnicing at Alhambra Springs, Thursday, June 20th. The circumstances were forbidding.

Wednesday June 5th was Commencement day of the Huntsville, (Ala.) Female College. Says Dr. Fitzgerald "That was a remarkable graduating glass before whom I stood and 'spoke my piece.' They were forty-four in number, forty-two of them being followers of Christ."

Number 4 volume 1, "The Vermillion Star" edited and published by S. P. Watts an old friend of boyhood days away down in the Pelican state, has been read with a zest as news from a friend in a far country. May the Star continue to shine with unabated lustre.

Methodism, in keeping with her reputation as a pioneer church, has sent the saddle-bag preacher into the newly opened territory of Oklahoma. Of the present generation, it will yet be sung:

"Land where my fathers died,
Land of the pilgrims pride."

The Eiffel Tower is the marvel of the great exposition in France, and causes the French scientists to believe they will yet outdo the world. America is yet young and vigorous, and rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race.

The Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University have established in connection with the Biblical department ten free scholarships yielding each $100 per annum subject to specified terms of scholarship.

The Editor is booked for an address at a fourth of July picnic among clever people in one of our pleasant valley communities where there's fish, chicken, pigs, lamb and many other good things. He hopes to be there in time for a thorough course.

A godly man thinks not of God as the absent and unseen one, for by faith he seeth Him who is invisible, and by that faith draweth nigh to him that is afar off. A godly man is filled with solemn reverential thoughts of God and of all that pertains to Him. He takes a comprehensive view of God, of his being, his perfections, his works, and the relations he sustains to his creatures, and approaches him in prayer or lifts up his voice in holy song and has hope and confidence. Such are all his saints.—St. Louis Ad.

Theological.

We see much of the would-be dogmas of the secular press to-day which betrays an ignorance that is perfectly surprising. Self-respect, it would seem, ought to make men more guarded than to give expression to such jargon.

Very recently we noticed a dissertation (?) of such character on Buddhism and Christianity. A lady who had returned from missionary work in China said that her time had been so taken up in teaching Christianity that she had not sought to unravel the subtletries of Buddha, but had an unfavorable opinion of it, since it taught that the worst punishment that could be inflicted upon a man was to convert him by the process of transmigration into a woman.

With this as a text it was stated: "The Budhist religion makes demands upon the credibility as great as does the Christian creed, but it has in its elaboration a beauty and consistency which appeals to the artistic temperament, and in this fact lies the reason that so many Americans of exceptional intelligence have adopted it."

Just what is meant here by its "elaboration" we do not undertake to say. It does not matter—— but whatever it may be, it is here said, that there is in it, "a beauty and consistency which appeals to the artistic temperament." What a virtue! what a principle for Americans of exceptional intelligence to adopt! Where is the beauty? Where is the consistency? What does it avail though these should appeal to the artistic temperament? Man has a soul—and his religion should be worthy that soul. The very comparison is odious, and unworthy an intelligent editor though he sit upon the tripod in a great western city.

It will Change.

Below we give an extract from the St. Louis Advocate showing the distribution of wealth and the reason for the same, in the United States.

Whether the cause of this state of things be as here set forth or not—it is only a question of time for a change to be made.

The wealth of the United States is distributed in the following proportion among the groups of states. The north has by far the greater portion, while the south has comparatively a small part. The North Atlantic group of states has $19,630,000,000, or 45 per cent of the total, with a per capita of $1,353. The South Atlantic group has $3,621,000,000, or 8.3 per cent. of the total, a per capita of $477. The North Central states, $14,747,000,000 or 33.8 per cent. of the total, a per capita of $850. The Southern Central group has $3,641,000,000, or 8.3 per cent of the total, a per capita of $408. The Western states have $2,003,000,000, or 4.6 per cent of the total, a per capita of $1,123. The North Atlantic and Northern Central thus are are shown to hold 78.8 per cent. of the total wealth of the Nation, while the south and west hold 21.2 per cent. These two Northern groups comprise less than one-fourth the area of the United States and less than one-half the population. The South and West are almost exclusively agricultural, and produce by far the greater portion of values, while the Northern and North Central contain principally the manufacturing and commercial centers. Could there be a stronger evidence of the effect of sectional and special legislation than is shown by these facts, which are taken from the census of 1880? Protected manufacturers and traders, and plundered agriculturists. That is the case in a nutshell.

RALEIGH & CLARKE,
Helena, Montana.

During the next sixty days, in order to reduce stock preparatory to the reception of our fall and winter goods, we will offer some of the most forcible bargains to which the attention of the people of Montana has ever been directed. Among the bargains are:

Our entire stock of parasols at nearly half price; embroidered Swiss and Batiste robes at half price and less; $6.50 linen table sets (cloths and napkins) with fancy borders at $3.90; ladies' dresses and wraps decidedly lower, we believe, than they can be purchased anywhere else in Montana, and the major part of our stock at prices correspondingly low. We intend to make this store the most advantageous place to buy dry goods. Samples and quotations by mail and orders promptly and reliably filled.

Sunshine and Shade.

For years I through life's shadows trod,
My journey taught me more of God;
For though his face was hid from sight,
I felt his presence, power and might;
And though dark shadows round us lie
The clouds will flee, our God is nigh.

I've seen the shadows come and go,
I've felt the frigid north wind blow;
I've bowed my head and felt the stroke,
Of rude afflictions hand; and woke,
To see the darkening shadows fly.
A father's guiding hand was nigh.

Life's shadows come, and swiftly go;
We see on mountain crest the snow,
Its purity reflecting clear,
God's sunlight ever lingering near:
When shadows round our pathway lie
They but a moment veil the sky;
Then are the clouds of sorrow riven
And we behold a fairer heaven.

I've walked abroad at radient noon
When shady paths did woo me; soon
I did rejoice to turn my feet
To bowers of peace, and safe retreat;
'Tis sweet in shady paths to tread
God's glorious sunlight o'er our head.

We love the sunshine, love the shade,
For when the orb of day was made
To light our world God spoke the word
"Let there be light" and quickly heard,
The mandate was obeyed, and soon
The sun proclaimed his highest noon.

The light was glorious; but 'twas meet
That night should her fair sister greet,
And softened by a mellower light,
The moon, was named the 'Queen of night'
Thus light and shade were early made
The law of God is here obeyed,
And did not shadows veil our sky,
We should not know when God is nigh.

MRS. ELIZABETH M. APPLEBURY.

Sanctification.

I have been long in the Methodist Church. I lived forty years in a justified state. I felt that there was a higher life for me. I went to my blessed Lord for help. He made me feel that he was nigh, and when I gave myself fully to him, all was well, and now I can say, I believe I am wholly sanctified, through the blood of Jesus. Twelve years since, God took the carnal spirit from me. When I claimed this state of grace, my brethren said I was already as good as I could be, but I told them I was not. I had enmity in my heart before. God showed me I must get it out if I called myself a Christian, and to my great surprise I found something else that I must give up. I did so. I am glad I tarried at Jerusalem and received the blessing I sought.

I see so many who think because they have their names on the church register that they are saved. I am praying that God may send a man who is full of the Holy Ghost to wake up the people. I long to see the time when the people may be one in heart. God says we must be one in Christ Jesus. I praise God that I can say, I am a child of a king, and I will work for my blessed Lord as long as he spares me to live in this world. When I go hence I shall meet my Lord and my sainted husband and all my loved ones who have gone before me. I am ready to go. I am now seventy-five years old and hope you will excuse my imperfect letter.

This article has for a long time been misplaced, and by accident found to-day. We regret it. ED.

What is Repentance?

Repentance is a change of mind and of life; a hatred for sin and turning from it; a Godly sorrow, working repentance unto life, and a decision of the will to forsake sin. "The sorrow of the world worketh death; it ends in despair; it is superficial, short-lived, continuing only with present suffering; it is compatible with a love of sin, a hatred of God and righteousness. This is often evinced by the vows of the wicked while they suffer, and a rapid return to sin when the clutches of the law are removed. Godly sorrow implying the grace and enlightenment of conviction—a scriptural apprehension of sin, stirs the subject to hate and leave sin, begets hope and life. Hence we read of repentance unto life, and repentance toward God; meaning a turning from the ways of death unto life—from the power of satan unto God, "I thought on my ways and turned my feet unto thy testimonies."—Ps. 119:59.

Repentance does not change the character of sin and only limitedly its effect. It does not change the heart like regeneration. It is the mighty effort of the soul, to dash to pieces the intoxicating bowl of iniquity, and to flee from sin as from deadly poison and death. A true penitent may not be able to repair all the damages he has done to society—to meet strict justice—to lay up all the gaps he has made; but so far as in him lies he makes restitution. Having gone to the extent of his ability, God accepts the will for the deed. He then feels the need of trust in God, and in answer to faith receives pardon. We behold the necessity for forgivenness when man fails, even with restitution, to make full reparation for his sins. And we behold also the wisdom of never committing sin—never sowing wild oats, for the effects are so hard to remove.

One of the first fruits—one of the happiest results—and a normal outgrowth—of repentance is restitution. The repenting heart hates sin to that extent that he makes the fullest effort to destroy it, "root and branch." According to a wise law which God gave the Jews a man who had trespassed against his neighbor was, not only to confess his fault, but restore the stolen property, with one fifth its value added. See Numbers v:6, 7.

Zaccheus said to our Lord, "if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation I restore him four fold." Luke xix:8.

Then Jesus said, "salvation is come to this house, he is a son of Abraham."

To make full restitution would be strict justice—what the Mosaic law which knew no mercy—required—a commercial equivalent; but the law of the gospel is that a man is required to give of what he hath. J. H. JOHNSON.

The Cry of the Whisky Devil.

The opponents of prohibition are now raising a fearful cry about "financial ruin" following every victory for temperance. The inhumanity of these people is simply appalling. The souls for whom Christ shed his blood are, by them, put into the scale opposite a few paltry dollars, and a comparison between the two is made in favor of the dollars with a coldbloodedness that sends a shiver shooting right through every humane person. And they say: "Some Christians are opposed to prohibition." Are they not slandered in this saying!"—New Orleans Christian Advocate.

What could be more absurd than this last rallying cry of the minions of King Alcohol? Financial ruin to a drunkard from abandoning his cups? Financial ruin to the laborer if he refuses to patronize the saloons? There are tens of thousands of homes in our land to which prohibition of the sale of ardent spirits would bring food and clothing and comfort where now squalor and misery reign.

Financial ruin to the brewer, the distiller, the saloonkeeper? Let it come and the lord hasten the day, for the wealth of each one of these represents the financial ruin of hundreds. Let the families of the drundards look upon the great establishments of the manufacturer and vender of intoxicating liquors. It is there that has been accumulating the money which paid the husband at the mill, the son in the shop and the daughter in the factory. That splendid mansion they have built, and in return have been repaid with squalid poverty and that which is worse than poverty, a degredation of character which has rendered impossible even those comtorts of home which temperance still bestows upon the poor.

What will become of the wealth invested now in the breweries and saloons of this country if the manufacture and sale of intoxicants is prohibited? It will go into the manufacture of clothing, into the cultivation of the soil, into mining or other employment by which something will be added to the needed products of our country, and so the comforts of life be made more abundant and cheap. Thus all classes will be benefitted. If every dollar spent for liquor were cast into the sea it were infinitely better. Financial ruin, indeed! May we live to see such financial ruin through all this land.—S. W. Methodist.

"The Last Wonder."

MR. EDITOR—They say there are seven wonders of the world. I have seen none of them, but from the point where I am penciling this, I have a fine view of the last wonder, Guthrie the prospective capital of Oklahoma. I am sitting on the grand stand erected on Capital Hill outside of East Guthrie—on the east side of it. The city is the growth of just six weeks and it is nearly two miles square. There are said to be 15,000 people here now and still they come. All this space is laid off in lots 25x145 and taken up. Houses are springing up in every direction, and the carpenters' hammers and saws are now clattering and buzzing as this scribe has never heard in this half century and will not hear in the next half. The site of the town is surrounded by an elevated ridge of prairie land stretching from 2 to 5 miles away with here and there a few acres of low trees. Of these there are already three parks laid off. Capitol Hill is a plot of ten acres of beautiful ground enclosed with a plank fence. The hill overlooks most of Guthrie proper, and East Guthrie. Every business transacted in Little Rock is represented here, except manufacturing, and some of that is here—at least I see a cigar factory. Churches and schools are conspicuously absent; but in a short time they will boom up like other things have done. I have been looking around a little this morning for lots on which to locate a church and I have no trouble to find them, but it will take the money to buy them. There are none to give away; every man that owns a lot wants either to build on it or make a speculation.—I. L. Burrows in Ark. Meth.

The Canon Thunders.

Canon Isaac Taylor is at it again. Apparently he is not satisfied with putting Mohammedism on a level with Christianity; he is now giving it the decided preference. He has recently visited Egypt, and given us the result of his observations in his "Leaves from an Egyptian Notebook." They are truly astonishing. We have been taught to believe that in Moslem countries women are degraded; but this is an entire mistake.

"The harem, he tells us, "is the center of conjugal happiness. It is prohibited to strangers because of the reverence accorded to women. In the harem the wife reigns supreme." The very donkey-boys of Cairo regard woman as an angelic being. Woman is safer from insult in Cairo than in Hyde Park. Devout Moslems are really Christians, but of an entirely superior kind. They are, in fact, almost too good for this evil world. The very schoolboys of Cairo are infinitely superior in intelligence and culture to the boys of any public school in England. Finally, Mohammed was a sort of Luther, who emancipated Christianity from its pollution, and who invented polygamy from the purest motives, and simply as a protest against asceticism.

One is tempted to say that if Canon Taylor had made the cultivation of ignorance the pursuit of a lifetime he could not have graduated with higher honors. In pure effrontery of ignorance he easily distances all competitors. Where has Canon Taylor lived? What has he read? I used to think Gibbon a pretty competent authority on Moslem morals; is it possible that Canon Taylor never heard of him? Then Canon Maccall and Dr. Marcus Dodds have written books on Mohammedism which have usually been regarded as accurate; are they quite wrong in their conclusions? And to quote nothing that statesmen have said, how is it, if Egypt is really the earthly paradise of the salt of the earth, the chosed home of these, pious, cultured, elect souls with whom the unfortunate Christians of England are not to be compared—how is it that Egypt is the worst governed country in the universe, and Cairo, according to many competent travelers, one of its worst moral cesspools?

Canon Taylor is good enough to suggest that the Unitarians might amalgamate with the Mohammedans and produce a higher Christianity. We hope they will relish the suggestion. We respectfully commend the idea to Dr. Martineau. But would it not be better for Canon Taylor to begin operations in the noble Minster of York, of which he is canon? He might begin by reciting the koran from the minster tower, and thus practising in the useful character of a muezzin. The harem, that "centre of conjugal happiness" where the "wife reigns supreme," might come afterwards.—Methodist Times.

The Editor on the James.

I am glad to see that Dr. Lafferty has been up to Jerusalem, and that he tarried awhile in the Sanhedrim. Does he long for the possession of that lounge where Dr. Fitzgerald's weary bones have so often found sweet repose? The Virginias satirist seems to have been lionized in and about "the House." Were those giants afraid of his pencil point, or were they simply heaping coals of fire on his lucky and plucky head? If Brother Fitz. is elevated or superannuated at the St. Louis Council, next May, I shall move that Lafferty take a seat on that sofa. A man of his genius ought to be able to engineer the Nashville Central and run that wide awake Richmond branch too. And, being at the hub, he could radiate in every direction, and tell the inhabitants from Dan to Beersheba about "the old times and the new" "in and out of the house." How that Nashville coal-burner would spin over the steel rails from Baltimore to Frisco with Lafferty at the throttle! The new hymn book is out and on sale. And Dr. Lafferty got the first copy. What a freak of fortune or policy it was that those advance sheets went flying on electric wings to the humorous doctor's bindery on the James, so that by bed time he had alarmed his neighbors with stenstorian strains of "O for a thousand tongues to sing out of such a book as this!" Sing on, doctor; it will do you good. I am only a little out of humor that you got ahead of these South Carolinians, and that you didn't invite our Editor Kirkland up to sing bass with you. It has been so long since he "raised a tune" his voice has become husky, and would go off gradually basso profundo.

Notes.

For the sake of many forgetful friends we repeat the announcement that our annual conference meets this year at Stevensville the 14th of August. Bsshop J. C. Granbery is to preside.

While Major Maginnis was delivering his Fourth of July oration to the crowds in front of the court house, Hon. J. K. Toole was addressing the constitutional convention at its opening session inside the building.

Bro. Barber, who has been preaching for us at East Helena for several months, has withdrawn from our church and ministry. Reason: He found his views of the Scriptures out of harmony with the doctrines of our church. Brother Hunter will supply the work at East Helena till conference. He we know to be sound in the faith, and is deservedly popular wherever he preaches.

Our old friend, Brother J. W. Agee, of Denver, Col., sends us Nos. 2 and 3 of his pamphlet productions, called Agee's Bee. They have for subjects, "Devils and Their Doctrines" and "Beyond the Grave." They are sui generis, for Bro. Agee does his own thinking. We have enjoyed them though we could not agree to all they contain.

The following from miscellaneous thoughts in one of Agee's Bees is worth repeating for the benefit of some preachers: "I attended a church, heard a good sermon by an Englishman. When dismissed he skipped back to the door and stood on one side, while another brother got on the opposite side, and there they stood shaking hands with the people and bowing and scraping as we went out. While hearing the sermon I felt like I was in the house of God, but on going out it seemed more like a Dutch Jew clothing house."

We are always glad to greet the people at church and to shake hands with them when they give us an opportunity. But some people do not wish to shake hands with the minister every time they come to church, and to force them to do so by guarding the door as the congregation passes out is an impertinence in the preacher, and often a bore to the people.

The Fourth of July celebration in Helena this year was the greatest patriotic demonstration ever seen in the territory. Of course our prospective admission into the Union added greatly to the interest of the occasion. In our space we cannot even attempt a description of the decoration, the great street parade two miles long, the music, the speeches, the crowds of people and the beautiful fireworks. All were very attractive. The memory of the day, however, is clouded by the sad accident which occurred during the display of fireworks in the eveving. A rocket caught fire while lying on the ground and shot into the crowd, instantly killing Lancy Yeager, a boy thirteen years old, and probably fatally injuring another.

Dr. A. B. Leonard of New York gave a temperance address in the new Broadway Methodist church last Monday afternoon. A stronger speech or one whose arguments were more keenly pointed we have never heard on the subjects. It was enough to make any one ashamed of himself who had sanctioned the liquor traffic either actively or simply by inaction. That address will bear fruit.

We want to raise our voice against an error of pronunciation very commonly heard in this North-land even from educated people, but which is an abomination to our ears. It is that of giving the double-o in such words as root and soon the same sound as heard in foot. It should be the long sound as in moon.

The corner stone of the Montana Wesleyan University near Helena was laid last Saturday by Bishop Goodsell. Col. W. F. Sanders, the chairman of the board of trustees, and Rev. Dr. Hickman of Indiana made appropriate addresses. The ceremonies were witnessed by almost the entire conference assembled in the city at that time, besides a good number of resident citizens.

The papers report that Bishop Wilson was injured by a cut in the head in a railroad disaster near Lynchburg, Virginia, last week. We have not heard the particulars but hopo his injuries were not serious.

Our Need of a Holy Incentive.

It is not difficult to persuade one that his intellect ought to control his animal nature, and that his moral nature ought to control both the carnal and the intellectual, but the hard part is to get him to act up to his convictions of right and duty. The tendency to sin in our nature is more powerful than our sense of obligation to live a holy life. Yes, this tendency to sin is often so strong as to override our fear of hell, our hope of heaven and every other motive that our minds can present before us. Every earnest seeker after righteousness has had the experience spoken of by Paul, "the good that I would, I do not; but the evil which I would not, that I do."

We see at once from this our imperative need of some incentive to a holy life that will be stronger than any which our natural power afford. This is just what Christ came to give us. He had before given to the world a perfect law and man had acknowledged it to be "holy and just and good," but he had also sadly realized his inability to keep it. Christ came as our sacrifice for sin. And by this revelation of his love to us he inspires our love to him—and such love as gives us victory over sin. This is, in short, the plan of salvation. God supplies us with a holy incentive strong enough to overrule the baser tendencies of our nature.

Although this plan is so simple and easy to understand we are utterly unable to follow it without the help of divine grace. The love of Christ will not move our hearts till they are quickened by the Holy Spirit. We may recall his sacrifice and sufferings for us, his words of love and sympathy; we may dwell on the beauty of his character and the perfection of his attributes and yet feel no responsive thrill of love in our hearts. Who has not been chagrined at his failure thus to arouse in his heart the love of Christ? But when we are thus brought to feel that "in us dwells no good thing', and that if we are ever saved from the power of sin it will be by God's free grace, then if we trust that grace it will not fail us. The new life will be given. The new motive will stir the soul so that the sins which before were our masters are now held in perfect subjection.

Does the reader long for this love of God, this holy incentive that will make him master of all baser tendencies? Be assured it is for you and is worth your seeking. The Savior says it is like a pearl of great price, which is so precious that when a man finds it, he gladly gives up all he has in order to obtain it. All sense of hardship in the Christian life is removed when the love of God fills the soul. We know of miners who leave home and friends in the east and come out here to make their fortunes. They endure hardships and privations that almost amount to martyrdom, and endure them cheerfully, all for the love of perishing riches. So when the love of Christ constrains us, and "the eternal weight of glory" appears to our eyes of faith, then we can speak of all we suffer here as "our light affliction which is but for a moment."

The Montana Conference of the M. E. Church convened in this city a week ago to-day. We had the pleasure of attending some of the sessions. The reports from the preachers were encouraging from nearly all the fields, showing that Methodism is a power in this territory as in all other parts of our country. The following paragraph taken from the Independent gives their statistical strength:

"The statistical report showed the number of church members to be 1,561; churches, 34; probable value, $136,500; parsonages, 24; probable value, $27,000; total value of church property, $164,200. If the value of the college property, acquired during the year, amounting to $60,000 be added, the total property of the conference will be seen to be $224,000."

Bishop Goodsell who presided, was fatherly both in appearance and in treatment of the preachers. His address to the conference just before reading the appointments wss so kind and sympathetic that we thought surely no preacher can feel afflicted by any appointment he may receive from that bishop. But it is hardly possible that every one was satisfied.

Thirty-four men received appointments and seven places were left to be supplied. This we know usually means to be unsupplied. Yet several of these preachers were sent to fields which our church is occupying and where we think they are not needed. This is what Bros. Needham and Stanley mean when they say the M. E. Church crowds us. We would call the attention of the editor of the Montana Christian Advocate right here. From his editorial last week he seems to misundersand the spirit of our brethren. We rejoice at their success and desire to work with them to give the gospel to the people in all sections of the country, but when they leave needy fields to be (un-)supplied and yet send men to places already supplied by our preachers, which in many cases serves only to divide and hinder the work of both, we call that crowding—unkind and unchristian crowding.

We rejoice with others over receiving a good supply of the new Hymn Books. We will be doubly happy now if we can get the people—all the people—to sing.

The Victory Over Death.

O death, thy sting hath conquer'd me!
And here I am, alone and slain!
But my great king shall vanquish thee!
And Jesus like, I'll rise again.

For He arose, and left the grave,
A victor's couch, an empty tomb!
And proved He has all pow'r to save,
And give eternal life and bloom!

All glory be, thou Prince of Ltfe,
From man to thee, thro' endless days!
O, Conquerer of death and strife,
And sin and pain be endless praise.

Uses and Abuses of Money

Money gauges the values of all marketable things. It is a wise expediency of all governments. It is the most convenient, tangible property, a very high expression of wealth. The love of it means the love of the world; the wise use of it, the best use of all things. Money was designed as means, not an end of life. The world often uses money as means to attain happiness; most generally their affections center in it because it opens every avenue of pleasure and passion, honor and position. Money should be estimated at its full value, as a great lever-power, moving all the enterprises of the world. "The gold and the silver, the world and they that dwell therein" belong pre-eminently to God. When a man first gives himself to God in consecration, his money will follow the same channel. It is our bounden duty to be dilligent in business," "provide for our own households," to work "for the meat that perisheth"—not to strive for it, to "make all we can honestly, save what we can, and give all we can" to the Lord's cause. It is one of our highest duties and most distinguished privileges to be industrious, economical, frugal, prudent. All this may be consistently carried out, with the highest end of our being in view—namely to build religious character, to "lay up treasure in heaven"—to be happy in God. We are to love this world, this life, body, raiment, meat, money, less than we love the life to come, the heavenly world, our souls and God, just in proportion as the former are inferior in character to the latter. "Whosoever will lose his life shall find it; whosoever will save his life shall lose it."

COVETOUSNESS.

Covetousness is an "inordinate desire of obtaining some supposed good." It is concentrating will, purpose, thought and affection in money, or material things, as an end, not a means of life. It is idolatry: first, because it leads to an inverson of the Divine order. The life is more than the meat which sustains it; the body is more than the raiment which clothes it. Covetousness prostitutes this life and body to the service of gaining meat and raiment as the great end of life; it sacrifices health and body for the means of sustaining these; it strives with earthly toys to satisfy the soul. "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not?" Harken dilligently unto me, eat that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness." Isaiah LV:2. Any attempt to subvert God's plan antagonizes the highest and best interest of man.

Secondly. Covetousness is dangerous to the soul because it brings all the muscular powers and mental faculties, talents and genius, into the degrading slavery and bondage of the mammon of unrighteousness, to obey the dicta of the world, the flesh and the devil. It blunts the moral sessibilities, stultifies the intellect, contracts and shrivels the soul in selfishness, makes its heaven-born and God-given faculties sensual, earthy and devilish. It degrades the body and soul of man which are God's first and last.

Thirdly. Covetousness opposes the general good of the community, antagonizes the interests of others, desires and seeks the property of others without a commercial equivalent. It leads to lying, cheating, defrauding, peculation, theft and murder. The tenth commandment in the Decalogue aimed at the root of all crime in prohibiting covetousness. This sin then opposes the law of God; it is against self, and the interest of others. J. H. Johnson.

Editor Montana Methodist: I wish through the columns of your paper, to request the brethren who expect their wives to accompany them to the Annual Conference to let me know at once, that suitable accommodation may be provided for them. Will intending visitors outside of the valley do likewise?

We are hopeful of being able with ease to pleasantly entertain all who may visit us on the occasion.

Will not the whole church in Montana make daily fervent prayer to God that the forthcoming session of the Conference may be one of great power and blessing to all? Fraternally yours,

J. B. Parnall, P. C.

Are Colleges a Failure?

Brother Barbee introduces a long array of witnesses to prove College education a failure. We cannot cross-question them all in our brief examination. But we will call up two, Washington and Johnson.

George Washington: I beg leave to say that I learned surveying at William and Mary College. Yes, I was President of that institution for a time. I gave many thousand dollars to found a school now called Washington and Lee University, at Lexington, Va. Mr. Barbee has failed to understand me.

Stand aside, Mr. Washington.

Andrew Johnson: I never attended even a common school, nor a Sunday school. Was no member of any church. My boys all died—well, excuse me as to their fate. Mr. Barbee, to be consistent, should introduce my case to show S. S's a failure, rather than to prove colleges a failure, because I ignored the S. S. and the church entirely, while I honored colleges, and was a college trustee. I'm sorry sorry Mr. Barbee called me as a witness in his strange attack on the colleges; he don't know me.

Stand aside Mr. Johnson.

The jury now has the case.

Fair Play.

Foreign.

As to foreign news, one of our city dailies curtly puts it as follows: The statistical reports from no part of the world are altogether quite roseeate. China sends us enormous losses of life and property by floods and fires. Hungary and adjacent territory suffer enormously from the same causes. Australia has the rabbit plague and drouths. Brazil is tortured by the utter shiftlessness of its emancipated slaves. Ireland reports a large percentage of its thin population still living in hovels without floors, or chimneys, or windows; in some cases a dozen families herded in a single shelter of this sort. The United States can never be quite happy until cyclones are understood and mastered. New South Wales bewails the loss of 5,000,000 of sheep during the past year owing to drouth. On the whole, Paradise Regained is somewhat of a myth, but the good things of the world are vastly more than the evil. The wise man looks up.

This we believe to be true as far as it goes, and it goes far.—St. Louis Ad.

The Relation of Pastor and People.

Rev. T. A. Kerley, of the Ten-Conference sends us a copy of "The Relation of Pastor and People," a sermon in pamphlet form of about twenty pages.

The treatment is as follows:

I. The Constitutional Principle of Methodist Itinerancy as it relates to: 1. Preacher 2. The church. 3. The Episcopacy.

II. Duties of the Pastor: 1. To preach. 2. Pastoral visiting.

III. Duties of the church toward the Pastor: 1. To receive him kindly. 2. To attend upon his ministry. 3. To give him moral support. 4. To make ample provision for his material support.

From these divisions, it is readily seen that the pamphlet, if read at large will do good.

Brother Kerley wishes one of our Montana preachers to act as agent for the work at the ensuing annual conference at Stevensville. Retail price 10 cents with twenty-five per cent. discount to preachers.

We cordially commend this to the hands of our beloved J. H. Johnson, who knows what to do and how to do it. Ed.

A Word to Pastors.

Make up your minds you must work, but if you consider yourself a fellow-member don't work alone. Help your church but don't carry it. If you find meddlesome busybodies, give them plenty to do; they hate real work as a mosquito does smoke.

Your main business is to preach; but to do this you must know your people and ascertain their wants. Don't visit just to please, but to to help on your work. Some families will need six visits to another's one. Go where you can hurt the devil most. Be governed by men's wants; not their complaints.

Preach, not as others do, but as you and God can best arrange it. Fill your hearers with sound reason, then cork them tight with sound application, bind them with a "thus saith the Lord." Be sparing, if not a little stingy in using old sermons. Remember when the stream of study stops flowing, the pulpit pond lowers. Give no censures unless there is love enough to prevent their drowning in hatred. It requires much love to praise, more to reprove. Attack measures; "hit" people only when they stand between you and the evil.

You must begin in time, and not be too long in uttering what you have to say—if you would have this busy age stop and listen. If you would preach the best sermons, practice them faithfully beforehand.

Endeavor to be the greatest man in the parish, and that by being the servant of all.

Be childish enough to think you never can be left away from Christ. Run to show him all you have, and ask him for all you want.

Work when you can, retire when you must, and you shall have favor of God when you will. —Raleigh Advocate.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

'Tis Honorable to Labor.

There are many ways to labor
In this lower mundane sphere,
Be careful then my neigbor,
That to work you do not fear.

To labor is quite honest,
'Tis the surest road to wealth,
Or to easy independence,
Crowned with peace and rosy health.

Though the toiler's hands are homely
And not so purely white,
'Though the dress be not so comely
Or the manners so polite.

Yet labor on in earnest,
Either with thy hand or brain,
The lesson that thou learnest,
Will save thee much of pain.

The mind must be employed
With work of hand or head,
Or the power for good will be destroyed,
The soul to ruin led.

All are not born for lawyers,
All may not teachers be
Nor yet need all be sawyers,
To saw the fallen tree.

All women were not born to cook,
And serve up dainty dishes;
Nor should Bridget write a book,
Nor can she, if she wishes.

Still 'tis honorable to cook,
To boil, to brew and bake;
And I know of cooks who look,
As sweet as cakes they make.

—MRS. E. M. APPLEBURY.

Rats.

Some years ago, walking along the street of a large city, my attention was attracted toward a man handling a lot of rats. I stopped and watched him. He was rather below the ordinary class of men as to appearance; perhaps was brought up in "Rat Row;" but no matter, he was a success at his business. And the rats performed as though they understood the English language as well as the man himself understood it. It would pay any one to see this rat performance; and although a free exhibition he would "chip in" cheerfully, when the hat comes around. Some might think this a poor business, but it will make the man a living, if not more. Besides, he will do good wherever he goes. First, by showing what powers lie dormant in the lower animals, especially rats; second, by showing that so contemptible a thing as a rat can attract the attention of the busy moving world and bring it to a sudden standstill; third, by the lesson it gives our young men who are standing around waiting for something to turn up. Young man, look at this rat trainer and cheer up. Have faith in yourself and go to work. Do something. If you find no employment, catch a bug or bird and go to training it. Or pick up an ant and see what you can teach it, or else go sit by the ant hill aed let the ant teach you.—Agee's Bee.

Sayings of Children.

"Dean Ramsey mentions a little boy who must have had a very unlovable father, for when he was told of heaven, he put the question, 'An' will father be there?' and on his instructress answering that 'of course she hoped he would be there,' the child at once sturdidly replied, 'Then I'll no gang.' But though generally candid and open, children, like those 'of larger growth,' will often put the best face upon facts concerning themselves. A little Scotch boy who attended a day school was always asked when he came home in the evening how stood in his own class. His invariable answer was, 'I'm second dux,' which means in Scotch academical language next to the top of the class. As his habits of application at home seemed scarcely to warrant such a position at school, one of the family at length ventured to ask of what number of pupils the class consisted. After some hesitation the little fellow replied, 'Ou, there's jist me and anither lass.' Little children have often very tender consciences, and are perfectly aware when they have been 'naughty.' A little girl one day said to her mother, 'Papa calls me good, auntie calls me good, and everybody calls me good, but I am not good.' 'I am very sorry,' said the mother. 'And so am I,' said the child; 'but I have got a very naughty think.' 'A naughty what?' My think is naughty inside of me.'

"And on her mother inquiring what she meant, she said. 'Why, when I could not ride yesterday, I did not cry nor anything, but when you was gone I wished the carriage would turn over and the horses would run away, and everything bad. Nobody knew it; but God knew it; and he cannot call me good. Tell me, mamma, how can I be good inside of me?' A little fellow four years old prayed thus for himself: 'O Lord, bless George, and make him a good boy; and do not let him be naughty again, never! no, never; because you know when he is naughty he sticks to it so.'

"Children will sometimes add to their usual prayers petitions for something they particularly desire. A very little boy who lived with his aunt, had been often told by her of the fine time coming when he should be big enough to go to school and carry his dinner in a little basket on his arm. One night whrn he had finished 'Now I lay me down to sleep,' Eddie asked his aunt to teach him the 'big prayer.' She accordingly said 'Our Father' for him, stopping very often, that he might repeat it. When she said 'Give us, this day, our daily bread,' Eddie drawled out, half asleep, 'Give us,' is day, our daily bread, and a b-a-s-k-e-t too!"

"Another little fellow who, like many children, found his boots a very troublesome part of his toilet, prayed 'O God, bless father and mother and sister Nanny, and please make my boots go on easy."

Who is in the Wrong?

We believe there is an apparent inconsistency shown in the correspondence of the brethren in Montana which needs correction. We believe this correction necessary to to the good of our course as a church in Montana, and hence we write briefly to this point.

We quote an extract from a communication to the St. Louis Advocate of June 26. "We have had a few brethren here who were so blind to our needs or untrue to our interests as to oppose the sending of more men into the field. But these are few, and that spirit is dying. Its last wail was heard at the last session of the Helena District Conference when some one offered a resolution whose aim was to muzzle the mouths of certain correspondents." Now, we believe that the readers of the St. Louis Advocate generally who do not know the circumstances will be misled by such unqualified statements.

In the first place, we have not known a man in the Montana Conference, who opposed the comings of help to man the field.

The point advocated is simply this, that we should not have men brought here indiscriminately—men for whom there could be no possible provision—men so far in advance of the appropriations which the Boaad of Missions was able to make, that they would be pressed irrevocably to the wall in the matter of a living for themselves and their families.

Such an utterance as the above is not only a reflection on the administration of the presiding elders of Montana, but of our Bishops having the field in charge a year at a time. Long has it been the case, that our presiding elders have had to refuse men, who said we are ready to go to Montana if there is any show for a living, but the elders would be compelled to say no. Was it because they were not wanted? No—but simply because they could not be supported. How readily would Bishops Keener, Hendrix, and Galloway have given us more men, if they had felt it wise to do so when considering their support. Bishop Granbery will have the same difficulty this year, because the Board of Missions could not increase the appropriation. To say we need twenty more men in Montana, must be modified. If it were the right thing for us to have that additional increase of laborers how is it that our presiding elders and the Bishop in charge are not arranging accordingly?

Who is it "so blind to our needs or untrue to our interests" in Montana? Can it be our Bishops, our presiding elders, or some "hired man who careth not for the sheep?"

Let the lot be cast, and the curse to Israel be found out.

Some of the brethren of the Helena District Conference chance to know a thing or two about that resolution whose aim it is said, was to "muzzle the mouths of certain correspondents." Those who passed it know just what its "aim" was. We state it here briefly.

1. To forestall embarrassment to our presiding elders, in having men upon their hands for whom they had not a dollar, except as it came from their own purses.

2. The incumbrance of the Montana Conference of such men as were inefficient as laborers in a field so difficult.

The Angle of Vision.

It is held by opticians, that of all the senses none is more deceptive than the sense of sight. We are easily misled as to distance, size, shape and color. An object impresses us with variations of size and distance "according as the rays from its opposite borders meeting at the eye form a large or a small angle." Practice is the only educator against delusion and false conclusions. How much has the artist to do with lights and shadows. You may go into the studio to get the portrait of your mother, and the artist is very careful to have just the proper light and the various angles of vision brought to bear in the examination. At midnight you could not see at all—the full glare of the midday sun would dazzle into disfiguration.

It is none the less important to us to consider the angle of vision and the law of lights and shades in the measure of men and systems, whether these systems be of God or man. There are two sides to most of questions and more angles from which matters may be viewed.

The illiterate and the cultured, the sinner and the saint, have their impressions and convictions from many lines and under multiplied variations of light. One man may be as much too high as another too low, one too near as another too far away to see the true character of an object. These laws hold in the spiritual as well as the material world. How dare a man say then, that "I am right and you are wrong" unless he has seen from the all angles and in the varied degrees of light? We read in the Scripture—"to the pure all things are pure," "the natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." In the light of cannibalism human flesh is devoured by other human beings. In the light of the gospel we learn to love our fellows as ourselves. Get the right shade on the picture, and look at it from the proper angle, "and you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

The old Scotchman was correct in not letting brains or fools see his pictures half completed. We should exercise the same wisdom that he would teach, not to be too hasty in our conclusions. The whole truth in certain matters, you, in most of them, becomes necessary to prevent erroneous, unwise and even unchristian deductions. Neglect to preserve this precaution has resulted in much waste of material, much speculative and useless philosophy (?) and many stranded religious demagogues.

Dear reader, if there be any lesson for you in these reflections, see that you utilize the same, and the future will tell for itself as to the wisdom of your decision.

Glad Hearts.

A bill of lading—from Nashville, Tenn. A week gone—What? Books? Not here—Ten days, and no books. Sabbath evening—The preacher to the steward who had received the bill of lading—Any books yet? No. Monday morning—early after breakfast—Preacher started up town—a box of something on church steps—What is that?—Perhaps that is a box of hymn books—let us see—the hammer, dear, if you please—Five minutes and behold here is a full supply of hymn books for the Idaho Street, M. E. Church South, Butte Montana. Happy pastor. Happy people. How we will sing the old songs of our beloved zion!

The editor had a very pleasant visit last week, embracing July 4, among the clever citizens of Jefferson valley, where our young brother Goulder grazes. Brother Wm. Beall told several parties, as we went over from Butte, that we were going over to "orate a little." Judging from the liberal purse in compensation for such service we suppose our hearers were pleased.

NOTES.

In the Los Angeles Christian Advocate last week, Rev. T. H. B. Anderson makes another strong plea for an Episcopal residence on the Pacific coast. The need for such is undeniable, and we hope those brethren will give the bishops no rest till they accomplish this purpose.

As an argument for Foreign Missions we know of none more sensible than that found in the following illustration of Bishop Wm. Taylor.

He says when a man wants to make an orchard he doesn't just plant one tree and wait till that is full grown and bearing before he plants another, but he plants a thousand at once. So with Missions. It requires time for the truth to take root and grow just as it does for a tree, and if we wait for the gospel to bear its full fruit in our land before we plant it in another, the world will be slowly won for Christ. Plant the seeds of the word everywhere and let it be growing. Rich fruit will be gathered from China, Japan and Africa long before the kingdom has attained its full growth in England and America.

We have received the catalogue of "The College of Montana," of which Dr. D. J. McMillan is President. The enrollment for 1888-9 was one hundred and fifty pupils.

We regret to see the notice of the death of an old Vanderbilt chum, Rev. J. E. Stovall, who died in La Grange, Texas, June 23rd. This young and gifted preacher had made considerable literary attainments, and was President of the Georgetown, Texas, Chatauqua.

As great a man as the sainted Bishop Pierce said:

"It is my opinion that every dollar invested in a theological school will be a damage to Methodism. Had I a million I would not give a dime for such an object. * *

I pray most sincerely that the theological scheme may go down to the shades of oblivion. * *

I would teach the farmers, doctors, lawyers, merchants, preachers that are to be, all alike."

Just as strong men as Bishop Pierce have advocated the very opposite view. A man need not surrender or hold to any view then because he has precedence in some great men, either for or against him.

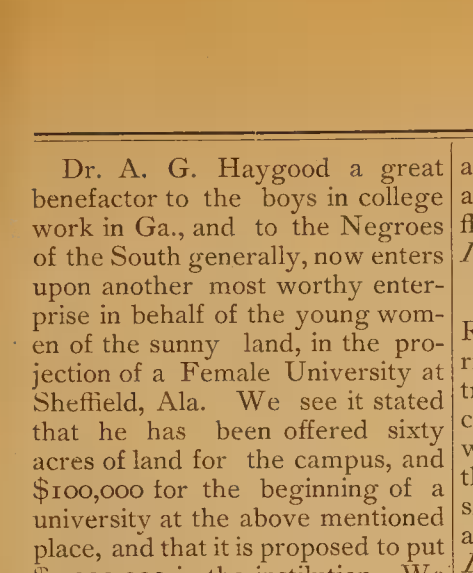
The Senior College president in the United States, gratifies us with a compliment in saying: "You are making a clear, good, live paper." Such words of cheer from such a source, is inspiring to those on double duty in the pastorate and editorship. We thank you Dr. Brunner, of Hiwasse College, Tennessee.

Dr. A. G. Haygood a great benefactor to the boys in college work in Ga., and to the Negroes of the South generally, now enters upon another most worthy enterprise in behalf of the young women of the sunny land, in the projection of a Female University at Sheffield, Ala. We see it stated that he has been offered sixty acres of land for the campus, and $100,000 for the beginning of a university at the above mentioned place, and that it is proposed to put $1,000,000 in the instilution. We rejoice in the rise of the educationaltide. "Let her roll."

The Light of History on Romanism.

The leading errors and corruptions of Romanism came into the church from the close of the fourth century on, and all these errors, with the exception of two, prior to the seventeenth century, when things in the ecclesiastical world were under the shadowy corruption of the dark ages. The Roman Church, as characterized by these distinctive features of doctrine and practice, is wholly unapostolic, and specially contradictory to the teaching of Peter, who is claimed to be historic and scriptural authority in matters of dogmatic and ecclesiastical claims.

The following exhibit of dominating errors shows when they were introduced, and it also shows that Protestantism has preserved a remarkable purity, touching these things:



—Rev. Scott F. Hershey, Ph. D.

"What a bitter-sweet business this editorial work is! It is taffy and trouncing in about equal measure and alternate doses. When you mourn somebody wants to dance; when you pipe somebody laments. You write a temperance paragraph, and somebody sends you the information that you are a fanatic; while the same mail brings the flattering opinion that "that item will give aid and comfort to the rum sellers." You find out that you are at once a Sabbatarian and a secularist; an aristocrat and an anarchist; a radical and a fogy; a republican, a democrat and a "third-partyite." The luckless editor is thus worked bellows-fashion alternately inflated and flattened. But maybe it is this, after all, that keeps him blowing and keeps this glowing "at the flaming forge of life."—Chicago Interior.

The highest honor the old Romans granted their great warriors was to give them a day of triumph, and in that day to wear a crown of grass or leaves which withered in a day; but, blessed be the Lord! the faithful Christian shall have a crown that fadeth not away, but endureth forever.—St. Louis Ad.

Too Many Amusements.

It may be claimed that the amusements we condemn are allowable as methods of recreation. It strikes us that some votaries of pleasure whom we have known wore habitually a more wearied and exhausted look than almost any honest labor would have given them, and that their amusements were anything but recreations. But they, it will be said, were guilty of excesses that no one apologizes for. But is there any recipe against excess? It belongs to the nature of these amusements to stimulate a passion that is very sure to become insatiable by any moderate indulgence. To use without abusing them is no easy undertaking.

The Immigration Question.

We want not to stop immigration, but to sift it; to have the wheat of honesty, muscle, intelligence and religion dropped on our shores, and the chaff of ignorance, degradation, filth, vice and crime blown back across the sea. For this purpose national prohibition will be an unequaled sieve. Observing men say that even as seen on the trains, there is a great difference between immigrants who go to prohibition Kansas and to high-license Nebraska, the better sort taking the Kansas trains.—Auburn Temperance Herald.

Rum's Ruinous Reign.

Hack! hack! hack! The dull, uncertain strokes of an unskilled workman's ax reverberated through the white birch grove through the fiercely whirling snow of a winter's day. Strange, unwonted sight, in a land of boasted civilization! A woman swings the ax! A woman clad in a scant calico dress, ragged shoes, stockings without bottoms, was essaying with queer little unskilled strokes, to fell the trees near the miserable wreck of a house. She worked as awkwardly as only a woman brought up to indoor work and laboring under the double infliction of pain and weakness can, sometimes stopping to press one hand to her side, and at others to wipe the freezing tears from her blurring sight. When a tree fell she hacked it till it was fitted for stove wood. Hack! hack! hack! till he children shouted again and again, "come, mother, come; you've chopped enough; baby's starving and we're freezing."

Despite their frenzied cries, despite the cold, despite the moral anguish only a mother may know, she worked, worked on till the sun went down on the short dreary winter day. Then laying down the ax, she loaded her frail arms with all that they could hold of the lead-like, frozen sticks, and slowly entered the house, well knowing she would not be able to leave it on the morrow. Here were her babes, her very life, one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten—each and every one dear to her noble heart as are your tender ones, favored mother—crouched over the dying fire in the black cooling stove, barefooted and half-naked, with hunger-pinched faces, and blue, claw-like hands; some were crying ociferously, while some only moaned in low, plaintive tones of cold and hunger.

For two weeks these eleven had subsisted on the miik of one cow and turnips. The cow had come so short of food as to be fed from their straw beds. After giving the starving children the milk and feeding the dumb giver the last armful of straw in their beds, she built a fire and sat down to warm her frozen feet. First, she took off one thin petticoat and pinned it about the shoulders of the oldest child, and, putting off her shoes and ragged stockings for its feet, sent it off to the wood pile to bring in the wood she had chopped.

The fire burned up bright and warm, and the famished children cuddled down beside the stove under their scant bed-covers, and forgot their woes in sleep. Not so the tired mother. She took a turnip and sat up to scrape it as she warmed her frozen feet. Ere the morning dawned another babe was added to the ten starving beside her.

Think of this true picture, mothers, you who have passed the fiery ordeal of motherhood amid the luxuries of warmth, food, and clothes, comforts, husband, friends and physicians—think of this frail, starving, frozen woman alone with the rayless midnight and her mortal anguish! Have you forgotten with what grateful avidity you seized a cup of hot tea held by the hand of ministering friends? Contrast that moment of grateful refreshment with the empty, craving stomach of this long famished creature, comforted only by the cold, scraped turnip, she would have, perhaps, given worlds for a tast of it had it then not been frozen. Can you drop a tear over this poor neighbor? My own flows like summer rain as I write.

You will ask where this "brute of a husband," the father of eleven children, was at such a time. Hush! indignant matron? Name not one of the "lords of creation" in such a tone!

I'll whisper it in your ear; be careful your busy tongue reveal not the secret. He was only down to Passadumkeag on a bit of a spree, lasting a couple of weeks or so! They can drink or let it alone, you know; so we must not say anything about their doing either lest we get to saying it on the wrong side.

Two or three days after the babe came to the poor woman a neighbor learned and reported her condition. A noble Scot came gallantly to her relief with food, clothing and firewood. The eager starving children, crowded about the hunger queller, could not be fed carefully enough to save them from reaction consequent upon repletion after famine. Tears flowed so thickly over the cheeks of sonsy Scotch build. that one poor naked starevling got just a cake too much, and though the physician was called, its little life went out a sacrifice to the good Bacchus, to whom the nations of earth deem it necessary to sacrifice so many human lives yearly. —Portland, (Me.) Herald.

Christian Training.

(Rev. Dr. Stephen Olin.)

Perhaps the strongest obstacle to success of Christian training is unbelief. Christian parents do not generally expect their children to grow up pious. They believe that a religious education will, very likely, be highly beneficial to them in various ways; that it will restrain them from vice, and furnish their minds with valuable knowledge, and facilitate their conversion at a later period; but we seldom find a father or mother, who really looks upon Christian education as a divinely-appointed means of grace, and as God's chosen agency for the salvation of their offspring. They pray that sanctifying saving grace may be showered upon their babes, even before they can walk or speak, but, with a strange inconsistency, postpone all hope of receiving answers of prayer to a future period, distant by many years. They follow a theory which allows and almost requires, a career of sin and impenitence, before a gracious state is attained. When the subject shall have been thus prepared for bitter repentance they trust he will be arrested in his folly, and under the influence of some prevalent, powerful religious excitement, brought to bow to the Cross. The revival is the agency often looked to for a result which God proposes to accomplish by his blessing on Christian education. The theory will have years of transgression; the divine word would forestall all this guilt and danger, by training up the child in the way he should go, not that he may come into it at a mature age, but that he may walk in it all along, and never depart from it. Upon this theory, then, which does not expect the result promised in the Divine Word, parents do not seek it, nor work for it. The exertions which they actually put forth, do by no means satisfy the idea of training. That involves the notion of patient, protracted, incessant effort; of earnest, trustful prayer, of effective, intelligible, appropriating faith; of a holy, emphatic example; of a gentle, winning, loving spirit; of an obedient, all embracing, and intense piety, which should transform our homes into Bethels, and our hearts into holy, consecrated altars, upon which incense and peace-offerings shall blaze evermore. They err greviously who conclude that such results as are proposed by the theory here discussed would supercede revivals. They would wrap the church in a heavenly flame and triple its energies. They would beautify it with holiness. Influences, powerful as the Pentecostal Spirit, would stream out on every side; and sinners, of whom charity itself has ceased to hope, would be penetrated by the moral power of a sanctified church. The "unlearned and the unbeliever," on coming into the presence of such a Christian congregation, would be compelled to recognize, in the "still small voice" of its universal testimony, an authority more potent than the miracle of "tongues." "Convinced of all and judged of all," the secrets of their hearts would be made manifect, "and so, falling down on their faces, they would worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth."

There may be found in all professions prodigies of learning who are nevertheless absolute failures. They are complacent pedants, stuffed full of Greek roots, scientific terms, indolence and indidence, and without two original ideas in their entire stock. Some have mistaken the preparation, the means—for the end; others fail through their total lack of energy. Some others are like Josh Billings' hornet, eturnaly bizzy, but about what the Lord only knoze." When such men as these are placed in the teacher's chair little practical good will come of their teaching. We want men whose very presence is an inspiration; who have the ability and the determination to call out all that is highest and best in those committed to their charge. President Garfield's definition of a college was, "A lot of boys on a log, with Mark Hopkins for teacher."

Dr. A. G. Haygood goes to Sheffield, Ala., to inaugurate and build a university for girls. A noble enterprise worthy his efforts. In his letter declaring his purpose he says: "There is sore need for better opportunities for our daughters. Such a university for girls will bring blessings to our people too great to be expressed in words. A great and broadly-planned Christian school for the women of the South—a school affording the best possible opportunities for all-round education, and honoring all womanly industries, as truly as all womanly culture—is what we need at this time. For such a school we must plan, and work, and give, and pray. Our people will welcome such a school; they know now that they need it. For the young men of my race I did what I could at Emory college; for the poor black people I have done my best; if I can, with God's favor, do something worthy the white girls of the South, I shall count it among my chief joys.

"I believe it to be my duty to my people to do what I can toward the establishment in Sheffield of such a school as we have discussed.

"With this conviction I leave the state that I love and that has been good to me from my youth to this day. I can promise only this much—to try as hard in the state of Alabama to 'serve my generation according to the will of God' as I have tried in Georgia." —Ex.

Send in the Bonds.

At the beginning of the current fiscal year, April 1, there were $11,750 of the bonds of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, still outstanding. Will not the holders of these bonds give the book agent the opportunity to redeem them? Money at 4 per cent. interest may be cheap to the borrower when he needs it; but no rate of interest, however low, is cheap for money which a man does not need, and it is always good financiering to pay a debt when the debtor can conveniently do so. The Publishing house no longer needs the money which was kindly loaned to it in the dark hour of its deep distress, and for which these bonds were given. All the bonds, except the amount above stated, have been redeemed, and the immense debt which hung over the publishing house in 1878 has been discharged.

If the holders of the bonds which still remain outstanding will send them to the book agent he will return the full face value in cash for them, or give other securities drawing 6 per cent in exchange for them, as may be desired. In case of an exchange of bonds the amount of the premium on 6 per cent securities will be deducted from the publishing house bonds. Heartfelt thanks for the great favor of the loan are hereby expressed, with an earnest request that an opportunity may be afforded for a more substantial token of gratitude—the payment of the bonds. Will the church press generally please copy the above? J. D. BARBEE, Agent.

REV. W. M. BRITT, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Helena, Montana, July 24, 1889.

VOL. I, NO. 24.
SUBSCRIPTION, $1 00 PER YEAR.

To Our Subscribers.

This number of our paper ends its first volume. We began a year ago with many doubts and fears concerning its financial success; and now, of course we are much pleased to be able to announce that our highest hopes have been realized. But let it be remembered our highest hopes were not very high. We hoped, by giving our time and labor free, to keep the paper out of debt. This we have done with a small margin over.

We do not grudge the labor bestowed. While fully conscious of its many defects, we believe the paper has done good, and the many kind words of appreciation from our friends assure us that others are of the same opinion. The editors are of one mind and heart in the work, and trust to see the MONTANA METHODIST greatly improved during the next year.

Now let us have an encouraging increase in the circulation. Let every old subscriber renew; and when renewing your own subscription make just a little effort to send a new subscriber. The price will continue to be $1.00 a year to everybody. The X after your name will indicate when the time of your subscription has expired.

W. M. BRITT,
Business Manager.

It is hard for the devil to keep from showing the cloven foot. The anti-Christian memorial presented to the constitutional convention last week in the pretended defense of religious liberty, was so insulting to four-fifths or nine-tenths of our people that its reading was suppressed. It was a coarse attack on the sincere beliefs of the most intelligent people of the world. The character of its authors was revealed in the document, and every good citizen rejoices that the members of the convention showed by their prompt action that they were not in sympathy with them.

We learn through the Rocky Mountain Methodist that Bishop Granbery was called home last week by the death of his daughter. It was a very sad and sudden affliction. The Bishop was at Colorado Springs on his way to the seat of the Denver conference when the telegram came announcing her dangerous illness. He had scarcely started when another message came saying that she was dead. To give the Bishop time to return the Denver conference has been deferred one week. This will not interfere with the time of holding our conference, but it may interfere with some of the Bishop's appointments in the territory.

Bishop Brown of the African M. E. Church lectured in Helena last Friday evening on "The Solution of the Negro Problem." According to his idea the solution lies in obliterating as soon as possible all race distinctions. He quoted the truism "All men are created equal," and argued from that that there should be social equality and intellectual equality. Such is not and cannot be the case, and the Bishop would do better to recognize facts as they exist.

Apropos we quote the following from an exchange: Dr. Field, Editor of the New York Evangelist, has been in the South and writes: "If the confession of ignorance is the first step in the road to knowlege, I think I am in a way to learn something, though it may leave me in the end both 'a wiser and a sadder man.' When I came South I thought I knew something of its peculiar social and political questions; but I find I have a great deal to learn, and that while my sympathy for the colored race remains as before, there are difficulties in the adjustment of its relations to the white race, which could not be seen at a distance, but which on a near approach become distinctly visible."

Sunday School and Sabbath Rest Conventions at Missoula.

The annual convention of the Territorial Sunday School Association was held in the new and beautiful Presbyterian church at Missoula, July 16th and 17th, at which your correspondent was present. The attendance of delegates was not large but the citizens of Missoula turned out well to both the day and evening sessions, and considerable interest was manifest. One drawback to the complete success of the convention was the absence of all but one of the Executive committee who reside in Helena and could not be present. This difficulty will, however, be obviated another year as Helena is selected for the next annual meeting.

It was reported that seven counties in the Territory have been organized, the sum of about $300 having been expended from the treasury for that purpose.

The statistical report of Sunday schools I will not insert as it is very incomplete, owing to the fact that so many schools failed to fill out and return the blanks sent them by the Secretary.

The addresses given by Dr. and Mrs. Crafts, of New York; Revs. C. B. Allen, jr., and F. D. Kelsey, of Helena, and Rev. L. L. Wood, of Missoula, were earnest and practical and will no doubt be productive of good.

Strong and stirring resolutions on temperance, gambling, prostitution and Sabbath desecration, were offered and, after lively discussion, were passed. Mr. A. H. Nelson, of Helena, was the President of the convention, and Rev. E. M. Ellis, of Stevensville, Secretary.

AMERICAN SABBATH UNION CONVENTION.

The preliminary meeting of the above was called on the 17th by Dr. Crafts for the purpose of appointing a committee to draft a constitution for the State association, which was afterwards adopted, and nominating the officers. The following are the officers elected: President, T. V. Moore; Recording Secretary and Treasurer, H. C. Arnold; Corresponding Secretary, Rev. M. L. Streator; Vice Presidents, Hon. J. E. Rickards, H. Knippenburg, Judge Marshall, Rev. A. B. Howard, Rev. S. A. Wallace, Rev. A. C. Couey, Mr. T. Weir, Mrs. R. H. Howey. Executive Committee, (with preceding) Hon. N. W. McConnell, Hon P. H. Leslie, Rev. F. D. Kelsey, M. Bullard, Rev. C. B. Allen, jr., W. J. Hunter, E. Sharpe, J. W. Thompson, F. Gamer, W. S. Bailey.

The topic of Dr. Craft's lecture on Wednesday night was "The Civil Sabbath." The distinction between the Religious and Civil Sabbath he explained thus:

The church forbids Sabbath desecratian as a sinagainst God—the State forbids it as a crime against man.

He illustrated the two different actuating forces by the case of the Iowa farmer who placed the following notice near his melon patch: "Boys, don't touch these melons. they are green, and God sees you!" Also, with a story told of President Olin who caught two students swearing. Said he: "Gentlemen, such conduct is displeasing to God and I won't stand it!" The church says "Sabbath desecration is displeasing to God;" the state, "I won't stand it because it is injurious to man."

Sabbath laws are no more religious legislation than laws against murder, theft, etc., which all admit are necessary, and yet these very evils are forbidden in the Decalogue as much as that of Sabbath desecration.

On the 18th, (Thursday) at 3 p. m., a general discussion took place, led off by Rev. F. D. Kelsey, followed by Hon. S. G. Murray, Judge S. W. Reeves and C. H. Musgrave, prominent lawyers of the town, and others, on "The Sabbath laws of Montana, what they are and what they ought to be." From which we learned that the law courts are required to be closed on Sundays, except for specified special business; also, playhouses, theatres, dance houses, race grounds, houses for card playing and games of chance—a better state of things so far as the law is concerned than many had supposed.

The great defect in the laws however is that the chief sources of Sabbath desecration, the saloon and large employers of labor, are untouched. Hence a law is imperatively needed prohibiting the opening of saloons on Sundays and all labor or business on that day except works of necessity or mercy.

Various wise suggestions were offered by Dr. Crafts as to how such law may readily be enforced without inflicting a real hardship on any one.

Dr. Crafts lecture at night was on the same topic as the previous one and was crammed full of telling facts, stirring incidents and powerful arguments. We wish all in the Territory could have heard him.

I will add in closing that the object of this new "Sabbath Union" movement is mainly the promotion of the interests of the civil Sabbath through legislative enactments, etc., from a humanitarian standpoint only, not a religious one, although the former will plainly subserve the interests of the latter. The duty of the Christian therefore to "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy" must still be enforced by the church on the higher ground, not of human only, but of Divine authority.

J. B. PARNALL.
STEVENSVILLE, July 19, '89.

The Christians on the Sandwich Islands have sent out since 1852, seventy-five missionaries to other islands in the Pacific. This is a larger force than the Southern Methodists have sent to the foreign field since 1846. Are we sure the Master is satisfied with the work we are doing?—Missionary Reporter.

A few years ago a lady in Richmond, Va., rented her elegant house and moved into a cheaper home, that she might add $1,000 to her gifts to charitable and religious objects. How many Christian people, by some act of self-denial are willing to increase their offerings for the spread of the gospel?—Missionary Reporter.

THE CALL OF THE CHRISTIAN.

Not always as the whirwind's rush
On Horeb's mount of fear;
Not always as the burning bush
To Midian's shepherd seer;
Nor as the awful voice which came
To Israel's prophet bards;
Nor as the tongues of cloven flame
Nor gift of fearful words.

Not always thus, with outward sign
Of fire and voice from heaven,
The message of a truth divine,
The call of God is given!
Awaking in the human heart
Love for the true and right—
Zeal for the Christian's better part,
Strength for the Christian's fight.

O, then, if gleams of truth and light
Flash o'er thy waiting mind,
Unfolding to thy mental sight
The wants of human kind;
If, brooding over human grief,
The earnest wish is known
To soothe and gladden with relief
An anguish not thine own;

Though heralded with naught of fear
Or outward sign or show;
Though only to the inward ear
It whispers soft and low;
Though dropping, as the manna fell,
Unseen, yet from above,
Noiseless as dew-fall heed it well—
Thy Father's call of love!

—JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER.

Notes From Willow Creek

Our people were edified by a series of sermons preached here recently by Rev. H. B. Cockrill. Bro. Jarvis also preached several good sermons the same week.

Our ladies have raised money enough to buy an organ for our church at this place. Improvements are to be added to the parsonage in the near future.

Three Forks is a new appointment taken into the list this year. We have five lots donated us there for church purposes. Mr. D. Hunter the doner proposes to give us a neat three roomed parsonage provided we send them a preacher next year. Three Forks has hitherto been a Catholic stronghold, but the number who attend our services there twice a month indicate that the people are hungry for preaching. Their collections for the preacher is far ahead of many larger places. Our congregations at Gallatin City and at the Madison school house appointments are quite good.

The new railroad running from the Canyon House on the N. P. R. R. to Butte Citty is being pushed to completion. This road will tie three or four of my appointments together and make the work a very desirable one for anybody.

The hymn books have come. As we see it the book is made up of old hymns and old tunes largely, a few new ones. Common print, common binding, in fact is a common place book every way. It has taken over three years of hard (?) work to produce this book and now we are told that only a limited supply will be sent out till our patience is taxed a little more. We have heard much said about the wonderful facilities of our great publishing house—of the "surplus money," "new machinery" etc. etc., and of the splendid management of the concern. Now we are puzzled to know why the needless delay of our hymn book, if things are as they have been represented. There are five hundred common printing establishments in this country that could have brought out the same book in one year, and it has taken our establisement over three years and the end is not yet. My impression is a new set of managers, editors and clerks ought to be placed in the concern at Nashville. We except the editor of the S. S. literature.

B. E. H. W.

Individual Effort.

In this age of combination and organization when as one has said, "a mother can hardly spank her own child without a constitution and by-laws;" let us not allow the value of consecrated individuality to be depreciated. It played an important part in the recent restriction of Sunday work on the Vanderbilt system of railroads. A Christian gentleman, observing the evil influence of Sunday excursions in Central New York, instead of saying, "One man can do nothing against these great corporations," sat down and wrote a letter substantially as follows:

DEAR MR. VANDERBILT.—Next Sabbath, when you are at church (Mr. V. is an Episcopalian) and the Fourth Commandment is read and you are about to respond, please think of the Sunday excursions from Syracuse to Niagara at 50c for the round trip. Think how the Sabbath is made a day of toil to hundreds of your employes to whom it should be a day of rest and home fellowship and culture of conscience. Think of the broken-hearted parents troubled by this disobedience and waywardness of their children. Think of these things and then devoutly pray, "Lord have mercy upon us and incline our hearts to keep this law."

The answer came by the next mail. Mr. Vanderbilt thanked the writer for his faithful letter, and said that it was his first knowledge of these excursions and that they should be immediately discontinued.—Dr. Wilber Crafts at Missoula, Mont.

The Unjust Steward.

A steward is one who has charge of the goods of another for a season, and must finally give an account of his stewardship. All men are stewards of the manifold goodness, or grace, of God, in this sense. Wasting goods is characteristic of sin, while economy is not a sure sign of godliness. The "unjust steward" had lived fast, beyond his income, at the expense of his employer. The magnetism of his covetousness, reaching to his hands, caused the funds of another to stick. Called to give an account of his stewardship and threatened with the loss ot position, he revolved in his mind the serious question of his future support. He resolved on a rapid, liberal reduction of the accounts of his lord's debtors—that is he resolved to steal yet more. He could not dig, to beg he was ashamed. It were far better to dig than to beg, to beg than to steal, to remain honest where he was at first than to do either of these. Like many a man falling from a place of luxury, the unjust steward could neither condescend to manual labor, not beg, but he could follow a corrupt worldly policy, to provide for an emergency. This was wise so far as this life was concerned, but it was not just, or right. The children of this world are often wiser (whether honest or dishonest) in laying their plans, more liberal in their investments and endowments of worldly institutions, to meet the demands of the flesh, than the children of God are in laying up treasure in heaven, providing against the emergencies of the final day. We are to make to ourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness by consecrating the wealth of this world to the glory of God—in the support, advancement and establishment of the institution of the Christian religion.

J. H. JOHNSON.

The True Nature of Alcohol.

Hold a mouthful of spirits—whisky, for instance—in your mouth for five minutes, and you will find it burns severely; inspect the mouth, and you will find it inflamed. Hold it ten or fifteen minutes, and you will find that various parts of the interior of the mouth have become blistered; then tie a handkerchief over the eyes and taste, for instance, water, vinegar, milk or senna, and you will find that you are incapable of distinguishing one from another. This experiment proves to a certainty that alcohol is not only a violent irritant, but also a narcotic. Can you believe that the still more tender and important internal organs of the body can be less injuriously affected than the mouth? —Dr. McCulloch.

Growing Longer.

Although we live at an age of such strain upon the physical man, it appears from the following observations that human life is now averaging greater length than at a period of simpler manners. In the Wesleyan Christian Advocate we note:

Human life is estimated to have lengthened 25 per cent. during the last half century. "The average human life in Rome, under Cæsar, was 18 years," says Dr. Todd, of Georgia, "now it is 40. The average in France 50 years ago was 28, the mean duration in 1887 was 45½ years. In Geneva during the thirteenth century a generation played its part upon the stage and disappeared in 14 years; now the drama requires 40 years before the curtain falls. During the golden reign of good Queen Bess, in London and all the large cities of merry old England, 50 out of every 1,000 paid the last debt to nature yearly, which means, instead of three score and ten, they averaged but one score. Now, in the city of London, the average is 47 years."

Hay in Montana.

Every indication points to the fact that the hay crop in most of the valleys of Montana will be a failure. Not more than one-half of the usual crop is expected anywhere while in many places it will not pay to cut it. Stockmen in the lower Yellowstone are seriously considering the advisability of driving herds to better ranges as the grass in that section is mostly burned up and the ranchers are also cutting their grain crops for hay as they are so burned that it would be useless to try to mature them.

Under these conditions the price of hay has gone up rapidly and dealers are now offering $18 per ton for what they could have obtained three weeks ago for $10. Most of the hay producers, however, are holding their crops and confidently predict a steady price of from $20 to $25 the ensuing winter.

The upper Yellowstone valley will produce a good crop as compared with other valleys in this part of Montana, and an average crop of both hay and grain is look for as sufficient water is obtainable for irrigation from the mountain streams. Ranchers in the upper valley are consequently feeling jubilant over the outlook for prices and the indications are they will not be disappointed as the coming winter is very likely to prove a severe one and hay and grain will be in demand—Livingston Post.

Hon. W. A. Clark in his address, July 12, before the Wool Growers, said that every citizen of Montana would concede that Great Falls shall be the manufacturing metropolis of the State.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Put His Trust in God.

Last winter a little boy of six or eight years begged a lady to allow him to clean away the snow from her steps. He had no father or mother, but worked his way by such jobs.

"Do you get much to do, my little boy?" said the lady.

"Sometimes I do," said the boy, "but often I get very little."

"Are you never afraid that you will not get enough to live on?"

The child looked up with a perplexed and inquiring eye, as if uncertain of her meaning, and was troubled with a new doubt.

"Why," said he. "don't you think God will take care of a boy if he puts his trust in Him, and does the best he can?"

A Beautiful Father.

"Tell your mother you've been very good boys today," said a mission school teacher to two little new scholars.

"Oh," replied Tommy, looking up eagerly into her face, "we hasn't any mother."

"Who takes care of you?" asked the lady.

"He takes all the care before he goes off in the morning and after he comes back at night. He's a house painter, but there isn't any work this winter, so he's doin' laborin' till spring comes. He says he won't let us eat city soup and wear other folks' clothes when he is well and strong. He leaves us a warm breakfast when he goes off; and we have bread and milk for dinner, and a good supper when he comes home. Then he tells us stories and plays on the fife and whittles out beautiful things for us with his knife! You ought to see our home and our father—they are both so beautiful."

Before long the lady did see that home and that father. The room was a poor attic, graced with cheap pictures, autumn leaves and other little trifles that cost nothing. The father, who was at the time preparing the evening meal for his motherless boys, was, at the first glance, only a rough, begrimed laborer; but before the stranger had been in the place ten minutes, the room became a palace and the man a magician. His children had no idea that they were poor; nor were they so, with such a hero as this to fight their battles. —Watchman.

Acceptable Boys.

"What kind of a boy does a business man want?" repeated a shrewd, practical man of many concerns, the other day.

"Well, I will tell you. In the first place, he wants a boy who doesn't know too much; business men generally like to run their own business, and prefer some one who will listen to their way rather than try to teach them new kinks; secondly, they want a prompt boy—one who understands seven o'clock as exactly seven, not ten minutes past; third, an industrious boy, who is not afraid to put in a little extra work in case of need; fourth, an honest boy—honest in his services, as well as in the matter of dollars and cents; and fifth, a good-natured boy, who will keep his temper even if his employer loses his own now and then."

"But you haven't said a word about his being smart," was suggested.

"Well, to tell the truth," was the rather hesitating answer, "that's about the last thing we worry over. The fact is, if a boy is modest, prompt, pleasant, industrious and honest, he's about as smart as we care about generally—and that's a fact."

So you see how it is, boys; and perhaps some of you who are not so brilliant may take courage and cultivate these qualities which shall make you acceptable to the business men, though you may never shine in the world of letters. —Sunday School Visitor.

One Year Old.

With this issue of the MONTANA METHODIST, we pass the first annual mile post. July 25, 1888 was the date of the first publication. During the twelve months past, we have had many tokens of appreciation from many sources, for which we have been and are now, thankful. To have secured the public respect given us, is even more than we had hoped for, considering the duties incumbent upon the editors in their respective pastorates.

To have risen beyond adverse criticism was not anticipated, and of course we are by no means overcome that a measure has been bestowed. We congratulate ourselves that it has been so small.

We have not varied from our original design, in giving information to our readers at large, of our opportunities, and work as a denomination in Montana. In this we have ever kept our integrity, avoiding all coloring of the facts. Our experience has been like that of many in the journalistic field, not what we should say, but what we should leave unsaid. What the management of the paper will be another year, we cannot say, except for the one other issue, August 14, for on that date we meet in annual conference session, where we are subject to the appointing power, on the paper as well as to the pulpits we shall serve. There is no money, and so far as we have yet learned, but very limited glory in the enterprise. Had this been the object of the paper she would doubtless move "dat we do now disjourn." We thank God, that our aim has been of a higher and holier nature, and thus it becomes an adjunct to our ministry, in which we cheerfully labor for the Master's cause. We do not, for a moment forget the sympathy and healthful co-operation of the brethren who have contributed to its columns, and extended its circulation, and helped to raise funds for the same, for without this we could not have undertaken and carried on the work during this our first year.

The financial condition of the paper is self sustaining, but we leave the particulars for our most worthy Business Manager to mention. We would say in conclusion, that there are reasons why the patrons may expect a better sheet another year for we think the conditions for accomplishing this, are more favorable, than those under which we started last July. The whole matter, however will be under the direction of the Annual Conference and the presiding Bishop.

Protestantism Arraigned.

The American Sentinel, a paper which seems to have as its avowed purpose to minify all religion and morality in the affairs of State, and to magnify the Constitution and the State as wholly separate from, and superior to, all principles in the Christian religion, commits unnecessary and strange journalistic suicide in its issue of July 3. From the pen of Hon. John L. Rupe, of Indiana, are these words:

"The national character will correspond with the character of the people composing the Nation, and if there is a tendency away from religious observance in public affairs; if there is too little regard for moral and Christian character in the selection of the officers, the fault is not in our system of government or in our laws, but is in the Christian people of the country who fail in their duty in, and attention to govermental affairs.

"I have no sympathy with religious teaching which is entirely ethereal, and removes a man from active participation in the affairs of this life, but I am a believer in that kind of religion which takes hold of, and gives character to, all the affairs of life; that requires the same punctuality in the observance and performance of his duties as a man and citizen as in the duties pertaining to his spiritual life."

We most heartily indorse the sentiments here expressed—which are the concluding paragraph of an article on "The Theory of Our Constitution Is the Right Theory."

But how strange when we turn to another page where we find a contribution evidently expressing the sentiment of the editor, as one may see by noticing his comments on the same. The following is the language of one paragraph:

"So those who have a care to guard the free institutions of our country from the scourge of church intolerance, will find it necessary to keep an eye on that professedly Protestant party whose avowed purpose is to make such a change in the Constitution as will open the door for church domination of political affairs. There is no more danger from the evil influences of the 'beast' itself than from those of its 'image.' There is no reason to be any more afraid of out-and-out Roman intolerance than of the same spirit under the guise of Protestantism."

Just how far the National Reform Association, The American Sabbath Union, and the Senate Committee in favor of the Blair Amendment to the Constitution concerning the principles of the Christian religion in the public schools intend going in their respective lines toward the welfare of our civil and religious institutions we are not able to say. There is, however, a sentiment among a class of anti-religion, anti-moral people in this country which would repeat the "reign of terror" if it could carry out its ideal of government. To avoid such it may become necessary to incorporate in action the language of Mr. Rupe, when he says:

"If the good Christian people will repudiate the idea that politics is a dirty pool, which contaminates all who enter, and will, with Christian intelligence, exert the power to which their numbers and influence entitle them, in all affairs of government, there will be no doubt as to the national character, and there will be no difficulty in impressing the religious character of the people upon our laws and public observances, and there will be found ample room for all advancement in the character of our laws and those who execute them, which can be demanded by the intelligent Christian sentiment of the country within the wise limits placed in our fundamental law for the equal liberty and protection of all."

We deem it as unfortunate that even the few should look upon the Protestant churches of this country with suspicion, and for a moment think of them as the "image" of the "beast." We do not believe Protestantism so blind to the fatal mistakes of the church of Rome as to follow her example in this matter. Intolerance from ecclesiastical or political sources would be alike hurtful, and we believe our people are too wise to fall into so grave an error.

In another part of the paper will be found an article from Rev. Dr. Orman, in the Arkansas Methodist, which we publish as a vindication of the positton taken in a former issue of the MONTANA METHODIST, to which our contemporary, The Light of the Vulley, takes such exceptions. This is the communication from which the little editorial note was made, and we think will clearly show that we do not "misrepresent" the Presbyterian church as to its views on reprobation of infants, and prove that we are not a whit behind the brother in "our sense of Christian honor." We also agree that it is not "necessary at this late day to enter into an argument on the merits of the question of infant salvation," but think it right and proper to be heard whhn we are charged with being "enemies of evangelism" and perpetrators of "old slanders," though they eminate from so high an authority as the Rev. Dr. Talmage. Not that we love this able divine less, but the Arminian faith more. As to the revision of the Confession of Faith, we only voiced the sentiments of the committee and Dr. Crosby in the recent General Assembly in New York. Nor do we believe that a church should hold on to that which its constituency could not subscribe.

Notes.

It is not idle talk to say "a good conscience is good company anywhere."

Scarcity of water is already beginning to effect the mining interest.

Our Montana Constitution framers are preparing to cancel labor competition by the Chinese in our borders.

After all is not a station or circuir largely what consecrated heads, hearts and hands make them under God's care?

Who will be the first to say "Bishop and brethren of the conference, I did the best I could, but failed to raise the collections on my charge?"

Says a citizen of Montana in a remonstrance against the Sunday law: The Christian sabbath has absolutely no authority to bind the conscience of an American citizen.

Heavy shipments of cattle from Montana will likely be made in the near future. Some few, who are able to buy the hay will retain their stock, and realize large profits another year.

Miss Sallie M. Phillips of Louisiana, has been accepted by the Woman's Board as a missionary to Brazil in place of Miss Clara Chrisman, who was lost in the Johnstown flood.

A resolution for compulsory education was introduced in the convention in Helena and afterward met with a counter resolution. At any rate it is evident from many sources that the citizens of Montana believe in educating our children.

The following is expressive of a growing sentiment in our church: "Resolved, That it is the sense of this District Conference that Fairs, Festivals, Suppers, and Sociables for the purpose of raising money for the Church are out of harmony with the spirit and genius of the Gospel of Christ and ought to be condemned."

The sentiment of many English papers is in favor of woman suffrage.

Some contributions for this issue will have to be retained for future publication.

There is not much chance for the provision of a Sunday law by the Constitution makers for the State of Montana.

The Butte charge will pay one hundred cents on the dollar on every claim, although she has had the extra strain of parsonage building during the Conference year. The preacher will have no Conference apologies to make.

We are glad to see in one of our secular papers even this: "The recognition of God in the Constitution may not be strictly necessary, but it is not going to hurt anybody and will meet with the indorsement of ninety nine hundreths of the people of Montana.

Rev. E. J. Stanley, presiding elder of the Helena district, was prevented from holding the fourth quarterly conference in Butte charge, July 20-21, because of the prevalence of diphtheria in Corvallis, his home, by which his own family was threatened with the disease. We hope the plague may be stayed, and specially do we pray that it may not enter the home of our dear brother.

Just what appointment you will get for another conference year, dear brother, will be the best, if you commit the matter wholly into the hands of God. Trust him and he will not fail you. The Methodist itinerancy is based upon "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord."

Rev. J. D. Arnold of Henderson, N. C. makes some timely suggestions, in the Nashville Christian Advocate of July 11, concerning our missionary operations. it will pay you to turn to your file and read closely. This is an exponent of the intelligent consideration now being given this subject.

The editor and his son Charles had a joint celebration of their birth day at the parsonage July 18—the one thirty-three and the other three years old. The good matron of the house devised the plan, by virtue of holding the relation of wife and mother—and from the exemplary consideration of household economy. All parties were pleased. No demonstrations with fire-works but a quiet little family affair.

We see it stated that there were recently found over three thousand persons in Minneapolis, holding their church letters. This is a very serious and unwise course pursued by many in coming to the west. No one should be given a letter not in good standing, and certainly no church member bearing such letter should fail to identify himself with the denomination of his choice in changing his place of residence.

The annual conference year for the Montana conference embraces two Sabbaths over the civil year. The two Sabbaths of grace should be well put in by the preachers to raise the collections in full. Should the matter require it, let us not refuse a house to house canvass in behalf of the important interests of missions, church extension, conference claimants, bishops, and delegate to General Conference next May.

Annual Conference.

In Stevensville, Montana, a quiet little village in the great Bitter Root valley, the session of the Montana Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South, commences Wednesday, August 14. This is hard by the Missoula and Bitter Root R. R.. perhaps two miles from the depot.

The surrounding country is the finest agricultural district of the State. The farmers are generally well to do. The citizens of this country are well known for their hospitality, and to say that a pleasant time awaits the coming of the preachers and lay brethren of the conference, is to put the matter mildly. It has been the good fortune of the editor to have sampled the courtesies and good things generally of these large hearted people, and he looks forward to the renewal of acquaintances with unalloyed pleasure. We trust that there may not be a break in the ranks, but that there may be a full clerical and lay representation from every charge in the bounds of the conference. While we may not all go up flushed with victory from the field, such as we could wish, yet we expect no evil tidings like the messenger to Eli, "Israel is fled before the Philistines and the ark of God is taken."

KEYS.

Long ago in the old Grenada, when the
Moors were forced to flee,
Each man locked his home behind him,
taking in his flight the key.

Hopefully they watched and waited for the time to come when they Should return from their long exile to those homes so far away.

But the mansions in Greneda they had left in all their prime
Vanished, as the years rolled onward, 'neath
the crumbling touch of time.

Like the Moors we all have dwellings
where we vainly long to be,
And through all life's changing phases ever fast we hold the key.

Our fair country lies behind us, we are ex-
iles, too, in truth,
For no more shall we behold her. Our Grenada's name is Youth.

We have our delusive day-dreams, and rejoice when, now and then,
Some old heart-string stirs within us, and we feel our youth again.

"We are young!" we cry triumphant,
thrilled with old-time joy and glee.
Then the dream fades slowly, softly, leaving nothing but the key!

BESSIE CHANDLER.

Dr. Talmage and Infant Damnation.

The Rev. Dr. Talmage, of New York, in a sermon recently published, purports to refute certain slanders perpetrated on what he calls "Evangelical Religion." He says, "For instance, these enemies of evangelism say that the Presbyterian Church believes that God is a savage sovereign, and that he made some men just to dam them, and that there are infants in hell not a span long. These old slanders come down from generation to generation. The Presbyterian Church believes no such thing. As to the Presbyterian Church believing there are infants in purdition, if you will bring me a Presbyterian of good morals and sound mind who will say that he believes there ever was a baby in the lost world, or ever will be, I will make him a deed to the house I live in, and he can take possession tomorrow."

I wrote Dr. Talmage asking him some questions concerning the foregoing statements, but he answered my registered letter not a word.

1. By "Evangelical religion" I suppose the Dr. to mean the Presbyterian religion as it is taught in the Confession of Faith, and by the fathers and defenders of the Calvinistic system. The Confession teaches that the "visible Church consists of all those throughout the world, that profess the true religion, together with their religion," and that out of this Church "there is no ordinary possibility of salvation."

By an examination of the Confession of Faith it will be seen that it excludes from all ordinary possibility of salvation, all heathen, papists, Arminians and various other bodies of professed Christians. These various bodies are according to Calvinism left without hope of salvation, for no other reason than that God has decreed they shall not be members of the Presbyterian Church.

2. The enemies of Evangelism are according to Calvinism all those who do not accept the Calvinistic system as containing the Bible system of doctrine.

3. As to the length of the infants the Confession is said to reprobate to hell, that is an incidental question. What does it matter as the length of these infants, whether they be one span more or less, if they are in hell?

4. Whether Presbyterians, as a body of Christians, or as individuals, believe the doctrine of infant damnation, is a question I have not raised, and will not discuss. The inquiry which I make turns upon the doctrines taught in the Confession of Faith, and not upon whether Presbyterians believe them or not. I do not undertake to show what Presbyterians believe. for the reason that I do not know what they believe. That the Confession of Faith, and the fathers and defenders of the Calvinistic system, teach the doctrine of infant damnation is susceptible of the clearest proof, which Dr. Talmage will not deny and openly discuss with me in the public press. As a historical fact, the doctrine under consideration is coeval with the enunciation of the system of doctrines now held by the Presbyterian Church, and denominated Calvinistic. How can Dr. Talmage or any other Presbyterian consider himself "slandered" when he is supposed to believe what he has subscribed. The Dr. subscribed the Confession of Faith, and it teaches most clearly the doctrine of infant damnation.

The Confession teaches that Christ died for the elect, and that He in no sense tasted death for the rest of the race. What becomes of those for whom he did not die? They must be damned, whether they live to one hundred years or die the day of their birth. The old Calvinists did not hesitate to damn them from their mother's womb, and no man knows this better than Dr. Talmage. The Confession teaches that God from all eternity, without any condition whatever on their part moving Him thereunto, predestinated a certain and definite number of men to everlasting life, and all others to hell. Many infants are among those reprobated to hell's torments, if Calvanism is true. Read the third chapter of the Confession of Faith, under the head of Effectual Calling. I read "Elect infants dying in infancy, are regenerated and saved by Christ through the spirit." What becomes of those not elected? The Confession does not leave me to conjecture; "others not elected," "cannot be saved." Chapter 10, section 4, of the Confession teaches the inevitable damnation of the whole heathen world. "Much less can man, not professing the Christian religion, be saved in any other way whatever, be they ever so diligent to frame their lives according to the light of nature, and the law of the religion they do profess; and to assert and maintain that they may, is very pernicious, and to be detested." According to that article every heathen is damned, let him do the very best he can with the light that God has given him.

Calvin in his Institutes, vol. 2, book 3, ch. 23, says, "whence hath it come that the fall of Adam hath involved in eternal death so many nations with their infant children without remedy, unless it so pleased God? Here the tongues that have been so voluble it becomes to be mute. The decree is fearful I confess; yet no man can deny that God foreknew before He created him what end man should have, and foreknew it because He had so ordained it by His decree." Rev. Dr. William Twiss who was Prolocutor of the Assembly of Divines that formed the Presbyterian Confession of Faith in England in 1643-1648, says: "Many infants depart from this life in original sin, and consequently are condemned to eternal death." "All the infants of Turks and Saracens dying in original sin, are tormented by the Deity in hell fire." The Rev. Dr. R. L. Dabney, who is perhaps the leading theologian in the Presbyterian church in the South, in his Systematic Theology, 1855, page 587, says: The "Bible promises no salvation to heathen."

Dr. Talmage cannot produce one Calvinist among all the Calvinistic fathers who did not teach the doctrine of infant damnation. Fifteen Presbyterian ministers, Calvin heading the list, in Geneva charged upon Servetus as one of his errors that he taught the possible salvation of all infants dying in infancy. Poor Servetus was burned at the stake. Verily it looks like the God of Calvinism is a "savage Sovereign." The Rev. Dr. Philip Schaff, of New York, read a paper before the Pan-Presbyterian Council held in the city of Edinburgh in 1877, on "The Consensus of the Reformed Confessions," in which he said "The scholastic Calvinism of the seventeenth century mounted the Alpine heights of the eternal decrees with intrepid courage, and revelled in the reverential contemplation of the awful majesty of God, which required the damnation of the great mass of sinners, including untold millions of heathens and infants, for the manifestation of his terrible justice." The address was read on the 4th of July, and the learned Presbyterian divine is still living in New York. I could fill your paper with similar quotations.

Bishop Hendrix in Oklahoma.

The churches have not been behind the business world in recognizing the importance of the new field open for occupation in Oklahoma. Like the people the churches are "dwelling in tabernacles" in most of the new towns laid off. The people are not indifferent to the value of religious worship, and scarce were the first stakes driven in any of the places determined upon for town sites before the most desirable locations were reserved for the churches which should soon be built. Save at Guthrie, Oklahoma and King-fisher, where in the rush no sites were reserved for churches. but where sites are being obtained by all the denominations at about ten dollars a front foot, the towns like Norman, Reno, Alfred and Noble invited the different churches by reserving excellent sites. Through Rev. I. L. Burrow, who was appointed presiding elder of the Oklahoma district with instructions to look carefully after choice sites for our church in all the places of promise, we have excellent ones in all but two of the above places, Guthrie and King-fisher, with arrangements made to purchase desirable lots in those places. In Reno we have two of the choicest lots in the town; also at Norman, where we have a noble class of people already organized; at Noble we have four fine lots, and at Alfred we have three. In North Oklahoma I preached in a rude tabernacle located in what is regarded as the best part of the city and where the people of all denominations have been worshipping since the day the town was settled. Here we have three excellent lots, purchased at a cost of $250 each, a society organized and a subscription started for a $2,000 church. In the other city of Oklahoma, which adjoins this (only 160 acres being allowed by the government for a single town site), we will have a site and church, the gift of some noble Tennesseans, who are interested in the morals of the future city where the church will be located. —St. Louis Advocate.

That old hymn,

What wondrous love is this,
O my soul!

which has been reprinted in the Southern Methodist Hymnal, is awaking the echoes among the people down there. It is greeted with flowing tears, vigorous shouts, cordial hand-shakes, and lively times generally. Did you ever hear it? It is enough to stir anybody's soul.—Christian Standard.

We know of no better way to spend fifty cents than to subscribe for the Missionary Reporter. The new series vol. x, No. 1, has been received, and to us is the most interesting and instructive monthly magazine, on the subject of missions we have yet seen. Every preacher should read it and see that it is circulated in his charge.

Rev. C. M. Cagle, of the Illinoise Conference, has started a new paper in the interest of the church in that Conference. Standard Methodist is the title, W. H. Andereck, Business Manager; place of publication, Centralia, Illinois.—S. W. Methodist.

Week of Prayer.

Programme for the week of Prayer and Self-denial, with family offerings for Missions, Aug. 4—11 1889.

Sunday, Aug. 4—Sermons on the Relation of the Holy Spirit to Foreign Missions. Acts xiii, 1-2

Monday, Aug. 5—Prayer and offerings for China, our oldest, most difficult, and most important mission field.

Tuesday, Aug. 6—Prayer and offerings for Japan, our newest and most open field among the heathen.

Wednesday, Aug. 7—Pray'r and offerings for Brazil, where, among other consecrated laborers, the daughters of two of our Bishops are laboring to bring the other half of the American continet to a knowledge of Christ.

Thursday, Aug. 8—Prayer and offerings for Mexico, where, at our very door, are ten million souls without the pure gospel.

Friday, Aug. 9—Prayer and offerings to extend the work in the Indian Mission Conference, both among the half-civilized and the wild tribes of Indians, who look to our church so largely for the preaching of the gospel.

Saturday, Aug. 10—Prayer and offerings for our Mexican Border, Cuba, and western work, with the large unevangelized population in those fields.

Sunday, Aug. 11—Sermons on Christ in the Home; or, Our Obligations as Families to the Gospel. Joshua xxiv. 15; or Acts xvi. 14, 15.

The offerings may be made at each service, or be set aside daily and presented at the service on Sunday, the 11th—"an offering from each family."

The Mission Board at its recent annual meeting, adopted a resolution calling on the church to "observe a Week of Prayer, especially for missions, beginning on the first Sunday in August, and that the preachers be requested to preach a sermon on the subject of missions; also that a special family offering be requested from each family in the church."

The Bishops were requested to "appoint a committee, to consist of three of their number, to prepare a programme for the 'Week of Prayer.'" Bishop Hendrix, chairman of the committee, has sent us the programme, which we have given above.

We will furnish a supply of the programme in leaflet form to any preacher who will send us his address.

Also a supply of leaflets suited to the services of each day, for gratuitous distribution.

We hope to hear from every preacher in our connection.

I. G. John, Sec.

Brother Steward, have your preacher go to Conference in respectable clothes and have a little pocket change for he will have an opportunity to spend a little of the latter.

THE MONTANA METHODIST.

REV. A. C. COUEY, EDITOR.
REV. W. M. BRITT, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Helena, Montana, August 11, 1889.

VOL. 2, NO. 1.
SUBSCRIPTION, $1 00 PER YEAR.

Notes.

This issue of the METHODIST is not due till August 14th, but we publish it several days earlier in order that it may not hinder us from attending the Conference which meets on that date.

Rev. Edgar Kendrick, of De Witt, Mo., a young local preacher of our church, is expected to take charge of the school at Alhambra this year. He comes with the highest recommendations, and we doubt not our brethren and friends at Alhambra are to be congratulated on securing his services.

Our big boy preacher, Rev. R. F. Jarvis, has returned to Tennessee to attend school. He will take a course in Hiwassee College. He has done faithful work in Montana and we regret to lose him from our ranks. We have his promise, however, that he will return to our help as soon as he completes his course in college.

Our sister territory on the west has certainly had a scourge of disastrous fires this year. Next to Tacoma her three best cities—Seattle, Ellinsburgh and Spokane Falls—have had their business sections entirely consumed by fire. Each place was provided with an unbounded supply of water. What would not a fire do with our own city in this severe drouth and with but a limited supply of water.

Dr. Hannon, of San Francisco, says the Moody and Jones meetings in that city were in effect like "blasting sandhills with giant-powder." The figure aptly describes one great difficulty in the work of the church all over the west. Society is, as yet, uncompact and disintegrated. A moral revolution in a few souls does not have that far reaching effect that it would in a community where family and social ties bind the people together. This is the country above all others for individual effort. Every Christian should be an evangelist in his own little circle.

We learn on undoubted authortiy that after lecturing at Livingston on Saturday evening Mr. Talmage took the train last Sunday morning for the Park. Now, why he should lend his influence towards desecrating the Sabbath here in this ungodly country we cannot understand. Would he not condemn such from his pulpit in Brooklyn? Does he not know that his example will be used in favor of Sunday excursions, Sunday travel and Sunday work generally? We think Mr. Talmage owes the public an explanation of his conduct.

Just here we wish to remark that we know professing Christians who will condemn Mr. Talmage for this breach of Sabbath propriety because he is a prominent minister, and yet will excuse themselves for doing the same thing because they are unknown and have little influence. To such we would say, go and learn what that meaneth, "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much, and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much."

The Helena Journal is a strong advocate of high license and an equally strong opposer of prohibition as the means of dealing with the liquor traffic. It says "prohibition has been a most lamentable failure wherever it has been attempted;" and that "the Kansas papers would acknowledge this if they had any moral courage whatever." That is to say prohibition pleases the temperance people of Kansas so well that the papers there have not the moral courage to declare it a failure. Does "moral courage" according to the Journal's code enable one to tell a barefaced lie? It looks that way from this quotation, but we are more charitable than to believe that, and take it simply as a sample of liquor men's logic.

Dr. W. M. Paaterson, for many years superintendent of our missions in Mexico, but now working for the American Bible society in the republic of Venezuela, South America, gives an encouraging account of his work there in the last Bible Society Record. The people of that priest-ridden Catholic country are feeling the touch of Protestant civilization. The church (Catholic) prohibits the sale and use of the Bible there, and the priests burn them just as they have done for ages past, and as they do now wherever they have the power. But their day of darkness is passing away. The people will have the light. Dr. Patterson says: "Protestant work has the protection of the government and much sympathy among the people. At the public services at Caracas we have doctors, lawyers, merchants and mechanics present. Senators and congressmen frequently attend. One of the supreme judges never misses a service."

It is the proper work of faith to believe what thou seest not, and the reward of faith to see and enjoy what thou hast believed.—Ex

Anaconda Doings.

That was an impressive scene last Sabbath afternoon when two infants of Swedish parentage were dedicated to God in holy baptism. Imitating the example of the Master, the administrator took the little fellows in his arms, put his hand upon them, and then sprinkling clean water upon them made of them a solemn offering to the Father. The dedication was completed by a solemn prayer in Scandinavian by a preacher present who used that dialect, the parents of both the children being Swedes.

On the 13th ult., Eric Prim was united in marriage with Miss Lizzie Anderson, both of this city, by your Anaconda correspondent. The parson sends after them the traditional slipper, and prays the Father to bless through life.

Improvements are being made to our church property in this place by the addition of a sidewalk and a fence, which, when completed, will have cost something more than $100, and will add very much to the appearance and value of the property.

The Salvation Army and the pastor of our church in this place are working together in a revival effort by holding nightly service in the church of the latter. The meetings have continued for some time, and up to date there have been three conversions, each of whom has given a very correct public experience, but neither has as yet joined any church.

Say to Editor Couey that he needn't brag about orating on the Fourth, as if he were the only preacher that could do such a thing. Why, sir, would you believe it, the little preacher down at the Smelter city was asked to speak on that great big day, and he did it, and got for his services one of Sam Jones' requisites for running the church—'greenbacks.' Now let the Editor Cou(ey) and "Sim" will Crow.

Barrett's—not AH of Butte, but S. H.—circus "showed" in Anaconda on the 18th. They carried away with them a large sum of the people's money, but left the demoralization that attends every such exhibition. Why is it that Christians (?) will attend such places and spend their money for that which satisfieth not, when millions are perishing for the bread of life? O how the conscience of such nominal Christians needs to be quickened.

Sidewalks will soon have been put down on every street in the city, the streets are all being cleaned and graded, the new daily paper will soon have started on its mission—and all to be ready to welcome the capital of the new State of Montana! Editor Couey and Associate Britt are hereby invited to attend the inauguration of the first governor-elect. Will notify you of the time. SIM.

[We got greenbacks, precious metal, a grand good dinner, some fresh ranch fruit and so forth—Now "Coon." ED.]

In the MONTANA METHODIST of July 24, 1889, appears an unjust criticism on our new hymn book, and a severe arraignment of the entire management of the publishing house, from the pen of Rev. B. E. H. Warren. He says: "As we see it the book is made up of old hymns and old tunes largely, a few new ones." Had he said the book is largely composed of the best of the old hymns and tunes and contained about one hundred new ones, he would have come nearer an impartial statement. He further says it is "common print, common binding, a common-place book every way." Brother Warren has certainly seen a list of the several grades of binding and prices of this deservedly popular book. The styles of binding range from paper and cloth to morocco and the prices accordingly. The word edition in cloth is a marvel of cheapness. The hymn and tune-book in paper covers is cheaper than Gospel Hymns in the same binding. The print and paper, we think, are good. I quote "it has taken over three years of hard (?) work to produce this book, and now we are told only a limited supply will be sent out till our patience is taxed a little more." The interrogation point between hard and work indicates irony. In the wisdom of the General Conference a competent committee was selected. They did their work well and in good time. The delay was mainly with an Eastern firm contracticg to do part of the work. This has been stated repeatedly by our agent, Dr. Barbee. One should not be a severe censor of work in which he has had no experience. The publishing house has employed extra force and been on double duty, and will as soon as possible meet all the demands for the new book. Bro. Warren wants Bro. Smith, the competent, affable, efficient manager, Drs. Fitzgerald, Boswell and John deposed. In other words, more work and better work for next General Conference. J. H. JOHNSON.

The wife of the new Governor of Illinois will have no wine upon her table on any occasion.—Ex.

GOD CARES FOR ME.

I stood in the door at eventide,
My heart was full of fears;
And I saw the landscape before me lie
Through mists of burning tears—
I thought to myself, the world is dark,
No light nor joy I see;
Nothing but toil and want is mine,
And no one cares for me.

A sparrow was twittering at my feet,
With its beautiful auburn head,
And looked at me with dark, mild eyes,
As it picked up crumbs of bread;
And said to me in words as plain
As the words of a bird could be:
"I'm only a sparrow, a worthless bird,
But the dear Lord cares for me."

A lily was growing beside the hedge,
Beautiful, tall and white,
And it shone through the glossy leaves of green
Like an angel clothed in light;
And it said to me, as it waved its head
On the breezes soft and free,
"I'm only a lily, a useless flower,
But the Master cares for me."

Then it seemed that the hand of the loving Lord
Over my head was laid,
And he said to me: "O faithless child,
Wherefore art thou dismayed?
I clothe the lilies, I feed the birds,
I see the sparrows fall;
Nothing escapes my watchful eye,
My kindness is over all."

Helena District.

Although but little has been said in the METHODIST concerning the fourth round of quarterly meetings on the Helena District yet said "round" has been made in person by the P. E. and the quarterly meetings have been held. The results of the past year's work may not be what we all desired, yet I am glad to report substantial progress in every organized charge, and considering the difficulties that have been encountered we surely have great reason to thank God and take courage.

Brother Britt, though brought down early in the year by severe personal illness and hindered by affliction in his household has rallied and surprised everybody by the amount of work that has been planned and executed under his faithful administration and with the assistance of those whose co-operation he secured. The old church repaired and almost made new, a revival of religion, a new church organized and a new church edifiec ready for dedication at East Helena are results that should cheer the heart of every honest worker.

On Helena circuit Brother Clark has labored faithfully and earnestly, has laid plans broad and deep which it is hoped will in the near future result in great good to our cause. One new society has been organized.

At Boulder and Elkhorn Brother Finley has surely grown in favor with the people since the first few weeks that he spent on the charge. He has painted and partly furnished the church. I need not say that the preacher has been blessed with earnest and efficient colaborers in this work. The last quarterly meeting services were seasons of great refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

At Butte Brother Couey has proven himself indefatigable in his labors. The charge has been blessed with a gracious revival during the year, a nice, new and commodious brick parsonage has been erected and every claim on the charge, pastor's salary, presiding elder's claim, missions, church extension—all have been met and the pastor congratulates himself on being able to go up to Conference with a clean record. Our work has made wonderful progress in Butte during the three years past, and it is largely the result of earnest, systematic, patient, painstaking and persistent effort.

Brother Barbee has demonstrated the fact, and thereby surprised not a few of our would-be friends—that it is possible for a Southern Methodist preacher to live a whole year and even longer, in Anaconda, and that too, without a word of complaint concerning his salary. Difficulties of a most trying nature have been encountered. But he has stood firm at his post, made the acquaintance (I verily believe) of more people than any other man in town, has added several to the church, painted the parsonage and otherwise improved it, built a nice new fence around the Church, with a ten-foot wide sidewalk in front, all of which adds greatly to the appearance, convenience and value of the property, besides securing by purchase a splendid new organ for the church and Sunday School. Our property here is most centrally located, and is rapidly increasing in value.

At Deer Lodge under the administration of Brother Moore the old log church, (though shabby-looking it was, still was connected with precious memories) in which the first quarterly meeting for the past year was held, has been replaced by a beautiful brick structure that is the pride of the city. In all my ministerial life I never witnessed so great a change in so short a time. Brother Moore now reports good, regular and attentive congregation, a good Sunday School in successful operation, and a spendid new organ just bought and paid for. The death of Mr. Phil Evans, one of the prominent citizens of the place, and one of our strongest supporters is a severe blow to our cause here. He took an active part in planning, soliciting and collecting funds for the new church. May the Lord raise up some one to take his place. The greatest need now is a parsonage, and then our cause will be securely planted in this soil. The payment of about one hundred dollars for house rent has materially reduced the limited salary of the preacher. But we can endure a little pinching now for the sake of such achievements in other respects, and in the hope of better things in the near future.

At Stevensville, Brother Parnall, though he arrived on the field a little late, having to come all the way from Missouri after the session of the Missouri Conference last fall, yet by his diligence and earnestness has largely made up for the late start. A revival in which many precious souls were converted has attended his labors. The parsonage has been improved an organ bought for the church, plans inaugurated for reducing the church debt, the church records improved and things systematized and toned up generally in all the departments of church work. All the Conference collections will be full. Brother Parnall has credit for a full year.

On Corvallis circuit Brother Flowers has confined his labors chiefly to two points, Corvallis and Grantsdale at each of which places he preaches twice a month generally to good and attentive congreations. A movement for a new church at Grantsdale was contemplated, but the drouth and hard times necessitated its postponement. The great distance between the preacher's home and his work has necessarily prevented the success that would otherwise accompanied the efforts put forth. Brother Flowers has made many friends, and doubtless has sowed seed that will bring fruit in days to come. This new charge has done less for the support of the ministry than any other charge in the district. But with this exception, while none of the preachers have grown rich, yet I think their wants have been supplied. I am exceedingly glad to report that every preacher has remained at his post and has given diligent attention to his work, and we are all truly grateful for that mercy that has preserved our ranks unbroken by death, and especially for helping us to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. It would hardly be expected that all should see everything just alike, but thank God for Christian charity that helps us to consider one another to provoke unto love and good works. To-day we can every one stand up and sing, "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

I regret that circumstanccs have not permitted my giving more time to the work during the last few months. But as ability and opportunity have permitted I have endeavored to do my duty to my brethren and to my church in the fear of the Master. None have suffered when I have not felt pain, none have prospered when I have not rejoiced. I count it a pleasure and no small honor to have been associated with such men in such a work. And whatever the future may be shall ever hold in grateful remembrance the love and esteem of my brethren and of the people with whom I have been thrown in our associations during the year that is just closing.

E. J. STANLEY.

Bishop R. K. Hargrove, will hold the Montana Conference instead of Bishop Granbery.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix held the Denver Conference in the place of Bishop Granbery who was called home by the death of his daughter Miss Fay.

Dr. J. D. Barbee, the book agent of the M. E. Church, South is visiting our Western Conferences. He preached at Deer Lodge Aug. 11, and will be at the session of the Montana Conference at Stevensville.

Bishop Granbery and wife sustained the loss of their second daughter, Miss Fay, July 15th. She was about twenty years of age. They have the deepest sympathy of many friends.

The Pacific Methodist College opens its fall term Aug. 14. Late improvements have been made upon the College building and boarding facilities added. This institution of learning is at Santa Rosa, California.

The Denver Conference session was the firstto be held in the general Episcopal round for 1889-90. Great advance has been made in the work during the past twelve months. We rejoice with our co-workers in the west.

The diphtheria has abated in the neighborhood of Corvallis, and I feel grateful to our Heavenly Father that it did not enter our dwelling. But two families were visited, though in one, that of Mr. Fred Weir, four children out of five that were sick, were taken away, and among them two bright and promising girls, Minnie and Lilly, aged 14 and 16 years. Our friends have our sincerest sympathy in their affliction. E. J. S.

BE HONEST AND TRUE.

Be honest and true,
O eyes that are blue!
In all that you say
And all that you do,
If evil you'd shun
And good you'd pursue,
If friends you'd have many
And foes you'd have few.
Be honest and true
In all that you say
And all that you do,
O eyes that are blue!

Be honest and true,
O eyes that are gray!
In all that you do
And all that you say
At home or abroad,
At work or at play,
As you laugh with your friend
Or run by the way.
Be honest and true
By night and by day,
In all that you do
And in all that you say,
O eyes that are gray!

Be honest and true,
O eyes that are brown!
On sincerity smile,
On falsity frown;
All goodness exalt,
All meaness put down.
As you muse by the fire
Or roam through the town,
Remember that honor
Is manhood's chief crown,
And wear it as yours,
O eyes that are brown!

Be honest and true
O eyes of each hue,
Brown, black, gray and blue,
In all that you say
And all that you do.
O eyes in which mothers
Look down with delight,
That sparkle with joy
At things good and bright,
Do never a thing
You would hide from their sight!
Stand up for the right
Like a chivalrous knight,
For the conquerer still,
When the battle is through,
Is he who has ever
Been loyal and true.
Make the victory sure
O eyes of such hue!

"About Right."

"Well, Mary, how old are you?" I said to a little friend, one day.

"I was twelve years old last winter."

"You are getting large enough to help mamma a good deal. I suppose you are trying to be a good girl, are you not?"

"Yes, I try to do about right." said Mary.

"'About right,' Mary? That is what most people say who do very badly. 'About right' means just wrong."

"I did not suppose it did," said Mary.

"Well, let us see. I wonder if Eve did not mean to do about right. She only did one little thing wrong; but the Lord thought it was a big thing, for he turned them out of Eden, and cursed the earth for their sin. Suppose you should go down to the store with five cents, and buy a pencil for one penny. How much should you have back?

"Why, four cents of course," she answered.

"But suppose Mr. Brown should only give you back three cents. That would be 'about right,' would it not? How would you like that?"

"I would not like that at all," she said.

"Suppose your papa should get you a pair of shoes only one size too small. That would be 'about right,' wouldn't it?"

"I tried that last winter, and they hurt my feet so I had to give them away," said Mary.

"Here is Mr. Jones, putting in a new door for you. Suppose he should put in a door that was only 'about right.' Perhaps it is an inch too short, and half an inch too narrow. How would that suit you?"

"I think it would not be very good in winter," said Mary, for the rain and the snow could blow right in."

"Well, my child, that is the way with every thing that is 'about right,' but not just right—it is not good for much. If I put up a new stove-pipe, do you suppose it would be 'about right' if it lacked just two inches of being long enough? How would that do?"

"O that would not do at all!" she replied, with a little laugh, "for the smoke would come right out into the room, and we could not stay here. I did not know it meant that to be 'about right.'"

"Well, my little girl, you will find that to be about right is to be just wrong. A face that is 'about clean' is dirty; a little girl that is about on time to school is just tardy; a soul that is 'about saved,' is lost. And so whatever you do that is only 'about right' you may know is always just wrong. Little folks should form the habit of doing every thing, even little things, just right. If they do not, they will have much trouble when they get older. Don't you think so?"

"I had not thought of it in that way before, but it looks so now," she answered thoughtfully.

Yes. children, it is a very dangerous thing to fall into the habit of only trying to be "about right," and doing things "about right." It is just as easy and much better to do every thing just right.—The Youth's Instructor.

A Beautiful Incident.

A gentleman relates that many years ago he was on a visit to the Isle of Man, and during his walk he strolled into the quiet churchyard, where repose the bodies of many faithful and humble Christians. Near a grave in a corner of a churchyard, he noticed a lady with a little girl (the latter about twelve years of age) to whom she was relating the story of the "Dairyman's Daughter," whose remains lay beneath their feet. A the lady proceeded with the narrative, he observed the little girl lift up her eyes filled with tears, and heard her say that she would try to be as good as the "Dairyman's Daughter" had been. After planting a beautiful lily on the grave, they walked slowly away. The gentleman, upon making inquiry, found that the lady was the Duchess of Kent, and the little girl her davghter. The latter is now Queen of England.—Selected.

The Montana Conference.

During the past year we have had fourteen charges filled, chiefly by regular itinerant preachers, some three or four supplies giving us their help. Though there have been many difficulties and discouragements, we believe it has been the most successful year's work ever done by our church in Montana. We are not yet prepared to say just what net increase has been made in the membership, but we believe we are safe in saying at least twenty-five per cent. The material advance in church and parsonage property has also been fair, perhaps more than the average. One man, in the early part of the year, left his work, but fortunately for the church a good man was put in his place—we believe there was not a break of a single Sabbath. So that we might say that the fourteen charges have been regularly filled during the twelve months. In most every one of these charges, and especially those filled by men who gave their entire time to the ministration of the word, should souls have been quickened and converted to God. The work of the Montana Conference can never be a failure so long as God honors us with the conversion of souls. In fact, here is the true measure of success. If we have no conversions in our ministry it is not only an evidence of failure, but is the ground upon which we might justly suspect our call into the work.

We have the work divided up into two Presiding Elders' Districts, in which fields the two pioneer preachers of the Conference, Revs. L. B. Stateler and E. J. Stanley, have labored, making in all sixteen ministers.

There is in Montana one self-sustaining charge, at Helena. Two of the other charges approximate such independence of help. With proper management another year or two, it is likely they will be self-sustaining.

One young preacher who has done good service, and is of good report, proposes to return to the South for a further course of study, in preparation for the ministry, which is no doubt a wise step. One other preacher thinks of locating and going into the Evangelistic work. We shall, therefore, be in need of two other men to supply their places, to hold the present ground occupied by our church. We are not definitely informed of any further changes. We shall look to God for help in carrying on his work in Montana another year.

Encouraging Figures.

As gathered by Rev. J. B. Albrook, Ph. D., we give some extracts on Methodist figures, showing the strength of the church in ihis country.

Allowing the population of the United States to be 60,000,000—Methodist membership 1 in 13, and Methodist population 1 in 4. Church edifices:

	Buildings.	Sittings.	Cost.
Methodism	33,610	6,722,000	$118,500,000

A comparison with Roman Catholicism is about as follows:

	Roman Catholic population.	Methodist population.	Methodist excess.
1870	4,600,000	9,420,439	4,820,439
1887	6,923,000	15,104,956	8,181,956
Roman Catholic gain since 1870			2,323,000
Methodist gain since 1870			5,684,517

With such numerical and financial strength as Methodism has in this country, great is her responsibility in the moral and religious affairs of the nation. With a piety and zeal comparable to her standing, otherwise there is no danger in the Evangelization and civilization of the great West, so far as we have a part to play. Let vigilance be our watch-word.

NOTES.

Butte is growing very rapidly, and will doubtless continue to do so either with or without the capital.

Anaconda has the finest hotel in Montana and now wishes to be the head of things in the new state.

How many sacred memories are associated with the grand old hymn of Wesley,

> And are we yet alive,
> And see each other's face?"

In the course of a prayer a Scotch Presbyterian preacher recently said: "And bless the poor; and bless the rich who after their funerals will be poor."

"The editor of the Florida Baptist Witness announces his belief in feet-washing. But he does not tell us how it should be observed."—Baltimore Baptist. We suggest with soap and sand. —Richmond Ad.

The forest fires of Colorado, Idaho and Montana, have turned the labors of many poor men into ashes. This is sad and will doubtless inflict suffering upon many needy families.

We shall greatly miss the face of that "elect lady" and helpmeet in the gospel our much beloved Sister Stateler, at the session of the Annual Conference. She was a noble counsellor in all the interests of the conference.

The question—Are the twenty-five articles in the Discipline, Wesley's four volumes of Sermons, and Notes on the New Testament now the Doctrinal Standards of the M. E. Church South? Drs. Harrison, Tigert and Dodd have had the floor, and what now?

The Virginia Conference has inaugurated a new method for the entertainment of its members. The plan is on the same principle adopted fer the next General Conference to be held in St. Louis. Collections are taken in the various charges for that purpose. This distributes the burden and makes it light on all. It will likely grow.

Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, is expected back in London by next September. He has already been booked for a series of lectures, the first of which is to be delivered early in October. He is to receive $250 a night for the lectures delivered in London, and $400 a night for those in the Provinces.—Ex.

The Grand Master of Masons of the District of Columbia has issued an edict, declaring clandestine work in a Scottish organization, and warning all from the Grand Lodge unless they withdraw from the Cerneau body. The Grand Orient of France has stricken the name of God from its rituals. Masonry, is on the wane, if we are to judge by the signs of the times.

Dr. Morton, Secretary of Church Extension, says: We need every dollar assessed on every Conference in the church. With it we can make a record far in advance of any previous year; without it our work will be crippled, and grievous disappointments are in store for churches all over the land. We helped during last year seventeen more churches and parsonages than one for each day in the year.

Dr. John Hannon, our pastor at San Francisco writing of the church in California expresses himself thus: For one I should be only too glad if the M. E. Church had the land captured and garrisoned for God. She is a grand, big sister (got her apron a little spotted by going too near the polls), but one of her leading men—a Nestor, said to me Monday, "I am glad your Church is in this land—there are people who would go to hell if it were not."

Rev. R. F. Jarvis, who has done good service during the past year, purposes to go back to school for a year or so. We regret that this is needful, since he is so much needed, but believe his judgment correct and hope it may but be a preparation for further usefulness in the great life work before him.

Another little Methodist has been added to the household of brother and sister John Moore of the Deer Lodge station. We hope she may grow up to be useful in the Lord's work and fall in the line of succession in the Methodist itinerancy.

The English people are a good deal stirred just now because of the report that application will be made for two more grants of annuities for the support of the royal family. The sum now paid annually to that family is stated to be £543,000 or $2,715,000 and the common people think a family might get along with that amount, especially if they used a little economy.

Under whose preaching were the negroes of the M. E. church in New Orleans converted, up to 1865? Where did all the church property come from, now held by them? Answers are in order?

A dozen or two white members or the M. E. church in New Orleans cut a figure in that great city of two hundred and fifty to three hundred thousand people! The Ames Church is the monument to the ecclesiastical confiscator. We have lived in New Orleans and have heard and seen.

It is said that Dr. J. D. Barbee is about twice as big as Rev. S. W. Barbee, the Montana Capital preacher of the M. E. Church South. We will have an opportunity to measure at Conference.

Things You will not be Sorry for at the Day of Judgment.

For hearing before juding. For thinking before speaking. For holding an angry tongue. For stopping the ear to a tattler. For being kind to the destitute. For being patient to all. For asking pardon for all wrongs. For speaking evil of no one. For being courteous to all. For acting as a peacemaker. And last, but not least—for giving your heart to God, and a life of self-denial and thorough consecration to God. —Ex.

Words of Samuel Smiles: "Cultivate the physical exclusively, and you have an athlete or a savage; the moral only, and you have an enthusiast or a maniac; the intellectual only, and you have a diseased oddity—it may be a monster! It is only by wisely training all these together that the complete man can be found."

From a Missouri Friend.

DEAR MONTANA METHODIST—One of your live editors kindly requested that I write a—well something for you columns. They have been so well filled, however, there seemed little need for a correspondent from Missouri. About a year has elapsed since first you flung your banner to the wind, telling the world in general and Methodists in particular, of the fight you proposed making in wonderful Montana against sin, crime and cruelty outside the church, and indifference, worldliness and hypocracy in it. Well have you kept to your promise and purpose. Of the half dozen religious papers that come to my home, none are read with the same interest—don't know that I've missed the reading of a single number. Years ago, Bro. Stanley stirred the depths of my missionary heart by his ringing appeals in behalf of Montana. I wished then for a million dollars—might as well have wished for a hundred million for the good the wishing did. I wrote him, however, sending my mite and gave the case my earnest prayers. Have tried to do more since, and in this wise: When one of my sons—then little more than a mere child—told me soon after his conversion, that he believed it would be his duty to preach, I told him if the conviction staid with him, to prepare himself as well as he could, then go west and help Bro. Stanley. It is a source of humble thankfulness to know that he is in your work now. By a singular chain of Providences he is working for the Master in Montana, following the example of those grand men—Stateler and Stanley.

Your spirit of rebuke is admirable. Why should the M. E. church crowd us? Why can't they see there are combinations of evil around them more formidable than our organization? "Reuben and Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh" must not only keep their flocks and families this side Jordan, but they refuse to let the fighting men go over and help take the land for the Lord. May a better spirit possess them ere long.

Missouri, old Missouri, so dear to many of your readers—is having a prosperous season this. Plenty of hot weather, same of rain, fruit, vegetables, wheat, corn, etc. May you Montanians be in like manner favored.

MISSOURI ANN.

MR. EDITOR: Through my obtuseness or something else, I have failed to detect the point of your query in the last issue of the "MONTANA METHODIST" under the head of "Notes" as follows: "Who will be the first to say Bishop and Brethren of the Conference, I did the best I could, but failed to raise the collections in my charge."

Did you intend it as an objection to the use of the word "raise" in that connection, or simply as a spur to the Preachers to collect their assessment in full.

At first I thought the former was intended, but surely that cannot be as you make the same use of the word yourself in the last note under that head; and besides, according to Webster, it is not incorrect to use the word in such a connection. On the other hand the word "raise" being in italics and another and longer paragraph being devoted as a spur to the preachers in regard to the collections, seem to forbid one taking that view of the matter.

Can it be that our usually wide awake, scholarly Editor has been caught napping for once?

Explanations are in order.

Yours respectfully,

"VIGILANS."

[Our purpose in the notes referred to, was to urge the brethren to get the cash. No criticism of the term, dear brother.—ED.

The Hymn Book.

A word about the new Hymn and Tune Book, to all concerned.

This long-looked for compilation is now being published. It is ours, we are expected and required to use it, it is as good as we need for a Church Hymn Book; by that we mean it is the best, at least in the humble estimation of your correspondent. Let us then stop further criticising and grumbling about the book, and commence studying, singing out of, and selling or recommending it. J. B. P.

What is known as a "mathematical fool" is a man educated on one side of his nature only; and his counterpart is the "common crank," another half educated person who despises what the mathematical fool adores! Each is a one-sided man—a man with one long and one lame leg! Not thus uneven are the limbs of an evenly educated man.—Dr. Brunner.

Misrepresentation.

In the Montana Christian Advocate in July appeared this item: "In New Orleans our church has twice as many members, twice as many Sunday schools scholars and a greater valuation of church property than the Methodist Episcopal Church South." The paper was sent to the Rev. C. W. Carter, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, to know the facts in the case. He thinks the statement regarding church property is not true. He says in regard to church members and Sunday school scholars the item is true in a certain sense, counting negro members, whom they got as they did a good deal of church property during the war—by very questionable methods. Why should the Montana Christian Advocate make the impression that they had double the white membership of the M. E. Church South in New Orleans? Bro. Carter says: "They have on church where white pe ple attend and I understand not more than a dozen of them."

J. H. JOHNSON.

Married.

At the parsonage of the M. E. Church, South, in Anaconda, July 31, 1889, by Rev. E. J. Stanley, Mr. Charles E. Powell and Miss Lellie I. Barbee, daughter of Rev. S. W. Barbee, of the Montana Conference.

When the writer, then a bachelor preacher, was building that parsonage several years ago, he did not dream of half the honor and pleasure that was in store for him—that there he was to perform the nuptial rites for the first preacher's daughter (of our church) who was to be married in Montana. But such was the case. Miss Lellie was a beautiful and charming girl, and our young friend may congratulate himself on securing such a prize. I feel sorry for Brother and Sister Barbee, but their loss is another's gain. Such is life. We extend hearty congratulations to the happy young couple, and hope they will see that the METHODIST is a regular visitor to their new home.

C. J. S.

MR. EDITOR:—It would have done your heart good to have been present at the last quarterly meeting held at Deer Lodge, August 4th. The house was filled to the utmost of its present seating capacity. Brother Barbee preached at night. There is a bright future before our church in Deer Lodge if I am not mistaken.

While we greatly regret the sad affliction that prevents our beloved Bishop Granbey from coming to us, and are in deep sympathy with him in his sore bereavement, yet we are glad that Bishop Hargrove will fill his place. Bishop H. has held two sessions of our Conference before, understands the nature of our work and is in sympathy with us here in Montana. He dedicated the church at Stevensville, where the conference is to be held, and went from there partly by stage and partly by rail across the mountains to Oregon, being the first Bishop to make what was called the "Northwest Passage." We extend to Bishop Hargrove and our visiting brethren a cordial welcome. E. J. S.

Five years ago as several of us were going on horseback from Anaconda directly across the mountains by what has come to be called "Stanley's Trail" to Bitter Root valley to attend the Conference that was to be held at Stevensville, in the heart of the forest and on the mountain side we bowed together and besought the Lord that he would send a wonderful revival at that time. Our prayers were answered, and many souls were awakened, and our preachers all greatly refreshed. Brethren, as we go up again to meet at the same place, let us not forget to pray mightily unto God for a gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit. We need it first for the sake of souls for whom Christ has died, and then for our own sakes. It will fit us for the business of our Conference and for the duties of another year as nothing else will or can. E. J. S.

Christian Pleasures.

I find much of the sunshine of religion in Christian society. The most doleful people I have ever met are the perpetual fun-makers, such men as Charles Lamb, Thomas Hood, Artemus Ward, and others I might mention, whose lives have been to make sport. They make the world laugh, but their biographies and their autobiographies tell us that there is down in their souls a deep disquietude. Laughter is no sign of happiness—the hyena laughs; the maniac laughs; the loon among the Adirondacks laughs; the bacchanal, crashing his decanter against the wall, laughs. From merely worldly mirth there is a dreadful reaction. Such men are always cross next morning. They snap at you on 'Change, or pretend they do not see you on the street. I gave up mere worldly society long ago because it was so dull, so inane, and so stupid. I always walk on the sunny side of the street. For that reason I have crossed over into Christian society. I like better their modes of repartee and their styles of amusement. There is more real, genuine exhilaration among truly Christian people than any other class. Young man just coming to New York, where are you going to spend your evenings? Go to Niblo's, says one; go to Booth's; go to the opera. Take my advice and throw yourself, body and soul into Christian society. Report yourself to me five years from now, and let me see how the advice works. Bring with you that young man who refuses the advice. At the end of that time he will come dissipated, shabby in apparel, not disposed to look any one in the eyes, and with moral character eighty-five per cent. off. You will come with physical health confirmed, countenance frank, habits honorable, soul saved with all the inhabitants of heaven.—Anonymous.

Old Sermons.

A eminent minister of New England, who spent fifteen hours a day in his study, lamented, we told, that he had written so many sermons. His judgment was that a small number were sufficient for a long life.

An able and successful minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church says he has only two hundred and fifty sermons. These he repeats in the various churches to which he is sent, but not until they are reconstructed and rewritten, with the additions and omissions which seem to him, with his wider experience, may be needed.

The most noted repeater of sermons was Whitefield. It is thought that he preached some of his sermons as many as forty times. It is said, too, that the most effective were those that were most frequently repeated.

One of Dr. Griffin's sermons was repeated, it is said, ninety times, but it went through about the same process, which Phelps calls being born again, every time it was preached.—Rev. R. H. Williams.

The Hearth Stone the Republic's Protection.

The man who kindles the the hearth-stone of an honest and righteous home burns the best incense to liberty. He does not love his mankind less who loves his neighbor most. George Eliot has said: "A human life should be well rooted in some spot of native land where it may get the love of tender kinship for the face of the earth, for the sounds and accents that haunt it, a spot where the definitness of early memories may be inwrought with affection, and spread not by sentimental effort and reflection, but as a sweet habit of the blest."

The germ of the best patriotism is in the love that a man has for the home he inhabits, for the soil he tills, for the trees that give him shade, and the hills that stand in his pathway. I teach my son to love Georgia—to love the soil that he stands on—the body of my old mother—the mountains that are her springing breasts; the broad acres that hold her substance, the dimpling valley in which her beauty rests, the forests that sing her songs of lullaby and of praise, and the brooks that run with her rippling laughter. The love of home deep rooted and abiding—that blurs the eyes of the dying soldiers with the vision of an old homestead amid green fields and clustering trees—that follows the busy man through the clamoring world, persistent, though put aside and at last draws his tired feet from the highway and leads him through shady lanes, and well remembered paths until, amid the scenes of his boyhood, he gathers up the broken threads of his life and own the soil his conqueror—this—lodged in the hearts of the citizen is the saving principle of our government. We note the barracks of our standing army with its rolling drum and its fluttering flag as points of strength and protection. But the citizen standing in the doorway of his home—contented on his threshold—his family gathered about his hearthstone—while the evening of a well-spent day closes in scenes and sounds that are dearest—he shall save the republic when the drum tap is futile and the barracks are exhausted.—Hon. H. W. Grady.

"So He Giveth His Beloved Sleep."

My theme to-day suggested by the recent visitation of death in its threefold reality, to the home of a neighbor, is necessarily a very sad one. Death in its presence and necessary attendants of the shroud, the coffin and the grave, is awfully solemn and suggestive of solemn thoughts. The news came that Minnie Wehr was dead! And in this case the meaning of death is too sad for expression. To say that she is dead is to proclaim that tne bond of love is severed, that with its silken ties wound the affections in the tender years of childhood and the dawning years of young womanhood, to parents and friends. To say that she is dead is to know that all her brightness, vivacity and beauty of intellect is chilled by the touch of death. He came not in the dark hours of the night and without warning called from the presence of parents, sisters and friends, the loved ones, but from hours of pain and anguish the spirit was called to quit its tenement. Minnie was not long separated from her sister and inseparable companion. Together she and her sister Lillie attended school, together they came on Sabbath to the Lord's house and recited lessons and engaged in the service of song and together they sleep the dreamless repose of death in the "silent city."

To the parents bereaved in a threefold sense, for another little one has been laid to rest. Death means loneliness, grief and unshed tears; loneliness for the presence of the children. Missed in every sense of the word, from the home duties, from its pleasures, from the circle which daily gathers around the festal board, ah yes, missed, and ever mourned shall Minnie and Lillie be, until we like them shall have folded the drapery of death about us and sleep. To schoolmates the message conveyed was unspeakably sad. It came and spoke to them thus; never too young to die, never too bright to yield the mind's rich jewels into the Master's keeping; never too strong, or too frail to fold the hands and rest them from play and from labor; never too pure a blossom, to be transplanted to the gardens of paradise, to bloom in the vernal bowers of the better land; never too wise to yield the palm of wisdom to the great scholar who knoweth all things and telleth us of the higher wisdom which pertaineth to our eternal welfare.

Never too young, nor too pure, nor too fair, not too poor, too rich, nor too bright to meet death, to lay aside this mortal frame, and be borne to our home in the grave. Neither will all conditions or times or seasons, give us immunity from sickness and death. Watch therefore for in such an hour as ye think not shall the Master come.

Be ye always ready.

MRS. E. M. APPLEBURY.

Concerning Precedents.

There is another thing which we shold do well to remember, that what was wise and good in the determination of our ancestors may be positively pernicious in our own age. 'Captain,' said a passenger on board ship, "couldn't you let us have a clean towel? "No," was the conservative reply; "twenty people have wiped themselves with that towel before you, and none of them complained of it, and I should think it would do for you." met us remember that methods and Leasures and institutions deteriorate with the lapse of years, and need to be replaced by others which are more appropriate, or more pure. We are not to smear ourselves with some dirty rag because in auotherage it has been a white napkin to ends of useor beauty. We owe to the past a due reverence, but no servile subordination.—London Methodist.

HISTORICAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

The First in Montana.

Twenty-four years ago this season a remarkable gathering of professing Christian men might have been seen sitting around a table in the primary school room of the Academy on the Hill, in Helena. They represented five denominations of the protestant faith, and had thus come together by agreement to see what could be done to maintain Christian worship on Sabbath in the city of Helena. When the true condition of Helena is described this will not appear strange. Sunday witnessed during the years 1865-'66 the gathering of nearly all the mining population for twenty-five, thirty and forty miles away, who emptied the gulches and came in with pack animals to get mail, purchase supplies, and to join the revelry of the town generally. To say that the crowd hardly fell short of 10,000 men assembled on these days, would only be a reasonable statement. At one part of the season we counted the bands of four theatres parading the streets on Sunday to advertise their programme and drum up auditors. Half a dozen auctioneer stands were in full blast from morning till night. Religious service was at an end; no one could be heard especially no one denomination of people. Hence the Christian Association was concerted. It was at such a time as this that we urged our Catholic friends to move to the "Hill" and gather their people. We had Crescent Hall seated. The writer employed half a dozen men to do this. The expense was defrayed at the first collection of $110.00 in gold dust. Five hundred hearers came in the morning to hear Prof. T. F. Campbell, and in the evening Rev. J. H. Prichett preached. The writer had one hundred and fifty pupils in the Sabbath school between services. The movement proved to be a grand success for two years or more.—Journal.

Christian Science Examined.

Mrs. Eddy is its originator. If any exponent of its philosophy is to be relied upon, surely it is the author of the system. What does she say of Christian doctrines —those held by all orthodox churches? She defines her science as "the understanding of God." "God," she says, "is not and cannot be a person, but a principle." Here then, at the very inception of her science is a gross departure from the teaching of Chist. The idea that God is only a principle is abhorrent to Christianity. But she is a Christian scientist and must, therefore, prove her "principle" by the Christian's Bible; wherefore she quotes that beautiful figure of speech in John, "God is love." Love is a principle and God is Love; therefore, God is a principle. But Christians know very well that the figure only teaches that God is a loving Being. Two and two are four; that is a principle of mathematics. In like manner, God, in Christian Science, is only a principle. How does C. S. hold to Jesus Christ? Mrs. Eddy says, "Chist is not a personal Saviour, but a saving principle." That Christian Science which denies Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour, is a false Christian and dangerous. Christian Science lecturers do not always put forth their strongest views when addressing an assembly of Christians; usually they are very conservative and apparently orthodox. I say appently, because they use language with studied carefulness, and their terms are of a general character. The hearer attaches his own meaning to the term and does not suspect the guile of his teacher till the poison of false religion has stupified the better Christian sensibility. A certain lecturer was esteemed a very devout Christian. After he left a certain town one of his class wrote to inform him that she had lost her disposition to pray. "Very well," he replied, "it is not needful at all."

Since God and Christ are impersonal, we may look for refined vagueness when they attempt a definition of the Holy Ghost. "The Holy Ghost is science." Thus does C. S. undeify the Godhead, humiliating our cause at the very threshold of its so-called science. There is neither a personal God, personal Devil nor personal Christ. Mrs. Eddy says: "A lie is the only Satan there is. The The belief that man has a separate life or soul from God is the error Jesus came to destroy. Man is co-existent and co-eternal with God and they are inseparable in science." "God is not personal." "Jesus Christ is not a personal Savior," and "the Holy Ghost is science." These are the assumptions of Christian Science.

The therapeutics of this system is grounded in the unreality of matter. Since disease must have matter to operate on, and since there is no matter, therefore there is no disease. Hence the formula of C. S.

1. Deny all sickness and pain and evil of every form.

2. Affirm—the healthful existence of Spirit.

3. God is universal Spirit, Spirit is life; man is one with God, a part of Him is God; therefore, he cannot be sick, nor die, nor sin.

4. Realize this truth and it becomes a fact, personal to the one so realizing it, and health at once sets up ith deathless reign.—H. R. Withers in Arkansas Methodist.

Persistent Pastoral Work.

Four solid hours of real study four days each week is all a Methodist preacher needs to spend in preparation for his pulpit work. This is true where the preacher delivers two sermons on each Sunday. Solid hours of real study mean something else besides reading light literature, newspapers, magazines or anything of the sort. It means more than reading the most solid, instructive and important books. Real study is not dawdling and yawnig and pretending, when head and heart have no vital interest in the outcome of effort. Four hours of intense, continuous, focalized thought will exhaust more than any ten hours of ordinary manual toil. If the paster be faithful in his study, he must have some sort of recreation or change of labor that shall secure rest and invigoration, and this leads to the remark that it is not possible to find any imployment or diversion where a more legitimate and complete change from the weariness involved in study is offered than by faithful pastoral work. The hours of study are spent within doors, the going from house to house involves much healthful walking exercise out of doors. If the sixteen hours of real study for each week be supplemented by twelve hours of pastoral work each week, there will result a freshness and vigor of both mind and body that will be truly and delightfully surprising. The absurdest thing that preachers ever do in regard to pulpit preparations is to put off till Friday and Saturday night the sixteen hours' work that ought to be spared over for four days in equal division. Such unwisdom is only equaled when the pastoral work is carlessly neglected from day to day and from week to week, until, goaded by conscience or urged by the stewards, in a fit of desperation fifty or a hundred calls are attempted in a single week. The result will surely be that the calls will be fruitless, the pastor will be utterly wearied, and, worst of all, he will be disgusted with the whole business, and probably promise himself that he will not soon be driven to repeat the experiment. But if, on the other hand, he should wisely mingle the study with the pastoral work, Re should not fail to experience in himself great increase of power and vitality in mind, body and soul.—Bishop Mallalieu, in the Christian Advocate.

To the Stewards.

DEAR BRETHREN: Your preacher has arrived in your midst, and intered upon his labors for another year. In the coming of our work, responsible duties devolve upon you. It is your place to see that he has a comfortable place to live, and so far as lieth within you to provide for his wants, so that he is "with you without fear." By promptness and faithfulness, you will contribute greatly to his comfort and success in winning souls to Christ, and in building up the church, by neglect or influence, just the opposite. There is nothing like an early start. Organize your forces. Make up your mind as to how much you can pay your preacher each month, or quarter, set it down on a paper or in a book for the purpose, and get every one else that you can to do the same. The preacher needs money now as much or more so than any other time. He has just come from conference, where preachers spend much of their surplus cash—in a good cause, thank the Lord —or has been at heavy expense moving and fitting up in his new home. Save his feelings, for these things are very trying and he hesitates to speak of them, and he will be happy and so will you. A hint to the wise is sufficient. Let there be prompt and simultaneous action in this matter all over the Helena district.

SPIRITUAL SOUNDNESS.—Among the things on which every true Christian will be sound, are the following.

The inspiration of the Scriptures, Original sin, the Trinity, the Deity of Christ, the Atonement, the Personality and work of the Holy Spirit, Repentance, Justification, Sanctification, the Reality and Personality of the Devil, the Judgment, Everlasting Punishment, the Immortality of the Soul, and the Christian Sabbath.—Ex.

Graves of Two Bishops.

Rev. M. H. Moore, in his "Pioneers of Methodism in Virginia and North Carolino," says that Bishop Francis Asbury died at the house of George Arnold in Spottsylvania county, and was first interred in the family burying ground of Mr. Arnold, but was removed by the order of the general conference to Baltimore, and placed beneath the altar of Eutaw Street church. As a loyal son and deciple of Methodism, I made a pilgrimage not long since to the shrine of this father of our faith. I found that his remains were transferred many years ago to Mount Olivet cemetery, where they now rest. The gray granite slab, once serving as a covering for his grave, has been preserved and fitted into the wall forming the rear of the pulpit recess, and may be seen by persons standing on the outside. It bears the following inscription: "Sacred to the memory of the Rev. Francis Asbury, Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was born in England, Aug. 20th, 1745, entered the ministry at the age of 17, came a missionary to America, 1771, was ordained Bishop in this city, Dec. 27th, 1884, annually visited the conferences in the U. S. with much zeal, continued to 'preach the Word' for more than half a century, and literally ended his labors with his life near Fredericksburg, Va., in the full triumph of faith, on the 31st of March, 1816, aged 70 years, 7 months, 11 days. His remains were deposited in this vault May 10th, 1816, by the general conference then sitting in this city. His journals will exhibit to posterity his labors, his difficulties, his sufferings, his patience, his preservance, his love to God and man."

The same slab contains a notice also of Rev. John Emory, D. D., another of the early bishops of our church. He was born on the Eastern shore of Maryland, April 12, 1789; died December 16, 1835. Entered the ministry in 1810; in 1820 was representative from the general conference to the Wesleyan Methodist conference in England; in 1825 was assistant editor of the Methodist Book Concern in New York; editor in 1828; and Bishop in 1832. His body was also removed to Mt. Olivet, and these men now rest in the "Preachers' Lot," awaiting the resurrection of the just.—Richmond Adv.

The editor was under the impression that Rev. Wm. M. Britt, our former associate editor and business manager, would continue in his place as manager until his successor was installed. The pressing work in his new charge at Deer Lodge in securing a parsonage before he could remove his family, forbade this, so he felt compelled to give his entire time to that.

We were, and are now, sorry to part with Bro. Britt in the work on the MONTANA METHODIST. We have never been so fortunate as to be a co-laborer with a more congenial man in every respect. We shall miss him greatly. He by no means loses interest in the paper because he is not officially connected with it. He has had experience enough to sympathize with us more than ever, and we expect veluable aid from him in the future. We believe our relationship is like that of David and Jonathan.

From the District.

The first quarterly meeting for Anaconda was held September 1st. Congregations were fair, and a profitable meeting on Sunday at 11 o'clock. The sacrament was administered to a number of communicants at night. It had been such a short time since the last quarterly meeting was held, and it being the first Sunday in the new conference year, there was no report. Brother Barbee is already planning for further improvements in the property, and regards the outlook as quite hopeful.

The quarterly meeting for Butte embraced the second Sunday of September. Congregations were not large, but we had a delightful service both morning and evening. Brother Couey is deeply in earnest in his work, the church is in harmony with him, and with the forces organized as they never were before for effective work one may expect good reports from this charge the present year. Butte is coming rapidly to the front as one of the first charges in the conference.

The quarterly meeting services for Deer Lodge were held on Sunday the 8th inst., and the quarterly conference on Monday. Owing to the health the P. E. rendered very inefficient services. But one excellent young man presented himself for membership at the close of the morning services, which is the second addition in two weeks. Brother Britt is well received by the people, and the prospect for the growth of our church here is very fine. A canvass of several days secured a fair subscription towards a parsonage, and on Monday the purchase was made of a lot and small, neat cottage, situated on Main street, which will make a comfortable home for the preacher, and thus avoid the necessity of heavy rentals, which greatly impoverish preachers with small saleries. Brother Britt is greatly elated, will soon be comfortably located in a cozy little home, and prepared to render far more efficient service than if he had to rent or even take time to build. The price to be paid is six hundred dollars. Would that we could be as fortunate in securing preachers' homes in several other charges of the district. We greatly need a home for the presiding elder in some central locality. He could render twice the service with half the expense, worry and travel that is now incident to his labors. E. J. S.

Bishop Hendrix in the West.

Let everyone who doubts the propriety of the M. E- Church, South, being in the Rocky Mountains, read the following extracts from the pen of Bishop Hendrix:

Nearly twenty years ago the General Conference separated the work west of the Missouri River into what was called the Western Conference. Four years later the western part of it, embraced in Colorado and Montana, was made into a separate conference, under the name of the Denver Conference. Four years later the Montana part was cut off into a separate Conference, under the name of the Montana Conference. There is now a desire on the part of some for a division of the Denver Conference as it stands, and the making of a Colorado Conference and a New Mexico Conference.

* * * * *

Our work in the West is in accordance with our instincts as a missionary Church. The great American desert deflects the settlement from a due western course to the more fertile valleys of Montana and Oregon. Arizona is very sparsely settled, and will remain so until its plains can be made to yield; and our preachers have followed the people who reach the Pacific coast, through occasional settlements in Arizona, and more frequent ones in Montana and Oregon. It shows the vigor of our Methodism that we, of all the Churches whose headquarters are mostly in the Southern States, seek the lost sheep in these mountains and valleys. "The world is my parish" was a fit response to fraternal greeting sent by the other branch of our Episcopal Methodism. We are in the great West because we cannot be a true Church of our Lord Jesus Christ and neglect that field. Our pure gospel, our single purpose to save souls, has given us the ear of the people whom we have gone to seek. Nor are the results slower in appearing than in Louisiana, where, after eight years of faithful labor, the missionaries of seventy-five years ago could report only 89 white and 10 colored members.

Is our Church confined to any political party, to any shade of prejudice, and that by the consent of the Church itself? Then, indeed, is her mission a limited one, and her commission about expired, when prejudices are giving place to patriotism, and party lines are becoming dim. The true ministry is a debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians; both to the wise and to the unwise. In many places in the Rocky Mountains we are the only Methodist Church, and in some the only Church of any kind. In some of our most prosperous churches there we have perhaps only a single family formerly belonging to our Church We have met the spiritual needs of the community so well that we have become permanently established and self-supporting, or nearly so.

* * * * *

At the recent session of the Denver Conference we received five preachers on trial and one by re-admission, thus almost meeting the increased need of laborers from the field itself. While some are transferred to other Conferences who lacked adaptation to the work, or were compelled, for the sake of their health or the health of their families, to change altitudes, yet there were others on the ground who had tested their health out here before asking a trausfer, and who were eager to take the vacant places. While living is more expensive here than in the older Conferences, the remuneration is proportionately higher. The average receipts of the preachers in the Denver Conference for the previous year were $730.18. While this is less than is received by our missionaries in remote fields, it will be remembered that the latter are entirely dependent ou missionary funds, while no preacher of the Denver Conference fails to receive something from his people. No appropriation exceeds $600,and only the three presiding elders receive that much, since the railroads now furnish them with free passes. No pastor receives over $400 from the Mission Board. Where a few years ago a Church (St. Paul's, Denver) was aided to the extent of $1,200 year, it is now wholly self-supporting, and pays a large amount annually into the treasury of the Board.

According to Your Ability.

"Every man according to his ability," is the Christian rule of giving and of working. It is not very faithfully obeyed. There are many persons who have great ability, yet do but little work; who have ample leisure, yet give but little time; who have large possessions, yet make small contributions. This is an evil we have all seen under the sun. And there is another that is like unto it. There are a great many people who have some ability, but do nothing; who have not much leisure, but who give no time to the Lord's work; who have a little money, but put none at all into His treasury. Those who have a little and give nothing violate the Christian law just as truly as do those who have much and give a little. There are a great many persons, young and old, in all our churches, whose means and opportunities are limited; from whom not much ought to be expected; but they are able to do something, and they do nothing. They are trangressors of the Christian law. They ought to repent and do works meet for repentance.—Sunday Afternoon.

From Deer Lodge.

Friday after the close of the conferat Stevensville, I arrived at Deer Lodge, which is the portion of the Master's vineyard, in which I am to labor this year. I was a stranger in a strange place, and fully realized the fact. But as a good providence would have it, I found that Bro. Moore had not yet gone to his new appointment. He gave me a cordial welcome to his house and was a great help to me in getting introduced to the people. Only a small congregation was present at our first service Sunday morning, but I was encouraged by their responsive attention and kindly greeting at the close of the meeting. One brother, a newly elected professor in the college of Montana, united with the church by letter.

As yet, of course, I have but a very imperfect understanding of the field, but I see enough to assure me that the harvest is great and the laborers are few. Deer Lodge has the reputation, and doubtless deserves it, of being the most civil town in the territory. There appears to be no little true Christian culture and refinement here. But there is enough worldliness, selfishness and gross immortality manifest to call forth the most ardent prayers and untiring labor of every follower of Jesus. Hard work is needed, but I believe it will yield an abundant harvest.

Our most imperative need just now, seems to be a parsonage. Rent is very high, and it seems extravagance to pay out in that way for a few years enough money to buy a perpetual home for the preacher. Parsonages constitute a kind of permanent endowment for the preachers. Bro. Stanley is here now to help me work up the enterprise. We are having some success and hope to build a good house in the near future. In the meantime we lodge together in a little hired room, while our wives live as widows in less expensive places. We are now both writing to the Montana Methodist on a little table less than two feet square.

There are a great many Missourians here, which fact I think accounts for the good character of the place. Yet the prejudice against them continues, though we hope with less virulence and blindless than formerly. A lady from the far north said recently, in speaking of the Younger brothers in my hearing, isn't it singular that nearly all that class of men come from the same state? I heard another remark yesterday that she believed Missouri was the only state that had not distinguished itself in some way. Another witness, though not a native of that state declared that the people had more brains and were less pretentious than those of any other state. So Missourians have defenders as well as traducers.

Raisins for the Voice.

For public speakers and singers, nothing is better to rid the throat of phlegm, clear the voice and prevent hoarseness, than the common raisin, or dried grape. Before going to the pulpit, or platform, chew one or two slowly and let the juice trickle down the throat. One should also be in the mouth while speaking. When it has became sufficiently moistened, and having crushed the seed, place it outside the teeth to avoid danger in breathing. Thus used, it serves as a pleasant lubricant and affords great relief from dryness of the fauces, a sense of stricture and hoarseness. I have used the raisin in this way for a long time with the most satisfactory results. The trochees and lozenges of the drug stores are abominable. The preachers, especially, are urged to try this simple, effective lubricant.

Sunday Dinners.

On the Sabbath the busy housewife should rest, expand her soul, and let the sweet hallowed influences of that holy day lift her mind above the every-day cares of life. She should receive that spiritual aid and comfort which will enable her to meet bravely the trials of another week.

How much better to have our children remember that mother set apart that day for soul culture, for long, quiet talks with her little ones, impressing upon their young minds that it was a day of rest, but not idelness. In some respects it is a busy day for us, but how like a green oasis in the desert is it compared to six days of labor.

I prepare our Sabbath dinner on Saturday, and if you will try my plan once you will scarcely care to go back to hot dinners. I bake a loaf of bread and a cake, and prepare meat in some form—ham, beef-tongue or chicken. It is then I use my preserves, jellies, pickles and canned fruits. There are so many dainty desserts to be eaten cold, and with iced tea, milk or lemonade, an excellent dinner can be gotten up in short notice. I often stew a chicken on Saturday, seasoning with salt, pepper and butter, but omiting milk. When nearly done, take off and set in the cellar, covering it close. Sabbath, build a brisk fire of kindlings, put on chicken with milk, adding thickening, and let it boil up; or add dropling if liked; this makes a good relishable dish, and with but little trouble. Then cook a can of corn or tomatoes, and you have an excellent dinner.—Woman's Work.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

THE LAST GOOD-NIGHT.

Clad in their night-gowns, clean and white,
The children come to say good-night;
"Father, good-night," says Marjority,
Climbing for kisses on my knee.

Then Ernest, Kitty, Harry next—
And baby—till I feel perplexed,
Wishing the last good-night was said,
And each and all were packed to bed.

These small folks take me unawares;
I hear them call, when safe up stairs,
As I sit down to read or write,
"Father, we want to say good-night!"

The book or pen is laid aside;
I find them laying open-eyed—
Five rosy rebels, girls and boys,
Who greet me vith tumultous noise.

Can I be stern with such as these?
Can charming ways and looks displease?
They hold and scarce and let me go,
And all because they love me so.

Then in a vision, suddenly
The future seems unveiled to me!
It is my turn, though all in vain,
To long to say good-night again.

I see the years stretch on and on,
The children all grown up and gone;
No chamber echoes to their tread,
The last good-night has long been said!

And by his fireside, desolate,
An old man sits, resigned to wait,
Recalling joys that used to be,
And faces that he may not see.

Therefore, what bliss is mine that now
I still can smooth each fair young brow!
And feel the arms that clasp me tight,
The lips ihat kiss the last good-night!

—J. R. Eastwed, in the Quiver.

There are between six and seven hundred little boys and girls in the Sunday schools of our church in Montana. Now little friends, during the past year we gave you a corner in the Montana Methodist. We wish to do so again this year, but we wish you would write some little letters for one another. Send them to the editor at Butte. We will give a nice book to the boy or girl who will write the best original article for the paper during the year. We will mention in the paper who receives the prize. Let us hear from you. Little boys and girls may correspond with each other by this means. I look for the girls to write the best.

Music as a Daily Help.

The sound of piano, flute, violin, or banjo is essentially a cheerful home sound, indicating ths absence of illness or affliction. In seasons of bereavement the voice of music is hushed. Whether or not the daughter shall ever play so skillfully that her performances can satisfy artistic critics, it is worth while for her to practice if she plays well enough only to please her frther or mother. The household group in the evening, with Ella at the piano and the big brother by her side, singing and turning her leaves, the younger ones joining in the chorus, papa supplying a deep bass like the rumble of a wave, is as pleasant to the eye as to the ear. Music is a daily help over hard places, a sweetener of toil, a soothing influence when there are signs of rough weather in the domestic sky.

On the Sabbath evening, when the little ones are allowed to sit up a half hour later than on other days, how charming it is to sing over the dear hymns familiar to us through many and varied experiences, linked in thought with stories of other days and with memories of dear ones whose voices now join in the chorus beside the crystal sea. These home concerts on Sabbath evenings are full of tender sweetness, and do much to hallow the home and make the home life blessed.—Christian Intelligencer.

Duties of a Sunday School Teacher.

1. Be punctual; tardy teachers make tardy scholars.

2. Find Christ in every lesson, Christ to be believed on for the soul's salvation.

3. Be enthusiastic about your work; believe in it; cultivate love for it. It is high and holy work.

4. Seek the baptism of the Holy Spirit; without that your best work will be a failure; with that, you cannot fail.

5. Never be absent from a session of the school unless it is absolutely unavoidable. If you are to be absent, provide a substitute.

6. Make thorough preparation for teaching the lesson. Have your class in mind as you prepare. The successful marksman takes aim.

7. Take an active part in all the general exercises of the school. If you slight them, how can you expect your scholars to do otherwise?

8. Never allow yourself to be listless, indifferent, or preoccupied, during the devotional exercises of the school. Remember that example is vastly more potent than precept.

9. Attend to the preliminaries—marking classbook, distributing books, etc.—carefully but quickly, and then teach. Do not waste time: teach as in the sight of God. Remember you must give account for this opportunity.—St. Louis Advocate.

Be a Gentleman.

Manners are the garments of character. It is true,you can dress up a French cook in the clothes of a nobleman, and pass him off for a count—at a distance. But bring him closer,and it soon appears that his suit binds him in one place and hangs too loosely in another. It does not fit the man. He does not wear it as if it were a very part of himself. So you may put fine manners on a coarse character, and try to pass him off for a gentleman. But the misfit will expose the deception. The true gentleman wears his manners like his clothing. They are the expression of his own self. Be a gentleman, and your gentle manners will show it. Be a boor, and the very fineness of your manners will betray the boor underneath.—Sunday-School Times.

Let It Settle.

The mind wants steadying and setting right many times a day. It resembles a compass placed on a rickety table—the least stir of the table makes the needle swing around and point untrue. Let it settle, then, till it points aright. Be perfectly silent a few minutes thinking of Jesus; there is almost divine force in silence. Drop the thing that worries, that excites, that interests, that thwarts you; let it fall like a sediment to the bottom,until the soul is no longer turbid, and say secretly, "Grant, I beseech thee, merciful Lord, to thy faithful servant, pardon and peace, that I may be cleansed from all my sins, and serve thee with a quiet mind."—Bishop Huntidgton.

Value of Plants in a Room.

Ozone is a form or phase of oxygen, supposed now by men of science to be developed by plant life, especially in the act of blossoming. The prevalence of epidemics is believed to coincide with the absence of ozone, or its decrease to a minimum. Open winters are dangerous in the north, because vegetation decays, with neither freezing nor ozone to counteract the effect. The Tennessee board of health has discussed the quession thoroughly, and finds pine forests not to aid in producing ozone. A sharp thunder storm, on the contrary,increases it remarkably. It is urged by Professor Meehan, of Philadelphia, thet ihe flowering of plants has much to do with health. The keeping of house plants of a free blooming sort, if clean and healthy, is desirable.—Miner.

Difficulties Incident to Religious Work in Montana.

The west as a whole presents difficulties to religious progress. We offer the following as some among the many with which we meet in Montana, where we have personal experience and observation. We cannot discuss these nor notice the remedy in this paper, but briefly mention the most prominent and write our views on the remedy later.

1. THE UNSETTLED FORMATIVE STATE OF OUR SOCIETY. While this is to some extent true of our Territory as a whole, it is peculiarly so of the mining towns and cities. "Here today and gone tomorrow" indicates the restless, migratory character of a great part of our population. Like the birds of semiannual flight, they love "neither cold nor hot," but naturally become enamored of the luke-warm state.

2. THE HETEROGENEOUS CHARACTER OF OUR POPULATION. Helena and Butte, our two largest cities, are fast approaching a cosmopolitan state. People from nearly every land and clime pour into these places. The difference of custom, social habits and previous occupations of these people tend to segregation, not to say alienation for the time being.

3. THE HOME LIFE, OR MORE TRULY THE LACK OF A HOME. Many young men are away from the tender influence and refinement of mothers and sisters. The boarding-house, restaurant or batching life each has an unwholesome effect.

4. Hindrance to marriage and the looseness to the marriage tie. The unequal proportion of the sexes in the mining districts, has up to date exerted an influence upon marriage, and consequently upon the formation of families and the creation of the home, which is so essential. Comparatively few daughters born and reared in Montana, have as yet become the "cornerstones polished after the similitude of a palace," binding family to family.

5. Temporary abode affords an apparently plausible excuse often rendered, "I will not join the church just now, I will wait till I am settled." Some never settle.

6. UNRIGHTIOUS MAMMON. "The love of money is the root of all evil" is as true of Montana as any country in the world. Upon the very heels of this greed for gain is the consequent indifference, stolid indifference to religious matters. The listless man is absolutely annoying to the preacher. Merchants run up and down the debit and credit column, while the preacher prays and preaches.

7. SABBATH DESECRATION. The plea of necessity for Sabbath work in our mining sections confirms the laboring classes to prisons of darkness where the light of God's word does not enter.

Says E. J. Stanley in his latest book: "Constant labor makes men dull and sensual, and dwarfs the finer sentiments of his spiritual and moral nature. It shuts out the thought of God, duty, heaven and immortality, and robs him of much sunshine that comes to toiling humanity through the medium of the Christian Sabbath." But laboring on the Sabbath is not the only way in which the Sabbath is desecrated, the house of God deserted and his word unheeded. The tendency of a large majority of the people who are off shift and of those who do not work on the Sabbath, is to spend it in amusement and in such amusements too, as should not be countenanced and patronized anyway. It is a question with some, whether men had better be at the pick and shovel rather than in a saloon and at the gambling table, at the horse race, the low order of spectacular exhibition, skating rink, beer garden, or Sunday afternoon orchestra and matinee. The cry for amusement is positively alarming to the Christian community. We might associate with the above intemperance, the menace to every public interest, social, civil and religious.

8. Extraneous difficulties confront us on every side, and in almost every conceivable way, but we must not look too far lest we overlook significant facts nearer home. In the church itself we find elements at war with the steady growth of the church, and the rapid evangelization of the world about us. In our country, thinly populated though it be, nearly all the protestant denominations in the land have come to Montana, and often is it the case that competition among them works temporary death. In our small towns and those of prospective growth into cities, there are scenes of scramble and jealous rivalry to secure lots, build houses of worship and organize classes for church operation. Much unwisdom is seen in a number of places, much misspent time, men and money, therefore, consequent division, weakness, and denominational shame in the eyes of a gainsaying world. It is a very unpraiseworthy spirit in any church to think that the people cannot be saved through the instrumentality of any other. "True scriptural unity is needed now more than ever before, needed for the effectual defense and preservation of Christianity itself. The powers of doubt and unbelief, which sweep over the land and make themselves felt everywhere, in every household are tremendous in their influence." Notwithstanding, denominational bigotry gloats over the torn prey, and wants the earth. We will offer our readers the remedy for these evils in our next issue.

Personals.

The absence of brother J. S. Robertson at the first morning's session of the annual conference at Stevensville, caused omission of his name as a lay delegate in our account of the proceedings of the conference. Suffice it to say, brother Robertson was present most all the time, and performed well his part.

Rev. Wm. M. Britt, our former colaborer on the Montana Methodist, was in our city a few days since, and speaks encouragingly of his new field of operation in the little city of Deer Lodge. A valuable member, one of the professors in the college of Montana, was received by letter at the very first service. Brother Britt talks parsonage to most everybody he meets. He should have it.

Rev. John Moore and family passed through Butte Friday, August 30, on the way to his appointment for another year. ----Boulder and Elkhorn.

Rev. W. T. Goulder feels cheerful over his beginning in East Helena.

Rev. E. J. Stanley, presiding elder of the Helena district, is stirring among the preachers of the big district, and holding quarterly couferences.

Revs. J. H. Johnson and H. B. Cockrill, have recently visited the Yellow Stone National Park.

Paragraphic Selections.

The Chinese Evangelist gives a list of 123 Chinese schools and missions in this country. The average attendance, so far as given, is about 1,600. This total does not include the missions of the Pacific coast, in connection with which there are 217 Christians. In New York and Brooklyn there are thirty-five schools with an average attendance of 700, of whom sixty-four are Christians.

Whoever is afraid of submitting any question, civil or religious, to the test of free discussion is more in love with his own opinion than with truth.—Bishop Watson.

Gaining and losing in this world, rising and falling, enjoying and suffering, are but the incidents of life. Learning aspiration, progress, is the life of life.—Orville Dewey.

If this world was made to suit every critic's wishes, what a deformed, bulging, lopsided, depressed, irregular, dime museum affair it would be.—Baltimore American.

After all, the most natural beauty in the world is honesty and moral truth; for all beauty is truth. True features make the beauty of a face, and true proportions the beauty of architecture, as true measures that of harmony and music. In poetry, which is all fable, truth still is the perfection.—Shaftesbury.

The least taint of mercenariness in a moral reformer is as fatal to his influence for good as prussic acid to a living organism. Shun the least semblance of it, O men of God, to whom the people are looking as guides to eternal life!—Nashville Advocate.

The Florida Methodist, organ of the Northern Methodist church, gives notice of suspension.----Ex.

The perfect love that casts out fear is present experience to some of the Lord's people. What is it to you? Your answer to this question may date a brighter day in your Christian life. You cannot afford to dismiss it lightly from your mind. To reject a proffered grace is no less dangerous tean to disobey a known command. — Nashville Advocate.

THE TESTING.—Travelers tell us of a tree in tropical countries the inner parts of which are sometimes eaten out by ants, while the bark and leaves remain apparently as fresh as ever; and it is not till the tornado comes and sweeps it down that its weakness is discovered. But the storm did not make the tree weak; it only revealed how weak it was, and its feebleness was the result of the gnawing of insect through a long course of time. In like manner, if we let our characters be honey-combed by constant neglect of common duty, or by daily indulgence in secret sin, or by habitual yielding to some temptation, we cannot expect anything else than ruin when the testing hour shall come.—W. M. Taylor.

MONTANA UNION.--The Anaconda Review announces that orders have been issued to proceed at once with the Montana Union improvements at Anaconda. The new line to the upper works ore house and to the lower works will be finished. The new shops and roundhouse will be built and also the new depot. The company's architect at Kansas City, who designed the Cheyenne depot, is at work finishing the plans for the new depot building. The improvements ordered include the putting in of two new side-tracks at Stuart, five new side-tracks at Silver Bow and double tracking the line from the Butte depot to the Boston & Montana smelter, besides many other minor improvements.

We commend to our preachers this gem from the South-Western Methodist: "The love of the truth as taught in the Word, is the support of the preacher. If he study effect, his work will be superficial, his own life superficial, and his zeal as a minister will decay with his youth, or be measured only by the apparent appreciation of his hearers. But one who finds in truth the reward of his toil and the food of his soul, will ever esteem it the highest privilege to be permitted to follow his holy calling. His faith will always be strong and his soul will always be young.

Profession without possession is hypocrisy. A man cannot be in a converted state when his heart is a powder magazine that blows up whenever a spark of provocation falls into it; and it is absurd to claim entire sanctification when bitter words and a coveteous spirit and selfiishness are manifest in the life. Prejudice and neglect to pay debts and bad temper are not the fruits of sanctification.—Josephus Anderson.

True holiness people are modest, unassuming, gentle, meek, loving, humble, unselfish, ready to serve others, and full of the true Christ. They are winning in their manner, attractive in their conversation, brightly hopeful in their outlook, tenderly sympathetic and charitable toward others, and timid about putting themselves forward. Such are to be found here and there, living under the shadow of the cross, keeping close to Jesus in daily companionship, and they are God's saints indeed, the truly sanctified.—Josephus Anderson.

The torch of the incendiary, for several weeks past, has been the occasion of much loss of property in Butte. Livery stables and private barns seem to be the choice of places to do the ugly work under cover of midnight. Woe to the fiend or fiends if caught.

The forest fires of Montana have been very destructive of our much needed timber. Many of our towns near the forests have been endangered. Some valuable mining properties have been lost. The Combination Company, near Pillipsburg, sustained a loss of about $50,000, August 30th.

The campaign for the election of state officers in Montana is getting quite lively. The new system of registration will certainly prevent fraud at the polls, so far as that can effect it.

Representative men from both the Democratic and Republican parties are now before the people, for their suffrage. Whichever party wins the race, will evidently show it to be the stronger in Montana. A strict party vote will be cast this fall. So think the politicians. We preachers don't know.

Notes by E. J. S.

There are in the Helena district for the current year thirteen pastoral charges to which preachers have been appointed (besides four that were left to be supplied). By allowing one Saturday and Sunday for each quarterly meeting, it will be seen that thirteen weeks are necessary to make one round and fifty-two weeks are required to complete the four rounds between now and next annual conference. Not a Sunday to spare, and only a day now and then for the presiding elder to spend at home if he attends strictly to his work. This shows whether or not preachers have anything to do in Montana. There is not a preacher in the conference, whose time will not be just as fully occupied if he attends strictly to his work, though he may not be required to be absent from home so much of the time.

* * *

By some hook or crook the name of Brother John S. Robertson, of Stevensville, was omitted from the list of lay-members present at the conference at Stevensville. It was an oversight which we much regretted, for Brother Robrtson is one of the staunch laymen of our church in Montana, and is keenly alive to her every interest.

* * *

There was a full attendance of the lay delegates from the Helena district at the last conference. Doubtless the Bozeman district would have been as well represented, but for the expense of the trip and the busy time (for ranchmen) in which the conference was held. It greatly cheers the hearts of the preachers to see a good attendance of lay members at the annual conference. It helps to beget enthusiasm, and enthusiasm is essential to the success of any movement. I often wish that every member of the church could attend each session of the annual conference. It would stir up their pure minds, inspire them with zeal and fit them for their work as nothing else will. They see then the workings of our Methodism and catch the spirit that pervades our preachers and people as they do not anywhere else.

* * *

There is seldom an annual conference held where there is greater harmony and more genuine good feeling than characterized the session recently held at Stevensville.

* * *

After the adjournment of the conference at Stevensville quite a number of those who had been in attendance remained for several days to visit and enjoy the beauties and luxuries of the lively Bitterroot valley. It was the general verdict that the valley is "more like the states" than any portion of Montana that they had yet visited. It was to be regretted that the dense smoke that overhung the valley at the time, shut out the inspiring views of the grand mountain ranges that enveron the valley.

THE BELT VALLEY LANDS.

The Flourishing Country Traversed by the Montana Central and Manitoba.

The following is from the pen of Howard Mitchell, of the Pioneer Press, who visited this section in company with President Hill's party in June last:

I have been trying to think of some place to compare with the Belt river valley. The rich slopes and ravines extending out from that little marvel of southern hemisphere, the city of Nelson in New Zealand, are more nearly semi-tropical in character, but they do not excel this valley of the north and its hundred of tributary coulees in native luxuriance.

In some regards the Belt would remind one of the Mohawk and the Genessee valleys in New York, or the valley of the "beautiful blue Juniata" in Pennsylvania; but it combines with the emerald-hued wealth of these, some of the grandeur of the Arkansas river gorges in the mountains of Colorado. Its flats are more honest and better defined, and its hills are more pronounced than those of the former, and less forbidding than those of the latter.

With all its myriad twists and turnings, the Belt river does not nourish so much land as the milk river does. The one singing merrily over its rocks and pebbles, flows impetuously from its mountain birthplace down through the teeming slopes into the wondrous basin where the other one performs its larger duty. Perhaps we may arrive at a wrong conclusion! How shall we estimate the value of a river? Does it confer greater benefit upon the nation when it is "sowing its wild oats," so to speak, rushing, bubbling, boiling, cascading its earlier life through the mountains, or later on, when it flows placidly through the farmers' level plain, teaching the grass roots the lesson of growth, inspiring confidence in the minds of the soil tillers?

The Belt river of Montana nourishes a great country; but the Milk river nourishes a greater. The Milk river is one of the chief streams flowing through the great future wheat district of the United States; the Belt, flowing northward and emptying into the Missouri, contributes its quota to help drain the district.

The "Montana Christian Advocate's" Hypercriticism.

In the Montana Christian Advocate of September 4th the editor says: "Phe pastor of the Anaconda M. E. Church, South, Rev. S. W. Barbee, distribuies his card, calling his church "The Methodist Church." Not so! Our brother does not represent that church, but the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. We notice that Rev. Couey often sails under the name of the Idaho-street Methodist church of Bute and our friends in this city are often announced as belonging to the Grand-street Methodist Church. Don't be ashamed of your colors, brethren! You are Episcopal Methodists."

How did the editor of the Advocate obtain possession of one of my cards? I never saw him, was never in Helena, and do not now recollect to have ever sent him one through the mails or otherwise. The editor writes without warrant of fact when he says of the pastoral card, I distribute among the people of my parish that it contains the words: "The Methodist Church." I have never had printed a card with that expression upon its face. I would not be so uncatholic in spirit as to assert, even indirectly, that the church of which I am a member is the only Methodist ecclesiastical organization in this country. There is a very important sense, however, in which I do make the claim on behalf of my church that it is the Methodist Church.

Again, it was altogether gratuitous on the part of the editor of the Advocate to tell his readers that the church I represent is the "Methodist-Episcopal Church, South." This was an open secret to all the world long before the editor of the Advocate assumed the role of intelligence dispenser.

"Don't be ashamed of your colors, brethren." Bah! Ashamed? Never! 'Tis here we make our boast. In hoc signo vinces. If the Methodist-Episcopal Church will tell the truth about the Methodist-Episcopal Church, South, and give the facts of history, I'm satisfied. I throw out the challenge now to my good brother Raleigh of the Advocate that I am willing to rest the whole case of my church upon the recorded facts of history.

In the sweetly suggestive words of Abraham Lincoln, the model citizen and brother of us all, "with malice toward none, and charity for all," I am

Your brother,

S. W. Barbee.

Anaconda, M. T.

P. S. In the same issue of the Advocate, from which the above editorial is taken, appears the folloving in a communication from a correspondent, signing himself "S. E. S.": "The Methodist Church has taken a new start." Here we have a claim for "The Methodist Church," but it is not the claim of "the pastor of the M. E. Church, South, Rev. S. W. Barbee." Really, Bro. Raleigh, did you not get things mixed? And instead of the undersigned being the one who claimed to represent "The Methodist Chureh," did you not intend to say "S. E. S?" But, according to your definition, "the Methodist Chureh" is not represented in Anaconda at all. What, therefore, will you do with the claim of "S. E. S.?"

Again, in the same issue of your paper you speak of a "third Methodist Church." Is this church likewise an outgrowth frem the Protestant Methodist Church?"

And again, in the same paper you speak of "quite a number of Methodists who are clamoring for a church." Why don't you insist on their joining "the Methodist Church" of which "S. E. S." speaks?

And lastly, as the preacher would say, in your issue of August 21st, you say: "The Southern Methodist Ceneral Conference will be held next year." This is news to me. I have never known such a general conference. And I know no such people as Southern Methodists. Are they "Episcopal Methodists?"

Please enlighten on all the above points and oblige. S. W. B.

Prayer and Breakfast.

Some years ago when the country around Cincinnati was newer than it is now, a pious farmer was busy clearing his land. He had a number of hands employed, and was anxious to accomplish a large amount of work while the weather was favorable. He called them early and went out with them before breakfast was ready. A horn was blown and they came in and ate, and returned again to their work.

The farmer had been accustomed to have prayers every morning in his family. But to keep so many men from chopping and log rolling while he read and prayed was more than he could afford; so satan suggested and the good man yielded. His pious wife saw with grief that the family altar was neglected, and her husband in haste to get rich, was departing from God. She talked with him, she pleaded with him, but in vain. At last she determined to try another experiment.

The next morning the farmer and his men went out, as usual, to their work. The sun began to climb up the sky, but no breakfast horn was heard. They grew hungry, and looked anxiously toward the house; they listened, but still the expected summons did not come. After waiting an hour or two beyond the usual time, they went into the house. No table was set, no coffee boiling on the fire, no cook over or before it. The good wife was knitting quietly with the Bible on her lap.

"What does this mean?" cried the husband, "why isn't our breakfast ready?"

"I thought you were in such a hurry about your work that you hadn't any time to eat it!"

"Have time to eat it! Do you think we can live without eating?"

"You can live without eating as well as without praying. The spirit needs the bread of heaven as much as the body needs the bread of earth."

"Well, well," said the farmer, "get us some breakfast, and we will have prayers every morning, no matter how busy we are or how many workmen I have."

She got the breakfast, and he kept his word. The lesson was a good one and never forgotten.—Selected.

John Wesley on the Liquor Traffic.

We may not sell anything which tends to impair health. Such is eminently all that liquid fire commonly called drams or spirituous liquors. It is true these may have a place in medicine, they may be of use in some bodily disorders (although there would rarely be occasion for them were it not for the unskillfulness of the practitioner); therefore, such as prepare and sell them for this end only may keep themselves clear; but who are they? Do you know ten such distillers in England? Then excuse these; but all who sell them in the common way, to any that will buy are poisoners generally. They murder her majesty's subjects by wholesale, neither does their eye pity or spare, they drive them to hell like sheep and what is their gain? Is it not the blood of these men? Who then would envy their large estates and sumptuous palaces? A curse is in the midst of them, the curse of God cleaves to the stones, the timber, the furniture of them; the curse of God is in their gardens, their walks, their groves; a fire that burns to the nethermost hell. Blood, blood is there! The foundation, the floor, the roof are stained with blood, and canst thou hope, oh thou man of blood, though thou art clothed in purple and fine linen and farest sumptuously every day, canst thou hope to deliver down thy fields of blood to the third generation? Not so, for there is a God in heaven; therefore, thy name shall be rooted out, like as those whom thou hast destroyed, body and soul, thy memorial shall perish with thee.

That liquid fire lays the foundation of numberless diseases, and of this in particular. It is amazing that the preparing or selling this poison should be permitted, I shall not say in any Christian country, but in any civilized state.—Ex.

Let all our preachers see to it that the subscribers in their respective charges renew. Brethren, we urge you to do this promptly. If the paper is run successfully during the conference year, you must see to this. Take your subscription book with you everywhere, and seek every opportunity to get new subscribers and renewals. Please go at it in a business-like way and you will not fail. Now is the time.

To the Subscribers Outside of Montana.

We had hoped, until a few days since, to have one of the Montana preachers visit a number of our annual conference sessions to secure new subscribers and renew old ones. In this we have been disappointed. Since we are not able to visit you, dear friends, we beg you as the only alternative, to renew your subscription, and thus aid the cause of our church in Montana, where we labor without ceasing to hasten the Kingdom of the Lord. Write a postal saying that you will continue and send us the money as early as possible.

Let all the preachers in Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, and elsewhere inform us by postal of the new address of changes in appointments.

MR. EDITOR:—I am well pleased with my new appointmena. We had our first service in the new church yesterday. It is grand.

Congregation good; are an appeciative people.

In the forenoon a little girl was seen in the vestibule crying. She was approached by a pleasant, good-nature man, and asked the cause of her weeping. In answer to his inquiries, she told him she wanted to go in. The poor timid child summoned courage to come to church alone. At the door, so timid, she could go no farther. May the Lord fill her heart, and keep her by the right and power of His Holy Spirit, make her a shining light in the church, and an effectual worker for God in the salvation of immortal souls. W. F. G.

East Helena, Sept. 2, 1889.

Brethren of the ministry in Montan acompare your experience of last year, and what you may be called upon to undergo the present conference year, with that of the apostle Paul, who was a man of like passions with ourselves:

"Are they ministers of Christ? I am more; in labors more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in death oft. Of the Jews five times receive I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings often in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. Beside those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of the churches." By the grace of God Paul bore all this cheerfully and finished his course with joy. ***

We hope to give our readers some extracts from the Constitution of Montana State in our next issue.

The election for State officers and members to the U. S. Senate and Congress is fixed for Oct 1.

REV. A. C. COUEY, Editor. Helena, Montana, September 26, 1889. VOL. 2, NO. 4. SUBSCRIPTION, $1 00 PER YEAR.

From Helena District.

BY THE P. E.

The quarterly Conference for Deer Lodge was held on Monday morning, the 9th inst., and the purchase of the new parsonage was effected in a short time afterward. The friends there were elated at the idea of having a home for their preacher, and the preacher was elated at the thought of having a home to move into, so much so that he started out that evening in company with the writer to Helena, to begin packing up. On our way over we met with a clever looking young Baptist preacher from North Carolina. He had been laboring in Washington Territory. He said he suspected that we were ministers, but waited until he heard the subject of our conversation, which was about Sunday schools, when his doubts were removed and he introduced himself. He seemed to think that nobody but ministers would discuss such a subject on a roilroad train at a time when political excitement is running so high. Thank the Lord that it can be said of the Master's servants, even in this day, "thy speech betrayeth thee." Brethren, let us be careful how we talk, even among strangers, for we know not who are listeners, nor what impressions will be made. We had a pleasant conversation with our brother on the cars. We arrived in Helena about 8 o'clock, p. m., and the writer found a cordial welcome at the home of Brother and Sister Collet.

I had expected to return home until my failing health could be restored, but learning that Brother Goulder was in need of help I hastened thither and we commenced work at once raising funds to pay for the new seats which had just arrived, and to finish paying for and otherwise furnishing the new church. It is somewhat unpleasant to introduce one's self to strangers in the capacity of a solicitor for money, but the only way to get it is by asking, and I am not ashamed to do so when I know it is for a good cause, as the work of building and furnishing churches is. The people responded very generously, and at the close of the week we had between two and three hundred dollars of good subscriptions on our papers, two new stoves bought and one of them in the house ready to put up, some old acquaintences were renewed and a number of pleasant new ones formed, and we were gratified to see a spirit of hopefulness and good cheer prevailing in the community. Our old friend, Mr. Alex Burns, rendered valuable assistance in the good work.

The new house, while it is plain, is very substantial and is a model of neatness, and reflects credit upon the builder, Mr. Tiffany, who is justly proud of it, and also upon Mr. Britt and others who did the planning and had the general oversight of it.

Brother Goulder is quite popular with the people, and is much encouraged at the outlook. He reported one accession by letter and one lady was received on Sunday night by baptism and profession of faith. It was the first service of the kind in the new church, and the large audience seemed favorably impressed. The Sunday school is in a flourishing condition. Faithful, persistent and united effort upon the part of pastor and people will bring a rich harvest at East Helena. May the brighest hopes of all be abundantly realized.

Is Patriotism Dead?

During the recent Samoan storm the differences caused by local wars and foreign diplomacy which brought the vessels to the harbor, from the nations concerned, were dispelled by the hand of God in a way little less than miraculous. To say the least, we feel quite sure God's hand was in it. Among the many vessels were the German ship Eber, the English Calliope, the American Vandalia and the flagship Trenton.

Such was the fierceness of the storm that nearly every vessel in harbor was dragging its anchors. The lights of the men-of-war could be seen moving slowly in different directions through the dense darkness of the night.

Of those mentioned, the German ship Eber was the first to succumb. From the Scientific American we learn that a great wave, rolling toward the shore, suddenly lifted the vessel high on its crest and carried her broadside upon the reef, one officer and five men being rescued out of a total of seventy-six who were on board.

The English vessel Calliope and the American Vandalia were in close quarters for quite a while, and finally the great iron prow of the English steamer, rising on the crest of a great wave, came down on the Vandalia effecting great damage.

In the course of time the Calliope, which had powerful engines, worked its way slowly out to the open sea, being the only vessel that could do so.

The Vandalia, not a great while after her wound, was beached close to where the Eber foundered, with broadside to the shore. She had 230 men on board. The whole of the afternoon was spent in scenes of suffering and death.

The Trenton, the largest ship in harbor, had held out thus far. But her rudder and propeller having been carried away by fouling with a piece of wreck, she began to drift toward danger with her 450 men.

The most skillful seamanship was used in the management of the vessel. Though this seemed her fatal hour, the Stars and Stripes were seen flying from the gaff of the Trenton, the first time a flag had floated since the commencement of the storm. The officers determined that if she went down she should do so with flying colors.

It was almost night, and now the Trenton was fast approaching the shore where the Vandalia lay with her almost exhausted men and "wished for the day." Suddenly cheering voices were heard across the water by those on shore. It was the four hundred and fifty on the Trenton trying to arouse the faint hopes of their fellow-countrymen on the stranded Vandalia. The American National anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner," was played by the Trenton band as these two vessels came slowly together. This stirred every heart on shore and on sea. By this happy drifting together of the two American vessels, the lives so long in peril were rescued.

This scene, closing under U. S. colors and our National air, declares a patriotism worthy the admiration of the world. Does this augur our future among the nations?

Let the Echo Fly.

Ye preachers of the Montana Conference, M. E. Church South! read what a preacher down in old Georgia does for his Conference paper:

DO YOU SEE THIS?

I have become responsible for 111 subscriptions to the Advocate. I want you to pay yours to your pastor for me, or have it ready to hand me at fourth quarterly Conference for your circuit. Remember your subscriptions made to me, is charged to me, and if you pay it to anyone else tell them it is for your subscription due me. Don't forget, and don't delay.

Yours, T. T. CHRISTIAN.

What do you think you can do? How many cash subscribers and renewals have you forwarded since Conference? The paper is yet being published every two weeks, and it takes the cash every issue as little as you think about it. Procrastination brings what? Let us hear from you by next mail.

The Kind of Governor for Us.

"Now these be the last words of David. David, the son of Jesse, said, and the man who was raised up on high, the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the sweet psalmist of Israel, said: The spirit of the Lord spoke by me, and his word was in my tongue. The God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel spake to me: He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God. And he shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even as morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth bo clear shining after rain." The religious press nor pulpit, nor one church, nor all the churches of our fair young republic should say of what political faith the Governor of Montana shall be, but it is the duty of the good people of the State, whether Christien or not, to say by their suffrage October 1st that our chief State executive "must be just, ruling in the fear of God."

We are gratified this week that our brethren have contributed matter for the paper so liberally. It did not take but a little time, did it? Many thanks to every one of you. Now keep the ball rolling.

One of the strongest evidences that our old subscribers appreciate our little paper is that every few days in Butte they hand us a dollar and say continue the paper. That is far better than many pretty compliments and no money. We are getting new ones, too. Let every preacher work earnestly on this line and the way is certain to open.

The Silver Bow County Teachers' Institute was held in Butte, September 16–18. We had opportunity to spend about one hour with them. An essay on "History" was read by Miss Calkins, of Butte, while we were in. It was brief and good. In the discussion on teaching history, one teacher remarked that he thought too much time was given to the classics on the late civil war. We believe it a point well taken. Judging from those present, our teachers of Silver Bow county are most all ladies.

Station and Circuit Work.

There is much required of the man who goes out by the authority of the Church vested with the responsibility of "Preacher in Charge." It comes solemnly to him: "A charge to keep I have." It is a rule with most of us to think that we have the most difficult work in the Conference, chiefly, we suppose, from the fact that we study and know more of our own field than those of our brethren. Our thoughts upon this subject lead us to a comparison of station and circuit work.

Perhaps the man who has always been a station preacher knows not the difficulties of the circuit-rider. Neither does he who has spent all his ministry in circuit work know the labors and difficulties of station work. The preacher who has to preach to one congregation twice every Sabbath, hold a prayer meeting week evening and teach a Sunday school class, and often superintend the school, has necessarily a great deal of study in order to properly feed his flock with the gospel. But while this is true, has he not fine opportunity for his study? He can rise, say at 6 in the morning, and get into his study by 8, put in four hours in close mental effort, have dinner, visit in the afternoon, have tea at 6 and repair to his study by 8 in the evening and do his general reading till 10 o'clock. He is able to systematize his labor and thus do a great deal in the course of a year. This circuit preacher, to some, has a very easy time, but when duly considered, we learn there are many obstacles to overcome in his pathway.

Suppose a man has four monthly appointments, at each of which he preaches twice, thus requiring eight sermons monthly. He may, if so disposed, develop only two subjects. In this particular, he apparently has quite an easy time. But there is something to counteract it in his pastoral work. In many places it is not considered a visit unless the preacher takes a meal or stays all night, and woe betide the preacher who does not spend at least one night with every family on his circuit who are members of the Church. So when we sum the matter up there is no chance for idleness either in circuit or station work. No doubt there is a desire for a change from one to the other in the life of every Methodist itinerent.

There is one thing of which we are sure brethren, we can find as much as we can do on the circuit or station. Neither is without its difficulties and its recompenses. Let us all labor, therefore, to do our work well so as to commend ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

From Deer Lodge.

Mr. Editor: To write about Deer Lodge and my own work seems too commonplace to interest me, and yet, judging others by myself, I know there are friends elsewhere who will be glad to know what we are doing here. In the last Methodist, Brother Stanley told of our purchasing a parsonage. We secured a house and lot in a moderately good location and at such figures as induced us to buy rather than build as we had intended. It is an humble home, but comfortable, and doubly so since it saves us from the exorbitant rent charged here. Our friends outside the Church have contributed, some of them quite liberally, towards paying for the parsonage. Others from whom we solicited, refused on the ground that our own Church members were not helping as they should. We thought them very unreasonable, for fully four-fifths of the whole amount raised has come from our own people.

We are gratified with the start our friends here are making toward our support. Such a good beginning gives promise that no deficits will have to be reported at the next Conference. But better than this is the encouragement we have in the Church work. I believe all are purposing to do their duty in this line. An increase of attendance at all the services is noticeable. One young man was received into the Church on profession of faith yesterday. I want to realize that soul-saving is my only business, and to get my people to realize that the same is their chief business.

A week ago last Sunday, in company with Rev. Mr. Reed, of the Presbyterian Church, I had the pleasure of visiting the penitentiary and of addressing the convicts. It was a pleasure on several accounts. I never had a more attentive or apparently more appreciative audience, and the singing was equal to the best I ever heard. The faces of the convicts are a fascinating study. It seems to me there were all sorts there—good, bad and indifferent. I thought of the Saviour's words, "suppose ye that these are sinners above all men because they suffer such things?" It seemed to me but another example of the unequal lot of the equally deserving so common in the world. We meet men every day that show more crime in their countenances, and doubtless have more in their hearts, than the average penitentiary convict. I saw one young man there whom I had seen and talked with before in the jail at Helena. He was scarcely grown and had been attending school when he was caught in some crime and sentenced to a term in the pen. He borrowed school books and kept up his studies while in jail. He acknowledged that his arrest was a fortunate thing for him as it saved him from a further evil course. I was glad to find him one of the trustees in the pen, and that his term is not a long one. I believe the institution here is proving to many what it is designed to be—a place of penitence and reformation. The Presbyterians hold services every Sunday with them, and several of the convicts have professed conversion. They have organized a Church among them of nine members.

East Helena Charge.

Dear Editor:—There is a good work going on in this place since the advent of our esteemed pastor, Brother Goulder. It may be asked by some: In what way? What fruitage, what harvest has been gathered in to show that the seed scattered has not perished. But as sure as the drifting straws indicate the direction of the element which drives them on, so sure are the indications that many of the people of this place have changed their attitude on the subject of religion. Rev. Goulder came here with a task before him which, in my candid opinion, would almost try the courage of an archangel. Vice and crime, wedded, were the tenants of the greater part of the place. You can well conceive how the profane oath, often pronounced by little children, has grated on his ear, and the knowledge of a 17-year-old boy drunk on the street called bitterly to mind the importance of arduous work for the Master. With modest dignity, which becomes a Christian minister, our pastor has won the respect of large numbers outside of the church. Respect is the forerunner of admiration and esteem which, let us hope, may be God's own way of finding the open door to an erring brother's heart.

Our Sabbath school averages about fifty, including the Bible class. The teachers are earnest and energetic and appear exactly fitted for their duties—the high, holy, responsible work of implanting the snow-white jewel of a saving faith in the hearts of these little children.

The choir practices regularly and has given us some splendid music, adding a much appreciated charm to our church services. But something appears to tell me that even an editor's patience has a limit, so for the present I wish you good-bye and God-speed.

A. G. C.

From Brother John Moore.

Dear Brother Couey:—I write to inform you that we have been very kindly received at Boulder and Elkhorn, and we have enjoyed preaching to large and attentive congregations at both places. Early last week, through the thoughtfulness of some of our elect ladies, we received a substantial donation in money and provisions, for which we are grateful. Yes, there is a work for our Church in Montana, and while it is true that we are misrepresented by persons who know better, and who ought to do better, it is also true that the "Lord of hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge," and while the hyper-criticisms that are passed upon us are not intended for our good, we can afford to pass them by in the silence which is golden and pursue the even tenor of our way peacefully. The God whom we serve will right all wrongs, and the day of final accounts will surely come and some one must face a terrible indictment. Talk is cheap, but earnest, faithful prayer will give us power with God, and power with God means power to break the hearts of sinners every time we preach. Much prayer will make one familiar with God; and to be familiar with Gon is the one indispensible element in order to preach successfully, and in this connection allow me to suggest a remedy for the cure of the capious fault-finding spirit who, at the expense of immortal souls is working so earnestly and diligently to prevent our success. It is this: Knee drill three times daily until relief is obtained and a more conservative and a less belliggerant and envious spirit is permanently enthroned. Earnestly and persistently followed, this treatment will prove effectual even in the most obstinate cases. Let them try it and report. I believe every true Christian heart in Montana desires our success. To wish anything else is not in harmony with the spirit of Christ. Life is too short to be spent in criticisms or hyper-criticisms. The dawn of eternity is upon us. We must do our work quickly and be ready for the Master's call. Therefore let us pray for that charity that goes abroad and covers a multitude of sins, and for that grace, love and unity that shall lead the Lord's hosts to a triumphant and signal victory.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

THE ROAD TO HONOR AND WEALTH.

The road to honor and wealth, boys,
You all would like to know,
The secret in a nutshell lies—
Just pay your way as you go.

Don't borrow of your chums, boys,
A nickle now and then,
The debt will keep increasing,
And be dollars when you're men.

Just practice self-denial, boys
And keep your conscience clear,
It is the road to happiness,
And wealth too—never fear.

Just go without, there's no disgrace
With patches on the knee,
John Wesley wore his trousers so,
And who so grand as he!

Don't go in debt to rum, boys,
,Twill hold with iron grip,
When once it fastens on your throat
You can't give it the slip.

Don't lel tobacco chain you,
And keep your breath impure,
'Twill steal away your pennies,
And keep you always poor.

Be sure and pay your mother, boys,
For all her patient care;
Don't let her work alone, boys,
But try and do you share.

So keep your courage up, lads,
And fight old Satan down,
He's waiting 'round the corner—
But just greet him with a frown.

He'll slink and quail before the eyes
Of purity and truth,
And turn his coward back on you
If you're a proper youth.

—Ellen F. Pratt-

Following Jesus in the Dark.

"Mamma," said little Bessie, "I should be afraid to die, 'cause I should lose my way in the dark."

Her mother did not say a word, but just went out and turned off the gas in the hall. Then she opened the door a little way, and said, "Come, dear, it is your bed-time. Take hold of my hand, and I will lead you upstairs."

So Bessie put her little fat hand in her mother's, and trotted bravely upstairs in the dark. After she had said, "Our Father," and "Now I lay me," and had laid her curly head upon the pillow, her mother said: "You were not afraid coming up, were you, my darling?"

"Oh no, mamma," she answered, "I couldn't be, 'cause I had hold of your hand."

"Well," said her mother, "then you need not be afraid of death, for Jesus is holding out his hand to you, and you have only to put your own in His and He will lead you safely through the dark."

"But how can I take hold of His hand, mamma?"

"By trying to be good every day, and praying to Him to help you. He loves little children so well, that they need not be afraid to follow Him anywhere."

"I guess He'll take me upstairs to heaven some day," said Bessie; "I won't be afraid anymore, would you, mamma?"

Notes by Rev. J. H. Johnson.

A church debt is a stubborn fact, but faith and grace will pay it.

How can a man worth fifty thousand lose his conscience with a contribution to Missions equal only to that given by the man who is worth only five hundred dollars. This is a problem which only the baptism of the spirit in connection with a prayerful reading of i Cor.: viii—ii Cor.: viii—ix can solve.

The membership of the Montana Conference pay 78½ cents a head annually for missions; our Chinese converts $1.25.

We have not only the "biggest little Conference," but one of the richest in the connection; and yet for about every $250 of our income we give one dollar for the conversion of two-thirds of the human race who are yet in heathen darkness. Take this matter to God, in your closet, brother.

***

The geyser over-flows are necessary to the most beautiful formations, and these over-flows are consistent with the reserved force. "The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal." The output of Christian experience is consistent with the Spirit, and is necessary to the formation of the well-rounded Christian cheracter.

Many of the crops of golden grain—of barley, oats and wheat in the Gallatin valley—now being threshed and garnered, are much better than was anticipated two months ago, some reaching as high as forty-five bushels to the acre. Yet there is perhaps little more than half the crop that was raised last year. Our hurrying, worrying, money-loving threshmen can not, for want of time (?) rest on Sunday. Nine-tenths in the valley are against this Sunday work, but many are too weak to resist it. These Sabbath-breakers will take time to die some of these days.

Last Friday we buried the beautiful, innocent little three-year-old daughter of brother and sister Scragg's, of Weavers. Little Annie had been an invalid quite all of her life, and a great sufferer for a week just before she died. She quietly fell asleep, as fades the rose to give place to perhaps a more beautiful one the following spring. We mingled our tears, not as those who have no hope, but with the triumphs of a living faith and the inspiration of a well-grounded hope. May the consolations of the gospel of peace be not small with the bereaved parents.

BOZEMAN.

Last night at 10 o'clock a fire broke out in Tracy's corral, but it was soon extinguished by the fire department. This city can boast of as ample water supply and of as splendid a fire department as any city in the state, or perhaps in the west. Bozeman is gradually and solidly building up. Five brick business houses besides the city hall have gone up on Main street this summer. Would that the spiritual interests were in advance of the material according to the Divine order.

The Needed Policy.

A short article entitled, "A Bolder Missionary Policy," occurred in our general organ some weeks back. One of our western editors indorsed it by saying, "We believe every word, etc." We give some extracts, and offer some comments:

"We must be ready to launch out into the deep waters by organizing the church in heathen lands on a basis that will make it, as soon as possible, self-governing, self-propagating and self-supporting. To protect the period of minority in our missions is to cripple and dwarf them."

Now, it is very evident that our foreign work was meant in the above. Eliminating some features, the same policy here in the west is needed. Especially is it true when we say: "To protract the period of minority in our missions is to cripple and dwarf them." Dr. Fitzgerald never made a fitter statement applicable to our western work. We know it is applicable to Montana. An intelligent man of another denomination said to us the other day that the M. E. Church, South, should be the strongest church in Montana. This man was a New Englander, and a man, too, who knew as well as we know, that the M. E. Church, South, has has been held back in the miserable period of minority, and thereby crippled and dwarfed. The golden opportunity for the M. E. Church, South, in Montana has passed, and we seriously doubt she will ever have as good again. The M. E. Church, South,to-day, as a whole, is as ignorant of what our needs are in Montana as many poor mothers about a child with the colic. We sometimes fear that our bishops have not enough interest in our work out here to make speeches and take collections from the rich laity in the strong Conferences. If this is not so, we will acknowledge our ignorance and correct the error when the facts justify.

Why is this? We will answer according to our impressions. Simply because they have no confidence in our success here. If we get money to build churches, parsonages, or to bring out one of the purse-stripped preachers from the states, we have to do our own begging through the papers or by sending an agent from this field. If this is not true we are willing to be correeted. Possibly twenty-five per cent of our Bishops favor us. Our most active friends to the cause of Montana have gone to their reward. If there could be such thing as intercession we believe they would remember us. Many members of the Board of Missions are not in sympathy with Montana, never have been and we fear never will be. Disfranchisement is the word for them.

With emphasis we quote, "It will demand wisdom and largeness of heart in the men who shall furnish the means for conducting the work of Missions," We have said that the golden opportunity for our work here has passed; but, understand, we yet have need to be here. In spite of this protracted minority we have done a good work. The reports from the Helena district at the last annual Conference showed our possibilities in Montana. We would not be ashamed to have them read before the General Conference by our delegate next spring.

The history of the Denver Conjerence during the past seven years, shows what a liberal support will do. Bishop Hendrix has had his heart with that work. He has even gone out to hold District Conferences. He has written strong articles,has pushed the work in co-operation with strong men in the field. Give Montana such a chance. We must have vigorous help, and it must come soon. Strong men, with strong support, or none at all.

One of the leading editors in the M. E. Church, South, expresses the sentiment of many many who do not write, that it is a great mistake for the big city churches of Virginia, Tennessee and elsswhere to lose an able Doctor of Divinity for the Pacific slope. Dr. Hannon is sorely needed in Virginia, Dr. Bolling in Missouri, and such like. If we ever do anything worthy our great Church in the west you will have to lose many more good men that you "can't spare." We "scrubs" will have to give place to better and abler men. The Church is fearfully slow to learn that what we say about the matter is true. Don't wait till it is too late. Hold us no longer in our minority.

Bishop Newman at the Chicago preachers' meeting last Monday morning gave an interesting, pathetic, but, on the whole, inspiring address on the condition of our work in the South as he saw it. In spite of the existing race prejudice which, he said, exceeded anything we read in print, the outlook was encouraging. Our church had a mission there, and if at any time he had had a thought of organic union the state of affairs at present existing quite discouraged it. He, however, thought the race problem there even less threatening than the problem of Europe in America in the North. The settlement of the race question he considered largely in the hands of our church, and our ministers were doing magnificent work under immense disadvantages.—North-Western Ch. Advocate.

We agree with Bishop Newman that the race problem in the South between the negroes and whites is less threatening than the "problem of Europe in America in the North." Any intelligent reader knows that by the signs of the times, but when he says the settlement of the race question (meaning as we take it, North and South) is largely in the hands of the M. E. Church, we insist that self-esteem runs rather too high. If the negroes had their way about the matter to-day they would have themselves in a separate church organization from the M. E. Church, just as they have been set off by the M. E. Church South. It will be done as soon as the negroes can effect it. And we believe the sooner the better. This will be one good step toward settling the matter. Let the good Bishop urge it.

This morning's mail (Monday September 23) brings us "Can It Be False," by John F. House, one of our Tennessee laymen, and the "Annotated Hymns," prepared by Dr. W. F. Tillett, of Vanderbilt University. These are complimentary from the House by our highly esteemed book agent, Dr. J. D. Barbee. The press comments on these two works make us impatient to read them. If the editor can steal a little time this week it will be spent with these sacred hymns and their authors, and with the the thoughts of the Hon. John F. House. Pleasure is in store for us.

Will the preachers of this country take "Civil Service Reform" for their theme on Thanksgiving Day or will they invite the people to consider the need of gratitude to God for his abundant mercies during the past twelve months?

Rev. E. J. Stanley has been on the verge of a serious sickness for some weeks. Barely keeps going. We hope he may soon be fully restored.

Personal and Otherwise.

We learn that Bishop Hargrove passed through Missoula, Mont., just thirty miles from the seat of our annual Conference on Friday, after the session closed on Monday. To say the least, it is certainly a pity that he could not have come on West just a few days earlier and held the Conference, as we had expected; but, alas!

In a private letter from Dr. J. B. Barbee, written at San Francisco, Sept. 12, he says: "I still design to write an article for the Montana Methodist." We are glad the Doctor retains his favorable impressions of Montana and is not afraid to put his opinion of our work on record. To show that Dr. Barbee is in hearty sympathy with us, he further says (and we beg pardon if we here transgress); "I wrote a strong, earnest appeal to a friend in private correspondence; an appeal for aid to be given Montana, and the West generally." We may give our delegate some instructions as to how to vote for Bishop for the West next May. We will study this matter over.

An invitation from Dr. James A. Orman, of Murfeesboro, Tenn., reads thus: "Dear Brother Couey: You, and all you count yours, are most cordially invited to attend the session of the Tennesee Conference, to convene here October 9, '89." We sincerely regret, dear Doctor, that we cannot be with you.

The Denver Conference will grow until it becomes "reproductive" in every sense. We are glad that the Church is awakening to this fact. The next session of the Denver Conference will show a growth of a hundred per cent. during the year.—[Rocky Mountain Methodist.

Rev. Wm. M. Britt has secured a parsonage at Deer Lodge and has set up shop for business in good style in his new charge. Some men have something to do and do it, and Brother Britt is of that class. May the Lord bless him and his dear wife in that field this year.

"The reports from our work everywhere were never more encouraging. The Lord is guiding His servants to work for the salvation of souls, not for their own praise. Oh! brethren, rejoice in the Lord. Humble yourselves before His name and cease not to strive until the victory is complete." The above was said by the Rocky Mountain Methodist about the work in the West, and especially of the Denver Conference. We will join you, Brother Henry, in saying, praise the Lord. Let the sympathies of our great strong Church go out for our outposts in the way of faithful prayer and larger giving, while we also forget not to do our best, and God will bring the results.

We see from the New Orleans Christian Advocate that Dr. Carter has read the Montana Methodist. We had scarcely believed it.

We see that our old friend and former pastor, Rev. J. L. Batten, of the St. Louis Conference, has been transferred to the Montana Conference and stationed at Helena. If the church at Helena is not a spirttual one it will become so. A more thoroughly consecrated, Godly preacher we have seldom known.—[N. B. Henry.

We gladly give place to contributions this week and wait for the next issue to present, as we think, some of the remedies for the difficulties incident to religious work in Montana, as promised.

Scientists now have more data upon which to work. It is supposed that there is some relation existing between the recent earthquakes of China, the South Seas, the terrible storms on the Atlantic Coast and the unusual disturbadce of the geysers in the Yellowstone Park of the Rocky Mountains.

An Explanation.

Rev. B. E. H. Warren sent a contribution to the St. Louis Advocate, published June 26th, upon which this editor made some comments in the Montana Methodist of July 10th. There were two points in our editorial in which we expressed a very different opinion from Brother Warren—the one concerning reflection upon the administration of our Bishops and Presiding Elders of Montana in maning the Montana Conference; the other was that of using the expression, "Hired man who careth not for the sheep." Brother Wrrren, unfortunately, misconstrued our meaning, thinking that we intended the whole matter as a thrust at him. We have seen Brother Warren since. The matter was mentioned, and we thought satisfactorily explained. But a private letter from him says he must explain the matter through the columns of the paper before he shall feel free to write for it. We are satisfied that the readers of the paper have not thought of the matter as Brother Warren, and will doubtless be surprised to learn that this note is required.

But we are always willing to do what is right for harmony among the brethren, and therefore say to all our readers that we have in nothing intended a reflection upon our brother as a man and minister, who, we all know, has been true in all his work in Montana. Our differences consisted in matters of opinion.

The "Race War."

In Dr. Fitzgerald's Spectator of September 19, we find some timely statements which we wish our sensationalists of a colder climate to read relative to the "race war" in the South:

There are no more peaceable and peace-loving people than the negroes. Many of them are sincere Christians. There are no nobler people than the Southern whites. In the Southern States there are more Church members and more sincere Christians in proportion to population than in other sections of the Union—we might say than in any other section of the world, for the United States is the most decidedly Christian nation on the earth. Between the Southern whites and the Southern negroes more affectionate relations subsist than between any peoples similarly related in the world. The anti-Semitic spirit of Continental Europe nor the anti-Chinese spirit of the West find no parallel anti-African spirit in the South. The effort to make it appear that here and there "race wars" are imminent, is a slander on these people, white and black.

But this is true: Whatever small chance exists anywhere in the South for "a race war" is multiplied a thousand-fold by such sensationalism. There is much illiteracy in the South among both whites and blacks. The accounts of the newspapers reach these illiterate masses through the small reading-class among the negroes. In the repetition the events narrated are exaggerated, for one of the motives which prompt the sensational reports of the papers prompts the more sensational reports of the half-educated negroes who report the "race war" stories to their fellows—viz., the desire to tell as big and horrible a tale as possible. By this double process of sensationalism the most inflammable conditions may be created in the course of a few years, which will need but a spark to become ignited.

The "elixir of life" for Christians is best prescribed by the physician who has his headquarters in heaven, and is above mistake in his apothecaries.

Notes From Brother Stanley.

A letter lately received from Brother Stateler, after giving some appointments and stating his willingness to help in some quarterly meetings, says: "My health is only tolerably good. Hope I may be able to do a little more for my blessed Master before I depart.

I am sorry to say that the late freeze that recently visited the eastern part of Montana was almost if not quite as severe in Bitter Root valley as elsewhere. It seemed to be a tidal wave that swept over the country, leaving blight and death in its track. The grain was mostly out of the way, but the fruit and tender vegetables, such as tomatoes and melons, suffered severely. It was several weeks earlier than frosts usually occur in this valley.

The thick smoke continues to hang like a pall over our valley. It has greatly hindred the maturity of late crops, thus exposing them to the early frosts, besides the general feeling of depression that it causes in the minds of the peohle. When shall our eyes behold the lovely mountains again? It is as if we had been visiting in another country for several months. Altogether, this has been the most remarkable season that I remember to have witnessed during a lifetime past.

***

Types are naughty things sometimes. Now and then they defy the efforts of correspondents, editors, proof-readers and even "devils," to keep them in subjection, and make us say things we never dreamed of—sometimes funny, sometimes otherwise. In the last issue they cut a few capers, such as making us say "ccming" for "economy," "no report" for "little to report," "the health" for "ill health," etc. But we have lived too long to let such things rob us of much rest. To err is human. Let us consider one another (especially the editor) and "provoke," by writing more plainly, more frequently, and writing shorter, crisper articles,"unto love and good works"

At our last Conference Dr. Barbee made a telling speech, in which he advocated the importance of maintaining the MONTANA METHODIST, and closed by saying that he would give ten dollars to send it to ten persons who would like to have it but were unable to pay for it. Who will follow his example? There are many who are able to do this, and they could thereby do much good. They would help to sustain the paper in its noble mission, and also carry instruction and comfort to many precious souls. We want at least one hundred dollars, and one hundred names added to our subscription list under this head. If you cannot send ten, send five, or two, or one, just as you are able. But send us something, and send it now, before you forget it.

I was much gratified recently at hearing a brother minister, of another denomination, whose opinion is worth something, volunteer the statement that the METHODIST is the best paper of its class published in the territory; also that this was the opinion of other ministers that had spoken to him on the subject. This is not mentioned in any spirit of vain pride. Not at all. But to encourage our friends to work for the paper and try to make it still better. Send in reports of your Sunday schools and other work, but above all, canvass for subscribers. I fear that none of us are doing our duty here. We need not be ashamed to canvass for our paper. It will bear inspection. Circulate the METHODIST and it will greatly help in our work.

Law-Making.

Some politicians are trying to get away from the obligations of religion by an effort to divorce moral and political phases of certain questions. Eliminate the idea and authority of God from the constitution and laws of the United States and the foundation of all our jurisprudence goes. Certain great moral convictions exist in the minds of the people. Politics are for the formation and execution of laws for the temporal well-being of society; but any law that antagonizes the divine law on which rests our civilization is not for the good of society. The Constitutional Convention adjourned for Sunday, thereby recognizing it as a physical, if not a spiritual blessing, but they are unwilling to legislate strictly upon the Sabbath to allow the two millions of our people who work on the Lord's day to rest and have the privileges of religious worship. By unwholesome divorce laws well-nigh all the sacredness of matrimony is done away. This is largely a moral question. Why not formulate laws in accordance with the divine law on this subject?

Divorce is a greater curse to us than Mormonism. It has been well said: "Some people marry to be divorced, and some are divorced to be married." In some states as many as ten and twelve reasons, or grounds, for divorce are allowable. After awhile a man will want a divorce if his wife cooks his beefsteak too rare or overdone. John Smith and Jim Jones exchange wives after a year of strange courtship, and yet nothing very strange is thought of it. When the heavenly institution of matrimony is undermined, the corner-stone of pure society is removed. What sort of a question is that of open saloons? If it is a moral question, why not give the Churches an opportunity to settle it? If it is a political issue, why do not the politicians settle it for the good of society? The legislation on this subject is strangely in favor of the whisky oliyarchy altogether. There is no question as to the best methods of suppressing every species of crime, but this hydra-headed monster of iniquity, the producing cause of three-fourths of the crimes, pauperism and insanity of the country, goes untouched. "The wicked rule; the people mourn."

J. H. JOHNSON.

Montana Constitution.

We promised our readers last issue some extracts from the lately framed conntitution for our State. We give a few from Art. III., which we hope will be of interest to subscribers out of the Territory.

The District Stewards will meet at the M. E. Church, South, in Helena, on Wednesday, October 2nd, at 2 o'clock, p. m. A full representation, either in person or by correspondence, is desired.

E. J. STANLEY.

While true Christian men and women are giving the pure gospel to the negroes of the South, their are religious cranks and priest-craft plunderers taking advantage of their ignorance and superstition with their wild vagaries. We are warned about false teachers.

We are glad to see this note in the Pacific Methodist: "Six young men go to the annual Conference this year as applicants for admission on trial who have been students in Pacific Methodist College." This has the "self-propagating" ring.

In Professor D. Atkins' report of the Columbia Conference of the M. E. Church South, which convened in Dallas, Oregon, August 28, he says: "The reports show marvelous progress during the past year. There was scarcely a charge that did not show increase and progress on all lines. Our work is in better condition than ever before and the outlook is most encouraging."

The Columbia Conference in the recent session at Dallas, Oregon, recommends as follows: We recommend and earnestly request the General Conference next to convene to appropriate a sum of money sufficient to establish a Church paper at some point in California that will be the equal of any in our connection; provided, all the Conferences west of the Rocky Mountains unite in such a project and pledge an earnest and united support; and we further recommend that the General Conference provide a sufficient editorial force.

In Guthrie, Oklahoma, already there are five banks, four hotels, and the M. E. Church South, M. E. Church, Presbyterian and Congregationalist Churches are holding regular Sabbath services. Calls are being made for volunteer preachers of the M. E. Church South to go into the Territory of Oklahoma at large. We hope to learn of that field's prompt occupancy by good strong men.

"A self-regarding man standing in the pulpit at the hour of morning worship is but a reed shaken by the wind. The foundations of failure are laid before the sermon is begun."

Congregational.

The table of Congregational statistics, just mhde up, gives the following items: Number of cnurches, 4,569; gain, 165; number of members, 475,608; added on confession, 25,994; increase, 18,024; baptisms, adult, 8,328; baptisms, infant, 12,039; Sunday-school members, 580,672; benevolent contribution of the churches, $2,205,563; for foreign missions, $340,426; for education, $140,533; for church building, $113,072; for home missions, $446,975; for A. M. A., $157,666; for Sunday-schools, $52,479; for new West, $45,817; for ministerial aid, $112,705; for other objects, $795,890; charitable legacies paid, $562,128; home expenditures $4,978,889.

THE MONTANA METHODIST.

REV. A. C. COUEY, Editor. Helena, Montana, November 14, 1889. VOL. 2, NO. 7. SUBSCRIPTION, $1 00 PER YEAR.

NOTES.

Sister Stanley, Conference Secretary of the Women's Department of Church Extension, has sent us a good roll of literature on the subject of parsonages with the gentle reminder to read and go to work on the important matter of thorough organization. This Conference must have a district parsonage, centrally located for effectual work. Can't we begin to do something about it this fall? What think you, Brother Presiding Elder? We know you will agree to live in it.

Our Presiding Elder of the Helena district says in a private letter: "I will pledge myself to try very hard to secure one hundred and fifty new subscribers to the MONTANA METHODIST—and I think I can do it, during the year, if the other preachers will each try their best to get twenty-five." As many as will respond to this laudable challenge arise and speak, then go to work. We believe Brother Stanley is in earnest and we wish all the preachers to become so. He expresses his faith thus: "We can do it; we ought to do it; we must do it."

Dr. M'Anally. senior editor of the the St. Louis Advocate, is big enough to say there are some things he does not know. An inquiring sister asks him what became of the Tabernacle. In answer he says: "Indeed, madam, I cannot tell, never inquired, nor do I remember to have ever heard, or thought of the question before. Very likely some one of Titus' army could have told, If not, some of the Babylonians or others that once sacked the city of Jerusalem might have known something about it, but that was before our time and if they left any record of the matter, we have not seen it. If any of our readers can answer the question the way is open.

A card on our table bearing:—John J. Richards, Corresponding Editor, American Banker and Financial Examiner, New York, reminds us to suggest, as we have occasion often to do, what members of the Church should do in travelling in the west, or as to that matter, anywhere. Mr. Richards, and his wife, came to Butte in their business capacity. When Sabbath came, they inquired for the church of their choice, and during their stay became regular attendants upon the public services. The pastor met these strangers at the close of the first Sabbath serviees that they were present, and had the pleasure of seeing them every Sabbath while they remained in the ciiy, though they were not members of any church. The pastor and one of his members called on the strangers at the hotel where they stopped and learned, by inquiry that their parents were members of our church down in Kentucky, and they were accustomed to go to church when at home. Surely members of the church should do as well.

Dr. W. C. Black compiled and published in the Christian Advocate of Oct 24, a good article on "The Modern Deaconess Movement." He refers to Miss Bancroft's work entitled "Deaconnesses in Europe and Their Lessons for America" as being very instructive on the subject. We give one extract from Miss Bancroft: "They undertake every kind of labor that can give them access to the hearts and homes of the people. They visit from house to house among the sick and poor, hold mothers' meetings, teach night schools, hold Bible classes separately for men, women and children, hold special classes for workingwomen and girls who are kept busily employed during the day and during the winter months have a weekly average of over nine thousand attendants on their services. They are solving the problem of how to reach the masses by resolving the masses into individuals, and then influencing these individuals by the power of personal effort and love."

In the "Old Richmond" we see the following from a bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which seems like a Methodist Bishop's talk: "Our great need is what the Methodists call a revival of true and undefiled religion. Our church needs a John the Baptist. I am not ashamed to say it—I would to God this church had life enough to produce even another John Wesley. We have something better to do my brethren than tinkering canons and patching the prayer-book. Our old men should dream dreams—not of corners, trusts, villas on the Hudson, palaces, falsely called cottages by the sea, and steam yachts on the Sound. They should be dreaming how the world may be reclaimed for the Redeemer—of how it is that after eighteen centuries of the Gospel over two-thirds of the human family have not effectively heard of Him. Our young men should be dreaming, not how they should accumulate wealth, but of a world-converted to God and made a fit habitation for the Son of God. Our ministers should not be crying for soft places in Eastern communities, but for a chance to go to the frontier in the Master's work. Further, ministers, those who call themselves the ministers of him who said of himself, 'The foxes have holes, the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head,' should stand in their places and tell the people that they cannot be be without blame if, loaded down with blessings that are the direct result of a Christian civilization, they shut up their purses to the calls of the Gospel. This Christian nation is laying on the altar the paltry sum of $5,000,000 a year only, while spending $1,500,000,000 on tobacco and intoxicating drinks. The world wants to know that Christianity is not an impossible code of morals, but that it is the great truth of the fatherhood of God and man's filial relation to Him to be taught to follow Christ, to imitate Him, to give Him the loyalty of their hearts."

From Bro. H. B. Cockrill.

We have just closed a protracted meeting of good interest, at Ashley. It is a place where the people have not been going to church much, but, before the meeting closed a good congregation gathered at each service. Several came forward to the alter but not one, I am sorry to say, was converted, though the professed Christians were strengthened and encouraged to renew their vows of loyalty to God. We organized with four: Two by profession, two by letter and others propose to join us shortly. Baptized one infant.

I find it difficult to get the people to come to that point of trust where they can realize a bright conversion. I think this si a difficulty with all the brethren in Montana. Why is this? It is not the fault of God, that is certain, for he is as willing to gloriously convert Montanaians as any people under heaven. God is no respector of persons. Does the fault lie wholly with people? We would say, not altogether. Here's a man or woman who comes forward for prayers and showes every evidence of penitence and sincere desire to find the joy and peace of pardon, but finds it not. Now, is it wholly that person's fault that he does not fully come into the light which it is God's will they should enjoy? Now, what is the trouble?

1. It is a miserably low spiritual state in professing Christians and God will not give any one a commission brighter than that enjooed by the Church members who are working for his salvation. The stream cannot rise above its source.

2. It is the failure of the preacher to do his whole duty? I speak of myself here, as well as others. We too often become intimidated by the world, and get tainted with its unbelief and persuade ourselves almost insensibly that it is enough to get them into the Church. Lack of faithfulness at this point is ruinous. A minister's preaching may be all right,—that is he may urge a higher spiritual life in his members and the necessity of the regeneration of sinners and yet for fear of the world or fear to press the matter he fails ever to lead the people into the experience he knows they ought to have. I think we should be zealously careful at this point.

We have in Flat Head Valley as in other parts of Montana, the broken down church member, the dancing church member, the cursing church member, the church member who hasn't a spark of religious life in him. That is a poor church in my opinion, that is made up of such materirl. In any community a preacher may find a few presbyterians, a few baptists, a few episcopalians, a few methodists. I have doubted seriously the propriety of organizing a church of these fragments. So I have ceased to make any efforts to do so. If a Methodist preacher persuades the baptist, the presbyterian and the episcopalian to join his class he is sure of trouble sooner or later, If they are truly converted to the Methodist faith this is all right, but not otherwise. It is hard to learn an old horse new tricks. The episcopalians will want to dance, the presbyterians will refuse to come to the alter to pray in protracted meetings, the baptist will desert you the first opportunity, various other troubles are apt to arise.

Bro. Fisher, a presbyterian, was the first preacher in here. Bro. E. L. Lee was the next and myself the third. Other ministers have visited the valley. Bros. Fisher and Lee are still here, and are doing a good work. Both of them have good ranches, and are likely to remain in the valley and will help to form its social and moral sentiments, and to advance its true religious interests.

We begun another protracted meeting at Brocken School house Sunday night. We will report progress of same and results.

Here and There.

After spening several days in Helena helping to get out the last issue of the METHODIST, I left on Saturday morning en route to Whitehall. We had been expecting the arrival of Brother Price and family, in Helena, since Friday morning, and I had made two trips to the depot to meet him. At Boulder I boarded the northbound train, "spotted" my man at once, asked his name, told mine, and was acquainted with the new preacher and his family who were on their way to Helena, though I had no time for extended conversation, but gave them a cordial welcome to our mountain land. It was a pleasant episode. How many hearts rejoices to see recruits coming to join us in the battle against sin.

Only a few hours were spent at the flourishing town of Boulder. A few families visited when at about one o'clock I started in company with my old friend Fred, the driver, in the buckboard for Whitehall, twenty-five miles distant, across the mountains, where we arrived at six o'clock. A goodly company assembled for public worship next day at eleven o'clock. A drive of twelve miles up the Jefferson Valley, behind Oscar Davy's splendid team after dinner, brought me to Fish Creek at 3:30 p. m., whsre there was an appointment for preaching. This place has improved so much that I hardly knew it. Brother "Doc" Tuttle, who is a member of our church, has lately erected a fine large residence here, and the Good Templers have built and furnished a splendid hall, which is open for religious services and is certainly a great improvement upon the old log school house. The order seems to be flourishing here. It was a real pleasure to meet and greet so many old friends. The house was comfortably filled. After preaching, an old friend came up and said he wanted to be enrolled as a member of our church here, and several of the friends expressed their great desire to have a preacher right away. I hope to to be able to supply the work soon. The night was spent at Brother William Beall's. How vividly this visit brought to mind the labors and trials and triumphs of days gone by. I longed to stay and visit with old friends, but had to rush on. The new road that is being built from from the Canyon House in the Gallatine to Butte is progressing finely. The cars are running beyond the Hot Springs on Pipestone creek. A new depot is being built about two miles south of Witehall. It seems so strange to hear the scream of the locomotive and the rumble of the cars in this valley. The road is doing quite a business. One train-loan—sixteen cars—of stock, went out from the new station in one day. It is distressing to see how barren the range is, and how poor the prospect for wintering stock here.

I waited six hours at the station for a train, walked back to Whitchall after dark, and then waited until noon on Wednesday, before I could get a train going east. The scenery along the Jefferson canyon is rugged and grand beyond description. The train stopped at Sappington long enough for me to cross the river (I borrowed a horse and road over) and spent two or three hours resting with Brother Stateler, at his home, half a mile away. It was my first visit there since the departure of our dear sister to her home over that other river. How mingled the emotions that stirred my heart. It was a sweet, sad pleasure to see the dear venerable man, and mingle our tears and prayers and counsels together at the place made sacred by the association with one whose life was given to the church and who so recently has been called above. It strikes me that the name of the station here ought to be Stateler, as it is so near the home of this venerable man who has been here so long and has done so much for the material and moral development of this mountain country. There is a branch road being constructed from this point to Poney, a mining camp, twelve or fifteen miles distant which promises to be a lively place at no distant day. Thus, the portions of country, which, but a few years ago were considered almost out of the world are rapidly coming to be centers of wealth and influence.

I was fortunate in getting a train at the Canyon house bound for Bozeman where I arrived at 8 o'clock, p.m., taking brother and sister Warren completely by surprise. I remained in Bozeman until Friday, greatly enjoying my visit with Brothers Warren and Johnson and their families, and other friends whome it was my pleasure to meet. The prayer meeting at the church on Thursday night was well attended and an enjoyable occasion.

On Friday I boarded the train and went to Helena, where I found the new pastor rapidly adjusting himself to the work, and in favor with the people. Next day and Sunday following were spent with Brother Moore at Boulder, and on Monday was off for Butte, where a few hours were spent, after which I hastened on westward to Garrison and Drummond, then to Missoula, where these lines are hastily penned, while anxiously waiting the departure of the train for Corvallis, near which place a lives a lady and little daughter in whom I feel not a little interest. —E. J. S.

Bozeman Station.

Editor METHODIST: I am pleased to report progress in this charge. Our Sunday school now numbers sixty-three on the roll. The attendance at church has been quite good. The membership has been increased by five since I took charge, and there are more to follow. No city in Montana needs the Gospel more than Bozeman. I heard last year that there was danger of the churches crowding each other in Bozeman. That "Altar against Altar" was a wrong policy, etc. We have a voting population of over 1,000, and perhaps a population of 4,000. It is estimated that not over 300 people attend the Protestant churches every Sunday. Perhaps the six Protestant denominations here have less than 400 members all told. So, you see, as yet there is no need of the churches talking about crowding each other. Against our six churches we have on the other hand twenty-one saloons and several houses of shame, where the devil holds high carnival. It is said that many of these saloonkeepers are growing rich in their business, which shows that their patronge must be enormous for such a small population. The church here has a great work before it. To save the young from falling into the vices and traps set at almost every crossing is a stupendous task, and one that will require both wisdom and patience as well as grace. I feel that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has a work to do even in Bozeman. There is no special prejudice here against our church. What little there is comes from one source, and is the result of ignorance. People who know that the war is over are not afraid of the word "South" in our name. Since 1844 when the M. E. Church was divided into two separate general conferences we have been known by the name of the M. E. Church, South. The word "South" is simply monumental and distinguishes us from our twin-sister, the M. E. church. We are unlike both the Presbyterian and the Baptist churches who split up after the war and were divided by politics. We divided in 1844, long before there was any North and south politically. As the conferences in the Southern states all voted to divide the M. E. church, we naturally took the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Our non-political position, knowing no North, no South, and no party has made us popular not only in the South but in the East and West. And gradually we are pushing our lines North, till today we number nearly a million and a quarter of members. God has called us to occupy this Northwestern field and we are here to stay and help take this land for Christ. I rejoice that so many denominations are working in this field and still there is room. But this letter is long enough—more anon. B. E. H. WARREN.

Helena Station.

Upon our arrival in Helena, Saturday, Oct. 26th., our reception was so cordial and purely Christianlike that we at once felt at home, and the next day (Sunday) assumed the responsibilities of our new field of labor by preaching twice and conducting the Sunday School. To the brethren of the Montona Conference who have tendered their greetings and assured us of their hearty sympathy and full cooperation in the work of Christ in the West we would simply respond: In Christs' name we came, and for His glory and the salvation of those for whom He died, will lay out our whole life. Every indication now augurs well for the future in this charge.

D. B. PRICE.

Elkhorn.

To the Editor of the Montana Methodist: As you do not get much news from this part of the work. No doubt the readers of the METHODIST would like to hear from us occassionally. Bro. John Moore is well received with this people, and is doing faithful work for the Master. We sometimes find the school house inadequate to accommodate the people, who come to listen to the word of God preached. We hope the time is not far distant when this place will have a building set apart for the worship of God. We have in this as in other places many noble people, who are willing to sustain the work and make the Pastor feel that he is well provided for. Several of the ladies have been working faitefully for the pastor. At the quarterly meeting just held at Boulder, Elkhorn takes the lead in the circuit, would that the sisters of our cnurches were put in as stewards instead of so many slow, easy-going brethren, things would move differently in Montana conference, and we could then keep our preachers here in Montana instead of having them transferred to other conferences.

JOHN ANDREWS.

Sister Parnall at the Convention.

To the Editor of the Montana Methodist:

I don't know if you care to publish any letters written by the sisters of the Church, but I am going to test your amiability in that direction.

I attended the Annual Territorial Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Montana, held at Missoula, on October 23rd. and 24., and I thought others might be interested in hearing something of our meeting.

Between 20 and 25 delegates were present representing Unions from all parts of the Territory.

Mrs. Howey of Helena, by virtue of her offiee, presided over the convention in a most able manner. Her sweet and loving spirit endeared her to us and her business qualifications were admirable; the convention showed its appreciation of her by re-electing her to the presidency for the ensuing year, and the local unions by subscribing for a presentation copy of Miss Willard's "Glimpses of Fifty Years."

Several interesting papers were read, showing the marked ability of the writers and their zeal, consideration and love for the work of the "W. C. T. U."

The annual address by our President might well be termed a masterly effort, clear, concise, comprehensive and impressive.

The annual sermon was delivered on the Wednesday evening by Mrs. H. H. Barnes, of Castle, to a large congregation.

One of the chief attractions of the convention was the sweet singing of Mr. and Mrs. Bailey, of Minneapolis, who had recently been through the two Dakotas on a singing and lecturing tour, in the interest of the prohibition campaign. Mrs. Bailey gave us a stirring lecture on Thursday evening to a crowded house and great enthusiasm was manifested. Miss Julia Darrow, of Butte delighted us the same evening with a lecture on "The Mountain Land."

This is the first W. C. T. U. convention I have attended since coming to Montana and I assure you Mr. Editor I was not a little pleased and gratified at the ability displayed, and the consecrated spirit shown by the noble band of Christian Temperance workers, with which it is my privilege thus to associate.

My chief aim in writing this is if possible is to incite others to to unite with us in our peaceful warfare against intemperance and kindred vices, and I pray that the dear Lord may open the hearts of many of His people to work in this way "For God and Home and Native Land."

Circlerville, Kansas.

Mr. Editor: As I do not see anything in your paper from our Sunflower State, it may be a few lines will be of some interest. Our conference is over and the preachers, so far as I have heard, are all on their work and trying to do their part in the fear of God, giving to saint and sinner their portion in due season. We are making some advance in building churches. The brethren and friends have just completed a nice little frame church, 28x45, on the Holton circuit, four miles south-east of the town of Holton, our county seat. Rev. J. W. Payne, our presiding elder, who seems to be the right man in the right place, preached the dedication sermon to a large congregation that came on the beauiful Sunday morning, and at the close of the sermon he asked for a collection of $300. In a short time $340 were promised. I heard one of our ex-lieutenant governors say the people of Kansas always put through eyery thing they undertake. We were building a large seminary in our town—Circleville, and, after having the house plastered, were hard pressed for money to pay for it. The Building committee concluded to have a festival, and sent for the ex-governor to come over and make a speech, who, by the way, was a very fine preacher. He said the first thing he saw after getting in the town, was a boy and a box. He asked the boy what he had in the box. He said a badger. "What do you do do with him?" Said the boy: "I let him fight the dogs for a dollar a fight and give the money to the seminary."

The governor said while he was pegging away at one end of the house, making his speech, the dog and the badger were pegging away at the other end. Every means was brought to bear to accomplish their end, from a badger to a lieutenant governor. I do not approve of festivals so much as a great many. The first one I ever attended was at Victor, Montana, and if all church festivals were conducted as well as that one, I could not have any very great abjection to them. Rev. W. H. Comer is in charge of our circuit, truly a noble son of a noble sire. I knew his grandfather, Daniel Branstuter, before Bro. Comer was born. Father Branstuter was one of the most popular men in Ray county, Missouri. He filled the office of county judge for ten years in succession, and then served one or two terms in the legislature. We have great reasons to be thankful to the good Lord for our large crops, Wheat, oats, flax, corn, potatoes, clover and grass crops of all kinds were never better. We seem to be very well supplied with everything but religion and money; these two things are very much needed just now, but we pray, trust and hope for a better day to come.

Editorial Notes.

The congregations are still growing in the East Helena station, says the pastor.

Hon. Joseph K. Toole took the oath of office, as Governor of the State of Montana, at 1:30 p. m. November 8, 1889.

Let all people hereafter know that Montana is no longer a territory, but state number forty-one. Don't address your letters Montana Territory any more, we suffer it not.

Butte Station agrees to pay about twice the salary to the preacher this year that was paid by the whole Montana Conference about six years ago, to six preachers. Judging by the past, her promise is as good as the gold, too.

There are twenty-six divorce cases to come up before the district court now in session in Butte, Montana. It is perfectly shocking to think of. Where is the remedy?

So much respect (?) is paid the dead, in our cities of Montana. that we see in the columns of one of the Butte dailies an invitation to attend the funeral services of a horse, which, it is stated, passed peacefully away at 2 p. m., Nov. 7th. Some people yet live who, "glory in their shame."

The writ of mandamus to count the vote of precinct thirty-four in Silver Bow county, in the State of Montana, was the most celebrated case for technical dodges we have known about. The first state election will never be forgotten, and possibly will go down in history as "the Tunnel Election," or the mandamus election of Montana.

We would say to the Mining Journal, of Butte, that Dr. I. G. John, secretary of missions, is calling for men who are not of the "returning" class.

One of the Montana papers says: There are now 181 prisoners confined at the Deer Lodge penitentiary and the capacity is only 140. There must be less crime or more room.

All the papers, as well as the presiding bishop have now had their say about Dr. S. A. Steel's transfer to the Tennessee conferences. Does it give a man good or bad reputation to be transferred? We may be too late, nevertheless we would move that Dr. Steel be given a rest by ye brethren of the tripod.

Quite a number will receive copies of the MONTANA METHODIST who never did before. Our hope is that they may be so well pleased with the paper and become so much interested in the work in the West, that they will send us at once the subscription price of the paper, one dollar, and thus encourage us and contribute to a most worthy cause. Address MONTANA METHODIST, Helena, Mont.

We have just received a pleasant note from brother J. E. Squires, of Walsenburg, Colorado, which breathe the spirit of warm fraternity and victory down among our laborers of the Denver conference. We regret not hauing space this week to give more extensive notes from his private letter. Let us hear from you again, dear brother.

The two Methodisms of the United States had to go to a far away mission field to get grace enough to even approach union. This is evidence that there is more Godly zeal in our missionaries than in many of our vain-glorious Methodists at home. The more love we have in our hearts the less likely we are to prejudice and division. Let us seek a deeper work of grace.

Dr. W. G. Star, in closing out his fourth year's pastorate at Main Street Church, Danville, Va., says: During the four years of my ministry here I have witnessed the conversion of seventeen hundred and sixty souls. This year our contributions for missions will reach nearly $1,400. The new pastor will find fifty of our brethren ready and competent to lead in public prayer.

In a private note from the Presiding Elder, he says:

"The work is looking up, prospects good at Bozeman and Elkhorn. Moore is just swimming there. Cockrill is pressing the battle in Flathead valley—a new class has been formed with others to join, and another meeting on hand. This is written on my knee amid a cloud of tobacco smoke with drinking and card playing going on all around."

These are questionable surroundings, Brother Stanley, but we can understand how a man may be in the world and yet not of the world.—[Ed.]

We thank you, Sister Parnall, for your racy communication, and hereby pledge ourself to the greatest "amiability" possible, the whole time between now and Annual Conference. You can't please us better than to help make the METHODIST a lively, readable sheet. Write again, dear sister, The colums are open for all the preachers' wives and other sisters. We have begged Mrs. Couey to write, but she has her own way abous it.

When and where shall we have the District Conference? Last year there were two places selected, one each by the Bozeman and Helena districts. Now that they are thrown into one, which place will we combine on and how? Our Presiding Elder has the right to say when, but of course he will wish to suit the pastoral charges. We would suggest the propriety of holding the District Conference earlier than heretofore; say, before Christmas, during the second round of the Elder. Some one speak, or keep silent, just as he deems fit.

Dr. J. E. Godby, commenting on Rev. B. Hawley's article in the Review entitled "The Body Sown—The Body Raised," says, he tells us of an "invisible ground form" which is the special vehicle of the Spirit; and which is not identical with the physical body. Our idea of this invisible groundwork is thin as diluted moonshine. We have heard of this kind of moonshine afore, doctor, but we would like to know just how you perform this feat of diluting moonshine, as you seem to be both a chemist and a physicist.

Our New Transfer.

A private letter from Rev. Joseph King, presiding elder of the Nevada district, Southwest Missouri conference, to Bro. Stanley, contains the following: "Bishop Granbery has transferred to you and stationed at Helena, Rev. D. B. Price. Bro. Price was with me two years, stationed at Pierce City, and last year at Clinton, one of our most import- and stations. His transfer was not of his choosing. Episcopal hands were laid upon him and he consented to go, if sent. He is perfectly safe. You can depend on him fully. His wife is a daughter of Dr. Paine, of the Arkansas conference, and a very excellent lady. He is of the Simon pure type. I want you to take hold of him with both hands, get your people to give him a cordial welcome, and you will get value received."

Bishop Granbery writes: "Bro. Price goes to stay, if the health of his family will permit."

Temperance.

GOOD TEMPLARS.

The following are the officers for the present quarter for the I. O. G. T., Butte lodge, No. 14, installed by Wm. Grabe, November 2, 1889:

P. C. T.—F. R. Black.
C. T.—J. A. Longstaff.
V. T.—Livonia Conner.
S,—J. E. Astel.
F. S.—C. A. Schwanz.
Treas.—Laura Ferrell.
C.—E. D. Elderican.
M.—W. R. Tonkin.
I. G.—J. S.Gilston.
O. G.—Wm. Grabe.

This lodge is now beginning work quite earnestly. Under its auspices there is a juvenile work, with Mrs. J. S. Gilston as superintendant.

Saturday evening, November 16, the lodge will have Col. J. J. Hickman, of Kentucky, to deliver a lecture in the Miners' Union hall, of Butte City.

The W. C. T. U., of Butte, Montana, is now doing better work than it has for several years, perhaps better than ever during its history.

The temperance cause throughout Montana is doing good work, and we are certainly glad to know that there are many intelligent, active men and women enlisted in the movement so necessary in the education of public sentiment to bruise the serpent's head.

Methodist Church of Japan.

The plan of Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Japan, has these points: The name is to be "The Methodist Church of Japan." The Bishop is to be called Sotoku, the Presiding Elder Choroshi, the pastor Bokushi. The two orders in the ministry are Charo (Elder) and Shitouji (Deacon). Five years is the maximum limit of the pastorate. The General Conference elects the Sotoku by ballot in open session, the term of office to be twelve years without re-election.

Below we give you a note of an exemplary subscriber from Bishop Galloway's country: Please find inclosed, post office, money order, for $2.00, one dollar, is for the renewal of the MONTANA METHODIST, and the other one is for a new subscriber, for the same paper. Direct the new one to W. W, Carter, Greenwood, Miss., and oblige, yours truly, S. T. East, Greenwood, Miss.

Notice!

Now that we have a pastor at Helena we hope our friends in their correspondence will comply with the directions on page 4. All business communications please address MONTANA METHODIST, Helena, Montana. While all communications for publication in our columns will be addressed to A. C. Couey, at Butte, Montana. By observing this you will save delays in the publication of articles contributed and the expense of double remittances. Be sure to observe this request.

Two Become One.

In the city of Anaconda, Mont., Oct. 23, '89, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. A. Schilling, the editor had the pleasure of uniting in marriage, Mr. Handly W. Hatfield and Miss Sadie Luttin, in the presence of a select number of their friends. After happy congratulations we were conducted into the dining room, where an elaborate supper was greatly enjoyed by all the guests. As an evidence of great popularity among their young friends there was a large number of very handsome and expensive bridal presents that literally filled a table in one corner of the parlor. The joyous couple begun housekeeping in their own new home on Birch and Seveoth Streets Nov. 1.

Uncharitable Judgment.

The natural man is usually blind to his own faults, and if perchance he is forced to see them he never fails to have some justifying excuse; and as a rule the more charitable one is toward his own shortcomings the less charitable he is toward those of others. This unkind disposition is most manifest among the vicious element of society, but it is not confined there. Indeed, few are entirely free from it, and the best of us need to guard against it.

Examine yourself on this point. You seldom or never do an intentional injustice or an injury to another, yet do you not often suspect others of doing so to you? You seldom or never stay away from a church service without what seems to you a justifiable reason, yet when you find others absent whom you expected to have seen present, have you not thought they had no excuse for being away? You give about as much to charity and to the support of the gospel as you think you ought, yet do you not think all your neighbors ought to give a little more? You visit the sick and help the afflicted just as much as you think you ought considering your circumstances, yet do you not think most of your neighbors ought to do a little more in this line than they do? You think you give just about the right amount of care and attention to dress and to society, but do you not think most of your friends err in going to one extreme or the other in these matters.

We should not condone the palpable faults of others, nor look upon sin as a light thing in them any more than in ourselves. At the same time a thorough knowledge of our own hearts and the possession of that charity which "thinketh no evil" will make us most rigid in the judgment of our ourselves. "Let each esteem others better than themselves."

W. M. BRITT.

A Note From Rev. J. B. Parnall.

Grantsdale, Mont., Nov. 1.

Dear Bro. Couey: I have been holding a protracted meeting here, going on over two weeks. There have been one or two conversions for which we feel grateful. Two have joined the church by letter, one by profession. It is a hard battle, but we still push it, feeling encouraged and hopeful of still greater success. Pray for us. Yours fraternally, J. B. PARNALL.

Dr. Z. T. Bennett's articles and selections of historical documents make such thorough answer to Dr. Ford's pamphlet concerning the two Methodist churches that we are quite sure Dr. Ford will gladly hide his face in the presence of the intelligent public. How men can preach the gospel and wilfully misrepresent history is to us one of the marvels of the day. What can be the object? Even if a man gain the whole world to his church can he afford to lose his soul in the feat?

Along the Line.

The outlook for the work throughout the district is quite encouraging. The report of the preachers in charge at the quarterly conference at Bozeman showed our increasing congregations, a flourishing Sunday school, and in visiting among the people we found that they are greatly pleased with their pastor and are rallying to his assistance. Bro. Warren is quite sanguine and will lead them to victory.

Brother Johnson has taken in hand the task of putting in better shape and carrying forward the work on the church at Belgrade. The completion of this house and its relief from embarassments will surely be a work of which no one need be ashamed. He is moving cautiously, which augurs success. The lack of conveyance has prevented extended pastoral work; but he expects to extend his work at an early day. The people of the valley are surely fortunate in securing the pulpit ministrations of such a man, and I trust that throughout the valley they will rally to the financial and moral support of Brother Johnson.

Rev. D. B. Price has entered upon his duties as pastor in Helena. The congregations are good. The people have given him a cordial welcome and are encouraged. The preacher takes hold of the work in earnest, and I trust that great success will attend his labors.

Brother Moore seems to be wonderfully pleased with his new charge at Boulder and Elkhorn, and the people are well pleased with him. This charge makes the best financial report thus far of any I have visited since conference. The quarterly conference appointed a committee to secure lots preparatory to the erection of a church at Elkhorn.

Brother E. W. Sanford is just on the eve of leaving with his family for Southern California, where he expects to re-enter the itinerant work. May great success attend him.

Brother Currin, on account of home duties—arranging his affairs proparatory to joining the annual conference next fall—finds it impossible to supply the Whitehall charge this year, which I much regret, as the people there greatly desired him to preach for them this year. But he will render efficient assistance to the preacher where he is.

Rev. R. S. Clark is throwing himself heart and soul into his work on the Alhambra and Townsend charge, and reports favorably. He has commenced the work of finishing up the church at Townsend, and is meeting with much encouragement among the people. Faith and courage and persevering effort accomplish wonders in all the lines of church work. Building and completing churches and parsonages are things that cannot well be done by proxy nor by periodic and spasmodic efforts A man has just got to take hold and never let go until until the work is completed.

Good reports come in from Anaconda to the effect that our cause is growing in strength and influence under the ministry of Brother Barbee.

The work is flourishing in the Butte and Deer Lodge station.

Brother Parnall is having a good revival and reports conversions at Grantsdale, while from Flathead comes the good news that Brother Cockrill has held a meeting, organized a new society at Ashley and is now pressing the battle at another point and urg- the presiding elder to come to his aid. He states that Brother E. L. Lee, our local preacher, is doing good work. Praise the Lord. Let us thank God and take courage. E. J. STANLEY.

What We Now Need.

We give our readers an extract from Dr. Boland's "Problems of Methodism" on the section entitled "Christians for the Time." It is good, beautiful, readable—very readable, and we hope will make you more prayerful: "We, need just now, in a peculiar sense, Christians for the times. In the providence of God the present generation is surrounded by extraordinary events and opportunities. During the last thirty years the civilized world has been in commotion. Sages and philosophers, scientists and theologians have gazed in consternation at a series of events so wonderful in their nature and so rapid in their succession as to appear in retrospect more like the illusions of fancy than scenes of real life. Owing to these upheavals society is thrown up from its lowest depths; old lines of demarkation are gone; the obscure have come to the front; the masses are wandering in the chaotic fields of doubt and uncertainty. Thus, thousands are drifting on these troubled waters, or diving into a darker sea at every plunge, and are anxiously looking for some beacon to guide them into a peaceful harbor. We need, therefore, Christians of deep principles to sustain them amid the rage of the terrible storm; of burning zeal to stand along the beach of time as the light of the world peering above the wreck that sweeps around, and throwing the light of the cross far out upon the surging billows to guide the storm-wrecked mariners to the desired harbor. We need Christians who will ride upon the crest-wave of progress, rise upon the flood-tide of improvement and keep pace with the adventurous spirit of the age, to mould and direct for the advancement of the kingdom of Christ. We need Christians of deep experience and stern metal, who will ring out clear and strong upon the world to call it to a pause in its mad career; men of pure hearts and powerful faith, who can stand like the storm-swept rock, the same amid combined shock of wind and waves; of moral power to command our resources and direct our energies arresting the proud manarchs of crime, the devotees of fashion, and the worshippers of mammon, and secure their allegiance to the King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

A Lady's Nine Reasons for not Dancing.

1. Dancing would lead me into crowded rooms and late hours, which are injurious to health and usefulness.

2. Dancing would lead me into very close contact with pernicious company; and evil communications corrupt good manners.

3. Dancing would require me to use and permit freedom with the other sex, of which I should be heartily ashamed, and which I believe to be wrong.

4. My parents and friends would be anxious about me if I were out late, keeping company with they knew not whom.

5. Ministers and good people in general disapprove of dancing, and I think it is not safe to set myself against them. If a thing be even doubtful I wish to be on the safe side.

6. Dancing has a bad name, and I mean to study things that are pure and lovely and of good report.

7. Dancing is generally accompanied with drinking, and I see drinking produces a great deal of evil.

8. I am told that dancing is a great temptation and snare to young men, and I do not wish to have anything to do with leading them astray.

9. Dancing unfits the mind for serious reflection and prayer, and I mean to do nothing to estrange me from my God and Savior.—Central Baptist.

Benefits of Class-Meetings.

REV. A. A. SHESLER.

The main design of class-meeting, according to the Discipline is, "to establish a system of pastoral oversight that shall effectively reach every member of the church." It is important as a form of social and religious worship. Genuine Methodists are loyal and believe in this "system of pastoral oversight," and deny the right of any Methodist society to dispense with them, or the right of any member to neglect them without good and sufficient reasons. Brethren, hold the fort! It is a spiritual and peaceful society. The first peace society was born in the clouds, and the resolution passed unanimously—"Peace on earth, and good will to men." How can a true Methodist, after having promised fidelity to God's service, and taken the solumn obligations of our church discipline, enter into new obligations with the world, which make him unfaithful to God and apostate from the responsibilities and labors of the church? And yet some say: "My worldly cares are so numerous that I have not time to attend the meetings of the church, and to take an active part in the world's conversion." Oh, what impiety and insanity in such an excuse! There is a man who has recently become interested in religion, and he most solemnly resolves that he will give his life to Christ. He is humble, prayerful and active. Look into his family, and you see him a practical Christian. Go to the morning class and you see him there, one of the most devout and happy Christians. Follow him to his business, and he is ever ready to speak a word for Christ and his cause. He unites with the church, and takes a deep and active interest in all its proceedings. And thus he continues for a time, apparently a happy and growing Christian. But "the care of this world and the deceitfulness of riches choke the word, and he becomes unfaithful." He does not live a life of piety toward God, and of beneficence toward men (Matt. VII. 12.) He neglects the prayer and class-meetings. He abandons the monthly concert and the business meetings of the church, and the Sabbath school and preaching service. He leaves the brethren to bear alone the responsibilities and toils of the church, to form and execute their own plans of usefulness without him. Merciful God, pity him! Hurried and heartless family prayers, if any, and the entire neglect of active Christian effort follow in the train of this sad and painful declension. Christians are disappointed and grieved. Those who are not Christians, but who feel friendly to religion, are by his example repelled from duty, and begin to fear that all professions are delusive: and the enemies of religion point at him and say: "What does he more than others?" The influence of such a professor is decidedly disastrous to the prosperity of class-meetings and the church. May God's blessing accompany these remarks.

Brother Goulder writes: Bro. Hunter was with me yesterday and preached two of his best sermons. On account of the snow our congregations were small but the preacher interested and melted to tears those who were present. Our preacher ot Helena is pleasing the people.

Read This—"The best way to keep a church full is for every member to attend regularly every service. That will help. Then let every member bring as many people as possible with him."

In Memoriam.

The funeral services of Brother William Wickberg were conducted from the M. E. Church, South, East Helena, Oct. 23, 1889., Rev. Wm. T. Goulder officiating.

Brother Wickberg was born in the northern part of Sweden April 14, 1864. In 1875 he joined the Lutheran church, and up to the time of his death he lived a consistent member of his church. Three years ago, in company with his two brothers, he came to America, since which time he has so conducted himself as to gain the confidence and respect of all who knew him. Steady, quiet, inoffensive, a model young man. He was suddenly attacked with pneumonia and carried to St. Peter's hospital, Helena.

After four day's illness Oct. 20 he quietly passed away. Entering into that rest which remains for tbe children of God. Falling into that sleep from which none ever wake to weep. "Asleep in Jesus—peaceful sleep." His worth and respect were attested by the attendance of a host of friends at the funeral services. The scene was deeply affecting, the tears of weeping friends mingled with those of the lonely brother.

Weep not for "blessed are they that die in the Lord." G.

How to Send Missionary Money.

All preachers, or others, having money for Foreign Missions, will please send it to the treasurer of their Conference Board of Missions, who will send it to the book agent, who is also treasurer of the Parent Board of Missions. Do not send your money directly to the book agent, but to the treasurer of your Conference Board of Missions. And will every treasurer of a Conference Board of Missions promptly forward the money thus received to the book agent? If the brethren will kindly observe these directions it will simplify book-keeping in this office, and greatly facilitate business.

THE MONTANA METHODIST.

REV. A. C. COUEY, EDITOR. Helena, Montana, December 12, 1889. VOL. 2, NO. 9. SUBSCRIPTION, $1 00 PER YEAR.

NOTES.

Rev. W. T. Bolling, of St. Paul's, Denver, Colorado, puts the matter on a square footing in his communication to the Nashville Advocate when he says: "In the classic language of Sam Jones we would say to the brethren of fortune and fat salaries, to the Bishops and the Board of Missions, 'tote fair now' and do something more for this field, if we are to sustain this work in the West."

The Virginia Conference sends up fourteen delegates to the General conference. Other Conferences will send as many from conservative sections of our church.

Rev. C. C. Mayhew, writing of our church work in the Illinois Conference, gives account of good revival interest among the preachers of his district. Precious souls are being converted. This is always good news.

President Harrison's proclamation has been presented to congress. His party admires and praises, while the opposite party will condemn and criticise. Possibly it is a good thing for men in high places to have one deaf ear.

"SOUTHERN METHODIST."

Well, so it is. The further a matter gets away from home the worse it is. A small thing if repeated becomes a great one. It has become so about our church name. A good brother has praised the great bravery of the Los Angeles editor because he is not ashamed to write "Southern Methodist." The MONTANA METHODIST is called "restive" under the term—but this is all a mistake. Another conferee asks what are we going to be called, and so on.

We are not at all surprised that Dr. Foster's idea of the education of the negro has met with decided opposition by other writers of equal if not superior intelligence in the south. We can not believe that he represents more than a very small class who think as he does. The history of the negro for the past twenty years contradicts every point maintained by the doctor.

Dr. W. H. Millburn, the blind preacher, chaplain in the fifty-first congress, now in session, is a Methodist preacher. His principal ministry was in the southern states, and his pastorates in Montgomery and Mobile, Alabama.

In the beginning of the eighteenth centurary the English-speaking people of the world were less than 6,000,000: at the beginning of the nineteenth centuary there were more than 20,500,000: at present there are 100,000,000. They now represent one-fifteenth of the human race, but they rule one-third of the earth's surface, and one-fourth of its entire population.

There is no mistaking as to the future destiny of the world, if the movements of civilization go on upon this line and at this rate. And why should they not? The English speaking peoples now command all that is best, and, indeed, all that is of value in literature, art, inventions. And above all, they represent the Christian religion. They represent what Christianity can do for a people. By the power which English-speaking people now holds over the world, He who rules in Zion is menacing with destruction all heathen religions. Stretching forth His sceptre over the heathen world, He says: "Kiss the Son, lest he be angry and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little."—S. W. Methodist.

How Our Sister Views It.

There may be many things said and done by the M. E. church which we deem radical and inexpedient. At the same time we can see some of her good work, and we trust that we are not so self-conceited as not to profit by such. In the recent meeting of the missionary board in Kansas City we believe wise action was taken on the missionary problem before them. Warm debate was had on the present demand for home and foreign work, and the appropriation of money to carry it on. The conclusion reached, however, is what interests us most, that is, the way the funds were divided between the home and foreign missionary fields. The whole amount was $1,026,310. To the foreign work, $566,139; to the home fild, $460,170.

In this action we see great respect for the home work. It can not be said that the M. E. church has not a live missionary spirit. The above in round numbers is in the proportion of 4 to 5 in home and foreign appropriations, while our church is about 1 to 4. Does our policy need modifying?

There is not enough of the ring of silver in President Harrison's message to suit the people of Montana. So say the wise men of our mountain journalism.

In the Rocky Mountain Methodist.

Rev. Geo. Needham preached a memorial sermon on last decoration day, and closed with the following:

O! heaven: what a sad tale has war. We each honor and love our chivalrous dead, and leave each heart with its own sacred homage to scatter its flowers and shed its tears where it will. Beneath these shadows we turn, gladly turn, to Him who "maketh wars to cease," and thank him that our war is so long past, and that it has so utterly "ceased."

PEACE.

Peace is the great doctrine of the Bible and the great need of the world; and the great peace which the Great Teacher preached is the great need of the human soul. Let strife "cease," indeed, with us, and let us have a helpful spirit towards each other.

THE CLOSE.

A federal soldier was lying on the battle field mortally wounded. He hailed a Confederate passing by, and asked him to pray with him. The soldier in gray said: "I would with all my heart, but I have never learned to pray for myself." The poor dying soldier asked the next passing Confederate to pray with him. He answered, "certainly;" and, sitting down, he took the dying man's head in his lap and prayed an honest, earnest prayer for the soldier on the other side; and, as he closed, the brave boy in blue, with his last strength, put his arms around the Confederate's neck and said, "amen."

Oh, bless the Lord! "He maketh wars to cease" and gives the beautiful principle and life that makes us all one. And now, with clasped hands over common dead, let us start for a better future.

The Pope Above the President.

At the banquet given at the dedication of the Romish University at Washington, the toast to the Pope was the first one on the programme, and then came the toast to "Our President."

Do you want any better proof than that of the supreme allegiance which Romanists swear and give to the old man beyond the Tiber?

At a great meeting of the "Third Catholic Congress," in a western city, the saloons and the Romish churches were decorated with flags. On the front of a German Catholic church edifice were two pictures, one of George Washington and the other of Pope Leo XIII. Under the former was the motto, "The Father of His Country," and under the other this legend: "The Father of the World."

The superiority of a political pretender and religious deceiver over a pure, unselfish patriot and God-fearing hero of many battles is attempted to be shown by this lying legend. Romanists believe this, of course. The foulest monster that ever filled the fabulous chair of Peter was the vicar of Christ, and as infallible as God and the present whining old beggar who has spent his declining years in wire-pulling, rather than in saying his beads, is voted the "Father of the World" by a college of knaves and a congregation of simpletons, though this old man has done nothing but beg from his children, and in return sent them his empty benedictions.

This whole business ought to convince us that the average Romanist is a true Papist first and a disloyal citizen afterward; and that he uses his citizenship to advance the dearest interests of this designing machine. Primitive Catholic.

The African Methodist Episcopal church, which has not a white man among its members or any organic relation with any white church organization, reports a membership of 460,000. It has 12,000 places of worship, numbers 10,000 ministers, has 15,000 Sabbath schools, supports its own denominational papers, has missions in the West Indies, Mexico and Africa, and its reported contributions foot up more than $2,000,000 annually for the support of church work.—Ex.

A Century Ago.

One hundred years ago educated men could not be induced to become missionaries—the work was too forbidding; now we have 7,000 missionaries, nearly one-third of whom are women: also 25,000 native agents, 3,000 of whom are ordained.

One hundred years ago the world was rated at 731,000,000 population, of whom 174,000,000 were Christians; now the population has doubled and the Christians trebled.

One hundred years ago the church was asleep on mission work, and the governments and nations oposed missions: now, with little exception, all welcome them.

One hundred years ago English-speaking people had not one mission society; now they have 150.—Richmond Advance.

General and Special Providence.

The Lord is good to all: and his tender mercies are over all his works. Psalm CXLV, 9.

The goodnesss of God to a thoughtful mind is manifested in a far higher degree by the establishing of general laws in the government of his creatures than by any number of special interferences. Yet there are many who appear to see no proof of God's providence except as it is shown in special and unusual cases. And looking only at particular cases, they see as much to make them doubt the good providence of God as to confirm them in the belief of it.

They see, for example, an only child of parents who are well able and disposed to give it every advantage to make it useful and happy in the world, taken away by death; while the numerous children of parents who care not for them all live. They see a wicked man taken away in his sins without a moment's warning, or an eminently useful man taken away in his usefulness, or a mother taken whose life seems indispensable to the well-being of her children, and they wonder if there is indeed a good over-ruling providence. They consider not that for the cause of righteousness it is better to maintain the one fact that life in every condition is uncertain than it would be to interfere in any number of particular cases. As it is, a knowledge of the uncertainty of life has a universal effect of restraining evil and promoting righteousness.

Again it is observed that persons eminent for usefulness have by over-work and neglect of the laws of health, greatly diminished their power of doing good, and they wonder that a good providence does not in some way maintain their strength in spite of their violation of the laws of health. But it is far better to keep inviolate the law that man will reap the consequences of his doings, no matter what his usefulness may be, than to interfere with the law in special cases. It would be unfortunate for any man to feel that his usefulness would exempt him from the consequences of violated law. Many were surprised at the providence that allowed Bishop Marvin and President Garfield to be taken away in their usefulness. But in these things God would teach us to rely on him and not on any particular human agency. We must not forget that God is independent and his resources unlimited. He often accomplishes his ends by the very means which to the minds of men would appear to thwart them. For example, the murder of Mr. Haddock at Sioux City, Iowa, was indirectly the means of closing the saloons in that place.

Every general law of nature is manifestly established for the well-being of mankind, and knowing their permanency, we can adapt ourselves to them so as to get blessings from them. And these are all the temporal blessings that we are warranted in expecting from the hand of providence. God would save us from the motive of serving him for worldly gain. That would not be for our good. I believe in miracles and that they are still occasionally wrought in the world, but I believe that God always has in them a higher motive than that of merely giving his people some temporal advantage.

"God is good to all," and in dealing with us he seeks our highest good—the good of our souls. W. M. Britt.

Flathead Valley Notes.

The snow is falling here to-day very fast. It is now eight inches deep and bids fair to be over twelve before it stops. Stockmen are uneasy, fearing that winter has set in. They have but little hay and their hopes that it would be a short winter are fast vanishing. This snow may melt away and the severe weather hold up until about Christmas, as is sometimes the case. The snow falls here deeper perhaps than in any other part of Montana.

This snow also has a discouraging effect upon the preacher. I have begun a week's meeting at Demersville, but may be snowed out. I haven't the knack of making a meeting so interesting that people will come under difficulties. I find that—in my meetings, at least—the people are glad for an excuse to stay away. The snow storm does not hinder a large attendance upon a dance, but a church congregation is wonderfully thinned out by such an occurrence. Is it because the dance is loved better than the worship of God's house? Yea, verily.

Speaking of dancing reminds me that it is a sin much indulged in up here. They have a system of dancing in the school houses—a sorry custom it is. The dwellings are, as a rule, too small to accommodate the crowds that attend. The mothers bring their little babies, I am told, and a bed is improvised in one of the corners. The little ones being piled upon it while the mothers spend the night "tripping the light fantastic toe." It is said that old, rheumatic, gray-haired grandmothers have been known to spend the night in such revelling in this valley. Can any other part of Montana show such a sorry spectacle as the above? By this you get an idea to what excess this relic of barbarism is practised here.

We looked in vain for our Presiding Elder. We wanted him to come. We felt the need of his presence. A letter from him gave us a hint as to a possible hindrance. I had made appointments for him, however, and had the pleasure of preaching to congregations that had gathered to hear him. You know, brethren, how delectable that is.

The brethren and friends here in the valley propose to build me a cabin on some government land, with a view to my pre-empting it. Money being scarce they take this means of showing their appreciation of my work among them. If a fellow came into possession of the land when the cabin was built that would all be very nice. But he must do $250 worth of improving, live on it six months and then pay $250 to "prove up" before he becomes owner. Can you calculate from the above when I will become owner of a ranch? So you see it is not such an easy matter after all for a preacher to get possession of a ranch. But when I do I extend a cordial invitation to all the brethren to come and see me.

The saloon is here, of course, and the horse race gambling is a very common sin, and very little attention paid to Sabbath observance. And it is here almost as it was once among the Israelites, every man does that which is right in his own eyes, and that is often very wrong. We have every species of belief and unbelief, and very few are walking humbly before the Lord, if I can judge. They are following the "sight of their own eyes and the desires of their heart" as a rule. Religious progress is slow here, and it would seem of necessity. The evil and worldly influences greatly predominate and are difficult to overcome.

Pray for me brethren that I may be given utterance and that I may have an open door here to build up Christ's kingdom.

The Support of Your Conference Paper.

In a recent issue of this paper our P. E., Rev. E. J. Stanley, urged all the preachers in the Conference to go to work in earnest to enlarge its subscription list, pledging himself to raise 150 subscribers, and asking each pastor to raise twenty-five by the close of this conference year or the first of August, 1890. The call has the right ring and we endorse every word of it. We fear all do not appreciate the full value of our paper. What is the Montana Methodist? It is the official organ of the Montana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. To whom does it belong, and by whom controlled? It is the property of the Church and is controlled by the Montana Conference. Has it any value? If so, what is it? A member of this Conference said in our hearing the other day that the Montana Methodist must be kept alive, for it is worth any two men in the Conference. To one, at least, it has a value. We would say that it has a three-fold value.

1. It has a value as an evangelizing agency. It goes out into the borders and visits homes regularly that the preacher seldom if ever visits. It drops the only seed corn of truth, on the hearth stone of many homes. The parents pick it up, the children pick it up and now and then a neighbor comes in for a portion. The church paper often proves to be the only instrument in the hands of God's people with which they can bring some people to seek his favor. Ever and anon it pours forth the warm rays of the sunshine of light and joy, correcting some error, ministering consolation to some sorrowing one, bidding the despairing and faint hearted look up and be of good cheer and pointing many in numerous ways to the Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the world. The quiet, modest, persistent, silent, yet loud preacher—the religious newspaper—calls forth a response from many a heart otherwise unmoved. It carries the truth to the secret chambers of the heart and soul when there is nothing without to distract the mind, rivets conviction and often leads forth to repentance and a thorough reformation of character. Certainly the church paper fills a very unique place and performs a very essential service, and that efficiently, too, in the evangelization of the world. It often transpires when reading its honest pages that light breaks forth in darkness, strength takes the place of weakness and courage that of fear, stability that of double-mindedness and faith that of doubt. Brethren let us thank God for the religious newspaper, and then show our gratitude by a more consecrated effort to widen the scope of its influence and increase its circulation.

2. It has a historical value. On its pages are recorded the achievements of the church; the organization of the various charges; the amount and character of their improvements; their numerical strength; their battles and victories, are there too. The character and work of each preacher may be found there, and when he has passed through the valley of the shadow of death it will tell of his triumphant entnance there and his farewell message to the church. The baptisms, marriages and obituaries of your own family are faithfully recorded there. Brethren and sisters the MONTANA METHODIST is making one of the most valuable mile-posts along the road of the church's tralel in this Western country and its files will form a religious library of which you may justly be proud. It exhibits and represents the events of church history with a scrupulous regard to time, place and accuracy. Deductions are constantly being made from the history of the past: therefore the unity of historical data is given to you. Beside all this, the wisest and best sayings of the purest men of the churth and the religious world are regularly given to you in its pages. It is replete with the minutia of historical detail, not found elsewhere, and it conserves a department of church history that would otherwise be lost.

3. It has an educational value. It has a strong tendency to bring up those who constitute the church in the way that they should go. It leads forth the mental powers, informs and enlightens the understanding on the facts and principles of our beloved Methodism and the great truths of our holy Christianity as taught by us. It instructs by furnishing the mind with knowledge concerning the great plan of salvation. It molds and shapes the spiritual powers and insures a loyal and intelligent support of all our institutions from those we have a right to expect such things. It affords the most reliable information to the founding of a correct judgment of the merits and excellencies of our Methodism. It establishes our people, gives them confidence in the permancy of the church, equips them for every conflict with the enemies of our cause and enables them to vanquish all foes. "We MUST educate or we MUST perish!" The identity of the church is marked in proportion to the number and character of its educational agencies. Let us constantly keep before our people the chivalry, fidelity and purity of our Methodism, and we shall be surprised at the result.

Finally, brethren: We now have six hundred subscribers to the MONTANA METHODIST, and if we come up to the call of our worthy P. E. we will have ONE THOUSAND by August 1st, 1890. This is our privilege, duty and will be our joy and pride when attained. Bro. Stanley says it must be done, and do we hear the echo coming up from every charge in the Conference: "It must be done?" If so, we have the "evidence of things unseen." In the name of Christ, Methodism and the homes of this new state let us make a grand effort for the ONE THOUSAND. Preach about the MONTANA METHODIST, talk about it in your pastoral visits and dream about it and we shall succeed; also have the satisfaction of knowing that from five to ten thousand people are learning more of Christ and studying the glorious and unequalled record of our Methodism. In the langurge of Dr. Fitzgerald, "let us get this matter into our bones."

Catholic and Protestant Charities.

The Roman Catholic consideration for the poor is proverbial—among those who are never called upon to test it experimentally. The critical examination of its charities would, we are quite confident, reveal that even where the chiefest of graces was supposed to preside, there was under the garb the same, hard, narrow, bloodless indifference to the real welfare of humanity which characterizes the church in all its ostentatiously benevolent activity. An instance of the undisguised animus has recently come to notice. An aged mother in the church died, and the family were left in only moderate circumstances. The fidelity and liberality of the good woman in her church relations were well established, and yet, because of inability to satisfy sacerdotal rapacity, she was denied the poor privilege of "high" mass and her family any words of consolation from the appointed ministry. For inquiring readers we quote the schedule: Low mass, $5: high, $10: additional consolation, $15. We suppose that family rates, where a sufficiently large number is assured, are subject to a slight discount. If it is said that this is an exceptional case, we have only to reply on good authority and from personal observation that it is a characteristic example of the spirit with which that church's whole system of reputed benevolence is carried on.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Editorial Notes.

We were compelled to hold over some communications which came before our last issue. We wish we were able to enlarge our paper, but we must first increase our circulation. Don't quit writing, brethren, because we could not publish earlier.

SHALL OUR CHRISTMAS BE MERRY?

Yes, if you will pay up your subscription to the METAODIST or send forward your money for renewals. Quite a number of our subscribers are behind with their subscriptions and we dislike to dun, therefore offer this gentle reminder. Dear readers remember us now and gladden our sanctum with numerous and large remittances ere the holidays are past.

In speaking of Silver Bow county being the smallest in the state of Montana, we meant in area, brother Pen. Of course we know she is the wealthiest and most populous. Yes, indeed, she is the biggest little county in the west. She is ahead in most everything we ever heard of except in pure religion.

All the gambling houses of Butte, Montana, have the sign "Licensed Gambling House." Now there is talk about licensing the houses of prostitution. The only thing to do with these spots on the moral body is to use the knife and cut them out by the core. What a shame to public decency! May the good Lord help in the application of some effectual remedy.

The first printing press in the United States was worked in 1620.

When this writer was away down in one of the Gulf states, when the question of change came before the annual conferences, he voted a lusty No when his name was called. We have reasons now for a different opinion, and to that opinion we stick till the objectors give a reason. Dr. Shackleford of the Missouri Conference, has given the best for a change we have yet seen. Not one of the different view has yet offered anything more than a sentimental opinion. We can't for life see anything so sacrilegious in the desire for change. Our brethren may say what they wish about its not being in our way in the northwest. We know very well that the contrary is true. A great many people live in and never get beyond the dead past. We can't get to heaven upon the histsry of our fathers. We should make a little history too. There is something more to do than building monuments over graves of our fallen heroes. There now, we have had our say.

That Flag.

Soldiers have marched to bloody conflict under the Stars and Stripes. Municipal, county, state and national elections have been help while the flag was flaunted in the breeze. Our naval vessels have sailed into other ports under the beloved national colors. Fourth of July orators have waxed warm and the blood has quickly coursed their patriotic veins as they pictured the flight of the old eagle. Men, women and children have screamed themselves hoarse in excitement under that flag. Everybody as honest citizens of the United States love the flag. Many have died for it. We live in a country of great freedom—too much freedom, indeed. Our religious toleration in this country has no parallel. Treason and religious intolerance have no sympathy among this great people. Yes, we love the graceful folds of that flag. We love the liberty which she symbolizes, but after all this there is a place where the flag should not go, and that is into our churches. The cross is the symbol of our victory. It alone tells of the triumphs about which we as Christians should be concerned. As a citizen we love the flag: as a Christian the cross is the dearest. These represent two kingdoms. God employs man in both, but in a special sense he is our king of the spiritual.

The Central Illinois Conference of the M. E. church leads out by a unanimous vote to place the flag in every church and Sunday school in the Conference. The Rock River Conference passed a similar resolution. A good brother with the appendix D. D. to his name says: "Soon all the churches and Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal church in America will have the loved Stars and Stripes beautifying their pulpits or decorating their walls. * * * Let us pray that the prayer of our beautiful queen of the white ribbon kingdom, "For God and Home and Native Land," may be answered by Him who heareth prayer. And as in our churches we fold the Stars and Stripes around the cross, let us ask the Conquer on Calvary to protect our homes."

The most painful sensation comes athwart the threshold of our heart to think of the cross—any part of the cross—being covered by the Stars and Stripes. We devoutly pray that this brother's prayer may come to naught. We go into the halls of the various orders of our day. We see their symbols, their badges, their historic pictures, etc.—there they are all right. We go to foreign lands; we find the national emblems and admire them much. As this world has many kingdoms and peoples and governments, they may differ in these, but there is the one grand in signo hoc vinces that should stand above and separate from all the rest.

The great temple of Solomon had the ark of the covenant, over which the cherubim and seraphim hovered. God appeared there. So now the cross, the blessed cross, the very symbol of redemption and salvation, should never have a shred of earthly victory engird it. No never!

One mine in Montana has the singular name—"Gospel Mountain." It is worked on Sunday all the same. One called the "Destroying Angel" is now being worked about 100 yards from our editorial sanctum. We have no fears, however, for it can't fly, though it may have wings after a fashion.

Glass windows wers first introduced into England in the eighth century.

Can We Afford It?

Afford what? The exclusion of the Bible from our public schools. It might be well to ask, Who is it that wants this done? It cannot be the true Christian. He could not consistently wish such a thing. There is no guess work about this. There are two classes of people in this country who are making the hue and cry against the Bible in the schools. Romanism and avowed infidelity. Romanism despises the public school and the Bible used by Protestantism, and of course wants to do away with it. Infidelity does not want the Roman Bible or any other, and therefore pleads against sectarianism in the schools. Infidelity is as great a bigot as stalks the land. She wants everything to give way before her pretended liberalism. They want to think for themselves, but everybody must think as they do to have any intelligence. The Advance speaks to the point on this subject,

Duty of Church Members to the School.

There are church members who feel they have a call to active Sunday school work, and could do no good in it if they were to undertake it. But there is a wide field of usefulness open before them. We are to teach by example as well as precept, and if there are church members who can help in no other way, they can assist by their presence. We need classes as well as teachers, and if there are any who cannot teach they can be learners, and their example in attending may encourage some one else to attend to whom it may prove the very gate of heaven. What would be the influence should the larger portion of the church membership attend? Outsiders would think it was a place of interest, and would be strongly influenced to look in upon it themselves.

Do not understand me as insisting that it is every church member's place to be in the Sunday school. The basis upon which I am placing the question is, that we should be in the Sunday school or have some reason, which God will accept, why we are not there, and even this reason will not deprive us of work for the cause. Are there neglected children in your neighborhood? Do missionary work among the children who wander about our streets on the Sabbath, and perhaps we could render the school no greater service nor follow our Master better. There is no greater field for service in the Master's cause than this, especially among the neglected—and I know of no one in health who can find a reasonable excuse for its neglect.

The greatest failing of the church to-day is "shirking." It is no longer a question with the majority, "How much we can do for Him who has done so much for us?" but, rather, "How little can we do?" and still not forfeit our right to a place among God's people? This tells upon the Sunday school work. It is so easy to find excuses for its neglect. The best element—from a spiritual point of view—of every church is found in the Sunday school, for no one enters that work in earnestness only as they feel the influence of the Spirit moving their hearts to help others into that peace which only the spirit can give.

Church members who find themselves growing cold would be surprised at the result, should they, after asking help from Him who only can give it, enter actively upon the work. They would find their religious life broadening and would experience a joy which they never knew before.

He who serves the Lord in his own weak way should look carefully to see whether, indeed, he is serving Him at al.—Ex.

Butte Ministerial Association.

The following topics have been assigned the members of the association for discussion, beginning November 25, to be followed with the respective subjects every alternate Monday:

Serman plan by each member from Nehemiah IV:10. Exegesis–Gen.IV:7—A. C. Coney. Passibility of Jehovah—G. R. Darrow. Spirits in Prison—U. F. Hawk. How to Conduct a Prayer-meeting—J. J. McAlister. Sheol, Gehenna, Hades, Tartarus, Paradise, Etc.—G. Wood.

This association was organized April 25, 1887, and with the exception of a few months during the summer has met regularly every two weeks since. When the ministers do the work assigned them, it proves quite interesting and profitable.

The Homeless Singer.

On a cold, dark night, when the wind was blowing hard, Conrad, a worthy citizen of a little town in Germany, sat playing his flute, while Ursula, his wife, was preparing supper. They heard a sweet voice singing outside.

Tears filled the good man's eyes, as he said: "What a fine, sweet voice! What a pitty it should be spoiled by being tried in such weather!"

"I think it is the voice of a child. Let us open the door and see," said his wife, who had lost a little boy not long before, and whose heart was open to take pitty on the little wanderer.

Conrad opened the door, and saw a ragged child, who said: "Charity, good sir: for Christ's sake!"

"Come in, my little one," said he; "you shall rest with me for the night."

The boy said, "Thank God!" and entered. He was given some supper, and then he told them that he was the son of a poor miner and wanted to be a priest. He wandered about and sang, and lived on the money people gave him. His kind friends would not let him talk much, but sent him to bed. When he was asleep, they looked in upon him, and were so pleased with his pleasant face that they determined to keep him if he was willing. In the morning they found he was only too glad to remain.

They sent him to school. And afterward they sent him to a monastery. There he found the Bible from which he learned the way of life. He became the great preacher and reformer, Martin Luther. Little did Conrad and Ursula think of what they were doing when they cared for this "least of these, my brethren.–North-Western.

Roll Call.

A soldier mortally wounded was lying in a hospital dying. All was still. He had not spoken for some time. His last moment was just at hand. Suddenly the deep silence was broken, and the attending surgeon was startled by the voice of the dying man uttering, clear and strong the single word:

"Here!"

"What do you want?" asked the surgeon, hastening to the cot. A moment elapsed. There was a seeming struggle after recollection. Then the lips of the dying soldier mumbled:

"Nothing—nothing: but it was roll-call in heaven, and I was answering to my name." These were his last words on earth. At roll-call in heaven will the reader be ready to answer to his name.–Episcopal Methodist.

Bro. Duncan of Flathead.

Perhaps the readers of the MONTANA METHODIST would like to hear something from Flathead of Methodism and the preacher in charge. Bro. Cockrill arrived September 21st, began his work by preaching in Demersville on the 22nd, visited among the people the next week, preached at Brocker School House the next Sunday, and on Wednesday night at a private house in the upper end of the valley, and the next Sunday began a protracted meeting at Ashley and preached every night for two weeks. While there were no conversions, he stirred the people up and set them to thinking, and we believe did much good. He organized a class. A father, mother and their two daughters uniting and baptized their little boy—a whole family gathered in. The meeting closed Sunday night but was not contented to rest. While he was preaching his closing sermon at Ashley, Bro. Lee was his forerunner at the Brocker School House, preaching the opening sermon of a protracted meeting of two weeks' duration. Bro. C. does not look any worse for the wear consequent upon four weeks of preaching. Last Saturday and Sunday was the time set for his first quarterly meeting, but the elder failed to put in an appearance. (Bro. S., some of your old friends were inquiring after you; there was more than one disappointed. We know of one supper prepared for you that you never got, but two other Methodist preachers did.) Bro. Cockrill is protracting the would-be quarterly meeting, preaching in Demersville every night this week. I want to say right here if any of the readers of the METHODIST feel like helping the mission in Flathead, send on your mite, you will be giving to a worthy cause. Pray for the work in Flathead.

T. D. DUNCAN.

Ashley, Mont., Nov. 13, '89.

Therefore Christian people may well ask themselves what has been gained by the concessions which have been made. Have we done anything more than let in priestly influence on one side and skepticism on the other? And has there not been an unholy alliance between the two, the one playing into the other's hands, though they seem so far apart? But this being the case, how much further are we to let this movement go? Boston has been aroused to fever heat against Catholic interference. But what about skepticism? Here, for example, in Chicago, is a principal of a grammar school who tells a large class of boys and girls that the histories of the Old Testament heroes are no more to be believed than the stories of Hercules and other characters of Grecian mythology; and in one of the high schools a teacher exclaims to a still larger class: "Why, you don't believe all that the Bible says, do you?" And this kind of work is increasing, and will continue to increase. For it is one of the profoundest facts connected with this question that neutrality is not and will not be observed. Men believe or sneer. They either defend religion or give it a rap whenever they have an opportunity. In the public schools these opportunities are numerous, and the skeptic will improve them. Hence this is not a question whether we shall leave religious teaching out of the school, but whether we shall have religious teaching or skeptical teaching in the schools. What the world is so slow to see is none the less a fact, namely that the infidel is as illiberal and bigoted as anybody else, and he no sooner gets religious teaching out of the schools than he fills up the vacuum with his own miserable doctrines. Hence the question which is now confronting the Christion people of this country is whether the great truths of Christianity are to control in the instruction of our children and youth, or whether their minds are to be poisoned in the very beginnings of their knowledge.—The Advance.

Other Methodists.

Bishop Newman has nothing to complain of in his Conference trip through the south. At Nashville he received many courtesies. At Lebanon, while the Tennessee Conference (colored) was in session, the stewards of Lebanon District (Church South) held their meeting in the same place, adopted a fraternal address to the Bishop and Conference, and sent the presiding elder, Rev. Dr. Moody, to present it. The doctor was hearty in his fraternal expressions, and declared that he was glad we were there, and there was work and room for us, etc. Bishop Newman reciprocated by chiding the Church South for not coming more freely and generally into the north, stating there was more work for Christ than both could do—Western Christian Advocate.

The Earliest Sunday Schools.

Robert Raikes, who lived 1735-1811, is usually called the originator of the Sunday school. But Luther founded regular Sunday schools as early as 1529. Charles Borromeo, archbishop of Milan, had a system of schools from 1560 to 1584, almost identical in form with the present Sunday school. Legions of persons and places claim to have had Sunday schools previous to those of Raikes. Sunday schools were founded by John Knox in Scotland about 1560: by Joseph Alleine in England, 1650-1668; in Roxbury, Mass., 1674; in Plymouth, Mass., 1680; by Bishop Frampton in England, about 1693; in Glasgow, Scotland, about 1707; in Bethlehem, Connecticut, 1740; in Ephrata, Penn., 1730-1740, by Ludwig Hacker, a school continuing for thirty years with gratuitous instruction and so on.

None of these schools, however, grew into a popular and general movement. Robert Raikes is justly regarded as the founder of the organized system. He engaged female teachers. He required the children to come to school with clean hands and faces and hair combed and with such clothing as they had. They were to stay from ten to twelve, then to go home; to return at one, and, after a lesson, to be conducted to church; after church to repeat portions of the catechism; to go home at five quietly, without playing in the streets. Diligent scholars received rewards of Bibles, Testaments, books, combs, shoes and clothing. "The teachers," says the Schaff-Herzog encyclopædia, "were paid a shilling a day." In 1785 a Sunday school society was formed, but met with a strong opposition from professors of religion, and even from bishops. In Scotland, Sabbath school teaching by laymen was declared to be an innovation, and a breach of the fourth commandment. But the schools multiplied. Though the schools founded by Raikes died out in a few years, they were soon followed by others on an improved plan.—Western Advocate.

The revival at Alhambra was a great victory for truth. There were ten additions to the church. The church effectually revived and the community agitated. The importance of surrendering one's life to the service of God is all the talk in the neighborhood. The spiritual forces operating on the mind and heart of the people will bring many more into the church in the near future.

R. S. CLARK.

Let every dawn of morning be to you as the beginning of life; and every setting sun be to you as the close: then let every one of these short lives leave its sure record on some kindly thing done for others—some goodly strength or knowledge gained for yourselves.—J. Ruskin.

The first steam engine on this continent was brought from England in 1753.

The first complete sewing machine was patented by Elias Howe Jr. in 1846.

The first telegraph instrument was successfully operated by Prof. Morse in 1842.

The first attempt to manufacture pins in this country was made soon after the war of 1812.

The first Union flag was unfurled on January 1, 1776, over the camp at Cambridge. It had 13 stripes of white and red, and retained the British cross in one corner.

Stevensville Notes.

Our protracted meeting at Grantsdale did not prove to be a numerical success. It was more a time of seed-sowing than of reaping. The members of the M. E. church rallied to our help in a true fraternal spirit. Opposed to us were the saloon and gambling element—quite numerous proportionately; also a small though active faction of a narrow, exclusive denomination which declares: "We are the only true church." At least so said one of their members to a lady attending our meeting. "Get your children converted," he said, "if you can, but don't let them join that church, for ours is the only true church!" A private member of that same sect said to me when asked about the matter, "I never prayed more earnestly in my life for the Lord to bless a meeting than this one, if it be His will!"

The annual meeting of the Missoula County Sunday School Association was held November 8, 9 and 10 at Missoula—a place quite prolific of conventions, etc., this year. The attendance was not very large, and the reports of schools, or the lack of them, showed that there is a great deal more land yet to be possessed. Several of the advertised speakers were absent, but the various topics mentioned on the printed programme were thoroughly discussed by those present with interest and profit to all. Rev. Dr. Tower, of Helena, who came as a substitute for Mr. E. Sharpe, was the "big gun" of the occasion.

Rev. E. M. Tower was elected president of the association, and Rev. E. M. Ellis was re-elected secretary. The next convention is appointed to be held at Victor.

Our first quarterly meeting for the present conference year was held at this place on Saturday and Sunday last. Promptly at the 11 o'clock hour of the first day our esteemed presiding elder made his appearance, and notwithstanding strong influences drawing him in a different direction, he remained with us till the close of the services, thereby greatly cheering and encouraging us all by his earnest prayers, practical sermons, wise counsel and genial society.

A year ago on Thanksgiving Day all Stevensville was startled and shocked by the sad news of the death of a bright young lady in her teens on the dancing floor that morning early. Many of those who were present both at the dance and the solemn funeral services that followed resolved they would never dance again. How futile such resolutions of amendment are, without regenerating grace, will I fear be manifest all too plainly when the names shall be known of the those who did attend the masquerade ball night of the 28th ultimo. May the Lord in mercy spare them all from meeting with death under similar circumstances.

Posters are being circulated by a neighboring church for a "Tailor Social" to be held in the near future. Two prizes are to be awarded, "one to the best and the other to the poorest hand sewers of the gentleman persuasion." All this to promote the glory of God and the salvation of souls! At least that is what your correspondent innocently supposes a church exists for.

General Carrington, the commissioner appointed by the president to arrange with the Flathead Indians who remain around Stevensville for their removal to the Jocko reservation, has been in this locality for some weeks past prosecuting his delicate and difficult task. The eminent fitness of the distinguished general for the work assigned him is evidenced by his unqualified success thus far. Excepting the few out on the hunt, all the Indians, including their chief. Charlos, have been induced to sign the requisite papers surrendering their title to the lands held by them for certain considerations. This will shortly place upon the market for sale to the highest bidder fifty of as good unimproved ranches as can be found in the Bitter Root valley.

In Memoriam.

Little Liddie, only child of Mr. and Mrs. N. D. Root, of White Hall, one year and five days. She was the joy and pride of her parents, who tended her with such affectionate care. After a few days' severe illness, when all earthly help failed, Sunday evening, Dec. 1st, she passed from the care of loving parents to the joys of heaven. She was a sweet child, and all who knew her loved her. Freed from all earthly sorrow, she is forever at rest.

E. Helena, Mont., Dec. 5, '89.

EDITOR MONTANA METHODIST: Our dear friend and brother J. L. Morris died at his home here at 3:15 p. m. Dec. 2, 1889, of pneumonia. His end was peaceful, and while no tender, loving farewell fell from his lips, we look for his religious experience in the beautiful consistency and invincible logic of his every-day life. He was a good neighbor, an affectionate husband, a loving and indulgent father. His place in the church will be hard to fill. We shall miss his cheerful face, as well as his kindly advice. His family are sorely bereft, but they weep not as those who have no hope. He is not dead. His body only sleeps, while his gentle spirit rejoices in listening to the beautiful and thrilling symphonies of the holy angels. We spent with him the last day of his mortal life, and by God's grace we shall live with him in glory. J. MOORE.

No Sex in Citizenship.

According to this motto, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has chosen for itself, besides its charitable and reformatory work, quite a broad field. It proposes to regulate religion, politics and citizenship. It is to be much regretted that the Union did not adhere to its original purpose of "gospel temperance with other allied Christian work." The Union proposes for itself at first a grand mission, and was doing a noble work in an already broad field. It is well remembered, too, how Miss Willard came to the sotuh declaring simply a "gospel temperance" work, and with what enthusiam she was received. But now since the political arena has been entered with the woman's suffrage plank, our southern women will be slow to continue co-operation on that platform. They do not believe in the "woman's suffrage" doctrine They are not ready to desert their proper and divinely appointed sphere for the hustings. Our southern women believe in the Bible, including the Epistles of Paul. They have great confidence in the gospel of Jesus Christ, and are not ready to forsake that and fly to the arm of flesh. They started into this work as a gospel work, and to that policy, we hope, they will adhere.—Texas Advocate.

The Days of the Lord.

BY J. H. JOHNSON.

One's day is the time in which he figures most largely in influence and character, or in which he reaches the zenith of earthly power and glory. It may be also the time of extraordinary events, or marks of epochs of history. We speak of the days of Washington, the days of the Revolutionary war. In Bible parlance we refer to the days of Abraham, the days of Moses, the days of Isaiah, the days of the Son of Man. In the Old Testament "the last days" often refer to New Testament times—the Gospel Dispensation, Gen. XLIX, 1; Isaiah II, 2.

The days of Christ's ministry was a time of marvelous revelations—spiritual discernment and quickening, anxious inquiry and turning. The Lord washed away the filth of the Daughters of Zion, and purged the blood of Jerusalem from the midst thereof "by the Spirit of judgment and the Spirit of burning," Isaiah IV, 4.

Christ's day was a time of uncovering sin, uncloaking hypocrisy; the axe was laid at the root of the trees; the baptism of fire had come. The truth was so clearly exposed and emphasized in parables that babes—true disciples—gladly received it, while it was "hid from the wise and prudent," the scribes, the learned men, the disputers of the world, who by intellectual processes tried to reason without the truth. It was a day when the spirit of truth, of power and of life began and continued His mighty work. Christ declared that he was the "true bread of life; he that cometh to Me shall never hunger; he that believeth on Me shall never thirst." The trusting heart should have a perennial fountain of peace, of blessing, of life forevermore. Immediately following the personal ministry of our Lord, the spirit was poured "out upon all flesh," there were prophcy, vision and dream. This Spirit searched all things, reproves the world of sin, of righteousness and of judgment.

Christ presides over the penitent, trusting soul—as "a refiner of silver"—until his own image is reproduced, and—"like fuller's soap"—until the heart is washed in regeneration. "The fountain for sin and for uncleanness" was opened, not only for the inabitants of Jerusalem, but to the whole world, in the precious blood of the Lamb.

Christ came "to send fire on earth:" it had been kindled in prophecy and symbol. Why may we not expect and enjoy the fullness of the regenerating, adopting, witnessing, sanctifying Spirit?

"The anoiting which ye have recived of Him abideth in you, teacheth you of all things, is truth, and is no lie," 1 John, II-27.

God, in this Spirit, revealed to Peter that Jesus was the Christ: and so it is to every repenting, believing soul, the revelation of Jesus Christ, as a personal, present, all-sufficient Savior, comes with all its benedictions.

Finally, that "great and terrible day, the day of His wrath, the day that shall burn as an oven, when all the proud and wicked shall be consumed"—shall come. "Who shall be able to stand? The sun shall be darkened, the moon turned into blood, the stars shall fall, the powers of heaven shall be shaken, mountains and islands shall be moved, the waves and sea roaring; there shall be distress of nations and perplexity, the tribes of the earth shall mourn. The heavens and earth shall be rolled as a scroll away. The elements shall melt with fervent heat. Christ in all his power and glory, with the holy angels, shall appear, and gather his jewels from the four winds."

"The tares shall be bound in bundles to be burned: the righteous welcomed into the kingdom prepared for them."

How Faith Comes.

It is the gift of God, but it usually comes in a certain way. Thinking of Jesus, and meditating upon Jesus will breed faith in Jesus. I was struck with what one said the other day of a certain preacher. The hearer was in deep concern of soul, and the minister preached a very pretty sermon indeed, but his poor soul, under a sense of sin, said:

"There was too much landscape, sir. I did not want landscape; I wanted salvation."

Dear friend, never crave word-painting when you attend a sermon: but crave Christ. You must have Christ to be your own by faith, or you are a lost man. When I was seeking the Saviour, I well remember a very good doctrinal sermon; but when it was over I longed to tell the minister that there was a poor lad there that wanted to know how he could get saved.—Spurgeon

Mr. Lincoln caught knowledge of the coming civil conflict long ahead of his familiars. And at its close he saw beyond his fellows the dragon's teeth furrowed, whose harvest would bring woe upon the land. The sentence we shall quote stamps him as the keenest observer of his age: "As a result of the war, corporations have been enthroned, an era of corruption in high places will follow, and the money power will endeavor to prolong its reign till all wealth is aggregated in a few hands, and the Republic is lost." Men see this prophetic picture year by year taking form on the canvass.—Rich. Adv.

The Revival Power.

We rejoice that the preachers throughout the Conference are so deeply impressed with the importance of revivals, and are devoting their energies along that line. Herein is one of the secrets of the strength and glory of Methodism. When we cease to be a revival church our glory will depart, our candlestick will be removed. We are not laboring to get Christian people from other churches into our own, though we do not object to their coming when they come of their own choice. Our mission is to open the eyes of the blind, to turn them from darkness to light and from the power of Satan unto God—to spread scriptural holiness over these lands. The Lord has greatly blessed us in this work. The most extensive revival ever held in Montana was under the ministry of our preachers. This is not said boastingly, but to encourage the brethren to labor on. The Lord has blessed our ministry in Montana. Several charges have been visited with gracious revivals since Conference, and not a few persons have been converted. The year is nearly half gone. But from now until spring is possibly the best season of the entire year for revival work. Let us improve the time. The kingdom of God suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. Let our watchword be "A revival in every charge." Have faith and courage. Ask largely, that we may receive largely. Let us preserve the unity of the spirit, be of one accord and one mind, let nothing arise to hinder the work. We cannot afford to let the enemy get the advantage of us at this point. Go forward, and may the God of love and peace and power cause his face to shine upon us and grant the desire of our hearts in the conversion of very many souls.

A Chinese Proverb.

The Chinese have a political saying which is worthy the reading even of American statesmen. It is as follows:

"When is the Empire well governed and affairs go as they should go? When swords are rusty and spades are bright: when prisons are empty and grain bins filled: when the law courts are lonely and o'ergrown with grass: when doctors walk and bankers ride. It is then that things go as they ought and the state is well ruled".

"If a preacher gets a good place his wife ought to be there to share his joy. If he is sent to Ninevah, he needs his wife to keep him away from Joppa. Some one has said that prophets have changed since Jonah's day. That now when God calls a man to go to a big city, he is resigned and goes without a word, but when he is called to a poor backwoods circuit or mission, he feels like taking ship for Joppa or somewhere else. I have known of a preacher who needed his wife's courage added to his own more than once in a life."—Texas Advocate.

When a man's temper gets the best of him it reveals the worst of him.

Church Extension.

Mr. Editor: I have thought it possible that some of our brethren and friends who have had official correspondedce with our Church Extension Secretary and dealings with the board might be impressed with the idea that the authorities in that department have a lack of sympathy in their make-up and are too rigid in their requirements of the churches to which assistance is given. I confess that when I received the first donation from the board to one of our churches, while getting the papers fixed up, I thonght there was entirely too much "red tape," as I called it. But on thinking the matter over and investigating the workings of other organizations of a similar kind, I find that I was mistaken. The board, as such, is an executive of the church, holds a church fund and is charged with the duty of protecting that fund from loss and seeing that it is judiciously applied. It must be careful, prompt and business-like in its operations if it would command respect and confidence and accomplish anything. A man may be ever so generous and kind-hearted, but if he is injudicious in his investments or careless in collecting accounts, he will soon lose credit at the banks and everywhere else, and lose his money, too. When the board loans money it receives promises to pay at a given time. Apllications come in for other loans and appropriations are made to other churches based upon these promises to pay. The notes are counted as so much money at maturity. If the money is not paid in, then the board is embarrassed. It has made promises to pay that it cannot fulfiill It is not allowed to go in debt, hence it is censured as being unreliable. The board has surely been generous to the church in Montana. I know of no other board (of any other church) that has helped so liberally, in proportion, as our board has helped some churches in Montana. And I want it to never regret the liberality that has been shown to us.

We have no truer friend in all the church than Rev. David Morton. Our appeals for help have always stirred his sympathetic nature. His position was unsought by him, but soon after his election he wrote to the author of this article saying, "I trust that it is of the Lord, and that I will be able to help Montana." He has ever done all he could for us, as well as for every part of the great west. A year ago last fall at the Missouri Conference the brethren had resolved to have no collection for Church Extension. When Morton arrived and I stated my case, that I must have $1,000 for the little church at Deer Lodge—a donation of $600, a loan of $400—he immediately began to devise plans to raise it—laying awake nights, studying, praying and planning. Never a general planned more deeply, selected and marshalled his forces in a campaign more skillfully or more successfully than did he on that occasion. He worked every body, from the book agent down. If you had heard him pleading with those people in Missouri, then in Kentucky, for a special donation of $600 for Deer Lodge, Montana, and then with the Board of Church Extension, which was convened principally for this purpose, for a loan of $400, to be paid back in annual installments of $100 each with interest at 6 per cent., and could have seen how he succeeded in spite of hindrances that would have crushed most men, you would have thought that he had a hold on their hearts and their pockets such as few men could gain.

No, no. Our noble secretary does not mean to afflict. He would gladly pay these notes, and let the churches pay him, if he could. He is the executive of the board, and the board was organized for the purpose of helping; but it must do this according to method. Let us acquaint ourselves with these methods, and adjust ourselves to the work and roll up a larger collection for church extexsion this year than we have ever raised before. The donation and the loan to the church at Deer Lodge made the recent revival, in which we all rejoice with Brother Britt, possible. The revival makes the payment of the loan more easy. And thus one thing helps and leads to another, and we are all workers together with God in the great enterprise of saving the world.

E. J. Stanley.

Echoes From Anaconda.

The last night of the old year was celebrated in Anaconda by the marriage of four of her best citizens. Two young and happy pairs were thus started on the road of the New Year with no cloud to dim the horizon of their bright and blissful connubial sky. Your correspondent was the honored celebrant at each hymenial altar—the first knot being tied at 6 o'clock and the other at 7:30 o'clnck. Hans Jorgens and Carrie Larsen, with mutual confidence and true acceptance of the duties of matrimonial obligation, and by faith the preacher said, "What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." Frank P. Bullock was never so happy as when on his manly arm the confiding Mary Beard leaned in trustful hope of cannubial pleasures, and the preacher pronounced the words that sealed their mutual vows.

Presiding Elder Stanley spent two days with us the past week, imparting the inspiration of a genial social nature and the buoyancy of religious consolation and hope. He dwells with enthusiasm upon the grand work of his illustrious namesake whose heroic adventures in the Dark Continent have resulted in opening the way of the Christian missionary in that whitening, promising field. Stanley in Montana and Stanley in the Congo! Who among the living can lift the prophetic veil of probable results and tell us what shall be the harvest of their unselfish devotion to the gospel of evangelizing and serving truth!

A flourishing lodge of Good Templars at Anaconda, with one or more additions at every meeting, gives hope of the ultimate triumph of the sublime principles of our order. We have but to work and wait to witness the accomplishment of our cherished purpose. Every saloon in the United States will eventually be closed. Mark the prediction, and let the doubting be assured. Conviction and patient, unremitting toil will soon bring us to the goal we so much desire.

General business here is in a fairly good condition, but because of so large a number of workmen in excess of the demand some laboring men are out of employment and are going elsewhere to find work. This has resulted very largely from the fact that several large enterprises in and near the city requiring the labor of several hundred hands are just about being completed. Notably among these are the railroad roundhouse and machine shops, several miles of yard track laying and the large foundry in the southern suburbs of the city. Several fine brick business houses have also just been completed on the principal streets of the city.

The editor of the Methodist expresses an interest in the machine poet of the conference, and asks if "the muses have gone into winter quarters, to wait till the song of the turtle dove be heard in the land." The "machine" only needed a little necessary lubrication, but concludes for the present issue of the paper to fill the hopper with other matter, which, if you publish it all, your readers will hope that the thing will never be oiled again.

But the editor's pretty little Cou(ey)ing,
Has started the machine to acting;
So, reader, charge to him the renewing,
And my naughty pen for scratching.

From Deer Lodge.

Our second quarterly meeting was held the ffrst Saturday and Sunday of the new year. Sickness and the cold weather prevented a large attendance. However, the services were profftable and we falt that it was an auspicious beginning of a new year.

At the Quarterly Conference I reported ten received during the quarter, four adults and four infants baptized. There had been nearly $700 raised during the quatter for all purposes, chiefly for the parsonage and church debt. Brother Stanley took occasion to give the stewards an exhortation on the support of the pastor. It was timely and bore immediate fruit.

I reported a new Sunday School at Champion, but as Sister Bennett has been obliged to leave there on account of her health, and no one could be found to take an active interest in it, I fear it will be discontinued. Many of the people wished the school continued, but none were willing to take the responsibility of conducting it,

The warm reception you wished for me, Mr. Editor, at my last visit to Champion was certainly what I desired, when I reached there, with the thermometer 20 degrees below zero. I was not disappointed, though the cordiality with which I was received was not up to what is expected by our brethren in the East when they go to their regular appointments. My ffrst movement after warming awhile in the office of the hotel was to secure a house to preach in. After some inquiry, a gentleman offered me the use of a vacant storeroom, which was quite acceptable, being conveniently located and containing already a stove and table. The next thing necessary was to go around to the saloons, business houses and residences and remind the people of the meeting. Then after supper, with the aid of a young man who had formerly been a professor in one of onr colleges in the East, but who is now a backslider, I got chairs, lamps and firewood and prepared the audience room for service. These efforts were rewarded by the presence of a good audience, to which I preached with pleasure to myself and I trust with profit to them. However, I know much of the seed falls by the waysIde and upon thorny ground.

"The cares of this life and the deceitfulness of riches" well nigh choke out every thought of religion. "Prospects," "mines," "money," these are the subjects of conversation from day to day and weak to week. If a Christian should talk as much about his heavenly inheritance or about his blessed Savior as these people do about their god-money he would be declared insane and fit for the madhouse. And yet with all their desire to make money they are not miserly. Many of them seem to desire it only for the pleasure of throwing it away for that or worse is usually the way they dispose of it.

The man who courteously gave me the use of his storeroom for the preaching service was a Jew from Virginia. His name, Lee Levy, would indicate both facts. He passed a hat for the collection for me and showed me other kindnesses. I trust he is not far from the kingdom of God.

As we were nearing Deer Lodge on the return trip, an Irishman sitting in the hindmost seat of the coach and who had been drinking frequently and swearing constantly on the way, remarked: "There is lots of religion in this country." I thought that depends on how much religion you want. There is much more than some people like, but very little compared to what is really needed.

Now for a point further away from home. Isn't that an inspiring exhibit which Dr. Harrison gives of McKendree Church at Nashville in the last Review? And have you seen the last weekly report of Centenary Church, St. Louis? "From 800 to 1,000 present at watch-night service, 9 received by letter, 51 on profession." Then you have already noted the fact that eight yonng preachers heve been raised up as part of the fruit of Dr. Carradine's church in New Orleans during the last year. The life thus manifested at the great centers of the church is felt in all the branches; yes, it is felt even to the tips of the twigs in Montana. May it ever be so. W. M. BRITT.

DEER LODGE, January 15.

Notes from the Spectator.

The Spctator, in taking his weekly survey of things at the beginning of the New Year, is specially impressed with a subject altogher new to these columns, namely, the need of a more faithful enforcement of law both in church and state. The citizen who does not see and feel that there should be a general reformation in this matter must be judicially blind or criminally indifferent to the best intrests of his country, a poor patriot, and a worse christian.

Let public opinion be invoked in all the ways that are proper for a free people. Let the good citizens who are ready to grumble or whine over this evil, come to the front and speak out as freemen ought to speek. About three years ago the flagrant violation of the law against Sunday base-ball playing roused popular indignation in Nashville, meetings were held by the law-abiding citizens, in which expression was given to public sentiment in language clear and strong, and from that day till this there has been no professional Sunday base-ball in Nashville.

It requires vigilance, courage, and work to enforce good laws as it does to secure their enactment. A people who are too stolid or too cowardly or too indolent to see that the laws are enforced deserve the abuses that that they will surely have to bear. Let every citizen of our great country resolve himself into a committee of one to promote the enforcement of law, and let there be no discharge in this war. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.—Nashville Adv.

Editor Bennett, of the Arkansas Methodist, advances this opinion about the publication of our conference papers: "My opinion is that all our (local) Conference papers should be the property of our church, and issued under the business management of our Publishing House. I think the patronizing conference of each paper should choose its editor, and upon the nomination of our Book Agent its business manager. When thus manned, and wisely correlated with our general organ, all the papers published for our church could be issued more economically and circulated more extensively; could better conserve the Connectional spirit and enterprises of our church, and could enter more homes as evangels of light and messengers of comfort."

Self-Explanatory.

REV. A. C. COUEY, Butte City, Mont.—Dear Brother: The publishers send you herewith a copy of "Our Hymns and Their Authors," the annotated edition of the hymn book. The first edition of 1,200 copies has been sold.

Will you not call the attention of our preachers to it, and give it such notice as your judgment may dictate after an examination of it?

It was prepared at the cost of much time and labor for our preachers and others interested in the songs of our Zion, and contains much valuable and helpful information.

I have no financial interest whatever in its sale. It is the property of the church just as the other editions of the hymn book.

Yours truly, W. F. TILLETT.

NOTES.

The total assessment shows the valuation of the property of Montana to be $79,376,944.

Presiding Elder Mills, of the M. E. Church in Montana, in urging his preachers to take the missionary collections, says: "But for the help we receive from this society (the Missionary) the largest number of our appointments in the Montana Conference would have to be abandoned, to say nothing of our duty to help on the foreign work."

The union meeting among the Butte churches continues. We have seen some favorable signs at this writing (the close of the second week.)

Miss Francis E. Willard has been reported as a convert to the teachings of the modern "Christian Science." She publishes a card "denying the faith." If this good woman takes too many planks into the temperance ship she may sink it.

A bolt has been made in the W. C. T. U., and a second National Union will be organized, which is to be unmixed with politics. We believe in straight gospel and straight temperance.

Rev. J. B. Parnall, of the M. E. Church South, and Rev. E. W. Tower, of the M. E. Church, have been holding union revival services in Stevensville. May these brethren close the meeting in as much harmony as they began. Amen.

Butte City is to have better facilities in the fire alarm system.

The Republicans have elected Wilbur F. Sanders and T. C. Power, and the Democrats W. A. Clark and Martin Maginnis to the United States Senate.

Rev. S. W. Barbee in this issue gives us some timely thoughts on one important subject.

The MONTANA METHODIST was requested to take a place in the "Editors' Symposium" in the General Organ. The blizzard or something else caused the letter to "fetch a compass," so that it did not reech us for "many days." Nevertheless, we have forwarded our "piece."

The editor has been busied with much serving of late, and greatly appreciates the contributions from our brethren in the field.

Brother Price is taking hold of the business management of the METHDOIST with his characteristic energy. Let him have the hearty co-operation of our preachers and people, one and all, and it will be a grand success.

Brother Stanley has been trying to get Bishop Granberry to hold our District Conferences for us, but the bishop cannot come on account of the great expense. In a private letter he manifests interest in our work and sends his love to the brethren in this conference. They would all be glad to have him with us a few weeks this spring.

Rev. J. B. Parnall is engaged in a protracted meeting at Stevensville and reports encouraging prospects.

The prevalence of la grippe through the country, though in a light form, is interfering somewhat with revival work.

Rev. David Morton, our Church Extension Secretary at Louisville, Ky.; Rev. T. M. Finney, P. E. of St. Louis District, St. Louis, Mo., and Rev. O. P. Fitzgerald, editor of the Christian Advocate, the official organ of our church, Nashville, Tenn., have all recently expressed their deep interest in our work in Montana. They know something of the difficulties of pioneer work. The friendly interest and co-operation of such men is greatly appreciated by all lovers of our cause in Montana. God bless them, and may their shadows never grow less.

Rev. R. S. Clark has been wrestling with la grippe for some time, but keeps at work. He reports a pleasant service at Alhambra last Sunday.

The bread of life is love: the salt of life is work: the water of life is faith.

While great care should be taken not to be driven about by every wind of doctrine sought to be puffed into a hurricane by "great swelling words" of errorism, there is a wind before which it is safe to be driven, the "mighty rushing wind" which struck the Jerusalem chamber of old

"Thrice blessed are those young men whose parents can barely, by the closest economy, furnish them the means of meeting the absolute necessities of their college lives. It is good for them, it is good for the University, it is good for the country that they have to bear the yoke of comparative poverty in their youth, for the hopes of the country lie not in the sons of the rich, but in those of the poor and in those of moderate resources".—L. C. Garland.

The Osages are the richest people on earth. The tribe numbers just 1,501 souls and they have in the U. S. treasury $7,958,694 of their own money which draws 55 per cent. Besides this they have 1,470,000 acres of land which could be sold for $10 per acre. This makes them worth $15,171 apiece.—Our Brother in Red.

The reports at the late session of the Los Angeles Conference showed an increase of from 400 to 500 members, or about thirty-three and one-third per cent. We doubt if any conference in the connection will show a better record.—EX.

Butte is now in the midst of the biggest boom in its history. More building is going on than ever before, real estate is higher, money more plentiful, business more active, and prosperity more general.—Miner.

The copper output of Butte this year ought to foot up about 120,000,000 pounds which will return gross about $12,000,000. —Ex.

In conversation with a young Spanish gentleman, a Catholic and a resident of this city, who has been on a visit to the City of Mexico, the fact was elicited that the native populations there are silently rebelling against the Romish Church, which they hold to be responsible for the ignorance and degradation of the people of Mexico.—Ex.

Field Notes.

BOULDER.

Brother Moore is in the midst of a protracted meeting at Boulder, with a good attendance, a number of penitents at the altar and the outlook hopeful for a good meeting. He has organized a society at Elkhorn and preaches to large and appreciative congregations at that place. Brother Currin is conducting the Sunday School at Boulder with his accustomed zeal and ability. The pastor's report showed a number of baptisms and several received. Finances in fair condition. Brother Moore is in favor with the people.

HELENA.

There was a good congregation at Grand street in Helena last Sunday morning and evening, notwithstanding the cold weather. There has been a marked improvement here during the past quarter. Brother Price and his excellent family are in great favor with the people. The universal sentiment seems to be that he is the right man in the right place. A number have been received into the church, finances are in fair condition and prospects are brightening. The church has been beautifully decorated. There is a good interest in the Sunday School. Brother Price is doing good solid work. It is refreshing to hear the kind words spoken of Brother and Sister B., the former pastor and wife. They have a warm place in the heart of the Helena people.

EAST HELENA.

The presiding elder was with Brother Goulder at East Helena last Sunday night. Unfortunately it had gotten out that the pastor would not preach; result, the smallest congregation that has been there for many weeks! But we told them to "go forward." Brother Goulder is very popular with the people, both old and young. He preaches to large congregations usually, and the Sunday School is in a prosperous condition. We have a very substantial and comfortable church building here, good stoves, stained windows, patent seats, the pulpit and aisle recently carpeted by the good ladies of the place, a good choir of singers who use our own hymn books. I was sorry to know that so many families are suffering with the prevailing epidemic and a few cases of scarlet fever. I hope that Brother Goulder's health will get better and that his charge will soon be visited with a good revival.

WHAT DOEST THOU HERE!

Or, The M. E. Church, South, in the Northwest.

I have always considered the presence of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Montana and other portions of the great northwest in the same light as that in which I behold her elsewhere. A manifest providence has guided her footsteps and blessed her labors wherever she has gone, not less in Montana than elsewhere. If strife or unholy emulation and ambition had directed our steps to the west of the Rocky Mountains, I would say that our church is an intruder, not having the spirit of the Master of whose mission it is said that He shall not strive, neither shall his voice be heard in the streets; and the apostle exhorts "Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory."

"The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord," is manifested as well in church life and work as in individual life and work. "Where He leads I will follow," is, or should always be, the guide to every movement of the church in her efforts to save the people by the preaching of the gospel. The Macedonian cry is ever sounding loud above the din and confusion of earth, and open doors are to be seen on every hand, and he only is wise who observes, who obeys. And what to man may appear the most untoward experience of his life, is but the guiding star to his most sacred ambition—the ruthless rending of the downy bed of the eaglet—that strength and courage may be acquired for the busy activities of manhood's heroic struggle of life. The church frequently needs a similar divine upheaval, a tearing asunder of local attachments that override and destroy, that she may gladly go into the regions beyond and preach the gospel to other cities and peoples and tongues.

A shipwreck many years ago in which all were lost but one man, resulted in the conversion of all the inhabitants of one of the largest of the sea islands. No greater a calamity, viewed from the stupendous divine results under the guiding hand of the infinite Wisdom! One Christian man was on board, and being an expert swimmer, he seized his well-used bible in his teeth and swam to the nearest land, which proved to be an island of cannibals. In the course of time God gave him access to these savages, and through this one copy of the holy scriptures brought them all to the feet of Jesus.

The burning of Rev. L. B. Stateler's house a little more than a quarter of a century ago almost two thousand miles distant from the wilds of Montana was the voice of God: "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee; and I will make of thee a great nation; and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing." And as Abram took Sarai, his wife, so the dear woman that "tarries by the staff" accompanied our venerable brother who pioneered Southern Methodism in this mountain land at a time when there were no church houses to welcome him, and the tomahawk and scalping knife of the uncivilized tribes were far more potent than the Bible and hymn book of the preacher. A trackless waste marked the route from the smouldering ruins of our heroic brother's home in the east to that far-distant west from which, after he shall have served his generation, by the will of God he will be taken to the rest-land of the skies to share forever the joys of that cloudless land, with the faithful and unflinching who helped him in every effort to establish the gospel in the tops of these mountains, and whose dying refrain not only now cheers the heart and reanimates the feeble step of her still courageous and hopeful husband, but also those of us younger brethren and sisters who are just fairly entering the brightening fields their love and sacrifice have made ready to our hands.

Thus it is seen that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Montana is providential, and we, brethren of the ministry, and all who train with us, would not only be unfaithful to the summons of our great Captain if we do not push the battle to the finish, but will likewise demonstrate our ingratitude to him to whom, more than to any other man, we owe the sacred privileges of preaching in Montana the pure and scriptural doctrines of our beloved Methodism.

Fear not, then, each sudden shock,
'Tis of the wave, and not the rock:
In spite of rocks and tempests' roar,
In spite of false lights on the shore,
Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea.

S. W. BARBEE.

Anaconda, Mont.

In a letter to one of our exchanges we read: The following extract from a communication from Rev. R. T. Adams, of Covington, Ga., in the New York Christian Advocate of December 19, will be read with interest. He says: "In common with many thousands of the colored members of the old mother Methodist Episcopal Church, I am greatly interested in the actions of our mother towards us. For many years past too much class distinction has been made about our white and colored work in the South. We have separated white and colored conferences in the South, and we have separated white and colored schools in the South; and Bishop Newman said recently before one of these Southern white conferences, that he desired to see a General Conference composed of colored Methodists; and now the General Missionary Committee has made appropriations to white work in the South, and to colored work in the South, and as a colored member of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South, I ask through the columns of the Christian Advocate, where will this thing end?"

BY THE P. E.

The second quarterly meeting for Deer Lodge was held January 5th and 6th. The weather was cold, and some were kept away by sickness, still the congregations were good, very attentive, and the services impressive and profitable.

There has been a marked change here since the first quarterly meeting. The preacher then lived in a "hired house" by himself; now he lives with his wife in a cozy little cottage, which is deeded to the church, and two-thirds of the money raised and paid in. The seating capacity of the church has been increased. It is one of the neatest churches in the city. It was refreshing to hear the pastor's report read in quarterly conference. Quite a number had been converted and added to the church. The pastor and people are both elated at the manifest presence and power of God among the people. Brother Britt is surely the right man in the right place. The Lord is blessing his work. The people are rallying to his assistance, though a little behind yet in the matter of support. They have been heavily burdened, but will come out all right. The charge has paid about $700 for all purposes during the past quarter. The pastor is showing himself a true missionary by making frequent visits to Champion, a mining camp some twenty miles distant in the mountains, where he has an increasing congregation. The people are being educated to systematic effort along the various lines of Christian work. We expect to hear still better things from our church there. I heard many kind words for Brothers Couey and Price, who rendered efficient services in the revival meeting. It was impossible to spend but two days in a week at that time at Anaconda. Brother Barbee is at his post, and though not enjoying the degree of prosperity that he desires, yet, as we talked and prayed and counseled together, he expressed himself as being hopeful of the future. How I would rejoice to hear of a good revival in the little brick church. If Brother Barbee is as interesting and refreshing in the pulpit as in the social circle, he ought to have a crowded house every Sunday. Anaconda is fast becoming one of the best, liveliest and most substantial towns. She claims a population of six thousand, and is still going forward.

I found Brother and Sister Couey looking for me at Butte, where a room was already warmed and in order for the P. E. in the parsonage. Whether taking advantage of Brother Warren's tactics or not, anyhow the preacher in charge took charge of this official, started early on Saturday on a tour of visitation, which was kept up until late in the day. We made many pleasant visits, enjoyed sweet communion with some noble Christian people, and felt greatly refreshed in mind and heart. While there is much wickedness in this great city, which, by the way, has been ventilated quite freely at the union meetings now in progress, yet, thank God, there are not a few who "sigh and cry on account of these abominations," and through whose instrumentality a great work of transformation and reformation will finally be accomplished.

Brother Couey has as faithful a band of Christian men and women at his side as can be found anywhere. On account of sickness and other unavoidable occurrences, the congregations have not been quite up to the standard during the past month. Yet under his ministry the church is growing in grace and efficiency. The people are interested in the work. The pastor is hopeful. The congregation is increasing. People are being drawn hither to be "fed with the sincere milk of the word," and I predict a revival and quite an in-gathering of souls before another quarterly meeting. Brother Couey is by far the oldest pastor among the evangelical churches in Butte. During the three years and a half that he has been here there has been one change in the pastorate of the M. E. church, three changes in the Congregational, three in the Presbyterian and four in the Baptist churches. It is gratifying to see our pastor still commanding the confidence and respect of the public. This long term, coupled as it is with editorial duties, is a heavy tax upon his strength and time in pulpit preparation, getting up new sermons, but is no mean compliment and should be a source of no little encouragement to the true man of God in this mountain country.

Every official but one was present at the quarterly conference, and all the interests of the church were carefully reviewed. Each steward made his report separately. Finances were a little behind, though I think they will come out all right. I was glad to see the brethren sharing in the responsibility. Many hands make light work. Each can perform a work that the other cannot, and if each brother knew how much his efforts relieve the mind and refresh the heart of his pastor, he would surely bestir himself to the utmost of his ability.

The services on Sunday night were impressive. A solemn stillness prevailed during the sermon, and exhortation that followed. My heart went out in painful solicitude for the welfare of the people. I trust that seed was sown that will spring up and bring forth much precious fruit.

Ministerial Courtesy.

The question might be asked, In what does ministerial courtesy differ from common or general courtesy? Is it a rara avis that we have taken such care to hold it up for inspection? By no means, but it is per se sui generis, that cannot be without loss neglected. For much depends upon its careful study, as I shall endeavor to show.

Now the simplest definition of the term courtesy, perhaps, would be a desire to please, gentleness or politeness of bearing—a suaviter in modo, as the Roman would say—to others. And might be actuated from various causes, the principal of which being extreme selfishness. 'Twas this courtesy that the rakish elder Chesterfield strove to teach. The man of the world can assume the gentleness of an angel of light whilst "Upon hellish purpose bent," whereas Christian courtesy, like the limpid streams of forest birth, originate but from one source, Love! Its guiding star is the "Golden Rule," "Do unto others as ye would have them do unto you." Hence St. Paul's wonderful courtesy like the diamond reflects the purest light from its face. "Charity suffereth long and is kind, is not easily provoked."

Dr. A. Clarke in his grand little book, "The Claris Biblica, or Letters to a Young Preacher," you remember refutes the empty claim laid to gentility often made by empty-pated theologians, yet in a masterly style teaches how we may acquire more than is implied by the vain appellation, "Enittle Homie."

And he shows in the clearest manner that a preacher can if he will be the most perfect gentleman—one loved and revered by all, not on account of his polished exterior, his ample fortune, or his vast estates, but from a higher, grander point, his Godly or Christly walk and conversation. But this is in a sense but general courtesy, or Christian deportment. What we mean by ministerial courtesy in contradistinction to this, is there more required of a minister than a layman? Yes, there is and should be; for he is set as an example to his flock. While I do not entirely endorse the old adage, "Like Priest, Like People," yet I admit there is a great deal in it, and from some causes I thank God that it is so, for especially in our own beloved Methodism has it been the means of producing fruit to God's glory. The better informed and the more consecrated the ministry, the stronger and more evangelical has become the church.

Hence it becomes us to consider carefully and prayerfully our duties as preachers, one to another. Let us strive to not only show it by our deportment in the larger acts of life, but in the little things. Let us study to be courteous and just, striving to show ourselves of one mind, in love; not dissimulating; not in anything presuming upon each other's rights; not trespassing; nor by any discourtesy, either in common daily walk, or from the sacred desk, nor more especially using that most questionable of all means, the press. If it becomes our duty to reprove, let us do it in the fear of God, but not then until we have first made it a matter of the deepest search, then only "as we would have others do unto us."

Already harm has been done in some places by a neglect of making this subject a study.

With love and respect I am your fellow servant,

E. C. FINLEY.

Hearer, in the General Organ, says: "It has come to be considered by many of our preachers that roughness is strength and swagger is independence, and, as a consequence, they use slang and common illustrations and take farcical attitudes in the pulpit, and that, too, with an apparent consciousness of doing not only a witty thing, but that which is pleasing to their audiences."

Pointers.

Sometimes a preacher's reputation in his own church and conference requires him to be reticent on a vital point when outspoken convictions would give him a world of liberty. Churchism is good in its place, means not an end, when it fetters on essential points hold it in obeyance to foundation principles. Take a spiritual perspective beyond your own ecclesiastical boundaries, occasionally. Truth should not be eagerly sought, championed, or rejected merely because it is in an ancient garb, or cut after modern fashion; but because it is truth. We should be as willing to receive the truth from a street waif as from a Bishop or President. Different points of view enlarge the vision.

J. H. Johnson.

Dr. Godbey's Book.

Get it and read it. Yes, every Southern Methodist and every Northern Methodist should have a copy of Dr. Godbey's latest work, "Refutation of Erroneous Views in Regard to the Metho-Episcopal church (south)" Dr. Godbey is one of the most intellectual men of the church, and is likewise one of the ablest expounders of her doctrines as well as one of her best and most impartial historians. The book is free from the spirit of bigotry, can't or prejudice. It was written in no controversial spirit, but in a fair-minded and impartial manner to give the truth of history for the sake of the truth. Documentary testimony from both ecclesiastical and judicial courts is furnished to establish every position and utterance of the author.

What the present generation wants, almost a half century removed from the period that gave birth to the division of the original Methodist Episcopal church in America, is to know whether the two great branches of Methodism as now known among us were originally one and the same, was there a separation, the causes that led to it, was original Methodism entirely lost in the division, was it absorbed by either body, or do they not both stand on precisely the same ground. Each of these points is ably, unanswerably, and yet succinctly, presented by the author. And everything that the book claims has been conceded, tacitly or otherwise, by action of our Northern brethren, at one time or another since the division.

In thus calling attention to this timely publication, I would not forget to mention the fact, that the Methodist Episcopal church (South) at every period of the discussion, and always, even from its very inception has stood unalterably by the law. And today we can make the proud boast of being the only Methodism in the world whose Episcopacy is in fact a co-ordinate branch of church government. The Northern Methodist entertain an essentially different view, holding that the Bishop is an officer of the church, and as such may be deposed from office by the action of a mere majority of the General Conference.

Address orders for the book to J. E. Godbey, D. D., Kansas City, Mo., 20 cents, single copy; 12 or more, 15 cents each: 100 copies, 12 each.

I make this personal offer: I will furnish the book free, likewise a copy of The Montana Methodist one year, to the first one that will disprove a single statement made by the author touching the cause of division or that the Methodist Episcopal church, South, has not always stood by the law, and is to-day the only Methodism in the world that holds to a pure Episcopacy as incorporated in the organic institution of the church. Turn on the light, everybody, and let the most powerful focus concentrate on the history of our church.

The brighter the light, the fuller our vindication.

S. W. Barbee.

Anaconda, Mont.

From the speech on the New South which won H. W. Grady his fame, we insert the following extract: "Dr. Talmage has drawn for you, with a master's hand, the picture of your returning armies. He has told you how, in the pomp and circumstance of war, they came back to you, marching with proud and victorious tread, reading their glory in a nation's eyes. Let me picture to you the foot-sore Confederate soldier, as, buttoning up in his faded gray jacket his parole, which was to bear testimony to his children of his fidelity and faith, turned his his face southward from Appomattox, in the spring of 1865. Think of him, as, ragged, half-starved, heavy-hearted, enfeebled by want and wounds, having fought to exhaustion, he surrenders his gun, wrings the hands of his comrads in silence, and lifting his tear-stained and palid face, for the last time, to the graves that dot the old Virginia hills, pulls his gray cap over his brow and begins the slow and painful journey! What does he find? His house in ruins, his farm devastated, his slaves free, his stock killed, his barnes empty, his trade destroyed, his money worthless, his social system—fuedal in its magnificence—swept away, his people without law or legal status, his comrads slain, and the burdens of others heavy upon his shoulders. What does he do—this hero in gray with a heart of gold? Does he sit down in sullenness and despair? Not for a day. Surely God, who has stripped him of his prosperity, inspires him in his adversity. As ruin was never before more overwhelming, never was restoration swifter. The soldier stepped from the trenches into the furrow: horses that had charged fedral guns marched before the plow, and fields that ran red with human blood in April were green with the harvest in June."

All applications for aid to the General Board of Church Extension must be on file in our office on the first day of April 1890, in order to secure attentton at our annual meeting. They cannot be tabulated so as to give a full and fair hearing to each, in less time than we have allowed, and hence the rule of the board, which will be rigidly enforced. Conference Statistics.

For the benefit of inquiring friends we republish the statistics as given at the last Annual Conference held at Stevensville, Montana, Aug. 14-19, 1889:

Local preachers, 10; members, 446; adults baptized, 23; infants baptized, 23; number churches, 11; value churches, $43,600; number parsonages, 6; value parsonages, $9,550. Total increase of church property over last year, $10,485: Number Sunday schools, 14; Sunday school scholars, 676: officers and teachers, 89; money expended for Sunday schools, $271.70. Money raised for missions, $350; for church extension, $108.25. Total amount paid since conference of 1888 on the superannuated preachers, widows and orphan's fund, $1.100.50: additional subscribed, 267.

We gather from the reports since Conference that there have been about seventy-five accessions, which we presume is nearly clear gain, and if so, we now have a membership of five hundred and twenty-one.

How a Church Was Filled on Sunday Evenings.

The evening service on Sundays in a certain congregation was poorly attended. People thought they could not come out twice a Sunday to church.

The council talked the matter over. Their talk resulted in a pledge to each other that they would never absent themselves, willingly, from the evening service, and that they would urge everyone they saw to plan for a second attendance.

The parents talked it over. They found that their children were not in the habit of spending their evenings religiously or profitably, and they determined to set them an example of an earnest devotion to spiritual concerns. They began by going twice a day the Sunday after.

The young men talked it over. They concluded it was their duty to attend both services, and to bring at least one young man apiece with them.

The young ladies talked it over. They thought that if they could go to a concert on a week day night, it could not do them any harm to be at church on Sunday night. They decided that they would go, regularly, and take each a friend with them.

At first the minister did not know what to make of it. The attendance was increasing every week. Strangers, seeing the direction of the crowd, followed. It became the most popular church in the city.

Rev. R. F. Jarvis, who left Montana last year, to enter Hiwassee College, Tenn., had an attack of sickness en route; but he arrived safe a few days ago, and preached an acceptable sermon at the quarterly meeting in progress on his arrival. We would like to have more boys of the same sort.

Need of a Revival.

At a meeting recently held by the pastors and members of the various evangelical churches of one of our leading cities, for the purpose of discussing the moral condition of the city, and the best means of improving it, there were revelations made of a most startling character. It causes one to shudder to think of the abominations that are carried on right under the shadow of our churches, and in the midst of our homes, to think of the traps that are laid for the ruin of our youth; and especially to learn of the extent to which such things are patronized, by men who make pretentions to respectability, and even morality. The question was raised, as to what extent the Christian people are responsible for this state of things. The same candor that revealed the view out side of the church, tore off the mask which revealed no little infidelity, formality, and inconsistency within the church. The spectacle was presented of men professing to be followers of, and witnesses for the Lord Jesus Christ in the midst of a gainsaying world, drinking, dancing, card playing and attending operas. By actual count as many members of a certain church were seen to enter the opera house, as were found at the prayer meeting of that church on the same evening. Belshazzar defiled the vessels of the Lord's house and drank with a thousand of his lords, while the walls of Babylon were being undermined, and Nero played on the fiddle while Rome was burning. These were heathens. But what shall we say when professed Christian people, will let the god of this world blind their minds and corrupt their hearts, and will revel and dance, while immortal souls are perishing in the flames, that their conduct is just helping to kindle into greater fierceness. It was well stated by one zealous brother. "We pray for the Lord to awaken men and send them to our churches, and we are not prepared to properly receive and care for those who do come." There is too much coldness, too much formality, too much worldliness in the church. It is time to call a halt. Faithful ministers of Christ must cry aloud, and spare not. These evils must be denounced. But the preaching of sensational sermons, and efforts at mere outward reformation will not suffice. Men must be transformed by the renewing of their minds and hearts. The Lord "desires truth in the inward parts." Salvation is from above, "Not by might nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." The work must commence in the church, judgment begins at the house of God. What a responsibility is devolved upon us as individval ministers and members of the church, as we are so is the church. What a time for self examination, for "sighing and crying on account of the abominations in the midst of Jeruselem;" what a time for fasting and prayer, which will bring to our aid the conscious presence of the Christ, who alone can cast out these devils, and bring order out of the moral chaos that surrounds us.

A sweeping revival of religion, pure and undefiled, would do more to educate public sentiment and to tone up the morals, both in the city and in the country than any thing else. To your tents, oh Israel! Let the work begin at home, and let there be a mighty forward movement all along the line.

Help the Negro.

In 1866 the colored adherents of the M. E. church, South, by order of the general conference were set apart as a distinct church organization known as the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church of America. They have done well in their new relationship, and deserve well of all the people, and particularly the M. E. church, South. They have been greatly helped in many ways by the mother church, and they have always shown the spirit of commendable gratitude, but a mother's love never ceases, and her hand is always outstretched to the relief of needy and distressed off-spring.

The Colored M. E. church, as is well known to all the brethren, have two schools for the education and training of teachers and preachers, the Paine Institute located at Augusta, Ga., and the Lane Institue, located at Jackson, Tenn. These schools, working in the face of great difficulties, have accomplished much in their particular line and the grandest results have followed, and will follow. But they are sorely in need of funds just at this time to meet an important contingency, and ask the mother for $8,000. This is quite a small favor, and modestly requested. We wont, we can't refuse. By a pro rata distribution it is only about four-fifths of one cent per member. Can't the noble, good mother average one nickel per member? Yea moreover, will not each pastor assume that sum, and then make hearty and persistent effort to collect it, the pastors themselves paying each five nickels. How easily this might be done, and then instead of $8,000 for the Christian education of the negroes of the South, we would have the large and gratifying sum of $58,-956.15; and based on the statistics of 1888.

As a starter for our little, but heroic, Montana conference, I have just forwarded to Rev. Geo. Wm. Walker, Augusta, Ga., a nickel each from the membership of my pastoral charge and five nickels from the preacher. Each of our valiant band on the "tops of these mountains" can do the same—and they will—and the glad refrain from the song of our holy rejoicing will be more than the siren's charm to move the "church at home" to join their mission co-laborers on the hills of perennial snows in their purpose to advance the Christian education of the negroes of our happy Southland. Revival Meeting at Stevensville

The united revival here conducted by Rev. E. M. Tower, of the M. E. church and myself, and held in our place of worship, closed on the 28th inst, over three weeks. The attendance at the services was not large, owing principally to the prevalence of la grippe in the community, but considerable interest was manifested by most of those who could attend regularly.

There were four who professed to have been saved during the progress of the meeting, two of whom will unite with the M. E. church, and two with our own.

We humbly think that the interests of our holy Christianity and of Methodism in particular have been advanced by the effort. And wonderful as it may appear to some, I earnestly assure you, Mr. Editor, that the two brethren who in perfect accord undertook this enterprise for God and souls and in the interest of true fraternity, closed it "in as much harmony as they began!"

But say, did not our usually careful and sweet-spirited editor, in referring to this united effort in the last issue of the Methodist, forget to exercise his accustomed charity and large-heartedness?

Does the impression anywhere prevail that a Northern and a Southern preacher cannot unite in a revival effort in Montana, without great danger of something to disturb the harmony of the occasion and engender bitterness and strife? Then let such instances as the foregoing be multiplied indefinitely in order to remove the charge against the Christian character of the ministers of both churches. Otherwise if the impression be correct elsewhere, then it is not time that both churches begin to "call for mourners."

Now I do not wish to be understood as advocating union protracted meetings always and everywhere, often times true fraternity is better promoted by working strictly within denominational lines, but what I am earnestly desirous of seeing and helping to promote is the exercise of a broader charity among all churches, particularly those of the Methodist persuasion, for in a special sense "we be brethren." I want that we shall "not every man look at his own things," the good ones, but also at the good "things of others," and do this whilst serving under his own denominal flag and shouldering his own musket.

If wrongs have been done in the past, is there no such thing as forgiveness, and a closing up of the breach? Who then will show himself most God-like and make advances first? My own experience has confirmed and in the belief that a judicious confidence extended towards a brother minister will seldom be abused.

Repudiating any overtures that may come from any source, except the highest judicial body for organic union (which in some quarters simply means absorption) as not at present being within the range of "practical politics." I nevertheless boldly declare myself as being "first, last and all the time" on the broad platform of true fraternity ready to grasp the hand of every true man of God who wants to "shake" with me. Yours fraternally,

J. B. Parnall.

P. S.—I expect to start another protracted meeting, this time a denominal one, on Feb. 11th, at Victor. Bro. Cockrill has promised to favor us with his assistance on the occasion. Our esteemed Presiding Elder, we hope, will also be on hand. Thanking the many friends who, at our request sent a fervent prayer to Heaven for a blessing on the Stevensville meeting, which was answered, again we ask: pray for us that the Victor meetihg may prove a success. J. B. P.

Unconverted Christians(?)

No greater danger threatens the church to-day than its unconverted membership. It is a sad fact known to many and should be known to all, that every year witnesses the induction of hundreds into the church who are entire strangers to the new birth. And yet the shibboleth of the church to those who minister at her altars is "Ye must be born again." God's ministers are the custodians of the law of spiritual life to all men, not that they by priestly manipulation or the exercise of any sacredotal function prerogative as well as duty, by virtue of the authority and direction of the Master, to prescribe the conditions of pardon to all sinners, and so far as they may be able to require hearty, full and conscientious compliance therewith before they are admitted to full membership in the church.

The law of the church is plain: "When persons offer themselves for church-membership, let the preacher in charge inquire into their spiritual condition, and receive them into the church when they have given satisfactory assurances of their desire to flee from the wrath to come and to be saved from their sins; and also of the genuineness of their faith, and their willingness to keep the laws of the church."

Two facts stand forth conspicuously in the above law of the church concerning the reception of members: The judgeship of the pastor and the genuineness of the personal faith of the applicant for membership.

Understand me, I would not rigidly insist in every case that a man be actually regenerated and have the personal witness of the Spirit to his adoption before admission to church-membership, but I do insist that as a rule this should be the case, and I think I express the mind of the Spirit.

One serious trouble at this point is the haste most preachers make to receive men into the church, not even observing the plain letter of the law written in our Book of Discipline. Some time at least—it may take days or weeks in very many cases—is absolutely necessary to give the preacher "satisfactory assurances of their desire to flee from the wrath to come, and to be saved from sins; and also of the genuineness of their faith." In times of great religious awakening some persons may be only disturbed as to have merely a sentiment on the great subject of personal salvation, with no well-defined sense whatever of the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and no stronger purpose to be saved from their sins, to flee the wrath to come, and to lay hold upon eternal life, than what may result from a passing fear of damnation. It is not difficult to see that such persons should not be admitted to membership in the churrh. It would be both unwise and unkind—unwise as an administration of spiritual and church law and unkind to our fallen brother, whose wretched state demands not only our love and sympathy, but likewise the overshadowing of the Holy Ghost.

Brethren of the ministry, while we would not, as we dare not, make any needless exactions of those seeking membership in the church, and while we must make the conditions of pardon as simple and plain as the Holy Spirit has written them upon our own hearts, let us at the same time can impart any spiritual grace or life whatever, but it is their high guard well the entrance to the fold committed to our charge.

Our Children and Youth.

The wisest man said: "A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children." In a sermon by Bishop McTyeire we heard the saying, "Grandfather rich, grandson poor." If these two proverbs be true there must be a difference somewhere, either in the character of the inheritance or that of the grandfather or both. At any rate there is something in the doctrine of heredity. Do we tend to improvement or degeneracy? That depends, largely upon the matter of selection and cultivation. We shall never forget how our grandfather selected the best ears of corn, and shelled off both ends, retaining only the best of the best, for planting. When the corn came up, he gave us further lessons about thinning it, and when nearly grown there was still a method of suckering, and in the fall yet another assortment—nubbins for the hogs and cows, better for the horses and mules, and the best for bread. He had never read of the "survival of the fittest," but employed whatever was good in the principle from common sense.

We are neither pessimistic nor optimistic, but we risk classification. When we say that we are not a whit bitter in the godly training of our children and youth to-day than our fathers were with our increased facilities for Sunday school work or bible study of any kind, we are not instilling in our children the respect for God's word, and the ministry and the house of prayer that our grandparents did. We are more careful of their heads and bodies, but not of their hearts. The term "Young America" now has a significance of which we are not proud, and about which the third generation back knew but little. While we may be teaching our children the letter of the law, we do not believe they are catching the spirit. Our children cannot now endure church and Sunday school both — we did more. While old Georgia has one evangelist to the children, in the person of G. G. Smith, she once had hundreds of them in our church, in the pulpit and around the hearthstone. In our northwestern cities not over twenty-five per cent. hear the word from Sunday school teachers and not more than ten per cent get the pure gospel at the hearthstone. What is in store for our children's children?

There have been seventy-five accessions to our church in Montana since conference.

We have not learned the particulars of the revival in Brother Moore's work in Boulder aside from what we learn from the secular paper of that valley town.

Our space is at a premium this week. We would like to have more room so as not to hold over contributed matter.

A card from Rev. W. M. Britt, several days ago informed us that both he and Sister Britt had been quite sick with la grippe. From a citizen of Deer Lodge we learned later that Mrs. Britt had been seriously ill, and was still confined to her bed, though somewhat improved.

Bro. Lafferty informs us that we may learn something of his boy-hood days, from his lecture on a "pedagogue whose nose and chin formed a capital G. We thank the editor of the "Old Richmond" for the gentle hint, but would say that we "runt Paul's going up and down these Western streams." Can't afford the distance, and therefore invite the lecturer to the "Big horn for a sounding board" that we may all enjoy a "laughly" speech at one dollar a head"

Out of the immense legacy left by A. T. Stewart, the heirs lost twenty-five or thirty millions in litigation. Who is wise enough to make good use of his money while he lives? If Tilden, a man learned in the law could not make a will, proof against the estate filchers, need we any further witness against the folly of hoarding for posterity? Ye worldly wise learn a lesson, not to be forgotten.

The winds may blow, the sea surge, the floods waste, the fires destroy, the blizzards freeze, the snows drift, the trains blockade in precious metals, and fine weather. If you doubt, come and see.

How far can I go and not forfeit my claim as a Christian is the soul tampering with its highest interest the child playing with the poisonous reptile. And close akin to this satanic sophistry is, "There is no harm in this." No one who belongs to Christ has the right to debate just here. In every question, let him be "fully persuaded in his own mind," rather asking "What good is there in this?"

"You must conform to the approved usages of good society, or you must take a back seat in social life," is a maxim of the worldly minded. Just how you decide this question in your practical life will determine your happiness as a Christian. Let the young friend who reads this, reflect a moment, and resolve to please God rather than men. It is not all of life to live nor all of death to die.

The Protestant Episcopal church gave a social and sleighing party not long since. It is said that the evening was spent in a variety of ways—dancing, card-playing, a full-sized donkey party, etc., till 2 o'clock in the morning. The whole excursion was under the personal supervision of the Rev. ————, rector. If the church can do this, what about the Sects?

Rev. B. E. Warren, pastor of our church in Bozeman says in a letter that he has been sick five weeks with la grippe and fever, also that his wife has been very sick with pneumonia for three weeks, but that they are both able to sit up part of each day now. We sympathize with our brother and his family in their affliction. May the grace of Christ be sufficient for them. Bro. Warren has not filled his pulpit since the first Sunday in January. Rev. W. T. Goulder, of East Helena, filled his pulpit last Sabbath.

Of a certain church it was said: With enough of the middle and upper classes, in point of culture and resources, to insure respectability before men, we embraced enough of the poor and ignorant to vindicate our claim to genuine churchship in the sight of God: and whatever might be the opinion of the outside world, we did not estimate our strength by the number and social rank of our members, but by the signs of the Spirit of Christ in their lives.

In the course of conversation during a pastoral visit the lady of the house, not a member of the church said: "When we go to church we want to hear something different from what have had the six days of the week. These days we have heard discussed the questions of the day, in the way of politics, discovery, science and so on, but from the pulpit we want the gospel, something for our souls." Let us keep to the great commission, brethren.

Surely the Lord is with our preachers and their people in their efforts to save souls. Our motto is a revival in every charge. Faithful preachers and faithful people have a faithful God from whom to expect blessings.

Our compositors cried "copy enough" with three or four contributions yet not handed in. So friends we will have to be patient till next issue. We prefer too much rather than not enough.

We have the pleasure of helping Bro. Moore in his revival work in Boulder this week. We wait till next issue to give the results. Six members had been received up to Feb. 6th.

Rev. Jno. Moore is in the midst of a good revival at Boulder. The town paper speaks of the work thus: "Rev. Mr. Moore has created quite an interest in church affairs during the past two weeks. We think Brother Moore an excellent man, fine preacher, and doing good excellent work in Boulder."

Bro. "Sim," of Anaconda, while repairing his machine says: I want that proof-reader of "our paper" to find the "missing link," (I don't mean the one between himself and the monkey, but those sentences, sections and paragraphs) he left out of my "pieces" that were published in the last METHODIST. [We would say to our genial brother of the Smelter City, that our proof-reader may be a little partial to the theory of "the survival of the fittest."—Ed.]

We most heartily commend the efforts of our good brother Parnall in trying to establish a genuine fraternity with his fellow-ministers in the Bitter Root Valley. We gladly record the fact that in this matter, we have succeeded with the brethren in Butte City, who differed from us in both doctrines and church policy, as well as with those who were more nearly like us. Much is gained by it and nothing lost to the kingdom of Christ. With true men of God this can be done, otherwise failure is sure.

"The Round Table," a new paper launched Feb. 1, and published in Nashville, Tenn., on the order of the New York Independent will contain articles on politics, religion, science, art, the leading topics of the day, serials, short stories, etc. It begins with the publication of 20,000 copies for the first year. We see the names of some very prominent writers who are pledged to twelve contributions each for the year 1890. The price of this paper, which is a weekly, is $2.00 a a year. We wish our old friend, the Rev. Dr. D. C. Kelly, grand success in the editorial work. It is evident such a paper is needed in the growing South.

District Conference.

The following is a list of subjects to be discussed at the District Conference to be in Helena, commencing the 26th of March. The brethren are requested to prepare papers not exceeding five or six pages of foolscap on the subjects assigned them, after which there will be oral discussions by the Conference: The need of prayer on the part of the Church for laborers to be sent into the field, B. E. H. Warren; Sunday Schools and Missionary Societies; W. J. Hunter; How to make Church Conferences a Success, D. B. Price; The Heroes of Methodism, L. B. Stateler; Caring for the Children of the Church, W. T. Goulder; Regeneration essential to Reformation, A. C. Couey; Importance of Doctrinal preaching, John Moore; How to retain our Hold on the Young People, H. B. Cockerill; Class Meeting, T. W. Flowers; Are we doing our Duty in Reaching the Masses, R. S. Clark; Relation of Sunday Schools to the Church, H. W. Cussion: The Churchan Sabbath, E. L. Kendrick; The Home Altar, E. L. Kendrick; Danger from Worldliness in the Church, W. M. Britt; Influence of Methodism on other Denominations, S. W. Barbee; The Holy Spirit the Great Need of the Chnrch to-day, J. B. Parnall; Circulation of Church Literature, E. C. Finly; Methodism and Missions—Are we doing our duty?, J. H. Johnson; Ministerial Success, A. C. Couey. Let each one do all he can to make it the most interesting and profitable Conference ever held in Montana, E. J. Stanley.

The fatality of Butte, Montana, the first fifteen days of January, 1890 is without a parallel in its history, so says the health officer. It is also held by our physicians and people generally that the sulphur fumes have proven a great blessing during the prevalence of la grippe, acting most affectually as a disinfectant.

Just a Word, Brethren.

The assessment against the several Annual Conferences to the expenses of the delegates to the General Conference which convenes in St. Louis next May proximo, is $16,000. There is a small unpaid balance of $8.77 against the Montana Conference. Of course the brethren will see that it is paid. The pro rata to each pastoral charge will be small. Now will each preacher send me one dollar to satisfy this claim (which will more than liquidate it, but there will doubtless be no general surplus) that I may report the same to the General Book Agent at Nashville.

Please, brethren, report promptly, and much oblige,

S. W. Barbee,
Ch'm Joint Board Finance.

Church Extension Funds.

The gravest question confronting us is, how are we to secure enough money to pay the appropriations made by the board last spring, which are now so urgently needed. So clamorous were the demands upon us, that we made larger appropriations than ever before, hoping that the church would respond with such liderality, as to enable us to pay them all before the end of our fiscal year. This responce has not yet been made, and the funds are not yet in our treasury. They may be, and will be, if the preachers will at once take up their church extension collections for the current year, and forward the money to the treasurers of their respective conference boards, We hope no money will be sent us except by the treasurers, let it go to them and let them divide it, and send only the part belonging to the general board, and all confusion will be avoided. Let no one suffor the month of Februrary to pass without taking his collection and remitting proceeds as above suggested. If this be done many churches will be built this sum-which otherwise must be deferred, and it will enable us to make a much more gratifying report to the church, and to the general conference. May we not depend upon our brethren everywhere to help us out in this emergency?

David Morton, Sec'y
Louisville Ky., Jan. 30, 1890.

The business manager's call for remittances has met with a hearty responce, but we are forced in self defence, to call the attention of those who write for their paper to be discontinued, to the duty of sending balance due with such request. Some owe as 10, 20, 30, 40 and 50 cents. We appreciate the fact that the individual amounts are small, and for that reason are often over looked, but the aggregate sum to us is quite large. We will promptly discontinue any one's paper who is not in the arrears, otherwise we can not.

In the Field.

On Tuesday after holding the Quarterly Conference at Helena, I ran over to Corvallis, stayed two days and returned an Friday to Townsend. What a change in the few years past! It once required four hard day's ride of forty-five miles a day to make the journey from Helena to Corvallis. Now you can take breakfast at one place and supper at the other the same day. I stopped over and canvassed and collected some at Missoula for the MONTANA METHODIST. My friend N. B. Donley, the jeweler, paid in more than twenty dollars, and I hope that our friends will see his card and make it a point to see him when they go to Missoula. He keeps a fine stock. We can help one another. I feel like patronizing those who help to sustain the METHODIST. There is no use of a preacher ever being "unemployed or triflingly employed" so long as we have such a good paper to support. By watching opportunities we can often secure a subscriber, or a card for the advertising columns, or an item that will be of interest to the readers which otherwise would be lost. Brethren let us bestir ourselves in this matter.

Brothers R. S. Clark and E. L. Kendrick boarded the train at Helena, the other at East Helena, and we arrived at Townsend awhile after midnight. There was a masquerade in town, and no (sleeping) room for us at the inn. Finally brothers C. and K. were provided with a bed, but as I had enjoyed a good nap on the train I proposed to sit up in the barroom and wish for day, which I did. The proprietor of the house was very sorry, but it would only hold so many.

I did not go to the ball, but from all that I saw and heard my convictions are strengthened that such diversions are only evil and are directly opposite to the teachings and spirit of our holy Christianity. Even the man who tended the bar, which was liberally patronized by the male portion of the dancers, remarked he would not want his sister to attend such a place. Let our young people beware of such deversions.

Townsend is a beautiful little town of two or three hundred inhabitants. It is situated near where old Centerville once stood, and is the principal town in the Missouri valley. It has two churches, a good school house, and other improvements in proportion. There is a church building here which the Baptists started, but were unable to complete. It was just closed in, when it was advertised and sold by the sheriff under a lien, Rev. L. B. Statler, being the purchaser. Permission was given to Brother Clark to complete the house and use it. The building has been partly painted, lathed and the lime procured for plastering, but the early winter prevented the completion of the work. It is of good size, not sightly outside, but presents a much better appearance inside. I hope it will be completed at an early day.

I called on a number of old acquaintances in town during the forenoon, some of whom I had not seen for fifteen years. About noon Brother T. J. Keene arrived from the lower valley to take us in a sleigh to his home, ten miles distant, where the quarterly meeting was to be held. With a sprightly team team and over an almost perfectly level road (just a slight down grade) we were not long making the journey. This is one of the finest bodies of land in all Montana. There has been a wonderfnl improvement since I first rode down this valley, nearly nineteen years ago.

What memories are awakened, what emotions are stirred in my heart as I think of the present. I preached to a small congregation in the home of Brother Keene in 1871. There were those small children in the family then. None of the members of the church. Now I was greeted by a large household, several grown young ladies, handsome and interesting, one of them the wife of a Methodist preacher, and nearly every member of the family an earnest and zealous Christian. I need not say that we enjoyed the cordial Christian greeting, the fireside conversations, the family worship and the old-fashioned singing, as well as the public worship in the school house near by. So many were sick with the prevalling epidemic that our congregations were not very large, though the word was preached with earnestness and faith and I trust that good was accomplished.

The Quarterly Conference was held on Monday. The pastor reported a revival and a number of accessions the past quarter, and the work in a hopeful condition. The pastor has been greatly burdened in his work by personal affliction during the past month or so.

The cause of religion has experienced incalculable damage in this community in past years by "crowding" methods adopted by certain parties. But the truth and right will surely triumph in the end. If our people will just pursue the even tenor of their way, live near to God and abound in every good work we shall triumph gloriously.

Brother Clark received a telegram on Monday calling him home to see his son Fred who was very sick. It is sad to go on such an errand. I hope he is better by this time. Brother K. will return to Alhambra, where he is doing good service teaching school, preaching and assisting in the prayer meeting and Sunday school. He is a young man of much promise, and I sincerely trust that he will finally decide to enter the ranks of our traveling ministry in Montana. He is striving to complete his education before entering the regular work.

The Temperance Question in Congress.

There is a good prospect that the present Congress will enact a law authorizing a commission of inquiry on the liquor traffic, and last week Mr. Frye, of Maine, presented a petition in the Senate from the American Temperance Society, urging the appointment of such a commission. Senator Blair presented a similar petition for the enactment of a prohibitory amendment, and introduced a bill and joint resolution for both purposes.

Senator Wilson, of Iowa, has introduced a bill to subject imported liquors to the provisions of the several states, and another to prohibit railroads from carrying liquors into prohibition states.

Senator Moody, of South Dakota, has also presented a bill to prohibit officers of the government from requiring a special tax under the internal revenue laws for the manufacture and sale of liquors in prohibition states. These several bills are designed to prevent the evasion of prohibitory state laws under the cover of internal revenue or interstate commerce laws of the United States, and if enacted, will enable officers in prohibition states to enforce laws more effectually.—Epis. Meth.

Refutation of Errors.

"Refutation of Erroneous Views in Regard to the Methodist Episcopal Church South," is the title of a new pamphlet of 64 pages, 12 mo., large clear type, on good paper and in first-class style, by Rev. J. E. Godbey, editor of the Southwestern Method st, Kansas City, Mo. It was written by request of the Denver Conference at its last session.

It is multum in parvo, and all that its title suggests. We do not remember to have seen the leading points in the controversy between the two great bodies of Methodism brought out so plainly and forcibly and in such small space before. It is written in a candid but kind spirit, and will be of great value to the cause of truth. Every unbiased mind, it seems to us, after duly considering the facts here set forth, will see that the M. E. Church South is not a political church, is as much the "mother church" as the one that makes such loud pretensions in this line, and is so far more in harmony with the principles and practice of original Methodism than our sister, the M. E. Church (North.) Price, only 25 cents. Let a copy be placed in every family, and let the facts of history be made known. The truth will prevail in the end.

The race problem is far more difficult than the "problem of three points" to the boys of the sophmore. Let the wise heads come together on it.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Rebecca Gitthens (Cooper) was born August 8th, 1882, near Burlington, Lawrenee Co., Ohio, and died at her home in Bozeman, Mont., Jan. 27th, 1890, at 2 p. m., aged 67 years, 5 months and 19 days. Sister G. united with the Methodist church early in 1837 and was true to her profession all her life time. She with her husband moved from Utica, Mo., to Montana, September, 1865, and settled in Alder Gulch. They moved to the Gallatin valley in 1869. Here husband died in 1887. Their house was always a home for the pioneers of Methodism in this country. Vetrans Statler and Stanley hold in pleasing memory the services they held in their home, before there were any church buildings. Sister G. was a sufferer for eight years past, but ever looked forward to the time of the dissolution of soul and body without fear. She was not demonstrative but true. Her devotions were private and God rewarded her openly. During the last days of her life she spake fully and satisfactorily of her hope of heaven. She was the mother of twelve children, six of whom preceded her to Paradise and six remain, four of whom were present at the funeral service and indicated their deep sense of the loss of a devoted mother. Her pastor, Bro. Warren, being quite sick at the time of her death, this writer was sent for to conduct the funeral service, which he did. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones, and grant that the raflex influence of the life of our deceased sister multiply and intensify our consecration and devotion to His service.

D. B. PRICE.

Helena, Feb. 6, 1800.

Department of the Interior, Census Office, Washington, D. C., December 1, 1889.

Editor of MONTANA METHODIST: Dear Sir— This office desires to secure the best results possible regarding the schools of the country with a few salient inquiries.

James H. Blodgett, A. M., of Rockford, Illinois, a gentleman of of long experence in educational work and in public affairs, has been appointed a special agent for the collection of statisiics of education for the United States.

Public schools are so related to systems of public record that their statistics are obtainable through established methods.

Incorporated private schools have a place in public records.

Parochial schools generally render stated reports to some controlling body.

Unincorporated private schools form a considerable element of usefulness hitherto unmeasured. It is desirable to gather reports of the number of teachers and pupils in such schools, without troubling them for the financial statements that schools supported by the public fund owe to the tax-payers.

The enumerators of population will report each person who has attended school within the year and whether at a public or private school; and, for all persons ten years of age and over, those who can read and write. This will be more than has been done heretofore. Other educational statistics must be reached by different methods, in which every one interested render some aid.

Any lists of private schools, no matter how brief, or names of single schools, no matter how humble, open in any part of the present school year, with the address of the principal teacher of each, will be of assistance to this office. Very respectfully,

Robert P. Porter,
Superintendent of Census.

Personal Notes.

The cheering note from Brother Cain to the business manager will be read with interest, and his kind words will find a hearty response in many hearts. Are there not other young people who will follow the example of this son and send the METHODIST to the home folks? You cannot invest a dollar to better advantage.

Rev. B. E. H. Warren and wife have been seriously ill with an attack of pneumonia. This we learned incidentally, and we do not now know their condition.

Business Department.

INDIVIDUALS—MASSES.

Josiah Strong wrote "Our Country"—and it has been termed pessimistic. Rev. John B. Robins has since written "Christ and Our Country" which is the complement to the former work, and is thoroughly optimistic. The middle course is generally safest and we thus think of the two works above cited. We are glad they were written. Great good has been done by each. There are some things advocated in Christ and Our Country which, if we understand, we cannot indorse, because we cannot reconcile with the methods (?) of Christ the ministry of the apostles, the history of the church and the practical adaptation of the gospel at the present. In chapter XII. under the caption, "How Christianity Reforms and Saves," we find several positions to which we object, among them the following:

"If we use the church to save individuals simply then as a matter of course we will work to save the best individuals."

This is given as one of the errors into which the church has fallen in seeking to save the individual rather than the community.

Reference is made to Evangelistic work in London and other places, where as yet the results attained consist in having reached the few, through the building of hospitals, foundling asylums, equiping Evangelists, erecting chapels, distributing literature &c. Mr. Robins holds that there is a deeper question than any of these things can answer or remedy, and that question concerns the reformation of communities.

If we understand the above theory it is that the church is making the blunder of reforming and saving by the individual while she should seek to take in whole communities at once. Instead of a chapel here, an asylum yonder, and a hospital there, to reach individuals, scores, hundreds such plans should be inaugurated as that all of the London outcasts should be scooped in by the enormous gospel spoon at one time.

We remember nothing in the ministry of Christ or his apostles in all the history of the church as a precedent for the theory above. We look upon it as fine spun, visionary, ideal but wholly impracticable. As long as the Gospel (the only true power to reform and save) can be rejected or received, as the remedy for men's woes, so long must our efforts be to individuals chiefly, and with this practical plan, reaching scores, hundreds, thousands, is perfectly consistent, for it is still a matter for individual choice. To convert all London, all of a nation at one time is a thing not to be expected, because God yet uses human agencies in the salvation of the race.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Year's Work.

From reports which have been given by the Book editor, though not quite complete, we make the following notes showing the work of the M. E. church South for the year just closing. Travelling preachers, increase 175; members increase 38,168; infants baptized 34,733; adults baptized 57,011. Increase in number of Sunday-schools 374; increase of teachers, 3,148; increase in scholars 21,637. Increase in church houses 335, nearly one per day; increase in number of parsonages 203. Increase in church property $848,363; increase in parsonage property $171,171.

Benevolent Contributions: Church Extension — $56,561,37. For Mis. $227,127,26. Dom. Mis. $193,896, 13. Total for Missions $341,023,39.

From the above we note that our growth in church and parsonage building is very gratifying. We have not grown as rapidly in membership, but we are quite sure the character of the increase is better than formerly.

—In the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church South, to convene in St. Louis, Mo., May 7th, there are two hundred and ninety four delegates elect, clerical and lay, besides the Bishop and other connectional officers. The whole number will be near three hundred and twenty five. There will be forty two annual conferences represented. Notwithstanding the size, wealth and Christian influence of this body of workers in the Master's vineyard, there are thousands of people in the United States, even millions, who do not know that there is such a people in existence. We have found such ignorance among persons here in the West who come from New England, many doubtless from Boston itself.

—Let patience have her perfect work. No man dare claim the promise who wilfully ignores this in the providence of God. To what extent a man may go under the "leadership" of patience and then stop we are not able to say. Is there a time when forbearance is without the highest virtue? There are men who have waited, waited, waited for the church to give the words, "Go forward," and you shall have the supplies needed for the battle. Some have thus worked out the vigor of ruddy, hopeful manhood in exposure, self-denial and waiting, comforting themselves with the fond hope of help "by and by." Some have fallen bravely at their posts, with sad hearts—bleeding hearts—not of remorse thank God, but because the rich in the church would not help them to greater victory for the Lord in the West. Open your ears, your hearts, your purses, and to the rescue.

—Notes of victory have gone up from all parts of our Western work during the revival season. Many souls have been converted. These seals to the ministry of our church give us a crown that no man can take away by strategy, prejudice or falsehood. Can the authorities see the signs of the times and yet withhold more than is meet in the support of this important work? To pass unheeded the cries of the "heroes of the West" would be suicidal. We will not entertain such a thought, till by the actions of the May meetings, we are compelled to. Now is the time! This is the golden opportunity! We must not let it slip.

—Inasmuch as Dr. J. E. Godbey gives space for a sermon in The Southwestern, every week. We should like to have his exegesis of 1 Cor. xv: 44, and show the justice of his criticism of B. Hawley's dissertation on "The Body Sown—The Body Raised" in the October Review. What say you, Dr.?

—So much of the secular press, withhold or ignores the reports of religious victories made by the churches during the revival seasons, but emblazon the faults of the saints even upon heresay evidence with unstinted parade before the world. Is it because it takes pleasure in them that do evil, and despises whatever of good Christianity may do for the land? It seems so. If we judge wrongly, we are willing to make acknowledgment.

When one political party wins, the defeated cries "boodle and political bosses." How they do love each other! Come back, Washington, and tell us where our patriots are!

—Mrs. Couey and the little ones left Butte Tuesday April 22d, for an extended visit with "home folks" in Menfreesboro, Tenn. Mrs Robt. Renshaw, Miss Mabel, and Master Ray, accompanied Mrs. Couey, as far as St. Louis. In addition to his pastorate and the Montana Methodist, the editor now has charge of the Butte parsonage. We may let some of the irons (biscuit) burn. We hope to make it through till conference.

— Sanders and Power, the two Republican candidates for the U. S. Senate, from Montana, were given seats after long and tiresome debate. Beginning with precinct 34 Silver Bow County and ending in the Senate Chamber of the United States. We have—well what?

—o—

RESULTS—POSSIBILITIES.

Our books are closing, and we find that over $58,000 have been paid by the church on assessments during the year just ending, and $4,000 have been pledged as special donations, of which $2,700 have been collected. In our Loan Fund, we have collected $5,500, and secured pledges for $4,700 more, which are yet unredeemed. We have helped 364 churches and 40 parsonages, being an increase over last year of 20 churches and 2 parsonages, and increased payments of over $20,000. In addition to the above, we are ready to pay five other churches, as soon as their refunding bonds are received, and if we had $8,000 more we could help eight other churches, whose completion must be deferred until we get the money for them. Can not—will not the church rally and raise this $8,000 during the month of April, and let us carry to the General Conference the report that our decks are fully cleared, and that every dollar expected by the churches we have agreed to help is paid in full? Generous responses have been made to our former appeals, and these have enabled us to accomplish the results above stated. Now, if every preacher who reads this will take his collection for the current year at once, and send the money to the Treasurer of his Conference Board, and if these Treasurers will remit to us all that is due us, before the end of the month, say by the 25th inst., the hearts of many expectant brethren will be gladdened and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper. Let every man heed this call

FIELD NOTES.

—The writer spent several days immediately following the District Conference in Helena—one afternoon with Rev. R. S. Clark canvassing for "ads" for the "Montana Methodist." Two are much better than one at this as well as other kinds of business. Bro. C. is quite a success in this line of work. There was not a man who positively refused our propositions, though some of course, asked for a little time to consider them. I am confident that much more could be done for the paper, if our brethren and friends would just charge their minds with it and improve every opportunity to get a subscriber or an advertisement. And there is surely every inducement for diligence in this work. The paper is equal to several men, so far as its influence in behalf of our work is concerned, besides the assistance that it gives the preacher in his work in each pastoral charge. Let us be sure to work for the Methodist, and it will work for us.

ALHAMBRA AND TOWNSEND.

The quarterly meeting service for this charge was held at Alhambra on Thursday night following the District Conference. Brother Price and family went out on a visit to the spring and he preached a fine sermon to a houseful of attention hearers. The congregation contributed thirty-eight dollars to the support of Bro. Clark, the pastor, and thought they would raise it to fifty in a short time. This is pretty good for a week-night congregation who were not expecting a collection. Bro. Clark has many friends here. He reported his work in a fairly prosperous condition, and looking quite hopeful. Rev. E L. Kendrick, who has been teaching school here during the winter will return to Missouri this spring. He has made many friends during his stay among us, and his departure will be regretted by every one.

Alhambra is a delightful place to spend a day, or a week or more, if one has the leisure, The hot water has such health giving properties, applied either externally or internally. The fine plunge baths are a great luxury, the accommodations are excellent, the society refined and congenial, and the mountain scenery surrounding the place is grand and inspiring.

BOULDER AND ELKHORN.

We had preaching at Boulder on Saturday night, followed by the quarterly conference. The congregations on Sunday were very fine, both morning and evening, The Sunday-school was well attended, and is in a flourishing condition. Brother Currin is a master workman in this department. The Sunday-school has furnished a number of additions to the church. This is right.

Several of our good ladies, together with other friends have undertaken to paper and repaint the church inside, which greatly improves its appearance. I wish that a spire could be mounted upon the tower. This would add greatly to its appearance outside. The public can well afford to assist in repairing this church, for other denominations have had the use of it almost as much as our own.

Brother Moore, the pastor, reports good congregations both at Boulder and Elkhorn, and finances of pastor well up, which is encouraging and speaks well for the interest the people take in their preacher. The church appears to be in good condition.

I fear that quite a number of the brethren are apt to defer taking their general collections too long. It is good to have them well in hand, if possible, by the middle of the year. And to fail to come up with them is to cause suffering and embarrasment in the various departments of our work. As a rule, the taking of the general collections will not interfere with the preacher's support. Indeed, I have known quite the opposite to occur.

ANACENDA.

Spent a couple of days visiting, talking and counseling with Brother Barbee, who holds the fort, preaches to good congregations, marries the young people, makes poetry now and then, attends a goodly share of the funerals and has many friends in this growing young city.

The church seems not to grow in members rapidly, though it is hoped the good seed being sown will produce abundant fruit in the days yet to come.

It is wonderful to think of the extent of the business that is carried on at this smelter city. Think of eight or ten million dollars being invested in one set of reduction works. Twenty five hundred tons of ore are reduced every day. One building alone covers an area of 650 by 540 feet. Twenty two hundred men are employed, and $140,000 to $150,000 are paid out in wages every month. The company pays $5,000,000 annually in freight to the Union Pacific Ry. Co. It is the largest smelting plant in the known world.

BUTTE.

I had the pleasure of worshiping with Bro Couey's congregation on Thursday night. We had a delightful service, after which the quarterly conference was held.

The pastor reported the spiritual state of the charge greatly improved, The general collections are pretty well up, though sorry to say, the pastor's salary is somewhat behind. The pastor has inaugurated a movement for the reduction of the debt on the parsonage. A handsome subscription —over $200— was secured by two officials in just a few hours time. I trust that the brethren will hold up the hands of their leader that the hosts of Israel may press forward to victory.

DEER LODGE.

Arrived here on Saturday morning and found comfortable quarters at the cozy little parsonage, though sorry to find Sister Britt, the pastor's wife, still suffering from a severe and long continued and aggravated case of La Grippe, though rejoiced to see her so cheerful and trustful in her affliction. Let prayers be offered throughout our Conference in her behalf.

The afflictions of this life not only work out for the patient sufferer an eternal weight of glory, but often transforms the afflicted one, into a minister of strength and comfort to all who visit the sick chamber. Some of the most valuable lessons I ever learned have been while sitting at the bedside of the sick witnessing the power of the Christian faith in strengthening, refining, sustaining and comforting human hearts amid the sadness and disappointments of earth.

Brother and Sister Britt are happy in their new home, and have already made hosts of warm friends. Finances are well up. The Sunday-school is prosperous, and congregations are growing. I was pleased to see such a large proportion of young men and women at the Sunday-school. The congregations were very fine on Sunday and the services not without profit, I trust.

We have some very worthy and faithful workers here. They have quite a burden in the way of a debt upon their property, having to build both a church and parsonage in such a short time, but faith and courage and perseverance will lead them on to complete success. They have, under God's blessing, done great things, and with the same conditions will accomplish still more.

Eight o'clock Monday night, April 14th, found this scribe at home once more, after an absence of nearly four weeks, and devoutly thankful to find all well and rejoicing at his return though it is only to get ready for another departure, and a much longer absence. When shall we all get to our "home over there" never, never more to go out again?

E. J. STANLEY.

Possibilities of an "Only."

Only a little old lamp, but it laid Chicago in ashes.

Only a thistle, yet it freed brave Scotland.

Only an ignorant boy, but consecration enabled God to develop him unto the honored Dwight L. Moody, who has gained the attention of a civilized world, and led tens of thousands to the Saviour.

"But we are 'only' women," we say, and are so narrowed in our influence, so limited in our ambition, so timid, that the most we can do is to make our homes pleasant and raise our children in the fear of the Lord. There could be no nobler work; but does our responsibility end here? Are we not doing ourselves an injustice and reflecting on our Creator's gifts to ignore our privileges of leading other souls, outside our family, into the fold? Perhaps the caller we had yesterday was really hungry for Christian cheer and help! Had it "only" been uppermost in our mind that whatsoever we say or do should be done to the glory of God, the conversation would have been less upon the threadbare topics of the weather, the annoyances of servants, the aches and ills of life, and more upon "whatsoever things are pure, lovely, and of good report." "Only" a word of charity might have checked that caller's unkind remark about "Mrs. So-and-so."

Only a penny in the hands of a little missionary girl at Eureka—yet love found a way of investing and reinvesting it until it brought three-hundred fold to the Mission Band within six months.

Only a penny a day gives $3 65 per pear, which, if given by each member of the C. W. B. M., would bring our fund into the hundreds of thousands.

"Only" an artificial flower, and it is "perfectly lovely," and "so becoming," yet it only lasts one season, and costs ten times the price of a Testament.

Only a few moments spent in reading over the latest fashion or society gossip—but it might have been spent in self-improvement which would have furnished a better equipment for life's work.

Only a sweet promise of God, given with a timid woman's beating heart and trembling voice, yet it dropped courage into the life of a disheartened sister at the prayer-meeting.

Only a faltering voice raised in prayer at the ladies' meeting, but it was sincere, and God heard it, and hungry hearts were blessed by it.

O sisters! Let us realize what our consecration as Christians means, and shrink not from doing the thing which lies nearest us, and say to pride, "Get thee behind me, Satan," when tempted to withhold our pennies because they are not dimes, or our "testimony" because it cannot be given in eloquent phrases; Let us realize the possibilities of the "onlys," when, like the five barley loves; they are accompanied by the Savior's blessing.—Calla Scott Willard in Christian Standard.

From the Confession.

CHAPTER III.

OF GOD'S ETERNAL DECREE.

God from all eternity did by the most wise and holy counsel of his own will, freely and unchangeably ordain whatsoever comes to pass; yet so as thereby neither is God the author of sin; nor is violence offered to the will of the creatures, nor is the liberty or contingency of causes taken away, but rather established.

II. Although God knows whatsoever may or can come to pass, upon all supposed conditions; yet hath he not decreed any thing because he foresaw it as future, or as that which would come to pass, upon such conditions.

III. By the decree of God, for the manifestation of his glory, some men and angels are predestinated unto everlasting life, and others foreordained to everlasting death.

IV. These angels and men, thus predestinated and fore-ordained, are particularly and unchangeably designed; and their number is so certain and definite that it cannot be either increased or diminished.

V. Those of mankind that are predestinated unto life, God, before the foundation of the world was laid, according to his eternal and immutable purpose, and the secret counsel and good pleasure of his will, hath chosen in Christ, unto everlasting glory, out of his mere free grace and love, without any foresight of faith or good works, or perseverance in either of them, or any other thing in the creature, as conditions, or causes moving him thereunto; and all the praise of his glorious grace.

VI. As God hath appointed the elect unto glory, so hath he, by the eternal and most free purpose of his will fore-ordained all the means thereunto. Wherefore they who are elected being fallen in Adam, are redeemed by Christ, are effectually called unto faith in Christ by his Spirit working in due season; are justified, adopted, sanctified, and kept by his power through faith unto salvation. Neither are any other redeemed by Christ, effectually called, justified, adopted, sanctified and saved but the elect only.

VII. The rest of mankind, God was pleased according to the unsearchable counsel of his own will whereby he extendeth or withholdeth mercy as he pleaseth, for the glory of his sovereign power over his creatures, to pass by, and to ordain them to dishonor and wrath for their sin to the praise of his glorious justice.

VIII. The doctrine of this high mystery of predestination is to be handled with special prudence and care, that men attending the will of God revealed in his work, and yielding obedience thereunto, may, from the certainty of their effectual vocation, be assured of their eternal election. So shall this doctrine afford matter of praise, reverence; and admiration of God; and of humility, diligence, and abundant consolation to all that sincerely obey the gospel.

MOTHER'S TURN.

"It is mother's turn to be taken care of now." The speaker was a winsome young girl, whose bright eyes, fresh color, and eager looks told of light-hearted happiness. Just out of school, she had the air of culture, which is an added attraction to a blithe young face. It was mother's turn now. Did she know how my heart went out to her for her unselfish words?

Too many mothers in their love of their daughters, entirely overlook the idea that they themselves need recreation. They do without all the easy, pretty, and charming things, and say nothing about it; and the daughters do not think there is any self-denial involved. Jennie gets the new dress, and mother wears the old one, turned upside down and wrong side out. Lucy goes on a mountain trip, and mother stays at home and keeps house. Emily is tired of study and must lie down in the afternoon; but mother, though her back aches, has no time for such an indulgence.

Dear girls, take good care of your mothers. Coax them to let you relieve them of some of the harder duties which for years they have patiently borne.—The Presbyterian.

—o—

Pounding "our" Children.

A widower with a number of small children married a widow who was similarly blessed. In time the newly-married couple added to the number. Hearing a voice in the yard one day, the father went out to see what was the matter. "Well, what is it?" asked his wife, as he returned, out of breath. "Your children and my children were pounding our children," was the reply.—Texas Siftings.

It is not at all improbable that such as the above has occurred many times in similar cases. And just so it is with reference to interdenominational pounding. The members of church A. will fall upon the members of church B. while the Lord with sorrow sees them disgrace his name. Good children will not so act. Reader, how do you stand in this matter? Let the innocent speak first?

—o—

It should be remembered that God does not require any more than we can actually do through grace. As we can give no more than our all, he requires no more. The requirements to love God with all our heart is adapted to all grades of capacity and intelligence, and binding with equal force upon all moral beings. He requires according to what we have, and not according to what we have not; and all his commandments involve the practicability of their observance. To love God with all the heart is easier than to love him with a divided heart.

—No good work stops for one man.

Gen. Armstrong.

—Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; for God loveth a cheerful giver.—II. Cor. vii, 9.

POWER AND WISDOM.

D. B. PRICE.

Mr. Spurgeon says:—"We are in hot haste to set the world right and to order all affairs; the Lord hath the leisure of conscious power und unerring wisdom, and it will be well for us to learn to wait." We may think to profit on this line—Power implies the capacity to act, to produce an effect, physical or moral. We have great power, but we are often so ignorant of its manifestations. Power may be a blessing and it may be a curse. The power of the horse carries the rider on in safety, and by the same power unwisely directed, the rider is thrown and killed. There is a metaphysical power by which a man reasons, thinks, reflects, coupled with the power of speech, he incites his fellows to noble deeds and a pure life, or to criminal acts and a life of corruption. The heathen in his blindness has the consciousness of power to suffer and endure the severest torture to satisfy the demands of priest craft. There is a muscular power, and by its use man raises the fallen, strengthens the weak, or deals the fatal blow to his fellow. Power may be increased, it has a mathematical property, in that it may be multiplied into itself,thereby increasing its power many fold. Man is ever conscious of many of his powers and practically understands how they are maintained and developed, multiplied and intensified, yet if power is to be a helpful, conserving and saving element in the physical and moral universe, it must have the guidance of unerring wisdom. With man the exercise of power is more common, than that of wisdom, hence the necessity of a word of admonition here. We may be in possession of many of the manifest and even hidden phases of power, and still be worthless, or a curse to humanity. In fact we all in the battle of life find ourselves crying out for wisdom to direct us in the use of conscious power. We have learned by experience, that our need is wisdom and we know we have the power to accomplish this or that work, but must retreat from the field of conflict because we have not wisdom sufficient to lead us on to victory. But you say, if I am conscious of this power, what lack I yet? Wisdom implies two things, viz: The consciousness of power and the ability to use it. Wisdom implies discretion. Discretion is a characteristic of wisdom and our lack of discretion is very noticeable, especially in matters pertaining to religion. We become impatient and resort to unlawful means to attain a lawful end. Wisdom is patient, having confidence in the power and justice of Him who governs all things. In morals and religion and our feelings relative to these, the needs of wisdom; knowledge, identity with God and Jesus Christ whom he has sent, is sometimes painful to realize. Men recognize this, that if they would know the laws of commerce and trade, and how to succeed in the use of them, that they must do business, identify themselves with its spirit and mission. Our great business is to do the will of God and declare his saving truth to all nations according to his will. To know God is life. God is the greatest object of human thought. The very thought dazes finite minds, yet God says, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of Me and I will give liberally. Now, it is evident that we need that wisdom that cometh from above. How are we to obtain it? By seeking, asking, praying for it. Are you a branch of the true vine? Yes, If ye shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it! Our prayers should have in them more request for wisdom. We have the elements natural and spiritual and the wisdom that comes from God, divine wisdom, to guide in their development and use, will cause us to shine at last as stars in the firmament. Let us urge you to seek this wisdom from God and from his word learn its manifestations. It "is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits,without partiality,and without dissimulations." (Jas. 4:17.)

"THE EYES OF A PARTISAN."

The above is the title of an editorial which appeared in the MONTANA CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE of April 2nd. The article in question is illogical and misleading. and does not properly state some facts of history. The author seems to be conscious of the weakness of his own position, and makes but a feeble effort at defense. He is seeking to answer the views expressed in a recent publication entitled "Refutation of Erroneous Views in regard to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

If the view expressed by Dr. Raleigh in the first paragraph of said editorial be true, then indeed must the judiciary of the country be corrupt, and the interests of the people in all cases of litigation are placed in the hands of a mere tool to be swayed by partisan feeling and political prejudice. The author says: "Legal questions are argued with profound learning by lawyers representing different political parties, the question at issue affecting the prosperity of one or the other party, and after they are through,if the judge be a democrat,he decides in sympathy with his party; and if a republican, in sympathy with his." Can this be true? In some instances no doubt such is the case, but to make the unqualified declaration as above, seems to be a libel upon that tribunal of final appeal among Christian men in the settlement of disputes. But the purpose of this communication, or charge, of corruption as alleged, but to answer a misrepresentation of the facts of history, and connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. And I do so simply in the interest of truth.

Dr. Raleigh's first statement is "the cause of separation (meaning the cause of separation of the Methodist Episcopal church in 1844) was slavery." African slavery in the United States at the time of the division of the church was not the cause, for it is a fact of history that not only were slaves found in that part of the church which adhered South,but likewise in the part that adhered North. This could not have been the case had slavery been the cause of the division — all slaveholders would have remained in the church, South. And moreover, slavery continued to exist in both the Church, South, and the Church North, till the Emancipation Proclamation of President Lincoln set them free. This ought forever to silence our calumniators who charge us with being a pro-slavery church. But be it so, what more can the church, North, claim than the church, South? But slavery was not the cause of the division and the charge, even by innuendo, that we owe our existence as an ecclesiastical body to the presence of slavery in the United States is a libel upon the truth of history which the Methodist church, North,helped to make us well as we.

But I hear an honest inquirer after truth say, What was it, then that caused the division in the church?" It was a question of constitutional law. Bishop Andrew, for years as a slaveholder by inheritance and bequest,had exercised his official prerogation in the church, but after his marriage to a woman who owned slaves and had the title vested in herself, the General Conference demanded that he manumit his slaves or be deposed from the Episcopacy. The first he could not do, because the civil law of the state in which he lived,forbade it. And to be deposed from his sacred office by the action of a simple majority of the General Conference, he considered in violation of the law of his office, and likewise a stab at the constitution of the church, for he entertained this view of the Episcopacy, that it was a co-ordinate part of church government as exercised by the general conference and that a Bishop of the church was not amenable to the general conference, except on the score of immorality and official administration, and were there formal charges must be made, and the case decided on its merits. But there was no charge against Bishop Andrews on these points—had never been—and he would not voluntarily resign from his high office—thus in shirking a responsibility thereby assuming a greater one—nor would he allow the general conference, in exercising unconstitutional authority upon him, to depose him by a simple majority vote of their body. Then, slavery was in no sense the cause of the division of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1844, but the division was caused by an effort on the part of the Northern Delegates of the General Conference to depose one of the chief superintendents of the church from his high and sacred office without charge, and in the very face of the constitutional law of the church by which every Bishop of the church held his office and exercised the functions of his sacred trust.

I deny the false charge that slavery was the cause of division, and the mean insinuation that the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South is responsible therefore, and hereby challenge Dr. Raleigh to establish his charge by an appeal to the records in the case, notably the General Conferences of 1836, 1840 and 1844, or else retract his utterances regarding the cause of division and vindicate the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which he himself knows if an impartial reader of history, has always stood upon the law.

Again, Dr. Raleigh's reference to Jefferson Davis is altogether gratuitous on his part. It is the first time in my life that I ever heard it intimated, even by indirection, that Jefferson Davis was responsible for or in any way whatever connected with the cause of division in the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States. Mr.Davis was a politician and statesman, and communicant of the Protestant Episcopal Church, an honored and trusted officer of the government of the United States, and never rested under the maledictions of his compratriots of the North even till 1860, sixteen years after the division of the Methodist church,and every honest man seeking for truth is anxious to know what he had to do with the division of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in 1844!

What a tangled web we weave,
When first we practice to deceive.

Again Dr. Raleigh says, "The political questions that divide the parties at the North are questions in reference to which the church does not speak." My dear brother, there are some rusty documents on file as emanating from the Methodist Episcopal Church, North, showing that the church has spoken on political questions, and perhaps you would better not insist at this point The Doctor declares that "it is not a question of politics, as some falsely declare. In the North both democrats and republicans are one on these old questions. So the Methodist Episcopal Church contains members of both parties." What can this mean, if it be not an insinuation,t hat democrats and republicans in the South are not one on "these old questions" and that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, does not "contain members of both parties?" Why, sir, they are all agreed in the South, on "these old questions, and in Tennesee from which state I came to Montana, Mr. Hawkins, a republican of the first water, was governor of the state in 1883 and 1884, and yet he is an influential member of the (pro-slavery secession) Meth. Episcopal Church, South. And Judge E. H. East, one of the most distinguished jurists of the same state, is an Abraham Lincoln republican, one is also a communicant of McKendree Church,(South) at Nashville. And such cases are numerous throughout the whole south, As a church, we literally and truly know no North, no South, no East, no West, and political parties are not considered. I have many other things to tell my good brother Raleigh, but must wait till another time.

Henry Morton Stanley.

In Reddall's Life of Stanley, summing up the results of his last tour in Africa, Stanley says: "This has certainly been the most extraordinary expedition I have ever led into Africa. A veritable divinity seems to have hedged us while we journeyed, I say it with all reverence. It has impelled us whither it would, effected its own will, but nevertheless guided and protected us." While the rear column was attending disaster and death the advance column was wonderfully preserved. That some of his officers were marvelously delivered from the jaws of death, he says was not due to him, but inferentially to that special Providence which attended them. The vulgar will call it luck. Unbelievers will call it chance, but deep down in each heart remains the feeling, that of verity there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in common philosophy. What is this, but the highest testimony to the Cnristian religion?

What it must Be.

Montana Conference raised last year $350 for missions; that is, 78cts. per capita of the membership. Estimating the church at large to contain in round numbers, 1,250,000 members, if each one had paid at the same rate as those of the Montana Conference, the sum raised last year for missions would have reached the gratifying result of $975,000. This is between three and four times the amount actually raised, and yet no one doubts that the average ability is equal to that of the Montana Conference. Instead, therefore, of $3000 to support the preachers of the Montana Conf. the present year, we would have had about $10,000.

But the Montana Conf. did not pay any more than it should have paid; what, therefore, shall be said of those who paid only a fourth to a third as much as they should have paid? If a mission field of the church should be supported from the Gen. Board on the basis of the amount it pays into said Board, then the Montana Conference would share with the very first and the whole church measuring up to her responsibility in the matter, it would be occupied, and every preacher amply supported — the church the meanwhile having become so powerful in numbers, aggressive in spirit, able to contribute, that we would not only be self-sustaining but able likewise to give larger sums to carry the gospel to other parts.
